The Prologue

preached vpon: therefore sayeth he there: My comen vſage is to gyue you warnynge before, what matter I entende after to entreate vpon, that you your ſelues in ſeuerall dayes maye take the booke in hande, reade, weye and perceyue the ſumme and effecte of the matter: and marke what hath ben declared, and what remaineth yet to be declared: ſo that thereby your mynde maye be the more furnyſhed, to heare the reſt, that ſhalbe ſayde. And that I exhort you (ſayeth he) and euer haue I wyl exhort you, that you (not only here in church) gyue eare to that, that is ſayde by the preacher: but that alſo, when ye be at home in your houſes, ye apply your ſelues from tyme to tyme to the reacyng of holie ſcriptures: which thyng alſo I neuer lynne to beate into the eares of them that ben my ſampylens, and with whome I haue priuate acquayntance and conuerſation. Let noman make excuſe and ſaye: (ſayeth he) I am buſyed about matters of the commune wealthe, I heare this offyce of that, I am a craftſman, I muſt applye myne occupacion, I haue a wyfe, my chyldren muſt be fed, my houſhold muſt I prouyde for. Wherely, I am a man of the world, it is not for me to reade the ſcriptures, that belongeth to them that hath bydden the world farewell, which lyue in ſolitarie and contemplacion, and haue ben brought vp and continually noſpiled in learnynge & religio. To this anſweryng, what ſayeſt thou man (ſayeth he) is it not for the to ſtudy and to reade the ſcripture, becauſe thou art encombyed and diſtracted with cares and buſyneſſe? So moche the more it is behoufull for the to haue defence of ſcriptures, how moche thou art the more diſtreſſed in worldly daungers. They that ben free and farre from trouble and intrembling of worldly thynges, lyue in ſaue garbe and tranquillite, and in the calme, or within a ſure haue. Thou art in the myddelt of the ſee of worldly wretchedneſſe, and therefore thou needeſt the more of ghoſtly ſuccour and comfort: they ſye farre from the ſtrokes of battayle, and far out of gunneſhot, and therefore they be but ſeldome wounded: thou that ſtandeſt in the fore-front of ſhoote, and nyſt to thyne enemies, muſt nedes take now and then many ſtrokes, & be greuouſly wounded. And therefore thou haſt more neede to haue the remedies and medicines at hande. Thy wyfe prouoketh the to angre, thy chyldre gyueſt the occaſyon to take ſorrowe and penſueneſſe, thyne enemies lyeth in wayt for the, thy frend (as thou takeſt him) ſometyme enuyeth the, thy neyghbour myſcreapoth the or pryeth quarels agaynſt the, thy mate or partener undermyneſt the, thy lord, iudge, or iuſtice threateneth ſ. pouertie is paynfull vnto the: the loſſe of thy deare and welbeloued cauſeth the to mourne: Wroſperitie exalteth the, aduerſitie byngeth the lowe. Wherely, ſo dyuers and ſo many occaſions of cares, tribulations and temptations beſetteth the and beſiegeth the round about. Where canſt thou haue armour or ſorgette agaynſt thyne aſſautes? Where canſt thou haue ſalues for thy ſores, but of holy ſcripture? Thy fleſh muſt nedes be prone and ſubiect to fleſhly luſtes, which daily walkeſt & art conuerſant amonge women, ſerſt they beuities, ſet forth to the eye, deareſt they: nyce & wanton wordes, ſmeleſt their balme, ciuet & muſke, & many other lyke promocations & ſpynges, except thou haſt in a redynneſſe wherewith to ſuppreſſe & auoyde them which cannot els where be had, but onely out of the holy ſcriptures. Let vs reade and ſeke all remedies ſ we can, and all ſhalbe lyke ynough. How ſhal we the do, if we luſtre & take daily woundes, & when we haue done, wyl lye ſtill and ſearch for no medicines? Doeſt thou not marke and coſpoze, how the ſmyth, maſon, or carpenter, or any other handy craftſman what neede ſouer he be in, what other wyſe ſo euer he make, he wyl not ſell nor lay to pledge the toles of his occupacion, for then how ſhoulde he worke his feate or get his lyuynge thereby? Of lyke mynde and effectiō ought we to be towards holy ſcripture, for as mallettes, hammers, ſawes, cheſylles, axes, and hatchettes be the tooles of theyr occupacion. So be the bookes of the prophetes and Apoſtles, and all holy wyrt inſpried by the holy ghoſt, the instrumentes of our ſaluacion. Wherefore let vs not ſtycke to byr and prouyde vs the Wyble, that is to ſaye: the bookes of holy ſcripture. And let vs thynke that to be a better Jewel in our houſe then eyther golde or ſyluer. For lyke as theſe bene lothe to aſſaunte an houſe, where they knowe to be good armour and artpyllar: ſo wherſoeuer theſe holy and ghoſtly bookes bene occupied, there neyther the deuil, nor none of his aungels darre come nere. And they that occupie them bene in moche ſauegarde, and haue a great conſolation, and ben the readyer vnto all goodneſſe: the flour of all euill, and yf they haue done any thyng amys, anon euen by the light of the bookes theyr conſciences ben admoniſhed, & they wazen ſorpe and aſhamed of ſ. facte. Werauenture they wyl ſaye vnto me: how & yf we vnderſtand not that we reade, that is conteyned in the bookes. What then? Suppoſe, thou vnderſtande not the depe and profounde myſteries of ſcriptures, yet can it not be, but that moche frute and holynneſſe muſt come & growe vnto the by the reacyng: for it cannot be that thou ſhouldeſt be ignoraunt in all thynges alke. For the holy ghoſt hath ſo ordred and attempted the ſcriptures, that in them as well bulycanes, ſylbers, and ſhepherdes, maye fynde theyr edificacion, as greates doctours theyr erudicion: for thoſe bookes were not made to vayne-glopye, lyke as were the wytynges of the Gentile philoſophers and rethoricians, to the entent the makers makers shoulde be had in admiracyon for they by styles and obscure maner and bytyngge, wherof nothyng can be vnderstande without a matter or an expolytoure. But the Apostles and prophetes wrote they booke so, that they special entent and purpose myght be vnderstande and perceaued of every reader, whiche was nothyng but the edification of amende ment of the lyfe of them that readeth or heareth it. Altho is it, that redyng or hearyng reade in the gospell. Blessed are they that bene meke. Blessed are they that bene merciful. Blessed are they that be of cleane herte: & suche other lyke places, can perceyue nothyng excepte he haue a matter to teache hym what it meaneth. Lyke wyse, the signes and myracles with al other bytynges of the doynge of Christ or his apostles, who is there, of so simple wyse, and capacity, but he maye be able to perceiue and vnderstande them. These be but excurse and clothes for the rayne, and heuerynges of they owne ydel flouthfulnes, I can not vnderstande it. Altho manerlyer howe shouldest thou vnderstande, yf thou wylt not reade, nor loke vpon it take the booke into thyne handes, reade the hole story, and that thou vnderstandest here it well in memoarye: that thou vnderstandest not, reade it agayne, & agayne: yf thou canst not come by it, counsaile with some other that is better learned. Go to thy curate and preacher, shewe thy wille to be desyrouse to knowe and learne. And I doubt not, but God tryng thy diligence and redynesse (yf no man elles teache y) wyl hym selfe vouchsafte with his holy sperte to illuminate the, and to open vnto the that whiche was locked from the.

Remember the Eunuchus of Candace queene of ethiopye, whiche albe it he was a man of a wilde and barbarous countrey, and one occupped with worldly cures & busynesses, yet redyng in his chaere, he was reddyng the scripture. Now consyder, yf this man passyng in his toynep, was so diligenc as to reade the scripture, what thyngest thou of lyke was he woulde to do lyttinge at home. Agayne he that letteth not to reade, albe it he byd not vnderstande, what byd he then, trowest thou after that when he had learned and had gotten vnderstandyng: for that thou mayest well knowe that he vnderstode not what he reade: herken what philippe there sayeth vnto hym. Vnderstandest thou what thou readest? And he nothyng ashamed to confesse his ignorance, and wereth: howe shuld I vnderstande hauntyng no body to shewe me the waye? Lo when he lacked one to shewe hym the waye and to expound to hym the scriptures, yet byd he reade: & therfore God the rather prouyded for him a guyde of the waye, that taught hym to vnderstande it. God perceyued hym wyllyng and towarde mynde: and therfore he lent hym a teacher by & by. Therfore let no man be neglygent about his owne health and saluacyon: though thou haue not philippe alwayes when thou woldest, the holy ghoist, whiche then moued and tryed vp philyp, wylbe ready and not fayne the yf thou do thy diligence accordingly: All these thynges ben writen vnto vs for our edification and amendment, whiche be doyne towarde the latter ende of the worlde. The reading of scriptures is a great & stronge bulwarke or foietrelle agaynst synne, the ignorance of y same is the greater ruine and destruction of them that wyl not knowe it. That is the thyng that byngeth in here, that is it, that causeth all corrupte and peruerse luyng, & is it, that byngeth all thynges out of good order. Hitherto all that I haue sayd I haue taken and gathered out of the forsayde sermon of this holy doctour sayncte John Chrysostome. Howe yf I shuld in lyke maner byryng forth, what the selfe same doctoure speaketh in other places, and what other doctours and wyrtens saye, concernyng the same purpose, I myght seme to you to wyrite another Wyble, rather then to make a preface to the Wyble. Altherfore in fewe wordes to comprehend the largenesse & vtilyte of y scripture, howe it conteyneth frutefull instructyon and erudicyon for every man, yf any thyng be necessarye to be learned: of the holy scripture we maye learne it. Yf falsheed shall be reproued, therof we maye gather wherwith all. Yf any thyng be to be corrected and amended, yf there nede any exhortacyon or consolacyon, of the scripture we maye wel learne. In the scriptures be the fatte pastures of the soule, therein is no venymouse meate, no unhollome thyng, they be the very dayntie & pure feedinge. He that is ignorant, shall fynde there what he shoulde learne. He that is a peruerse synner, shall there fynde his damnacyon to make hym to tremble for feare. He that laboureth to serue God shall fynde there his glory, and the promysions of eternal lyfe, exhortyng hym moze diligently to labour. Herein maye prynces learne how to gouerne they subiectes. Subiectes obedience, loue and dyete to they prynces. husbandes, howe they shuld be bene them vnto they wyues: how to educate they children & seruantes. And contrary the wyues, children, & seruantes may know they dutie, to they husbandes, parentes, & masters. Here maye all maner of persons, men, women, yonge, olde, learned, vblearned, ryche, poore, prestes, laymen, lordes, ladyes, officers, tennantes, & meane men, virgyns, wyues, wydowes, lawers, marchantes, artificers, husbandmen, & all maner of persons of what estate or condicyon so ever they be, maye in this booke learne all thynges what they ought to be, what they ought to do, and what they shuld not do, as well concernyng almyghty

God as also concerning them selues & all other. Briefly to the readdyng of the scripture none can be enemy, but that eyther be so speke, that they loue not to heare of any medecyne: or els that be so ignoraunt, that they knowe not scripture to be the moost helthful medecyne. Therfore as touchyng this former parte, I will here conclude and take it as a conclusyon sufficiently determyne and appoynte, that it is conuenient and good, the scripture to be red of all sortes and kyndes of people and in the vulgar tonge without further allegacions or probacions for the same, whiche shall not nedde, syns that this one place of Johan Chrysostome is ynough & sufficient to perswade all them & be not frowardly and perrueryly set in their owne wyllful opinion, specially now that the kynge by his grace byngne hysrme heade next vnder Chyrle, of this church of Englande hath approued with his royal assent the setting forth hereof, which onely to all true and obedyent subiectes ought to be a sufficient reason, for allowance of the same, without farther delay, reclamacion, or resstaunce, although there were no pface nor other reason herein expressed. Therfore now to come to the seconde and latter parte of my purpose, here is nothyng so good in this world but it may be abused, and turned from frutefull and hollome, to hurtfull and noysome. What is there above, better then the sunne, the moone, the starres? Yet was there that toke occasyon by the great beautie and vertue of them to dishonoure God, and to defyle them selues with ydolatri, geuyng the honour of the liuyng God and creatoure of all thynges, to such thynges as he had created.

What is there here beneath, better then fyre, water, meates, drynkes, metals of golde, syluer, yron and steele? Yet we se daily great harme and much myscheffe, done by every one of these aswell for lacke of wysdome and prouidence of them that suffer euell, as by the malice of them that woorketh the euyl. Thus to them that be euell of them selues every thyng setteth forward and increaseth theyr euyl, be it of his owne nature a thyng neuer so good lyke as contrarily to them that studyeth and endeuoreth them selues to goodnes, euery thyng pryncpleth them, and profyteth vnto God: be it of his owne nature a thyng neuer so bad. As saynt Baule sayde. illis qui diligunt deum, omnia cooperantur in bonum, euen as out of moost venymouse doymes is made tryacle, the most soueraygne medecyne for the preseruacion of mans helth in tyme of daunger. Wherefore I wolde aduise you all, that come to the readdyng of the bearyng of this booke, whiche is the worde of God, the moost precious Jewell, and moost holy relique, that remaineth vpon earth, that ye byngne wyth you the feare of God, and that ye do it with all due reuerence, and vse your knowledge therof, not to dayne gloz of frivulouse disputacion but to the honour of God, encrease of vertue, & edeficacyon both of your selues and other. And to the entente that my wordes maye be the more regarded, I will vse in this parte the auctorite of saynte Gregoie Nazianzene, lyke as in the other I byd of John Chrysostome. It appeareth that in his tyme there were some (as I feare me, there bene also now at these dayes a greates nombre) whiche were ydel bablers, and talkers of the scripture out of reason, & all good order, and without any increas of vertue, or example of good lyuyng, to them be wyrteth all his fyist booke, de theologia. Wherefore I shall hysly gather the holt effecte, and receite it here vnto you. There bene some (sayeth he) whose not onely eares and tonges, but also theyr eyes ben whetted and ready bent all to contentyon & vnprofyttable disputacion, whom I wolde wyshe as they ben vehemente & earnest to reason the matter with tonge: so they were also redy and practyse to do good dedes. But for as muche as they subuertynge the order of all godlynes, haue respecte onely to this thyng: howe they maye bynde and lose subtyll questyons, so that now eury market place, eury ale house & tauerne eury fraile house: byeth eury companye of men, euery assemble of women is fylled wyth suche talke. Wens the matter is so (sayth he) and that our sayth and holy religion of Chyril begynneth to wane nothyng els, but as it were a sophestre or a talkyng crafte, I can no litle do but saye some thynges therunto. It is not fyte (sayth he) for eury man to dispute the bygh questyons of diuinite, nether is it to be done at all tymes: nether in euery audience must we discusse euery doubte, but we must knowe when, to whom, & howe farre we ought to enter into suche matters. Fyist it is not for eury man: but it is for suche as be of exacte and exquyte iudgements, and suche as haue spent their tyme before in study and contemplacyon and luche as before haue clesed them selues aswell in soule, as body: or at the leaste, endeuored them selues to be made cleane. For it is dangerous (sayth he) for the vnclene to touche that thyng, that is moost cleane: lyke as the soxe eye taketh harme by lokyng vpon the sunne. Secundarely, not at all tymes, but when we be repoled, and at resse from all outwarde byrges and trouble, and when that our heades bene not encombered wyth other worldely and wanderyng pynaginations: as yf a man shulde myngle balme and byrte together. For be that shall iudge and determyne suche matters and doubtes of scriptures, must take his tyme, when he maye applye his wittes there vnto, that he maye thereby the better se, and dyscerne what is truth.

Thirdly where, and in what audience. There and amonge those that bene studious to learne: and not amonge suche as haue pleasure to trifle, with suche matters, as with other thynges of pastyme, which repyte for theyr chiefe delectates, the disputation of hygh questions, to shewe theyr wyltes, learninge and eloquence in reasoning of hygh matters. Fourthly, it is to be considered how farre to wade in suche matters of dyfficultie. No further (sayth he) but as euery mans owne capacite doth serue hym: and agayne no further the the weake nesse or intelligence of the other audience maye beare. For lyke as to great noyse hurteth the eare, to moche meate hurteth the mannes body, heauye burthens hurte the bearers of them, to moche rayne both moze hurte then good to the grounde: hysely, in all thynges to moch is nouous: euen so weake wyltes and weake consciences maye sone be oppressed with ouer hard questions. I saye not this to dissuade men from the knowledge of God, and reading of studying of the scripture. For I say: that it is as necessary for the lyfe of mans soule, as for the body to breath. And yf it were possible so to lyue, I wold thynke it good for a man to spend all his lyfe in that, and doo none other thyng. I commend the labe which byddeth to meditate and studie the scriptures alwayes, both nyght and daye: and sermons and preachinges to be made both morninge, noone and euentyde. And God to be lauded and blessed in all tymes, to be worshiped, from bed, in our iourneyes, and all our other doings: I forbyd not to reade, but I forbyd to reason. Neether forbyd I to reason so farre as is good and godlye. But I allowe not that is done out of season, and out of measure and good order. A man maye eate to moche honeye be it neuer so swete, and there is tyme for euery thyng, and that thyng that is good is not good, yf it be vngodly done. Euen as a flower in wynter is out of season, and as a womans apparell becommeth not a man: neether contrariwise, the mans the womans neether is wepyng comenient at a hydeale: neether laughynge at a burpall. Howe yf we can obserue and kepe that is comely and tyme in all other thynges, shall not we then rather do the same in the doyle scriptures? Let vs not runne forthe as it were wilde horses, that can suffre neether byddle in theyr mouthes, nor slytter on theyr backes. Let vs kepe vs in our bodys, and neether let vs go so farre on thone syde, lest we retorne into Egypt, thither to farre ouer the other, lest ye be caried awaye to Babylon. Let vs not synge the song of our Loyde in a straunge lande, that is to saye: let vs not dispute the wordes of God at all aduentures, as well where it is not to be reasoned, as where it is: and as well in the eares of them that be not fyr therfore, as of them that be. Yf we can in no wise forbear, but that we must nedes dispute, let vs forbear thus moche at the leest, to do it out of tyme, and place comenient: And let vs entreate of those thynges which be holy, holyp: and vpon those thynges that be mysticall, mysticall: and not to vntie the deuyne mysterres in the eares vnto wythe to heare them, but let vs knowe what is comelye as well in our silence and talkynge, as in our garmentes wearyng, in our seding, in our gestur, in our goynges, in all our other behauynge. This contention and debate about scriptures and doubtes thereof (speciallye when suche as ppretende to be the fauourers and students therof cannot agre with in them selues) doth moost hurte to oure selues, and to the foztheryng of the cause and quarrelles that we woulde haue fozthered aboue all other thynges. And we in this (sayth he) be not vnlyke to the that beinge mad, let theyr owne houses on fyre, and that slay theyr owne chyldre, or beate their owne parentes. I maye saye moche (sayth he) to recount wherof cometh all this desyre of wayne glorie, wherof cometh all this longe tache, that we haue so moche desyre to talke and clatter. And wherof is our communicacion? Not in the commendacions of vertuous and good dedes of hospitalite, of loue betwene chrystian brother and brother, of loue betwene man and wyfe, of virginite and chastite, and of almele towards the poore. Not in psalmes, and godly songes, not in lamenting for our synnes, not in repelling the afflictions of our body not in prayers to God. We talke of scripture, but in the meane tyme we subdue not our flesch by fastynge, wakyng, and wepyng, we make not this lyfe a meditation of deathe, we do not stryue to be lordes ouer our appetytes and affections. We go not ad ouer to pull downe our proude and hygh myndes, to abate our fumpylde and rancorous stomaches, to restrayne our lustes and bodpily delectacions, our vndiscrete ioyowes, our lasciuious myght, our insatiable loyng, our insatiable hearyng of vanities, our speakynge without measure, our in comenient thoughtes, and hysely to reforme our lyfe and maners: but all our holynesse is spent in talkynge. And we pardon eche other from all goodlyng, so that we maye styche fast together in argumentation: as though there wer no mo wayes to deaul but this alone, the waye of speculation and knowledge (as they take it) but in verye dede, it is rather the waye of superfluous contention and sophistication. hyserto haue I recyted the mynde of Gregoie Nazianzen: in that booke whiche I spake of before. The same author sayeth also in an other place, that the learninge of a chrystian man oughte to begyn of a feare of God to ende in matters of hye speculation: and not contrariwise to begynne with speculation, and to ende in feare. For speculation sayeth he other hye connyng and knowledg, yf it be not stayed with the byddle of feare so offende God is dangerous, and ynough to tumber a man heediynge downe the byll. Therfore, sayth he: the feare of God must be the fyrst begynnynge, and as it were an A. B. C. or introduction to all them that shall entre to the waye true and moost frutesfull knowledg of holie scriptures. Wher as is the feare of God, there is (sayeth he) the hepyng of the commaundementes: and where as is the hepyng of the commaundementes, there is the cleynynge of the flesshe: whiche flesshe is a cloude before the soules eye, and suffereth it not purely to se the beame of the heuynly lycht. Wher as is the cleynynge of the flesshe, there is the illumynacion of the holy ghoost, the ende of all our desyres and the very lycht wherby the veritie of scriptures is sene and perceyued. This is the mynde and almost the wyse of Gregorie Nazianzene doctoure of the Greke church, of whome Saynt Jerome sayth: that vnto his tyme, the Latyn church had no wytter hable to be compared, and to make an even matche with hym. Therfore to conclude this latter parte, curren than that cometh to the readynge of this holy booke, ought to bynne with hym fyrst and formeost this feare of almyghty God, and then next a tyme a stable purpose to reforme his owne selfe accordynge therunto, and so to continue, pcedde, and prosper fram tyme to tyme, the wyngyng hym selfe to be a sobye and frutesfull hearer and learner: which yf he doo, he shall pcome at the length well hable to teache, though he not with his mouth, yet with his lyfynge and good example, which is sure the moost lycht, and effectuous tounne and maner of teachynge. Ye that otherwys intermedleth with this booke, let hym be assured, that once he shall make accompte therof: when he shall haue sayd to hym as it is wyrtten in the prophete Dauid: Forasmuch as thou hast said the word, O Lord my God: why dost thou preache my lawes, and takest my testament in thy mouth? Wher as thou dostest to be reformed, and hast ben partaker with aduoucers. Thou hast let thy mouth speake wickednesse, and with thy tonge thou hast let forth disceyte. Thou hastest and spoken agaynste thy brother, and hast slembred thyne owne mothers soune. These thynges hast thou done, and I helde my tounge, and thou thoughtest (wchably) that I am even such a one as thy selfe. But I will proue the, and let before the the thynges that thou hast done. O consoyle this pe that forget God, lest I pinche you a waye, and there be none to deliuer you. Whoso offereth me thankes and prayse, he honoureth me: and to hym that obdyeth his conuersacion ryght: wyll I geue the saluacion of God.

In the seventh day also the earth was finished, and all the host of them. And in the seventh day God ended his work which he had made. * In the seventh day also he rested from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it, because that in it he had rested from all his work which God ordained to make.

These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in 6 days when the Lord God made the earth and the heavens, & every plant of the field, before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field, before it grew. For the Lord God had not caused it to rain upon the earth, neither was there a man to till the ground. And there went up a mist from of the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.

The Lord God also * hope man, even dust from of the ground, and breathed into his nostriles the breath of life, & Adam was made a living soule. And the Lord God planted a garden eastward from Eden, and there he put man whom he had made. Hope out of the ground made * Lord God to grow, every tree that was pleasant to the sight, & commodious for meate. The * tree of life also & the tree of knowledge of good & of euill was in the myddes of the garden,

And out of Eden there went forth a ryuer to water the garden. And from thence it was divided, & became into foure heades. The name of one is * Pison: The same is it that compasseth the whole lande of hauilah, where ther is golde. And the golde of the lande is good. There is also Belshim, & the Onit stone. The name of the second ryuer is Gyon: the same is it that compasseth the whole lode of Ethiopia. The name of the thirde ryuer is Euphrates, & it goeth toward the east of Babilonia. And the fourth ryuer is Euphrates.

The Lord God also took Adam, & put hym in to the garden of Eden, & he myght dwelle & kepe it. And the Lord God commanded Adam saying: Eatyng, thou shalt eate of every tree of the garden. But as touching the tree of knowledge of good & euill, thou shalt not eate of it. For in what daye thou eatest thereof, thou shalt dye the death.

And againe the Lord God sayde: It is not good that I should be alone. I will make hym an helpe, which maye be presente with hym. And so out of the grounde hope the Lord God every beaste of the feilde, and every foule of the ayre, and brought it unto Adam: & he myght se how he wold call it. For the wyse as man hym self named every livinge thinge, even so was the name thereof.

Man hym selfe therfore named the names into all cattell and foule of the ayre, and to every beaste of the feilde, And for man foude he not an helpe, that myght be present with hym. The Lord God also caused a slumber to falle upon Adam, & he slept. And he took one of his ribbes, & closed up the flesh in steade thereof. And the rybbe which the Lord God had taken from man, & made he a woman, and brought her unto man. And man sayd: This is now bone of my bones, & flesh of my flesh. She shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man. For this cause shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall be joined with his wyfe, & they shall become one fleche, and they were bothe naked, the man and his wyfe, and were not ashamed.

The iii. Chapter.

The serpent tempteth the woman. The serpent, the woman, and the man, are cast out of Paradise. This was the beginning of the world.

But the serpent was sottiller then every beaste of the feilde, which the Lord God made, And he sayd unto the woman: yee, both the Lord God sayde: ye shall not eate of every tree of the garden. And the woman sayde unto the serpent: we eate of the fruite of the tree of the garden, but as for the fruite of the tree which is in the myddes of the garden, God hath sayde: ye shall not eate of it, neither shall ye touche it, lest haply ye dye. And the serpent sayde unto the woman: ye shall not dye the death, but God doth knowe, that the same daye ye eate thereof, your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be even as goodes, knowyng good and euill. And to the * woman (sayng that the same tree was good to eate, and in it to get wyldome) toke of the fruite thereof, and gave it unto her: but she beinge with her, wher she dyd eate also. And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knewe that they were naked, and they sewed hygge leues to gether, and made them selves an eyer.

And they heard the voyce of the Lord God walkinge in the garden in the coole of the daye. And Adam and his wyfe hid them selves from the presence of the Lord God among the trees of the garden. And the Lord God called Adam and sayde unto hym: wher art thou?

thou, which sayde: I harde thy voyce in the garden, & was afrayed, because I was naked, & hpd my selfe. And he sayde: Who told the, that thou wast naked: hast thou not eaten of the same tre, concerninge the whiche I commaunded the, that thou shuldest not eate of it? And Adam sayde: The woman, whom thou gauest to be with me, she gaue me of the tre, & I byd eate.

C And the Lorde God sayde vnto the woman: why haste thou done this? And the woman sayd vnder serpēt beggled me, & I byd eate. And the Lorde God sayde vnto the serpent: because thou haste done this, thou arte cursed aboute all catrell, & aboute euery beaste of the felde. Upon thy belly shalt thou go, & duste shalt thou eate all the dayes of thy lyfe. I wyll also put enemyte betwene the & the woman, betwene thy sede & her sede:

* The same shal treade downe thy head & thou shalt treade vpon hys heile.

But vnto the woman he sayde: In multiplyng wyll I multiply thy sorowe and thy conceauynge: In sorowe shalt thou bringe furthe chyldren, & thy lust shall pertaine to thy husbande, & he shal haue the rule of þ.

Vnto Adam he sayde: Because thou hast herkened vnto the voyce of thy wyfe, & hast eaten of the tre concerninge the whiche I commaunded the, sayenge: Thou shalt not eate of it: cursed is the grounde for thy sake. In sorowe shalt thou eate of it all the dayes of thy lyfe. Thorne also & thistle shal it cause to growe vnto the, & thou shalt eate þ herbe of the felde. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eate breade, tyll thou be turned agayn into the grounde, for out of it wast thou taken, in as much as thou art dust, & into dust shalt thou be turned agayne.

And Adam called hys wyues name Heua, because she was the mother of all lyving. Vnto the same Ada also & to hys wyfe byd the Lorde God make letheynes garments, & clothed them. And the Lorde God sayde:

Beholde, vnder man hath bene euen as one of vs, that he myght knowe good & euil.

And nowe leste happily he put furthe hys hande, & take also of the tre of lyfe & eate, & lyue for euer. And the Lorde God sente them furth from þ garden of Eden, to dwelle the grounde that he was taken out of. And to be droue out man, & at the easer syde of the garden of Eden, he set Cherubims, & the glisteringe flame of a shapynge swerde, to kepe the waye of the tre of lyfe.

C The. iiii. Chapter.

C Cain dothe not only kill hys vyrgyne brother Abel, but also dyspariethe, and is cursed. The generacy of enoch methuselah, Tubell, Lamech, Seth, & Noe.

A dam knewe Heua his wyfe: Who conceauynge, beare Cain, sayeng: I haue gotten a man of the Lorde. And she proceeding furth, brought furth his brother Habel, & Habel was a keeper of shepe. But Cain was a tyller of þ grounde. And in processe of dayes it cam to passe, that Cain brought of the frute of the ground an oblacyon vnto the Lorde. Habel also brought of þ fyrstlinges of his shepe, & of the fat therof. And the Lorde had respect vnto Habel, & to his oblacyon. But vnto Cain & to hys offeringe he had no respect. For the whiche cause Cain was exceeding wyroth, & hys countenance abated. And the Lorde sayde vnto Cain: Why arte thou wyroth, & why is the countenance abated? If thou do well, shal ther not be a promocioun. And if thou dost not well, lyeth nor thy synne in þ doores: Vnto þ also pertaineth þ lust therof, & thou shalt haue domynion ouer it. ad Cain spake vnto Habel his brother, (let vs go furthe.)

And it fortuned: when they were in the felde, Cain rose vp agaynst Habel his brother, & slue hym. And the Lorde sayde vnto Cayn: Where is Habel thy brother? Which sayde: I wot not. Am I my brothers keeper?

And he sayde: what haste thou done? The voyce of thy brothers bloude cryeth vnto me out of the grounde. And now art thou cursed from the erth, whych hath opened her mouth, to receaue the brothers bloude fro thy hande. If thou till the grounde, she shall not procede to geve vnto the þ fruyt thereof.

Fugythyne, and a vababoude shalt thou be in the erth. And Cain sayde vnto the lord: My synne is more, then that it maye be forgiven. Beholde, thou haste caste me out this daye from the vpper face of the erth, & from thy face shal I be hyd: Fugythyne also and a vababoude shal I be in the erth. And it shal come to passe: euery one that fyndeth me, shal slaye me. And the Lorde sayde vnto hym: (if thou doste wyse, but whosoever slayeth Cain, it shalbe auenged seven folde.)

And the Lorde set a marke vpon Cain. lest any man fynding hym, kille hym. And Cain went out from the presence of the Lorde, & dwelt in the ldd of Nod eastward from Eden. Cain also knewe hys wyfe, which conceiued & beare Hemoch: & building a cytye, he called the name of the same cytye after the name of his sonne Hemoch. Vnto the same Hemoch was borne Irad. Irad begat Mea man to the woundyng of my selfe, & a yuge man, to myne owne punishmente. If Cain

Adam knewe hys wyfe agayne, & she bare a sonne & called hys name Seth: For God sayde the hath appoynted me another seide vnto the same Seth also, there was bozne a sonne, & he called his name Enos. Then began they to make inuocacyon in the name

The vi. Chapter.
The cause of the flood. God warneth Noe of the comynge of the flood. The prayse of the Ark.

And it cam to passe, that man begā to be multiplied in the upper face of the erth, & there were daughters bozne vnto the. The sonnes of God also sawe the daughters of me that they were fayre, & they toke the wy-ues fro amonge all that they had chosen. And the Lord sayd: my sprete shal not all waye, streme lma, because he is flesh, & his dayes shal be an hundred & twelue peres. But there were gyaunted in the erth in those dayes: yee, and after that the sonnes of God came vnto the daughters of men, and they had gendred vnto them, the same became myghtye men of world, and men of renouwe.

But God sawe that the malice of man was greate in the erth, and all the ymagynacyon of the thoughtes of hys hert was only euill euery daye. And it repented the Lorde, that he had made man in the erth, and he was touched with sorrow in hys hart. And Noah sayde: I wyll from the vpper face of the erth destroy man, whom I haue created: both man, catell, woyme, & foule of the ayre, for it repenteth me I haue made them.

But Noah found grace in I eyes of the Lord. These are I generacions of Noah: Noah was iust & perfect in hys generacions, & walked with God. Noah begat thre sonnes: Sem, Ham, & Japheth. The erth also was corrupt befoze God, and the same erthe was fylled wth cruelte. And God looked vpo the erth, & beholde, it was corrupte: For all flesh had corrupt hys waye vpon erth.

And God sayd vnto Noah: The ende of all flesh is come befoze me, for the erth is fylled wyth cruelte from I face of them. And beholde I wyll destroye them wyth the erth. Make the an Arke of ppyne tres. Habytacions shalt thou make in the Arke, & shalt ppech it wythin & without wyth pyche.

C And of thys fashyon shalt I make it: The length of the Arke shalbe thre hundred cubites: The bredth of it, fiftye cubites, & the heygth of it thyrtye cubytes. A wyndow shalt thou make in the Arke, and in a cubyte shalt thou synyth it aboue: but the dore of I Arke shalt thou set in the syde therof. Wylth thre loftes one aboue another, shalt thou make it.

And beholde, I, euen I, do bypnyng a floud of waters vpo the erth, that I maye destroye all flesh wherin is the bryeth of life vnder heauen: And euery thyngge I is in I erth, shal dye.

Wylth the also wyll I make my  couenaunt: and thou shalt come into the Arke thou and thy sonnes, thy wyfe & thy sonnes wyues wyth the: And euery lyuynge thyng, & of all flesh, a payre of euery one shalt thou bring into I Arke, to kepe them alpye wth the. They shalbe male and female. Of feathered foules also after theyr kynde, & of all catell after theyr kynde, of euery woyme of the erthe after his kynde: two of euery one shal come vnto the, I thou mayest kepe them alpye.

And take thou wyth the of all meate that is eaten, & thou shalt laye it vpon the, that it maye be meate for the & them. Noah therfoze dyd accordyng vnto all that God commaunded hym: euen so dyd he.

C The vii. Chapter.

C The entrance of Noe and of them that were with hym into the Arke. The resting of the floud: where chasyn all thynges dyd perre.

Noah & Lord said vnto Noah: come I & all thy house into I Arke for I haue I sene righteous befoze me in this generacion. Of euery cleane beast shalt take wth the seuen & seuen: The male & hys female:

But of vnclane catell, two, the male and hys female. Of foules also of the ayre, seuen & seuen, the male & the female, to kepe sede alpye vpon the face of all the whole erth. For yet after seuen dayes I wyll rayne vpo the erth fortye dayes & fortye nyghtes. And all substance that I haue made, wyll I destroye from the vpper face of the erth.

Noah therfoze dyd accordyng vnto all that God commaunded hym. And Noah was sixe hundred yeres olde, & the  floud of waters was vpon I erth. And Noah came (and hys sonnes, & hys wyfe & hys sonnes wyues, wth hym) vnto the Arke, because of the waters of the floude. Of cleane catell, & of vnclane catell & of flyeng foules, and of euery such as crepeth vpon the erth, there cam two and two vnto Noah into the arke, I male and I female, as God had commaunded Noah. It fortuneth also after seuen dayes, & the waters of the floude were vpon the erth.

In the sixe hundred yere of Noes lyfe in the seconde moneth, the seuententh daye of the moneth, In the same daye were all the fountaynes of the great depe broken vp and the wyndowes of heauen were opened.

And the rayne was vpon the erth fortye dayes and fortye nyghtes. In the selfe same daye entred Noah, Sem, Ham, & Japheth, the sonnes of Noah, & Noahs wyfe, and the thre wyues of hys sonnes, wth them into the Arke: They, & euery beast after hys kynde, and all catell after theyr kynde, yee & euery woyme that crepeth vpon the erth after hys kynde, and euery byrde after hys kynde, and euery flyeng & feathered soule.

And they came vnto Noah into the Arke, two and two, of all flesh wherin is the bryeth of lyfe. And they entryng in, came male and female of all flesh, as God had commaunded hym. And God shut hym in round a boue.

And the  floude came fortye dayes vpon I erthe, and the waters were increased, & bare vpon the Arke, which was lyfte vpon aboue the erth. The waters also preuayled, & were in creaced excreadynge vpon I erth, & so I Arke went on I vpper face of I waters.

And I waters preuayled excreadynge vpon I erth, & all the hye hylls I are vnder I whole heauen, were couered. Kiftene cubytes upward dyd I waters preuayle, so that I mountaynes were couered.

And all flesh dyed that moued vpon I erth in foule, in catell, in beast, and in euery woyme that crepeth vpon the erth: yee, and euery man also (wher soeuer was in whose nostris the bryeth of lyfe dyd bryeth all these in thodye londe dyed) And  euery thyngge was destroyed, I remayned, & that was in the vpper part of I ground (both man, & catell, & woyme, & foule of the ayre) they were euen destroyed from of I erth.

And Noah onely remayned alpye, and they that were wyth hym in the Arke. But the waters pretailed vpon the erth an hundred and fiftie dayes.

The viii. Chapter.

¶ After the sending out of the fowles and the beastes, Noe sent forth of the Arke, and offered sacrifices. The nature of corruption of man here.

And God remembred Noah, and euery beast, and all the cattell that was with hym in the Arke. And God made a wynd to passe vpon the erth, and the waters ceased. The fountaynes also of the depe & the wyndowes of heauen were stopped, and the rayne from heauē was restrayned.

And the waters from the erth were returned, goyng & cōmyng agayn. And after the ende of the hundred and fiftie daye, the waters were abated. And in the seuenth moneth in the seuententh day of the moneth, the Arke rested vpon the mountaynes of Armenia.

And the waters truly were goyng & decreasyng vntill the tenth moneth: for in the tenth moneth, & in the fiftie daye of the same moneth, were the toppes of the mountaynes seene.

And after the ende of the forty daye, it happened that Noah opened the wyndowe of the Arke which he had made. And he sent furth a rauen, which wet out goyng furth, and returnyng agayne, vntill the waters were dreyed vp vpon the erth. And agayne he sent furth a doue from hym, that he might see if the waters were abated from the vpper face of the grounde. And the doue founde no rest for the sole of his fote, & he returned vnto hym agayne into the Arke: for the waters were in the vpper face of the whole erth. And he whan he had put furth his hande, toke her, and pulled her into hym into the Arke.

And he abode yet other seven dayes, and procedyng furth, he sente furth the doue out of the Arke. And the doue cam to hym in the euēnyng, and lo, in his mouthe was an olive leaf, which he had pluckt: wherby Noah dyd knowe, that the waters were abated vpon the erth. And he abode yet other seven dayes, and sente furth the doue, which proceded not to returne vnto hym any more.

And it came to passe in the sixe hundred and one yere, in the fiftie moneth, & in the fiftie daye of the moneth, the waters were dreyed vp from the erth. And Noah remoued the coueryng of the Arke, and looked, & beholde, the vpper face of the grounde was dreyed vp. And in the secōde moneth, in the seven & twente daye of the moneth, was the erth dreyed.

And God spake vnto Noah sayyng: Go furth of the Arke, thou & thy wyfe, thy sonnes, & thy wyues with the. And bryng furth with the, euery beast that is with the: of all flesh (both foule & cattell, & euery worme that creepeth vpon the erthe) that they maye gendre in the erthe, & bryng furth fruite, te, and increase vpon erth. And so Noah came furth and his sonnes, his wyfe, & his sonnes wyues with hym. Euery beast also & euery worme, euery foule, and what soeuer creepeth vpon the erth (after they had ben) wente out of the Arke.

And Noah buylded an alter vnto the Lorde, and toke of euery cleane beast, and of euery cleane foule, & offered sacrifices in the altare. And the Lorde smelled a swete (or quiete) sauour. And the Lorde sayde in his herte: I will not procede to curse the grounde any more for mannes sake, for the ymaginacyon of manes herte is euil euen from his yowth: neyther will I add to synne any more thyng lyuinge, as I haue done, yet therfore shall not sowynge tyme, and haruest, colde & heate, sommer and wynter, daye & nyght cease, all the dayes of the erth.

The ix. Chapter.

¶ God blessed Noe and his sonnes. He forbiddeth to eat the blood of beastes, and to shed mans bloude. The lawe of the couenaunt. He maketh a couenaunt that he will destroye the world no more by water, and sheweth the raignynge for a token and cōfirmacyon of the same. Noe is dyckened, Ham discovered hym, and getteth his curse.

And God blessed Noah and his sonnes, and sayde vnto them: Breyng ye furth fruite, and multiplye, and repleyn the erthe. The feare of you and the dreade of you shall be vpon euery beast of the erth, & vpon euery foule of the ayre, in all suche as the erth bryngeth furth, and in all the fowles of the see.

Into your hande are they deliuered. Euery thyng that moueth it selfe, and that lyueth, shall be meate for you: such as the grene herbe haue I geuen you all thynges. But flesh in the lyfe therof and in the blood therof shall ye not eat. Els poure bloude of your lyues will I requyre. From the hand of euery beast will I requyre it, and from the hand of man: from the hand of mans brother will I requyre the lyfe of man. Who so sheddeth mans blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the ymage of God byd God make mā. But bryng you furth fruite, and multiplye: sende ye in the erth, and increase therein.

God spake also vnto Noah & to his sonnes with hym, sayyng: Beholde, I set vp my couenaunt with you, & with your seide after you, and with euery lyuing creature that is with you, bothe in foule and in cattell, and in euery beast of the earth which is with you of all that go out of the Arke, accordyng vnto euery lyuing thyng of the earth. But my couenaunt will I make with you, that from hence furth euery flesh be not roted out with the waters of a floude, neyther shall there be a floude to destroye the earth any more.

And God sayde: This is the token of the couenaunt which I geue betwene me & you, and euery and every living creature that is with you into perpetuall generations. I have set my bowe in the cloude, and it shalbe for a token betwene me and the erth. And it shal come to passe that when I brynge a cloude vpon the erthe, the bowe also shalbe sene in the same cloude. And I will thinke vpon my couenaunt which is betwene me and you, & every living creature in all flesh: and it shal nomore come to passe, that waters make a floude to destroye all flesh. But the bowe shalbe in the same cloude, and I will loke vpon it, that I maye thinke vpon the euertlasting couenaunt betwene God and every living creature in all flesh that is vpon erthe. And God sayde vnto Noah. This is the token of the couenaunt which I haue made betwene me and all flesh that is vpon erth.

The sonnes of Noah goyng furth of the Arche, were: Sem, Ham, and Japheth. And Ham truly is the father of Chanaan. These are the thre sonnes of Noah, & of them was the whole erth ouerspred. Noah also began to be an husbnde man, and planted a vyne-parde. And he dnyng of the wyne, was drunken, and vncouered wythin hys tent.

And Ham the father of Chanaan leinge the nakednesse of hys father, tolde hys two byethers without. And Sem and Japhet, they two, takynge a garment, layed it vpon thei shuldres: and cōpyng backwarde couered the naked pēities of their father: namely, these faces beyng turned awaye, lest they shulde se thei fathers pēities.

And Noah awoke fro hys wyne, & knewe what hys yonger sonne had done vnto hym. And he sayde: Cu fled be Chanaan, a seruunt of seruantes shal he be vnto his brethren. He sayde mozeouer: Blessed be the Lozde God of Sem, & Chanaan shalbe hys seruant. God shal enlarge Japheth, & he shal dwell in the tentes of Sem, & Chanaan shalbe thei seruant. Noah lyued after the flood thre hundred & fifty yeres. And all the dayes of Noah were nyne hundred & fifty yeres. And he dyed.

The .x. Chapter.

The genealogy of Japheth, Sem and Ham.

These are the generations of the sonnes of Noah, Sem, Ham, and Japheth: And vnto them were chyldren borne after the floude.

The chyldre of Japheth: Gomer and Magog, and Madai, and Iauan, and Thubal, Mesech, and Theras. The chyldren of Gomer: Armenas, and Ryath, and Thogarma. The chyldren of Iauan: Elisa and Tharhis, Hethum, and Donanum. Of these were the people of the Gētyles deuyded in theyr landes, every man after hys tonge, and after hys kynred in theyr nacjons.

The chyldrene of Ham: Cush & Myrrim, and Phut and Chanaan. And the chyldren of Cush: Seba and Haniha and Sabcha, and Rahma, and Sabchecha. The chyldren of Rahma: Sebeba and Dedan. Cush also begat: Symrod. The same beganne to be myghtye in the erth. For he was a myghtye hunter before the Lozde, wherefore it is sayde: Euen as Symrod the myghtye hunter before the Lozde. The begynnyng of hys kyngdom was: Babel, and Erec, and Acad, and Calne, in the londe of Synhar. Out of that londe came assur, and buylded Ninue, and the stretes of the cyty and Chalah. Resen also betwene Ninue & Calah, & it is a great cyty. Myrram begat Ludim, and Enamim, and Lebani, and Arphudim. Bathrusim, also and Callahim, out of whom came Philistim and Capthorim.

Chanaan begat ydon his first borne sonne and Heth, & Jebusi, & Emori, & Girgosi. Ham also, & Haarchi, & Hassim, & Haaruadi, & Hazmar, and Habemathi: And afterwarde were the kynreds of the Cananytes spred a-brode. The border of the Cananytes was from ydon, as thou comest to Gerar vntyll Gazan, and as thou goest vnto Sodoma, and Gomorra, and Adama, and Jebotim, eue vnto Lela. These are the chyldren of Ham in theyr kynreds, in theyr tonges, countres and in theyr nacjons.

Vnto Sem also the father of all the chyldren of Eber (and elder brother of Japheth) there were chyldren borne. The chyldren of Sem: Elam and Assur, Arphachad, and Lud and Aram. The chyldren of Aram: Uz and Hul, Gether & Was. Arphachad begat Melah, & Melah begat Eber. Vnto Eber also were borne two sonnes: The name of the one was Peleg, for in hys dayes was the erth dryyded. And hys brothers name was Jaktan. Jaktan begat Almodad & Saleph, Hazarmauethe and Ierah, and Hodozan and Uzall & Dicka, Obail also & Abimael and Sebeba, and Ophir, and Hauila, and Jobab. All these were the chyldren of Jaktan. And their dwelling was from Mela, as thou goest vnto Sephar a mount of the east. These are the chyldren of Sem after theyr kynreds & tonges in theyr landes & nacjons. And so these are the kynreds of the chyldren of Noah, after theyr generations in theyr peoples, and of these were the nacjons deuyded in the erthe, after the floude.

The .xi. Chapter.

The birth of the sonne of Noah, the firstborn of the sonnes of Noah, the firstborn of the sonnes of Noah, the firstborn of the sonnes of Noah.

And the whole erth was of one langage & of one speche. And it happened when they went furth from the east, they founde a playne in the londe of Synhar, and there they abode. And they sayde every one to his neybour: Come, let vs prepare hycke, and burne them in the fyre. And they had hyck for stone, and lime had they in trade of morter. And they sayde: Go to, let vs buyde vs a cite and a tower, whose topp may reach vnto heauen: let vs make vs a name, lest happily we be scatred abrode into the vpper face of the whole erthe. But the Lorde came downe, to se the cite & tower which the chyldren of men buyded.

And the Lorde sayde: Beholde, the people is one, and they haue all one language, and thus they begynne to do, neyther wyl it be restrayned fro them, what soeuer they haue ymagined to do. Come on, let vs go downe, and confounde theyr language, that euery one perceaue not his neygbbours speche.

And so the Lorde scaterd them fro that place into the vpper face of all the erth. And they left of to buyde the cite. And therefore is the name of it called * Babel, because the Lorde dyd there confounde the language of all the erth. And from thence dyd the Lorde scatere them abrode vpon the face of all the erth.

These are the generations of Sem: Sem was an hundredth yere olde, and begat Arphachad two yere after the floude. And Sem lyued (after he begat Arphachad) syue hundredth yeres, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Arphachad lyued syue and thyrty yeres, and begat Melah. And Arphachad lyued (after he begat Melah) foure hundredth and thye yeres, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Melah lyued thyrty yeres, and begat Eber. And Melah lyued (after he begat Eber) foure hundredth and thye yeres, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Eber lyued foure & thyrty yeres, and begat Peleg. And Eber lyued (after he begat Peleg) foure hundredth and thyrty yeres, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Peleg lyued thyrty yeres & begat Ren. And Peleg lyued (after he begat Ren) two hundredth and nyne yeres, and begat sonnes & daughters.

Ren lyued two & thyrty yeres, and begat Serug. And Ren lyued (after he begat Serug) two hundredth and seuen yeres, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Serug lyued thyrty yeres, & begat Nahor. And Serug lyued (after he begat Nahor) two hundredth yeres, and begat sonnes and daughters.

And Nahor lyued nyne & twentye yeres and begat Terah. And Nahor lyued (after he begat Terah) and hundredth & nynten yeres, and begat sonnes & daughters.

Terah lyued seuentye yeres, and begat Abram, Nahor, & Haran.

These are the generacions of * Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor, & Haran. Haran begat Lot. And Haran dyed in the presence of Terah his father, in the londe of his natyuite, euen in Ur of the Caldees. Abram and Nahor toke them wyues: The name of Abrahams wyfe was Sarai, & the name of Nahors wyfe was Milca, the daughter of Haran & father of Milca, & the father of Isca. But * Sarai was barren, & had no chylde.

And Terah toke Abram his sonne, and Lot & sonne of Haran, his sonnes sonne, and Sarai his daughter in lawe, his sone Abrahams wyfe. And they departed together from Ur of the Caldees, that they myghte go into the londe of Chanaan & they came vnto Chara, and dwelte there. And the dayes of Terah were two hundredth & syue yeres, and Terah dyed in Haran.

The xlii. Chapter.

Abram is blessed of God, and goeth with Lot vnto the londe of Canaan, which God promysed to geue vnto hym and his seed. Abram goeth into Egypt and causet Sarai his wyfe to calle his sister, by whom Pharaoh is plagued.

And the Lord sayde vnto Abrahā: * Get the out of thy countre, & out of thy nacyon, and from thy fathers house vnto a londe that I will shewe the. And I will make of the a greete people, and wyl * blesse the, & make thy name great, that thou mayest be euen a blessinge. I will also blesse them that blesse the, and curse them that curse the, & in the shall all kynreds of the erth be blessed.

And so Abrahā departed euen as the Lord spake vnto hym, & Lot went with him. And Abram was seuentie & syue yeres olde, whā he departed out of Haran. And Abram toke Sarai his wyfe & Lot his brothers sonne, & all theyr substance that they had in possession, & the sonles that they had begotten in Haran. And they departed, & they myghte come into the londe of Chanaan, & into the londe of Chanaan they came. Abram passed throue the londe vnto the place of Sichem, & vnto the playns of Mozerthe: And the Cananyte was then in the londe.

And the Lorde aperpyng vnto Abram, sayde: Vnto the * sede wyl I geue this lōde. And there buyded he an altare vnto the Lorde, euen where he had appered vnto hym. And

C And remouynge thence vnto a mountayne that was eastwarde fro Bethel, he pitched hys tent, haunynge Bethel on the west syde, and Hai on the east. And he buydynge an altare vnto the Lorde, dyd call on the name of the Lorde. And Abraham went forth goynge & departynge towarde the south.

But there was a dearth in that lande, and therfore went Abraham downe into Egypte, & he myght sojourne there, for there was a loze dearth in that lande. And it happened whē he was come nere to entre into Egypte, he sayde vnto Sarai hys wyfe: Beholde, I know, that thou art a fayre woman to loke vpon. Therfore shall it come to passe, that whan the Egyptians se the, they shall saye: She is hys wyfe. And they shall kill me, but they shall saue the a lyue. Saye I praye the, that thou art my syster, that I maye fare well for thy sake, and that my soule maye lyue thowowe thy occasyon.

D And so it happened, whan Abraham was come into Egypte, the Egyptians behelde the woman, for she was very fayre. The princes also of Pharao sawe her, and commended her before Pharao, and the woman was taken into Pharao's house. And he truly intreated Abraham well for hys sake, as he had shepe & oxen and he asses, men seruantes and maydeseruautes, he asses & camels.

And the Lorde smote Pharao and hys house with great plagues, because of Sarai Abrahams wyfe. And Pharao callinge Abraham, sayde: Why hast thou done this vnto me? Why dydest thou not tell me, that she was thy wyfe? Now therfore behold, there is thy wyfe, take her, and go thy waye: And Pharao gaue the men commaundement concernynge hym, & they conuayed him forth, and hys wyfe, and all that he had.

The xlii. Chapter.

Abraham and Lot departe out of Egypt. And as soon as they were out of Egypt, Lot his brother's sonne, who was with him, departed from him, and went into the land of Sodom.

A And so Abraham gat hym vp out of Egypte he and his wyfe, and all that he had, & Lot with him, towarde the south. And Abraham was very ryche, in cattell in syluer and golde. And he wente forth on hys journey fro the south towarde Bethel, vnto the place where hys tente had bene at the begynnyng, betwene Bethel & Hai: Even vnto the place of the altare whiche he had made there at the fyrst, and there Abraham called on the name of the Lorde.

Lot also which went with him had shepe, cattell and tentes: & the land was not able to receaue them that they myght dwell together, for the substance of theyr ryches was great, and they coulde not dwell together. And there fell a stryfe betwene the herdmen of Abraham, & the herdmen of Lot's cattell.

Wherefore the Canaanites & the Phereisy dwelled at that tyme in the lande. Then sayde Abraham vnto Lot: Let there be no stryfe (I praye the) betwene the and me and betwene my herdmen and thyne, for we be brethren. Is not all the whole land before the? Departe I praye the from me. If thou wilt take the lefte hande, I wyl go to the ryght: or if thou departe to the ryght hande, I wyl go to the lefte. And so Lot lysteinge vpon hys eyes, behelde al the cōtre of Jordan, which was a plete conuecture of water euery where, before the Lorde destroyed Sodom and Gomorra, then as the garde of the Lorde, lyke the lande of Egypt as thou commente vnto soar.

Then Lot chose al the playne countre of Jordan as toke hys journey from the east. And so departed the one brother from the other, Abraham dwelled in the lande of Canaan: and Lot abode in the cyties of the playne, & tented vntyll Sodom. But the men of Sodom were wicked, and excedynge synners before the Lorde.

And the Lorde sayde vnto Abraham, after that Lot was departed from hym: Lyfte vp thine eyes now, & loke sud the place where thou art northward, southward, eastward, and westward, for al the lande which thou seest wyl I geue vnto the and to thy seed for ever. And I wyl make thy seed, as the dust of the erth: so that yf a man can nombre the dust of the earth, than shall thy seed also be nombred. Arise and walke about in the lande, after the length of it, and after the bredth therof, for I wyl geue it vnto the. And Abraham takynge downe hys tent, came and dwelled in the okegrove of Mamre, namely in Hebron, and buylded there an alter vnto the Lorde.

The xliii. Chapter.

Lot is taken prisoner. The victory of Abraham of the Sodomites. Lot is delivered by Abraham. Abraham payeth tribute vnto the King of Sodom.

A And it chaunted in the dayes of Amraphaell kynge of Synhar, Arioch kynge of Ellasar, Chedorlaomoc kynge of Elam, and Chedorlaomoc kynge of the nations, and they made warre with Bera kynge of Sodom, and with Bera's kynge of Gomorra, and with Shinar kynge of Idama, and with Shinar's kynge of Idama, and with the kynge of Bela. The same is soar. All these were turned together in the vale of Siddym, where the salt see is. For twelue yeres were they subiecte to kynge Chedorlaomoc, and in the thirten yere rebelled. But in the fourteenth yere came Chedorlaomoc and the kynges that were with hym, and smote the Gynaues in Maroth Maradim, and

And they returninge, came to En Mispat which is cades, ad smote all the countre of the Amalechites, and also the Amozites that dwell in Hazeron Thamar.

B And there went out the kynge of Sodome and the kynge of Gomorra, and the kynge of Adama, and the kynge of zeboim, and the king of Bela which is zoar. And wryth Arisioh kynge of Ellasar: foure kynges agaynst hye. And the vale of Syddym was full of nyne pyttes.

And the kynge of Sodome and Gomorra fled, and fell there. And they that remayned, fled to y mountayne. And they takinge all the goodes of Sodome and Gomorra & all they bytalles went they wape. And they carped awaye Lot also Abzams brother sonne and his good (for he dwelled at Sodome) and departed. And there came one that had escaped, and tolde Abzams the Hebrew whych dwelled in the oketroue of

After that he returned agayne from the slaughter of Rederaomoz & of the kynges that were wryth hym, came the kynge of Sodome forth to mete him in the playne valey whych is the kynges dale.

And the kynge of Sodome sayde vnto Abzams: Geue me the sonles, and take the goodes to thy selfe. And Abzams answered the kynge of Sodome: I haue lyfte up my hande vnto the Lorde the hye God possessor of heauen and earth, that I wyll not take of al that is thynne so moch as a thyede of thou-

Of the lande of Canaan to yet agayne prompted to Abzams. God promysed hym seed. He beleuech and is in ryght. The prophete of the bondage wher in the chylde of Israel shoulde be vnder Pharaos, & of their deliuerance from the same.

After these thinges were do ne, y worde of the Lord came vnto Abzams in a visyon, sayenge: Feare not Abzams, I am thy deffce, & thy reward shalbe excedyngre greate. And Abzams sayd: Lord God what wylte thou geue me whā I go chyldelesse, & the chylde of the stewardship of my house is this Eleazer of Damascos: And Abzams sayd: Se, to me thou hast geuen no seed: lo, a lad bozne in my house is myne heyre.

And behold, y worde of the Lord came vnto hym sayeng: He shall not be thynne heyre, but one y shal come out of thynne owne body shalbe thynne heyre. And he brought him out and sayd: loke vp vnto heauē, & tel the starres, yf thou be able to nombre the. And he said vnto him: Cū so shal thy seed be.

And Abzams beleued the Lorde, and that counted he to him for ryghte welnes. And agayne he sayde vnto him: I am the Lorde that brought the out of Ur of the Caldres, to geue the this lande, and that thou myghtest possesse it.

And he sayde: Lorde God, wherby shal I knowe that I shal possesse it: he answered vnto him: Take an heyfer of thre yere olde, and a she goate of thre yere olde, & a thre yere olde ram, a turtlydoue also ad a yonge pyggon. he toke therfore all these vnto hym, & deuyded them in the myddes, and layde euery pece, one agaynst another. But the foules deuyded he not. And whā the byrdes fell on the carcales, Abzams boue them awaye. And when the sonne was doune, ther fell a slomber vpon Abzams. And lo, a darke and great feare fell vpon hym.

And he sayde vnto Abzams: knowe thys of a suertye, that thy seed shalbe a straunger in a lande that perteyneth not vnto the. And shal serue the, & they shal entreate the well. iiii. hundred yeres. But the nacyon whome they shal serue, wyll I iudge. And afterwarde shal they come out wryth great substance. And thou shalt go vnto thy fathers in pence, ad shalt be buryed in a good olde age. But in the fourth generacyon they shal come hyther agayne, for the wychednesse of the Amozites is not yet full.

And

D And it came to passe that whan the sunne went downe, there was a darke cloude: beholde, ther was a smokyng furnesse, & a fyre bzand goynge betwene the sayd peces.

In that same daye the Lorde made a covenante wth Abiam sayenge: vnto thy seed haue I geuen thys lande, fro the ryuer of Egypt, euen vnto the great ryuer the ryuer of Euphrates, the Kenytes, the Kenyzytes, and the Cadmonites, the Hethytes, ad the Pherezites, and the gnautes, the Amorytes also, and the Cananites, the Sergetyres and the Jebusytes.

The xvi. chapter.

C Sarai greth Abiam leaue to take Agar hyr mayde to wyfe. Agar despyed hyr maystere: so whyche she was cruelly treated of Sarai, and therefore runneth awaye. The angell metynge hyr, commaundeth hyr to turne agayne, and doth promysse hyr sode. And nameth hyr first chyldre Ismael.

Sarai Abiams wyfe bare hym no chyldren. But she had an hande mayde an Egyptian. Hagar hyr name. And Sarai sayde vnto Abiam: Beholde, the Lorde hath restrayned me, that I can not beare. I praye & go in vnto my mayde, peradventure I maye be edifyed by her. And Abiam obeyed the voyce of Sarai. And Sarai Abiams wyfe toke Hagar hyr mayde the Egyptian (after Abiam had dwelled .x. yere in the lande of Canaan) and gaue her to hyr husbände Abiam to be hyr wyfe.

Which whan he wente in vnto Agar, she conceaued. And when she sawe that she had cōceaued, hyr maistrisse was despyed in hyr eyes. And Sarai sayd vnto Abiam: Thou doest me wronge: I haue geuen my mayde into thy bosome. Whiche saynge & she hath conceaued, I am despyed in hyr eyes, the Lorde iudge betwene the & me. But Abiam said to Sarai: beholde, thy mayde is in thy hande, do wyth hyr as it pleaseth the.

And whan Sarai faced foule wyth her, she fled from the face of her. And the angell of the Lorde foude her besyde a fountayne of water in the wylidernes: eue by the wel that is in the way to Sur. And he sayde: Hagar Sarais mayde, whence comest thou & whether wilt thou goo? She sayde: I flee from the face of my maistrisse Sarai. And the angell of the Lorde sayde vnto her: returne to thy maistrisse agayne, ad submytte thy selfe vnder her handes.

C And agayne, & angell of the Lorde sayde vnto her: In encreasynge I will encrease thy seed and it shal not be nombred for multitude. And the Lordes angell sayde vnto her, se, thou art wth chyldre and shalt bere a sonne, and shalt call hyr name Ismael: because the Lorde hath herde thy tribulacion. He also will be a wylde man, and his hande wyl be agaynst euery man, and euery mans hande agaynst hym. And he shall dwell in the pyessce of all his bzyethen. And she called the name of the Lorde that spake vnto her: thou God lokest on me, for she sayde: Haue I not sene here the backe partes of hym that seeth me? Wherfore the well was called, the well of hym that syneth & seeth me. And it is betwene Cades and Bared. And Hagar bare Abiam a sonne, and Abiam called hyr sons name which Hagar bare vnto hym Ismael. And Abiam was lxxxvi. yere olde, when Hagar bare hym Ismael.

The xvii. Chapter.

C Abiam is called Abraham, and Sarai is named Sarah. The lande of Canaan is here the fourth tyme promysed. Circumcysion is here instituted. Hagar is promysed. Abraham prayeth for Ismael.

Abiam was nyntyete yere olde & .ix. The Lorde apared to Abiam & sayde vnto hym: I am the almyghty God: walke before me ad be thou perfecte. And I wyl make my bonde betwene me and the, and wyl multiplye the exceedyngly. And Abiam fell on hyr face. And God talked wyth hym sayenge: Beholde, I am, and my testamente is wyth the, ad thou shalt be a father of many nations. Repent thou thy name any moze be called Abiam but thy name shalbe Abraham: & for a father of many nacpons haue I made the, I wyl make the to growe exceedyngly, and wyl make nacpons of the: pea and kyngeys shal sprynge out of the. Moreover I wyl make my bonde betwene me and the, and thy seed after the, in theyr generacions, by an euerlastynge testamente, that I maye be God vnto the and to thy seed after the. And I wyl geue vnto the and to thy seed after the, the lande wherein thou art a stranger: Euen all the lande of Canaan, for an euerlastynge possession, and wyl be theyr God.

And God sayd agayne vnto Abraham: Se thou also kepe my testamente therfore, both thou and thy seed after the in theyr generacions. Thys is my testamente whyche pe shall kepe betwene me and you, and thy seed after the. Euery man chyldre amonge you shalbe circumcysed. Pe shal circumcysse the fleshe of youre foreskynne, and it shall be a token of the bonde betwyxe me and you. And euery man chyldre of .viii. dayes & olde shall be circumcysed amonge you, and such as be in youre generacions, and bozne at home and he that is boughee wyth money of any stranger whyche is not of thy seed. He that is bozne in thy housse, & he also that is boughee wyth money, must nedes be circumcysed. And my testamente shall be in youre fleshe, for an euerlastynge bonde. And the vncircumcysed man chyldre, in whose fleshe the foreskynne is not circumcysed, that soule shall perishe: from hyr people: because he hath broken my testamente

And Lot went out and spake vnto his sonnes in law which marped his daughters saying: Stande vp: get you out of this place, for the Lord wyl ouerthrowe this cytie. But he seemed as though he had mocked, vnto hys sonnes in law. And whan y morning arose the angels caused Lot to speke hym saying: Stande vp, take thy wyfe & thy two daughters at hande, lest thou perishe in the synne of the cytie. And as he prolonged the tyme, the men caughte both hym, hys wyfe & hys two daughters by the handes, the Lorde being mercyfull vnto hym, and they broughte hym forth and sette hym withoute the cytie.
It fastured whan they had broughte them out he sayd: Shoue thy lyfe, and loke not behynde the, neyther tarpe thou in all thy playne countie. Shoue thy selfe in the mountayne, Leste thou perishe. And Lot sayde vnto them: Oh nay Lorde: beholde, thy seruant hath founde grace in thy syghte, and thou haste magnified thy mercie whyche thou hast shewed vnto me in saving my lyfe.
Beholde, I cannot be saved in the moun-

I dye. Beholde, here is a cytie by to flee vnto, and ponder it in me: Object me be saved there: is it not a lytle one, and my soule shal ned thy request as concerninge this thyng.

that I will not ouerthrowe thys cytie for the whiche thou hast spoken. Haste the, & be saued there, for I can do nothyng till thou be come thither. And therfore the name of the cytie is called zoar. And the sunne was now risen vpon the erth, when Lot was entered into zoar.

Then the Lord rayned vpon Sodome & Gomorra, & ymynon and tyze from the Loide out of heauē, & ouerthrowe those cyties and all the region, and al that dwelled in the cyties, and that grew vpon the earth. But Lot's wyfe looked behynde her, & was turned into a pyllar of salte. Abraham crynge vp early, got hym to the place where he stode before the presence of God, and lokynge toward Sodome & Gomorra & toward al the londe of that countre he looked: and beholde, the smoke of the countre arose as the smoke of a fornaice. And it happened that when God destroyed the cyties of that region, he thought vpon Abraham, and sent Lot: out from the myddes of the ouerthrowenge, when he ouerthrowe the cyties where Lot dwelled.

And Lot departed out of zoar & dwelled in the mostayns with his ii. daughters, for he feared to tarpe in zoar, but dwelled in a caue, he & his ii. daughters. And the elder sayde vnto the yonger: our father is olde, & ad there is not a man in the earth to come in vnto vs after the maner of all the worlde. Come, we will make our father drunken with wyne, and lye with hym, that we maye saue sede of oure father. And so they made theyr father dronke with wyne & nyghte. And the elder daughter went & laye with her father. And he perceaued it not, neyther when she laye downe, neyther when she rose vp.

And on the morrowe it happened that the elder sayd vnto the yonger: beholde, yesternyghte laye I with my father. Let vs make hym dronke with wyne this night also, and go thou & lye with him, that we maye rase vp seed of oure father. And they made theyr father dronke with wyne that nyght also. And the yonger arose & laye with him. And he perceaued it not: neyther when she laye downe, neyther when she rose vp. Thus were both the daughters of Lot with chyld by theyr father. And the elder bare a sonne, and called his name Moab. The same is the father of the Moabites vnto this daye. And the yonger bare a sonne also & called his name Ben Ammi. The same is the father of the chyldren of Ammon vnto this daye.

The xx. Chapter.

Abraham wente as a stranger into the land of Egypt. The king of Egypt asked about his wyfe.

Ad Abraham departed thence toward the south countre, & dwelled betwene Cades and Sur. Adloge opened in Egypt. And Abraham sayd of Sara his wyfe: she is my syster. And Abimelech kynge of Gerar sent and fet Sara awaye.

But God came to Abimelech in a dreame in the nyght and sayd to him: Se, thou shalt dye for the womans sake which thou hast taken awaye, for she is a mas wyfe. But Abimelech had not yet come nye her, & he sayd: Loide wylt thou slaye ryghtewys people? sayd not he vnto me, she is my syster: per, ad sayd not she her selfe: he is my brother: with a pure hart and innocent hādes haue I done this. And God sayde vnto him by a dreame: I wot it well that thou dydest it in the pure nesse of thy herte. I kepte the also that thou shuldest not synne agaynst me, and therfore suffred I the not to touch her. Now therfore deliuer the man his wyfe agayne for he is a prophete. And he shall praye for the & thou mayst lyue. But and yf thou deliuer her not agayne, be sure that thou shalt dye the deeth both thou, and all that thou hast.

Therfore Abimelech rising vp betymes in the morning called all his seruantes and tolde all these sayenges in their eares, and the men were sore afrayde. And Abimelech called Abraham & said vnto him: what hast thou done vnto vs and what haue I offended the that thou hast brought on me & on my kingdom so great a synne: thou hast done dedes vnto me that ought not to be done. And Abimelech sayd vnto Abraham: What sawest thou that thou hast done thys thyng?

Abraham answered. For I sayde: surely the feare of God is not in thys place, & they shall slep me for my wyfes sake: yet in very dede she is my syster, for she is the daughter of my father: though she be not the daughter of my mother: and she became my wyfe. And after God caused me to wandre out of my fathers house, I sayde vnto her: Thys kindnesse shalt thou shewe vnto me in al places where we come, that thou save of me, he is my brother.

Tha toke Abimelech shepe and oxen, mē seruantes and women seruantes & gaue the vnto Abraham, & deliuered hym Sara his wyfe agayne. And Abimelech sayde: beholde, my land lyeth before the, dwell where it pleaseth the best. But vnto Sara he said: Se, I haue geuen thy brother a thousande peces of syluer, behold, it shal be a conyng of thynne eyes, vnto all that are with the, and thus with all was she retyoned.

And so Abraham prayed vnto God, and God healed Abimelech and his wife and his maydens, & they bare chyldre. For the Loide had closed to all the matrices of the house of Abimelech: because of Abrahams wyfe.

Ihe Lorde visited Sara as he had sayde, & dyd vnto her * accordyng as he had promysed. For Sara was wryth chylde and bare Abrahams a sonne in hys olde age, euen the same season wher the Lorde had appoynted him. And Abraham called hys sones name that was borne vnto hym wher the Sara * bare hym, Isahac: and Abrahams & circuncysed Isahac his sonne when he was. viii. dayes olde: as God commaunded hym. And Abraham was an hundred yere olde: wher his sonne Isahac was borne vnto hym. But Sara sayd: God hath made me a laughynge stocke: so that all that heare: wyl laugh at me. She sayd also: who wolde haue sayd vnto Abrahams: I haue borne him a sonne in hys olde age: for I haue borne him a sonne in hys olde age: The chylde grew: and was wened: and Abraham made a greates feast: the same daye that Isahac was wened. Sara sawe also a sonne of Hagar the Egypcia (which she had borne vnto Abraham) to be a mocher, wherfore she sayde vnto Abraham: I put awaye this bondmayde & hys sonne: for the sonne of this bondwoman shall not be heyre wryth my sonne Isahac: & this sayenge was very greuous in Abrahams syght because of hys sonne. And God sayde vnto Abraham: let it not be greuous in thy syght, because of the lad and of thy bondmayde: All that Sara hath sayd vnto the, heare hys voyce, for: in Isahac shall thy seed be called. Whosoner of the sonne of the bondwoman wyl I make a nation: because he is thy * seed.

And so Abrahams arose up early in the morning, and toke hys & a bottell of water & gaue it vnto Hagar, puttynge it on hys shulders wryth the lad also, & sent her away, who departyng, wandred up and downe in the wyldernes of Berr Mecha. And the water was spent in the bottell, and she calld the lad vnder a bush and went and sat on the other syde a great way, as it were a bowshot of: for she sayde: I wyl not se the deach of the childe. And she sperryng doune on the other syde lyfte up hys voyce and wepte.

And God herde the voyce of the chylde. And the angell of God called Hagar out of heauen and sayd vnto her: what ayleth the Hagar? Feare not, for God hath herde the voyce of the childe where he lyeth. Arise, lyfte up the lad, and take him in thy hande, for I wyl make of hym a great people. And God opened hys eyes: and the same a well of water. And she wente and fylled the bottell wryth water and gaue the boye drinke. And God was wryth the lad, & he grew & dwelt in the wyldernes, and became an archer. And he dwelt in the wyldernes of Sharan. And hys mother got hym a wyfe out of the lande of Egypt.

And it chaunced the same season that Abimelech and Phicol his chiefe captayne spake vnto Abraham sayenge: * God is wryth the in all that thou doest. And nowe therefore swere vnto me euen here by God, that thou wylt not hurt me nor my chyliden, nor my chyliden chyliden. But that thou shalt deale wryth me & the contrie where thou hast bene a stranger, accordyng vnto the kynndesse that I haue shewed the. And Abrahams sayd: I wyl swere.

And Abraham rebuked Abimelech for a well of water, wher Abimelechs seruantes had by stealth take awaye. And Abimelech sayde: I wote not who hath done this thing. Also thou taldest me not: neither herde I of it, but this daye. And Abraham toke shepe & oxen, and gaue the vnto Abimelech. And they made both of them a bonde together. And Abraham let. viii. twe lambs by the seines. And Abimelech said vnto Abrahams: what maner chylde. vii. rme labes wher thou hast let by them shepes: the answered: For these. twe lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that they maye be a wytnesse vnto me, that I haue digged this well. Wherfore the place is called Berr Mecha, because there they digged both of them. And made they a bonde together at Berr Mecha. And Abimelech & Phicol his chiefe captayne toke hy, and turned agayne vnto the lande of the Philistines. And Abraham planted a wodde in Berr Mecha, & called there on the name of the Lorde, the euerydaye God: & so gouerned in the Philistines lande a longe season.

The birth of Abraham is promised in a strange way from Isaac. Chrysostom says that in a promise. The generation of Isaac is promised by Isaac.

After these sayenges it happened that God dyd * more Abrahams sayd vnto hys sonne Isahac: which answered: here am I. And he sayd: take the only sonne Isahac wryth thee thou lovest, & get the vnto the labe Sharan, & sacrifice him there for a sacrifice vpon one of the mountaynes, wher I wyl shew the. Then Abrahams rose up early in the morning, & loaded hys asse, & take the ass of hys puer men wryth him, and Isahac hys sonne: and came wryth the ass to the place wher God had appoynted hym.

The chylde heare Abrahams lyfte up hys eyes, and sawe the place a farre of, and sayd vnto hys yong men: lyde here wryth the asse: I and the lad wyl go vnder a wyldewode, and come agayne vnto you. And Abraham toke the wodde of the sacrifice and layed it vnto Isahac hys sonne, but he hym self toke fyre in hys hande and a knyfe. And they wyl both of them together.

Then spake Hahac vnto Abraham his father and sayde: My father? And he answered: here am I my sonne. He sayde: We here to fyre and wood, but where is the shepe for sacrifice? Abrahā answered: my sonne, God will prouide him a shepe for sacrifice. And so they went both together.

Gen. 22. 2.

And whē they came vnto the place which God had shewed hym, Abraham made an altar there, & stilled the wood, and bounde Hahac his sonne, & layde him on the altar, about vpon the wood. And Abraham receyvede forth his hande, toke the kniffe to haue kylled his sonne. And the angell of the Lorde called vnto him from heauē, sayenge: Abrahā! Abrahā! And he sayde: here am I. And he sayde: laye not thy hande vpo the chyld, neether do any thyng at all vnto him, for now I knowe that thou fearest God, ad hast for my sake not spared thyne only sonne.

And Abraham stynged vp his eyes, looked aboute: and beholde, there was a ram caught by the thornes in a thychette. And he wente and toke the ram and offred him vp for a sacrifice in the steade of his sonne. And Abraham called the name of the place, the Lorde wyll see. As it is sayd thys daye: in þ moonte wyll the Lorde be seene.

Gen. 22. 13.

And the angell of the Lorde cryed vnto Abrahā from heauen the seconde tyme, and sayd: thy my selfe haue I sworne (sayd the Lorde) because thou hast done thys thyng, and hast not spared thy only sonne: that is blessinge I wyll blesse the, & in multiplyinge I wyll multiplye thy seed as the starres of heauē & as the lande which is vpon the see. And thy seed shall possesse the gate of his enemyes: And in the laste shal al the neth of the erth be blessed, because thou hast berde my voyce. So turned Abrahā agayne vnto his yonger men, and they rose vp and wnt together to Berr Seba. And Abrahā dwelt at Berr Seba. And it chaunced after these thynges, that one tolde Abrahā sayenge: Beholde, Hahac, the hath also borne chyldren vnto thy brother Hahac: but his eldest sonne, & was his brother, and Hahac is the father of the Syrians. He caused, & ha lo, & Hahac, & Jediah, & Bethuel. And Bethuel begat Rebekah. These viii. yere Hahac bare to Hahac: Abrahā's byother. And

The xxiii. Chapter.

It was here that Abraham bought of Ephron the field.

Sara was an hundred & xxiii. yere old (so longe lyued she) and Sara dyed in Egypt at Acha. The same is Hebron in the lande of Canaan.

And Abraham came to moorne Sara and to wepe for her. And Abraham stode vp from the syde of his conyle, and talked wth the sonnes of Heth sayenge: I am a stranger and a fornyer amonge you, gyue me a possellio to bury in wth you, that I may bury my conyle out of my syde. And the chyldre of Heth answered Abraham, sayenge vnto him: Heare vs Lorde, thou arte a pynce of God amonge vs. In the cheit of our sepulchres burye thy dead: None of vs also shall forbyd the thy sepulchre, but thou mayest burye thy dead therein: Abrahā stode vp and bowed himselfe before the people of the lāde of the chyldre of Heth. And he comoned wth the sayenge: If it be your mynde that I shal bury my dead out of my syde, heare me, and speke for me to Ephron the sonne of zoar: that he maye gyue me þ dubbel cane wyche he hath, and that is in the ende of his feide: but for as moch money, as it is worth shal he geue it me in the presce of you, for a possellio to burye in. For Ephron dwelled amonge the chyldren of Heth.

And Ephron the Hethite answered Abraham in the audyence of the chyldren of Heth & of all that wente in at the gates of his cite sayenge: Not so my lord, heare me: The feide geue I the, ad the cane that therein is geue I the also: & euen in the presce of the sonnes of my people geue I it the, burye thy dead. And Abraham bowed hym selfe before the people of the lande, & spake vnto Ephron in the audyence of the people of the cite sayenge: I praye the heare me if it please the: I wyll geue vnto the the feide, take it & I wyll bury my dead therein. Ephron answered Abraham sayenge vnto hym: My lord, hearken vnto me. The lāde is worth iii. hundred sicles of syner: what is that betwixt the & me? burye therefore thy dead. And Abraham hardened vnto Ephron & weped him the siller wyche he had sayde, in the audyence of the sonnes of Heth. Euen iii. hundred sicles of curant money amonge marchantys. And the feide of Ephron wth the dubbel cane wyche was before Hama: euen the feide & the cane & was therein & all the trees & were in the feide, & that were in all the borders round about, was made siller vnto Abraham for a possellio, in the syde of the chyldre of Heth, before all that wnt in at the gates of the cite. After this dyd Abraham burye Sara his wyfe wyfe in the double tyme of the felde & lyethe before Hamre. The same is hebron in the lāde of Chanaan. And so both the felde and ycone that is therein, was made vnto Abrahā a sure possellid to buy in, of & sonnes of hebr.

Abraham maketh his seruante to sweere: and sendeth him to take a wyfe for Isahar his sonne. The seruante was Israhail and brought Rebekkah which Isahar taketh for wyfe.

Abrahā was old and cryen in dayes, & the Lorde had blessed him in al thinges. And Abrahā sayd vnto his eldest seruante of his house whiche had & rule ouer all that he had But thy hande vnder my thyghe, and I wyll make the swere by the Lorde God of heauen and God of the erthe, that thou shalt not take a wyfe vnto my sonne, of the daughters of Chanaan, amonge whiche I dwell. But thou shalt go vnto my country and to my natyue londe, and take a wyfe vnto my sonne Isahar.

But the seruante sayd vnto hym: per- aduenture the woman wyll not agre to come wyth me vnto thys lande, shal I buynge thy sonne agayne vnto the land whiche thou callest out of? To whom Abrahā answered: be ware, that thou bring not my sonne thither agayne. The Lorde God of heauen whiche toke me from my fathers house and from the land where I was borne, And whiche spake vnto me and that sware vnto me sayenge: vnto thy seed wyll I gyue thys lande, he shal sende his angell before the, and thou shalt take a wyfe vnto my sonne from thence. And the lesse yf the woman wyll not agre to folowe the, than shalt thou be wythe out haunger of thys my othe. Onely buynge not my sonne thither agayne. And the seruante put his hande vnder the thigh of Abrahā his master, and swore to hym as concerninge that matter. And the seruante toke ten camels of the camels of his master and departed, and had of all maner of goodes of his master wythe hym, and rode vp and wende to Melopotamia, vnto the cytye of Nabor.

And made his camels to lye downe wythout the cytye by a well syde of water, at euery aboute the tyme that women come out to drawe water. And he sayde.

Lorde God of my master Abrahā, sende me good speche thys daye, and shewe mercy vnto my master Abrahā. Lo I stonde here by the well of water, and the daughters of the men of thys cytye come out to drawe water: Nowe damsell to whom I shalpe, shewe downe thy pytcher I praye the that I may drynke. If she say also: Drynke, and I wyll geue thy camells drynke: the same is she that thou haste ordeyned for thy seruante Isahar: yee: and thereby shal I knowe that thou haste shewed mercy on my master. And it came to passe yee he had lefte speakynge, beholde, Rebekka came out, the daughter of Bethuell, sonne to Wylla the wyfe of Nabor Abrahāns brother, and his pytcher was by her shoulder. The damsell was very fayre to loke vpon, & yet a mayde & unknowne of man. And she went downe to the well, & fylled his pytcher and came vp. And the seruante ranynge vnto her, sayde: let me suppe a lytle water of thy pytcher. And she sayd: drynke my Lorde.

And she halld & let downe her pytcher & vpon his arme, & gaue hym drynke. And when she had geuen hym drynke, she sayde: I will drawe water for thy camells also, vntill they haue drynke ynough. And she poured out his pytcher into the trough hastily, & came agayne vnto the well to let water & drawe for all his camells.

And the man wondered at her: But helde hym peace, to wete whether the Lorde had made his iourney prosperous or not. And it fortuned as the camells had lefte drynkyng, the man toke a golden earrynge of halfe a lytle mayght, & two bracelets for his handes, of x. lyces weyght of golde, & sayde whose daughter art thou? tell me. I praye the, in thys rowme in thy fathers house for vs to lodge in. She answered hym: I am the daughter of Bethuell the sonne of Wylla, whiche she bare vnto Nabor: and sayde moreouer vnto hym: we haue ytter and ynnonder ynough, and also rowme to lodge in.

And the man bowed hym selfe, and worshipped the Lorde, and sayde: blessed be the Lorde God of my master Abrahā, whiche craued not to deale mercifully and truly wythe my master, and hath brought me the way to my masters brothers house. And the damsell came & tolde them of her meetinge house these thynges. And Rebekka had a brother called Laban.

And he came out vnto the man, and into the well: for as fast as he had leue the earrynges and the bracelets in his brothers handes (and herde the wordes of Rebekkas pytcher sayenge: thus sayde the man vnto me) he wende ouer vnto the man. And loe, he rode wythe the camells by the well syde. And he sayde: comen thou blessed of the Lorde. And whiche damsell thou wythout? Whome hast thou brought, and made rowme for the camells? And then the man came in to the house: and he worshipped the damsell: and (Laban) brought ytter and ynnonder for the camells, and water to walche his sete & the meimes sete that were with hym, & set meate before hym to eate. But he sayde: I wyl not eate, vntyll I haue sayde myne arade. And he sayde: saye on. And he sayde: I am Abrahams seruaunt, & God hath blessed my master out of mesure, that he is become great, & hath gyuen hym shepe, & oxen, syluer & golde, men seruauntes, & mayde seruauntes, camels, & asses.

And: Sara my masters wyfe bare hym a sonne, when she was olde, & vnto hym hath he gyuen all that he hath. And my master made me sweare sayeng: thou shalt not take a wyfe to my sonne amonge the daughters of the Cananites in whose lande I dwell.

But thou shalt go vnto my fathers house & to my kynred, & take a wyfe vnto my sonne. And I sayde vnto my master: peraduenture the wyfe wyl not folowe me: And he answered me: The Lorde, before whom I walke, wyl sende hys Angell wythe the, & prosper thy iorney & thou shalt take a wyfe for my sonne, of my kynrede & of my fathers house. Then shalt thou be gyftlesse of my curse, when thou comest to my kynrede. And yf they gyue the not one, thou shalt be gyftlesse of my curse.

And so I came thys daye vnto the well & sayde: O Lorde, the God of my Master Abraham, yf it be so nowe that thou makest my iorney whych I go, prosperous: beholde I stonde by thys welle of water, & when a byrgyn cometh to the to drawe water, & I saye to her: geue me (I praye the) a lytle water of thy ptycher to drynke, shal she saye to me: drynke thou, I wyl also drawe for thy Camels: that same is the wyfe whome the Lorde hath preparede for my masters sonne.

And before I had made an ende of speakinge in myne herte: beholde Rebecca came furthe, & byr ptycher on byr shoulde, & she wente downe vnto the well & drew water. And I sayde vnto her: geue me drynke I praye the. And she made haste, & toke downe byr ptycher frome of byr, & sayde drynke, & I wyl geue thy camels drynke also.

And I thanke, and she gaue the camels drynke also. And I asked her, saying, whose daughter arte thou? She answered: the daughter of Bathuell Rabois sonne & whom Eliza bare vnto hym. And I put the earyng vpon byr face, & the braceletes vpon byr handes. And I bowed my selfe, & worshipped the Lorde, and blessed the Lorde God of my master Abraham whiche had broughte me the ryghte waye, to take my masters brothers daughter vnto my sonne. Nowe also yf ye wyl deale mercifully and truly wythe my Master, tell me: and yf not, tell me also that I maye comme me to the ryghte hande of the letter.

Gen. xxi. b. and xxii. c.

Then answered Laban and Bathuel, sayenge. Thys sayeng is proceeded euen out of the Lorde, we cannot therfore saye vnto the, ether good or bad: beholde, Rebecca before the, take her & goo, that she maye be thy masters somes wyfe, enen as God hath sayde. And when Abrahams seruaunt herde thes wordes, he worshipped the Lorde, stode vpon the erthe. And the seruaunt toke forth iewelles of syluer and iewelles of golde & rayment, and gaue them to Rebecca. And vnto byr brother and to byr mother, he gaue gyftes. and they dyd eate and drynke, bothe he & the men that were wythe hym, & tarped all nyght. And wha they rose vp in the morninge. He sayd let me departe vnto my master. Byr brother and byr mother answered let the damsel abyde with vs a whyle, and it be but euen. 7. dayes, and than shal she go. He sayde vnto them: bynder me not, behold, the Lorde hath prospered my iourney. Sende me awaye therfore, that I maye goo vnto my master. And they sayde: we wyl call the damsell, and enquire at byr mouth. And they called forth Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: wyte thou go wyth thys man? And she answered, I wyl goo.

So they let Rebecca thes syster go & her myse & Abrahams seruaunt, & hys men. And they blessed Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Thou arte our syster, growe into thousande thousandes & and thy seed possesse the gate of thes enemyes. And Rebecca arose & byr damells, and let them vp vpon the camels, & went they waye after the mī. And y seruaunt toke Rebecca, & went hys waye.

And Labac was cominge from the waye of the well of the: lyryng and senger me, for he dwelleth in the south countre, & Labac was gone out to praye in the feilde at the enemye. And he lyt vp byr eyes and sawe the camels cominge. And Rebecca lyfte vp byr eyes, & when she sawe Labac, she lyghted of the camel, & sayde vnto the seruaunt what man is thys that cometh walkyng agaynst vs in the feilde? And the seruaunt sayde it is my master. Therfore she toke byr cloke, and put it about her. And the seruaunt tolde Labac all thynges that he had done. And Labac broughte her into hys mother Saras tence, and toke Rebecca, and she became hys wyfe, and he loued her: and so Labac receaued conforthe after hys mother.

The xxii. Chapter.

Abraham taketh Israhel to hys wyfe: and he getteth many chyldren. Abraham bydeth and geueth all hys goodes to Israhel: the generall gyfte of Israhel. The blyss of Israhel & of Jacob & of Esau. Esau selleth hys byr ryghte for a myll of pottage. Abraham Abraham proceeded further and toke hym a wyfe called Keturah, which bare hym Dumrah, and Jekshan, & Medan and Midian, and Jethan, and Shuah, Jekshan begat Seba, and Dedan. And the sonnes of Medan were Thumim, Letusim, & Leumim. And the sonnes of Midian: Ephraim, and Sypher, and Hanoth, & Abida, & Eida. All these were the chyldren of Keturah. And Abraham gaue al his goodes vnto Isaac. But vnto the sonnes of the concubynes whiche Abraham had, he gaue gyftes, & sent them awaye from Isaac hys sonne (whyle he yet lyued) eastwarde, vnto the lade of hebes.

And these are the dayes of the yeres of Abrahams lyfe which he lyued: an hundred and lxxv. yere, and than fell sycke and dyed, in a lusty age (when he had lyued ynoughe) and was put vnto his people. And hys sonnes Isaac and Ismaell buried hym in the double caue in the felde of Ephron sonne of zoar the hethyde besyde the plaine of Mamre. Whiche felde Abraham bought of the sonnes of heth: where Abraham was buried & Sara hys wyfe. It fortuneth after the deeth of Abraham that God blessed Isaac hys sonne, and Isaac dwelled by the well of the lypunge and seinge me.

These are the generations of Ismaell Abrahams sonne, whiche Hagar the Egyptian Saras had mayde bare vnto Abraham. And these are the names of the sonnes of Ismaell in theyr names accordyng to theyr kindredes. The eldest sonne of Ismaell: Nebathoth, & Cedar, & Adbeel, & Mibsam, & Miska Duma, & Masha & Hadar, Thema, Jetur, Naphtis, & Kedma: These are the sonnes of Ismaell & these are their names, by their townes & castels. xii. pieces of their householdes. And these are the yeres of the lyfe of Ismaell, an hundred and xxxvii. yere, & he fell sycke, & dyed & was layde vnto hys people. And they dwelled from Henshah vnto Sur that is by the border of Egypte, as thou goest toward the Assirians. And he dyed in the pyeience of all hys brethern.

And these are the generacions of Isaac Abrahams sonne: Abraham begat Isaac. And Isaac was .xl. yere olde when he toke Rebecca to wyfe, & daughter of Bethuel the Syrian of Mesopotamia and syster to Laban the Syrian. And Isaac made intercession vnto the Lorde for hys wyfe: because she was barren: and the Lorde was intreated of hym, and Rebecca hys wyfe conceived and the chyldren stroue together within her.

Therefore she sayde: yf it shulde goo so to passe what helpeth it that I am wyth chyldr wherfore, she wente to aske the Lorde. And the Lorde sayde vnto her: there are two manner of people in thy wombe, & two nacjons shalbe deuyded out of thy bowels, and the one nacjon shalbe myghtier than the other & the elder shalbe seruaunte vnto the younger.

Therefore when her tyme was come to be deliuered: beholde, there were two twyned in hys wombe. And the that came out first was reddy, and he was all ouer as it were a rough garment, & they called his name Esau. And after hym, came hys brother out, & hys hande holdyng Esau by the helle. And hys name was called Jacob. And Isaac was .xl. yere olde when they were borne: and the boyes grewe, and Esau became a connyng hunter and a tyller of the earth. But Jacob was a perfecte man, and dwelled in the tentes. Isaac loued Esau, because he dyd eate of hys venyson, but Rebecca loued Jacob.

Isaac sod potage, and Esau, came from the felde and was saynte, and Esau sayde to Jacob: fede me I praye the wyth that redde potage, for I am saynte. And therefore was hys name called *Edom. And Jacob sayde: sell me this daye thy byrthynght. Esau sayde: Loo, I am at the point to dye, and what profyte shal this byrthynght do me? Jacob answered: sweare to me then this daye. And he sware to hym, and solde hys byrthynght vnto Jacob. Than Jacob gaue Esau bred and potage of ryle. And he dyd eate and dryncke and role vp, & went hys waye. And Esau regarde not hys byrthynght.

C The xxvi. Chapter.

The journey of Isaac toward Abimelech. The promise made vnto Isaac and hys seed. Isaac is rebuked of Abimelech for calling hys wyfe hys syster. The charyng of the shepards for the wellles. Isaac is rebuked. The stones ment betwene Abimelech and Isaac.

And there came a deeth in the lande, passyng & first deeth was in the dayes of Abraham. And Isaac went vnto Abimelech kynge of the Philistynes vnto Gerar.

And the Lorde appeared vnto hym, & sayde: Go not doune into Egypte but hyde in the lande wyche I shal shewe vnto the: forgozne in this lande, and I wyll be wyth the, and wyll blesse the: for vnto the & vnto thy seide I wyll geue all these cheryes. And I wyll performe the othe wyche I swowe vnto Abraham thy father, & wyll multiplye thy seed as the starres of heven, & wyll geue vnto thy seed all these countreys. And in the seed shal all the nacjons of the earth be blessed, because that Abraham barneken vnto my wyce and kepte myne abyngmentes, my commandementes, my statutes, & my lawes.

And Isaac dwelled in Gerar. And the men of the place asked hym of hys wyfe, and he sayde: she ys my syster: for he feared to saye: She is my wyfe, lest þ men of þ place shulde haue kylled hym because of Rebecca whych was bewtyfull to the eye. And yt happened after he had bene there longe tyme, that Abimelech kynge of the Philistias looked out at a wyndowe, & sawe Isaac spyng with Rebecca hys wyfe. And Abimelech called Isaac, & said the is of a suerty thy wyfe, & why saydest thou: she is my sister? To whom Isaac answered: I thought that I myghte peradventure haue dyed for hys sake. Abimelech sayde: why haste thou done this vnto vs: one of the people myghte lyghly haue lyne by thy wyfe, and so shuldeste thou haue broughte synne vpon vs. And so Abimelech charged all hys people, sayinge: he þ toucheth this man or hys wyfe, shall dye the death.

Isaac sowed in that lande, & founde in that same yere an hundred busshels: and the Lorde blessed hym, & the man waxed myghty, & wente forth & grewe tyll he was exceedinge great, for he had possession of shepe, of oxen, & a myghty housholde, & therfore the Philistians had enuy at hym: for the Philistines stopped & fylled vp with earthe all the welles whych hys fathers seruantes dygged in hys father Abrahams tyme. And Abimelech sayde vnto Isaac: get the from vs for thou arte myghtyer then we a gret deale.

Therfore Isaac departed thence, & abode in the valley of Gerar, and dwelte there. And Isaac returnyng, dygged agayne the welles of water whych they dygged in the dayes of Abrahā hys father, whiche the Philistias had stopped after the deyth of Abrahā & gaue them the same names whych hys father gaue them. Isaacs seruantes dygged in the valley, & founde a well of luyngge water. And the herdmen of Gerar byd streue w Isaacs herdmen, saying: the water is ours. Than called he the wel * Esek, because they stroue with him.

And they dygged a nother well, & stroue for that also. And he called the name of it * Sitena. And than he departed thence, and dygged a nother well, for the whiche they stroue not: therfore called he it * Rehoboth, sayeng: the Lorde hath now made vs rowme, that we maye encrease vpon the erth.

* Sitena.

* Rehoboth.

And he went vpon thence, to Beer Seba. And the Lorde appered vnto him the same nyght & sayde: I am the God of Abrahā thy father, feare not, for I am with the, & will blesse the & multiply thy seide for my seruant Abrahams sake. And he buylded an auter there, & called vpon the name of the Lorde, & pitched hys tente. And there Isaacs seruantes dygged a well.

Than cam Abimelech to hym from Gerar: and Ahisath hys frende, and Phicol his chefe captayne. And Isaac sayde vnto the:

wherfore come ye to me, seynge ye hate me & haue put me away from you: Which answered: In seing we sawe that the * Lorde was w the, & we sayde: let there be nowe an ooth betwixte vs, euen betwixte vs & the, & let vs make a bonde with the, that thou shuldest do vs no hurt, as we haue not touched the, & as we haue done vnto the nothyng but good, & sente the awaye in peace, for thou arte nowe the blessed of the Lorde. And he made them a swete, & they dyd eate & dryncke. And they rose vp by tymes in the moynynge, & sware one to another. And Isaac sent them away. And they departed from hym in peace. And that same daye it happened, that Isaacs seruantes came & tolde him of a well whiche they had dygged: & sayde vnto hym, we haue founde water. And he called it * Seba. And the name of the cyte is called * Beer Seba vnto this daye. Elau was .xi. yere olde, & he toke a wyfe called Judith, the daughter of Bery an Hethyte, & Basmath the daughter of Elon an Hethyte also whiche were dilobedyent vnto Isaac & Rebecca.

The xxvii. Chapter.

Isaac receiued the blessing from Elau by hys mothers counsell. Isaac is dead, & Esau is comforted. The hatred of Esau towardes Jacob.

And it came to passe that whan Isaac waxed olde & hys eyes were dymme (so that he coulde not se.) He called Elau his eldest sone & said vnto him Wy sone, & he sayd vnto him heare am I. And he sayd: be holde, I am nowe olde & knowe not the daye of my deeth: and nowe therfore take thy wepens, thy quyer & thy bowe & get the to the felde, that thou mayest take me somme venyson, & make me meate such as I loue, & byngg it me, that I maye eate, & that my soule maye blesse the, before that I dye. But Rebecca hearde when Isaac spake to Elau hys sone. And Elau wente into the felde, to catch venyson, and to byngge it. And Rebecca sayd vnto Jacob hys sone sayinge: Beholde I haue bere the thy father sayynge wythe Elau thy brother and sayynge: byngge me venyson and make me meate, that I maye eate and blesse the before the Lorde, awaye my death. Nowe therfore:

Gen. 27. 1.

Therefore my sonne heare my voyce in that which I comaunde the: get the to the flocke, & bypunge me thence two good hyddes, that I maye make meate of them for thy father, soch as he loneth. And thou shalt bypunge it to thy father, that he maye eate & that he maye blesse the before hys death.

Then sayde Jacob to Rebecca hys mother: beholde, Esau my brother is a rough mā, ad I am smooth. Wy father shall peradventure sele me, ad I shall seme vnto him as though I wente about to beggyle hym, and so shall he bypunge a curse vpon me, and not a blessing: and hys mother sayde vnto hym: vpon me be thy curse my sonne, onlpe heare my voyce, and go and fetch me them. And Jacob went and fet them, and brought them to hys mother. And hys mother made meate suche as she knewe hys father loued. And Rebecca fet goodly rayment of hys eldest sonne Esau, whiche was in the house wth hys, & put the vpon Jacob hys yonger sone, & the put f skynnes of goates vpon hys handes & vnto the smooth of hys necke. And she put the meate & brede whych she had prepared in the hande of hys sonne Jacob.

Whan he came to his father, he sayde: my father / And he answered: here am I, who art thou my sonne / And Jacob sayde vnto hys father: I am Esau thy eldest sone, I haue done accordinge as thou baddest me: vp and spt and eate of my venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. And Isaac sayde vnto hys sonne: howe cometh it that thou hast founde it so quychly my sonne / He answered: The Lorde thy God broughte it to my hande: Then sayde Isaac vnto Jacob, come nere ad let me fele the my sonne, whether thou be my sonne Esau or not. Then wente Jacob to Isaac hys father, & he felt & sayd: the voyce is Jacobs voyce, but the handes are the handes of Esau. And he knewe hym not, because hys handes were rough as his brother Esaus handes: ad so he blessed hym.

And he asked hym: art thou my sonne Esau / And he sayde, that I am. Then sayd he: bypunge me & let me eate of my sonnes venyson, that my soule may blesse the. And he broughte hym and he ate. And he broughte hym wyne also, ad he dranche. And hys father Isaac sayde vnto hym, come nere, ad kysse me my sonne. And he went vnto hym ad kysed hym. And he smelled the sounoure of hys rayment, & * blessed hym, ad sayde: See, the smelle of my sonne is as the smelle of a felde, whiche the Lorde hath blessed. God gene the of the dewe of heauen, and of the fatnesse of the erth, & plenty of corne and wyne. People be thy seruantes, ad naryons bowe vnto the. Se Lorde ouer thy byethren, and thy mothers chylidren stowe vnto the. Cursed be he that curseth the, and blessed be he that blesteth the.

It happened that alsoone as Isaac had made an ende of blessing, & Jacob was thence gone out from the presence of Isaac hys father, then came Esau hys brother from hys hunting, & had made also meate & broughte it vnto hys father, & sayde vnto hys father: let my father arys & eate of hys sonnes venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me.

Then hys father Isaac sayde vnto hym: who arte thou / he answered: I am thy eldest sonne Esau, And Isaac was greatly astonied out of mesure, & sayde: whiche is he & where is he then that hath hunted venyson & broughte it me / and I haue eaten of all before thou camest, & haue blessed hym, & he shalbe blessed. When Esau hearde the wordes of hys father, he cryed out greatly and bytterly, aboute mesure, & sayde vnto hys father: blesse me also my father. Who answered, thy brother came wyth subtiltye, & hath taken awaye thy blessing. And he sayde agayne: he maye well be called Jacob for he hath undermynd me now two tymes first he toke awaye my bythynght and se, now hath he taken awaye my blessing also. And he sayde: hast thou kepte nener a blessing for me?

Isaac answered and sayd vnto Esau: beholde I haue made hym thy lorde, and all hys mothers chylidren haue I made hys seruantes. Wherouer wyth corne and wyne haue I stablyshed hym, what can I do vnto the now my sonne / And Esau sayde vnto hys father: hast thou but that one blessing my father: blesse me also my father: so lysed vnto Esau hys voyce and * wepte. Then Isaac hys father answered & sayde vnto hym: beholde, thy dwelling place shalbe the fatnesse of the erth, and of the dewe of heauen from aboue. And with thy swerde shalt thou lyue, and shalt be thy brothers lorde. And it will come to passe, that when thou shalt get the mastery, thou shalt lowle hys yocke from of thy necke.

And Esau * hated Jacob, because of the blessing that hys father blessed hym wth all. And Esau sayde in hys herte: The daye of my fathers sorowe are at hande, and I will sle my brother Jacob. And these wordes of Esau hys eldest sone were tolde to Rebecca. And she sente & called Jacob hys yonger sone, & sayde vnto him: beholde, thy brother Esau threatneth to kill the: nowe therefore my sonne heare my voyce, make the ready, & flee to Laban my brother at Haran: & tary wyth him a while: vntill thy brothers feardnes be swaged, & vntill thy brothers wrath turne awaye from the, & he forgette the thynges whiche I haue done to hym. Then will I sende & fet & awaye frs thence. Whiche Woulde I be desolate of you both in one daye.

 And Rebecca spake to Isaac, I am werry of my lyfe, for feare of the daughters of Heth.
 If Iacob take a wyfe of þ daughters of He-th, soche one as thes are, or of þ daughters of the lade, what good shal my lyfe do me?

not Isaac his father: then wente he vnto Hamaell, & toke vnto the wyues whereby he had, Rahela the daughter of Hamaell Abrahams sonne, the syster of Laban to be his come vnto Haran, & came vnto a place by chaunce, and taried there all nyght because the sonne was downe. And toke a stone of the place & put it vnder his heade & layd him downe in the same place to slepe. And he dremed: & beholde there stood a ladder vpon the

it, yee, & God stood vpon it, and sayde.

I am the Lord God of Abraham thy ce, & I was not aware. And he was affrayed & sayde: how fearfull is thys place: it is none other but euen the house of God & the gate of heauen. And Jacob stode vp early in the morning, & toke the stone that he had layde vnder hys heade, & pyched it vp an ende * & poured oyle in the topp of it.

And he called the name of the place Wells, but the name of the cypre was called Luz before time. And Jacob bowed a bowe, sayinge: If God will be wth me, and will keepe me in this journey which I goo, & will geue me breade to eate, & clothes to put on, so that I come agayne vnto my fathers house in safetie, then shall the Lorde be my God, & this stone which I haue set vp an ende, shall be Goodes house: & of all that thou shalt geue me, will I geue the tenth vnto thee.

countrie. And as he looked about, beholde there was well in the felde, and the flockes of shepe lay there by (for at that wel were the shepes watered) & there was a great stone vpon the wells mouth. And thither were all the flockes brought, & they rolled the stone fro the wells mouth, & watered the shepe & put the stone agayne vpon the wells mouth vnto hys place. And Jacob sayde vnto them: bretherne whence be ye? And they sayde: of Haran are we. And he sayde vnto them: knowe ye Laban the sonne of Nahor? They sayde: we knowe hym. And he sayde vnto them, is he in good health? And they sayde, he is in good healtbe, & beholde, hys daughter Rebek commeth with the shepe. And he sayde, lo, it is yet but hys dawe, neither is it tyme that the cattell shoulde be gathered toge-

And they sayde, we maye not vntyll all the flockes be brought together, and tyll they roll the stone from the wells mouth, and so we water our shepe.

came w^{ch} byz fathers shepe, for she kepte them. And as soone as Jacob sawe Rachel, daughter of Laban byz mothers brother, the shepe of Laban byz mothers brother, he wente

he went and rowled the stone from the well: les mouth, and watered the flock of Laban hys mothers brother. And Jacob kyssed Rabel, and spake vpon hys voyce and wepte: and Jacob tolde Rabel, that he was her fathers brother and Rebeccas sonne. Therfore came she and tolde her father.

And it happened when Laban hearde tell of Jacob his sisters sonne, he came to mete him and embraced hym and kyssed hym, and brought hym to hys house. And he tolde Laban all the matter. To whom Laban sayde: well, thou arte my bone & my flesh. And he abode wth hym the space of a moneth.

And Laba sayde vnto Jacob: Though thou be my brother, shuldest thou therfor serue me for nought: tell me, what shal thy wages be? Laba had two daughters, the eldest called Lea & the yongest Rabel. Lea was tender eyed, but Rabel was bewtyful & wel fauored. And Jacob loued Rabel, & sayd: I wyl serue the. vii. yere for Rabel thy yongest daughter. Laba answered: it is better that I geue her the, the to another man: byde with me.

And Jacob serued * vii. yeres for Rabel & they seined vnto hym but a fewe dayes, for the lone he had to her. And Jacob sayde vnto Laba: geue me my wyfe, that I maye lye wth hyr. For my dayes are fulfilled.

Then Laba gathered together all the men of that place, & made a feste. And when euen was come, he toke Lea hys daughter & brought her to hym: & he went * in vnto hyr. And Laba gaue vnto hys daughter Lea, zilpha hys mayde, to be hyr seruante.

And when the mourninge was come, beholde it was Lea. Tha sayd he to Laba, wherfore hast thou plaied thus with me: dyd not I serue the for Raell: wherfore tha haste thou begyled me? Laba answered: it is not the manner of thys place, to marye the yongest before the eldest. Passe out thys weke, & tha shal thys also be geuen the for the seruyce whiche thou shalt serue me yet. vii. yeres more. And Jacob dyd euen so, & passed out that weke, & than he gaue hym Raell hys daughter to wyfe also. And Laban gaue to Raell hys daughter, Bilha hys handmayde to be hyr seruante. So laye he by Raell also, & loued Raell more than Lea * and seined hym yet vii. yeres more.

When the Lozde sawe that Lea was despyed, he made hyr fruitfull. And Raell remayned baren. And Lea conceaued & bare a sonne, and called hys name Ruben, for she sayde: the Lozde hath looked vpon my tribulacion. Nowe therefore my husbande wyl loue me. And she conceaued agayne & bare a sonne, & sayde: the Lozde hath heerde that I am despyed, & hath therfore geuen me thys sonne also, and she called hys name

* Sinton. And she conceaued yet, & bare a sonne, & sayde: now thys once wyl my husband kepe me company, because I haue borne hym. iii. sonnes: and therfore was hy name called Lenti. And she conceaued yet agayne & bare a sonne, saying: now wyl I praysse the Lozde: therfore she called hys name Juda, and left bearinge.

C The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ Rachel & Lea beyng both baren geue thys mayden vnto thys husband: & they beare hym children. Jacob becometh vnto Laban in the concealinge of the shepe and hyddes. Jacob rewards for hys seruyce.

Rabel when she sawe & she bare Jacob no chyldre, she enuied hyr sister, and sayde vnto Jacob: Geue me children, or els I am but deede. And Jacob was wroth wth Rabel sayinge: Am I in Goddes steade, which keepeth from the frute of thy wombe? Then she sayd: here is my mayde Bilha, go i vnto her, & she shal beare vpon my lappe, that I may be increased by her.

And she gaue hym Bilha her handmayde to wyfe. And Jacob went in vnto her, and Bilha conceaued & bare Jacob a sonne. Tha sayde Rabel. God hath geue sentence on my syde, & hath also heard my voyce & hath geue me a sonne. Therfore called she hym Da. And Bilha Rabels mayde conceaued agayne, & bare Jacob another sonne. And Rabel sayd: * wth Godly wrestlinges haue I wrestled wth my sister & haue gotten y upper hand. And she called hys name, Reubai.

When Lea sawe & she had left bearinge she toke Bilpha her mayde, & gaue her Jacob to wyfe. And Bilpha Leas mayde bare Jacob a sonne. Than sayd Lea, Good lucke: I called his name Gad. And Bilpha Leas mayde bare Jacob another sonne. Than sayde Lea happy am I, for the daughters wyl call me blessed. And called hys name Isser.

And Ruben went out in the dayes of the wheat harvest & sold mandragoras i felues & brought them vnto hys mother Lea. Tha sayde Rabel to Lea: geue me of thy sonnes mandragoras. To whom Lea answered: Is it not ynough that thou hast take awaye my husband, but woldest take awaye my sonnes mandragoras also? Then sayde Rabel: well, let hym slepe wth the this nyght, for thy sonnes mandragoras. And Jacob came from the felles at euen, and Lea went out to mete hym, and sayde: come into me, for I haue bought the & my sonnes mandragoras. And he slepte wth her that nyght. And God heerd Lea, that she conceaued and bare vnto Jacob the v. sonne. Than sayde Lea God hath geuen me a reward, because I gaue

my mayde to my husbade, & she called hym Isachar. And Lea conceaued yet agayne, & bare Jacob þe first sonne. And Lea sayde: God hath endued me with a good dowry. Nowe wyl my husbade dwel wyth me, because I haue borne hym. vi. sonnes: & called bys name Zabulon. After that she bare a daughter and called bys name Dina.

* Gen. xxxiii.

And God remembred Rahel, he harde her, & made her frutefull: so that she concea-ued & bare a sonne, & sayde: God hath taken awaye my rebuke. And she called bys name Joseph saying, The Lorde geue me yet another sonne. And as soone as Rahel had borne Joseph, Jacob sayde to Laban: sende me away that I maye go vnto myne awne place & con-trey, geue me my wyues & my chyldren for whom I haue serued the, and let me goo: for thou knowest what seruyce I haue done the.
To whom Laban answered: yf I haue foude fauour in thy syght (for I suppose that þe Lorde hath blessed me for thy sake) appoy-nte what thy rewarde shall be, and I wyl geue it þe. But he sayd vnto hym: thou know-est what seruyce I haue done the, & in what takynge thy cattell haue bene vnder me: for it was but lytle that thou haddest before I came, & now it is increased into a multitude, & the Lorde hath blessed the for my sake. But nowe when shal I make prouysyon for myne awne house also? And he sayde: what shall I then geue the? And Jacob answered: thou shalt geue me nothyng at all, yf thou wylte do this one thyng for me, & then wyl I turne agayne and lede thy shepe and kepe them.

* Gen. xxxiii.

I wyl go aboute al the shepe this daye & separte from them all the shepe that are spotted & of dyuers colours, & all blacke she-pe amonge þe lambes, and the partye, & the spotted amonge the kyddes: and the same shalbe my rewarde. So shall my ryghtwesnesse answer for me to morowe, and shall come for my rewarde before thy face, and euery one that is not specklede and partye amonge the goates and blacke amonge the shepe, the same shalbe theste wyth me.

And Laban sayde: Go to, wolde God it myght be accordynge to thy sayenge. Therfore he toke out the same daye the he goates that were partye and of dyuers colour, and all the he goates that were spotted and partye coloured, and all that had whete in them and all the blacke amonge the shepe, and put them in þe hepyng of bys sones, and let this dayes iourney betwyte hym selfe and Jacob. And so Jacob kepte the crosse of La-bans shepe.

Jacob toke rodde of grene poplar, basell & of the chesse nut treys, & pilled whete strakes in the, & made the whete apere in the rodde. (But they that were in hole: remayned grene:

and thus was it made a vortable colour.) And put the rodde whiche he had pilled, euery before the shepe, in the gutters & watterynge frouches, when the shepe cā to drynke: that they shul-de conceaue when they cam to drynke. And the shepe conceaued before the rodde, and brought forth lābes straked, spotted & partye.
And Jacob parted the lābes & turned the faces of the shepe towardes spotted thynges, & towardes all maner of blacke, that was am-ge the shepe of Laban namely, puttyng bys owne flockes by them selfe, and not puttyng them wyth Labans shepe. And it fortuneth in euery ramynge tyme of the strōger shepe Jacob layed the rodde before the eyes of the shepe in þe gutters: namely, þe might make them conceaue before þe rodde. But when the shepe were feble, he put them not in. And so þe febler were Labans, and the strōger Jacobs.
And the man increaced exceedingly, and had a grente flock, mayde seruantes and man seruantes, camels and asses.

C The xxxi. Chapter.

At the commandment of God: Jacob departed from Laban, & toke bys goodes wyth hym. Rachel straitch bys fatheres ymagyn. Laban foloweth Jacob. Theron maner he cometh Laban and Jacob.

BUT he heard the wordes of Labans sones sayenge: Jacob hath taken awaye all þe oure fathers, & of oure fathers goodes hath he gotten all this honoure. And Jacob be-helde þe countenance of Laban and beholde, it was not as yesterdays & perpesterday. And þe Lorde sayde vnto Jacob, turne agayne into the lande of thy fathers & to thy kynred, and I wyl be wth the. Therfore Jacob sent and called Rahel & Lea to the felde vnto bys flock, and sayde vnto them: I se poure fathers countenance that it is not toward me as yesterdays and perpesterdays. But the God of my father hath bene wth me. And ye knowe how I haue serued your father wyth al my might.
But poure father hath discauid me, & chāged my wages. x. tymes: but God suffred hym not to hurte me. When he sayde, þe spotted shall be thy wages, than all the shepe be-re spotted. And whā he sayde: þe straked shall be thy rewarde, than bare all the shepe strā-ked: thus hath God taken awaye your fathers shepe, and geuen them me. But in ra-myng tyme it happened, þe I lyste up my-ne eyes & sawe in a dreame, & beholde the cimes leaped vpon the shepe þe were straked, spotted & partye. And þe angel of God spake vnto me in a dreame, sayenge: Jacob? And I answered: here am I. And he sayde: lyte up now thyne eyes & se all the ciemes leappynge vpon the shepe that are straked, spotted & partye: for I haue bene all that Laban dothe vnto the, I am the God of Bethell, where thou

thou anoyntedest the stone, and where thou vowedest a vowe vnto me. Nowe therfore arylse & get the out of this countre, and returne vnto the lade where thou wast borne.

C Then answered Rabel, and Lea, & sayde vnto hym: haue we a porcion & inheritance in our fathers house? Doth not he count vs euen as strangers, for he hath solde vs, and hath euen eaten vp oure money. But all the riches whych God hath taken from oure father, that is oures & oure chyldrens. And now whatsoeuer God hath sayde vnto the, that do. Thā Jacob rose vp, & set hys sonnes and wyues vp vpon camels, & caried awaye all his flockes & all his substance whych he had procured, hys ryches ad possessions which he had gotten in Mesopotamia, for to go to Hahac his father vnto the lade of Canaan.

But Laban was gone to * Here his wyfe, & Rabel had stolen his fathers ymagens. And Jacob stole awaye the harte of Laban & Hiriā, in that he tolde him not that he fled. So fled he & all that he had, and made hym selfe redy, ad passed ouer the ryuer, & set his face streight towards the mounte Gilead.

D And the thyrde daye after, was it told Labā that Jacob fled. Thā he toke his brethren with him and folowed after hym. vii. dayes iourney, & oner toke him at the mounte Gilead. And God came to Laban the Syllian in a dreame by nyght, & sayd vnto hym: take hede that thou speake not to Jacob oughte laue good. And Laban ouertoke Jacob: and Jacob had pitched hys tente in the mounte. And Laban wyth his brethren pitched theire tente also vpon the moūte Gilead. And Labā sayd, to Jacob: Why hast thou this done to steale awaye my harte, and carpe awaye my daughters as though they had bene taken captyne wyth the sword? Whatsoeuer we test thou awaye secretly vnkowne to me, and dydest not tell me, that I myghte haue brought the on the waye wyth mych synngunge, tymrell and harpe, and hast not suffered me to kysse my chyldren and my daughters? Thou wast * a sole nowe to do it, for I am able to do you euill. But the God of your father spake vnto me yesterdaye, saying take hede that thou speake not to Jacob oughte laue good. And now though thou wilt test thy way, because thou longest after thy fathers house, yet wherfore hast thou stole my goddes?

E Jacob answered and sayde to Laban: because I was afrayed, & thought that thou woldest haue taken awaye thy daughters from me. But * (where as thou lovest them to me charge) wyth whom soeuer thou syndeste thy goddes, let hym dye, here before oure brethren. Seke that thynge is by me, & take it to the. But Jacob wyll not that Rabel had stolen the. Then went Laban into Jacobs tente, and into Leas tette, & into the ii. maydens tettes: but founde them not. Then went he out of Leas tette, and entred into Rabels tette. And Rabel had taken the ymagens & put the in the camels strawe, & late downe vpon the. And Laban searched all the tente: but founde them not. Then sayde he to hys father: my lord, be not angry? I cannot cyle vp before the, for I custome of womē is come vpon me: so searched he but founde not those ydols.

And Jacob was wrooth, and chode wyth Labā. Jacob also answered & sayde to hym: what haue I trespassed? or what haue I offered, & thou folowedest so after me? Thou hast searched all my stuffe, & what hast thou founde of all thy houtholde stuffe? put it here before thy brethren & myne: they may iudge betwixte vs both. Beholde: Thys. xx. pere haue I bene wyth the, thy wyfe ad thy goates haue not bene baren, & the rāmes of thy flocke haue I not eaten. Whatsoeuer was some of beastes I broughte is not vnto the, but made it good my selfe: of my hande dydest thou requyre it, euen as it that was stolen by daye or nyght. By daye the herte consumed me, and the froste by nyghte, and my slepe departed from myne eyes.

Thys haue I bene. xx. pere in thy house, & serued the. * xlii. yeres for thy ii. daughters, ad. vi. yeres for thy wyfe, ad thou hast chaunged my reward. & tymes. And except the God of my father, & God of Abraham, & the feare of Hahac had bene wyth me: surely thou haddest sente me awaye nowe al empty. But God behelde my tribulacyon, & the labour of my handes, and rebuked the pesterdaye.

Laban answered and sayde vnto Jacob: these daughters are my daughters, ad these chyldren are my chyldren, ad these wyfe are my wyfe, and all that thou seest, is myne. And what can I do this daye vnto these my daughters, or vnto theyr chyldren whych they haue borne? Now therfore come on ad let vs make a bonde, I & thou, whych maye be a wytnesse betwene the & me. Then toke Jacob a stone and set it vp an ende, & Jacob sayde vnto his brethren: gather stones. And they toke stones, and made an heape, & they dyd eate there vpon the heape. And Laban called it * Jegar Sahadutha, but Jacob called it Gilead. * (either of them adynge to the properties of the place language.)

Then sayde Laban: this heape is * wytnesse betwene the & me thys daye: therfore is it called Gilead. * (that is a heape of testimony) * Whāp. For he sayd. The Loide loke betwene me ad the when we are departed one fro another: If I shall bere my daughters or shall take other wyues before my daughters, here is no man with vs: beholde, God be witness betwixte the and me. And Labā

Jacob lyfyinge up hys eyes, loked, and beholde Elau came, baptinge wth hym foure hundred men. And he deuyded the chyldren vnto Lea and vnto Rabel, and vnto the two maydens. And he put the maydens and theyr chyldren for moste: and Lea and hys chyldren after, and Rabel, and Joseph hindermost. And he went before the and frei on the grounde. vii. tymes vntyll he came vnto hys brother.

Elau came to mete hym and embraced hym and fell on hys necke and kyssed hym, and they wepte. And he lyfte up hys eyes, & sawe the women, and the chyldre, and sayd: whence hast thou these? (And as they beidge vnto the.) And he answered: they are the chyldren which God hath geuen thy seruante. Then came the maydens forth, & their chyldren, and byd theyr obeyssaunce. Lea also wth hys chyldren came & byd theyr obeyssaunce. And last of all came Joseph and Rabel, and byd theyr obeyssaunce.

And he sayde: what is all the droue whych I mett? He answered: that I maye fynde grace in the syghte of my Lozde. And Elau sayde: I haue ynough my brother, kepe that thou hast vnto thy selfe. To whom Jacob answered, oh nay, but yf I haue loste grace in the syghte, receaue my presente of my hande: for I haue sene thy face: as though I had sene the face of God: and thou hast had a good wyll towarde me. Oh take my blessing & is brought the, for God hath had mercy on me. (Gyfte me all thynges.) And I haue ynough. And so he compelled hym, and he toke it. And he sayde: let vs take oure iourney and goo, I will goo before the. Jacob answered hym: my Lozde. Thou knowest, that the chyldren are tender, & the ewes & kyne wth yonge vnder myne hande, whych yf men shulde ouerhyne but cut one daye all the shepe wyll dye. Oh let my Lozde goo before his seruante, and I will dryue saye and softlye, accordyng as the catell that goth before me and the chyldren, be able to endure: vntyll I come to my Lozde vnto Seir.

And Elau sayde: let me yet leaue some of my folke w the. And he answered, what needeth it? (Thou art thyngs vnto me I am of) let me fynde grace in the syghte of my Lozde. So Elau wente hys waye agayne that same daye vnto Seir. And Jacob toke hys iourney towards Huroth, and byt him an house, and made boother for hys catell. And therfore is it, that the name of the place is called: Huroth.

And Jacob came to Halem a cite of Sichem whych is in the lande of Canaan, after he was come from Mesopotamia, and pitched before the cite, and bought a parcel of ground (where he pitched by tent) of the chyldren of Hemo: Sichems father for an hundred peces of money. And he made there an autler, and called vpon the myghtye God of Israell.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The xxxiii. Chapter of Genes. And of the good bloude that was by the sonne of Jacob.

Dina the daughter of Lea & wherby she bare vnto Jacob, wente out to see the daughters of the lande.

Whom wold Sichem the sonne of Hemo: the Heuile Lozde of y countre sawe, he toke her, and laye wth her, and forced her: and hys harte laye vnto Dina the daughter of Jacob. And he loued that damsell and spake kynndly vnto her, and Sichem spake vnto hys father Hemo: sayinge, gett me this mayden vnto my wyfe. And Jacob herde & he had despyed Dina hys daughter, hys sonnes bryngge wth their catell in the felde, and he helde hys peace, vntyll they were come. And Hemo: father of Sichem went out vnto Jacob, to comen wth hym. And whan the sonnes of Jacob commynge out of the felde herde it, it grieved them, and they were not a lytle wrooth, because he had wrought folpe in Israell, in that he had lyen wth Jacobs daughter, wherby thinge ought not to be done. And Hemo: commened wth them sayinge: the soule of my sonne Sichem longethe for your daughter: geue her hym to wyfe, and make maryages wth vs: and geue youre daughters vnto vs, and take oure daughters vnto you, and ye shall dwell wth vs, and the lande shall be before you, dwell and do youre busynes, and haue youre possessyons there in. And Sichem sayde vnto hys father and hys brethren, let me fynde grace in youre eyes, and whatsoeuer ye appoynte me, that wyll I geue. Arefrely of me both the dowry and gyses, and I will geue accordyng as ye laye vnto me, so that ye geue me the Damsell to wyfe.

But the sonnes of Jacob answered to Sichem and Hemo: hys father talkyng a-monge them selues deceptfully, because he had despyed Dina theyr syster. And they saye vnto them, we can not do this thinge that we shulde geue oure syster to one that is uncircumcised, for that were a shame vnto vs. But in this wyll we consent vnto you. If ye wyll be as we be and all the men chyldren amonge you be circumcised, than wyll we geue oure daughters to you, and take youre daughters to vs, and wyll dwell wth you, and be one people. But and yf ye wyll not darthen vnto vs to be circumcised, than wyll we take oure daughter and go oure wayes. Theyr wyll was pleased by Jacob and Sichem.

hys sonne. And the younge man deserde not for to do the thyng, because he had a lust to Jacobs daughter: he was also most fete by of all that were in hys fathers house. Than hemoz & Sichem hys sonne went vnto the gate of theyr cyte, and comened wth þ men of theyr cyte, saying: these me are vnfayned towards vs, and dwell in the lande and do theyr occupacion therein. And in the lande is roume ynough for them, we wyll take their daughters to wyues, and geue them oure daughters, only herein wyl they cōsent vnto vs for to dwell wth vs & to be one people: yf all the men chyldren that are amonge vs be cōsummed as they are. Shall not their goodes and their substance & all theyr catell be oures, only yf we cōsente vnto the?
For they wyl dwell wth vs.

And vnto hemoz and Sichem hys sonne darkened all that wente out of the gate of hys cyte. And all the men chyldren were circūcised whatsoeuer wote out at the gates of hys cyte. And it happened the thyrde dape went into the cyte holdy, and slewe al that was male, and slewe also hemoz and Si-chem hys sonne wth the edge of the swerde and toke Dina out of Sichems house, and went theyr waye.

And the sonnes of Jacob comminge vps the herd, spoyled the cyte, because they had despyled their syster: & toke their shepe, oxen, and their asses and whatsoeuer was in the cyte & also in the felde. And all theyr goo-des & all theyr chyldren, & theyr wyues toke theyr captiue and made hauock of all that was in the house.

But Jacob sayde to Symeon and Leui:
ye haue troubled me and made me synche before the inhabytours of the lād, before the Canaanite & the Pherezite. And I beyng fewe in nombe, they shall gather them sel-ues together agaynst me and slei me, and so shall I and my house be destroyed. And they answered: shuld they deale wth oure syster as wth an whoze?

Jacob set vp a marke in the place where he talked wth hym: euen a marke of stone ad

¶ The marriage of Iuda. The testyn of Er & Onan, and the benygnty of God that came thre vpon. Iuda laye with his daughter Thamar. The birth of Iehary and Iacob.

It fortuneth at tyme, that Iudas wente doune from his birth, and gat hym to a man called him of Odollam, and there he sawe the daughter of a ma called: Thamar a Canaanite. And he toke her and wente in to her. And she conceaued ad bare a sonne and called his name Er. And she conceaued againe, and bare a sonne and called hym Onan. And she conceaued againe, and bare yet a sonne, whiche he called: Sela: and he was at Chelyb when she bare hym.

And Iudas gaue Er his eldest sonne a wyfe, whose name was Thamar. And Er Iudas eldest sonne was wyched in the sight of the Lorde, & the Lorde slewe hym. And Iudas sayde vnto Onan: go into thy brothers wyfe, and marie her, that thou mayest styre vp seed vnto thy brother. And when Onan perceaued that the seed shoulde not be his, therefore whē he went into his brothers wyfe, he spilled it on the ground, and gaue not seed vnto his brother. And the thynge whiche he dyd, displeased the Lorde, wherfore he slewe hym also. Then sayde Iudas to Thamar his daughter in lawe, remayne a wydowe at thy fathers house, till Sela my sonne be growne: for he sayde: Let peradventure he be also, as his brethren be. And Thamar wente and dwelt in his fathers house.

And in ppyer of tyme, the daughter of Iuda Iudas wyfe dyd. Then Iudas when he had left monethynge, went vnto his shepe shepers to Tynnath he and his frende thara of Odollam. And one tolde Thamar sayinge: beholde, thy father in lawe goeth vp to Tynnath, to: where his shepe. When Iuda sawe her, he thought it had bene an whoore, because she had couered her face. And he turned to her vnto the waye, & sayde: come I praye the, let me lye with the, for he knewe not that it was his daughter in lawe. And she answered: what wilt thou gyue me, for to lye with me? Thā said he, I will sende the a kydd from the flocke. And she sayd: Thā geue me a pledge tyll thou sende it. He sayd, what pledge shal I geue the? She answered: thy synnet thy bracelet and thy staffe that is in thy hand. And he gaue it her and laye by her, and she was with chylde by hym. And she gat her vp and wente and put her mātell from her, & put on her widowes capment. And Iudas lent the kydd by his frende of Odollam, for to recraue his pledge againe from the wyfes hande. But he founde her not. Then asked he the ma of the same place saying: where is the whoore that satt openly by the waye syde? They answered: There was no whoore here. He came therefore to Iuda againe & sayde vnto hym: I can not fynde her, and also the men of the place sayd, that there was no whoore there. And Iuda sayde, let her take it to her, lest we be shamed. Beholde I sente the kydd and thou hast not founde her.

And it came to passe that after. iii. monethes, one tolde Iuda saying: Thamar thy daughter in lawe hath playd the whoore, and with playenge the whoore is become great with chylde. And Iuda sayde: bringe her sayth, that she maye be bilty. And when they broughte her forth, she sente to her father in lawe sayinge: by the man vnto whiche these thynges pertayne, am I with chylde. And said also, loke whote are thy staffe, bracelet, & thy synnet. And Iuda knewe them & sayde: she hath bene more ryghte then I, because I gaue her not to Sela my sone. And he laye with her now.

The xxxi. Chapter.

God p[ro]phesied Joseph. Pharaon wast th[er]e. He is accused and cast in prison. God hath mercy vpon him.

Gen. lxxviii. 9

Joseph was brought vnto Egypt, and Putiphar * a Lorde of Pharaon (and his chiefe steward) brought hym of * Ioseph which had brought him thither. And God was with Joseph, & he became a luckie man, continuinge in the house of hys master the Egyptian. And hys master sawe that God was with him, and that God made all that he dyd to prosper in hys hande. And Joseph founde grace in hys masters syghte, and serued him. And made him ruler of hys house, and put all that he had in hys hande. And it fortuneth from the tyme that he had made hym ruler ouer hys house and ouer all that he had, the Lorde * blessed the Egyptians house for Iosephs sake, and the blessinge of the Lorde was vpon all that he had: in the house, and in the felde. And therfore he lefte all that he had in Josephs hande, and loked vpon nothinge that was in hym, save only on the bread whiche he dyd eate. And Joseph was a goodly person and a well fauored. And it fortuneth after this, that hys masters wyfe call hys eyes vpon Joseph and sayde: com the with me. But he refused, and sayde to hys masters wyfe: Beholde my master wotech not what he hath in house with me, and hath compected all that he hath to my hande. There is no man greater in the house than I. Neether hath he kepte any thinge from me, but only the, because thou arte hys wyfe. Howe can I do this great wickednes, and synne agaynste God? And after this manner spake the to Joseph daye by daye: but he hardened not vnto her, to slepe nere her, or to be in her company.

Gen. lxxviii. 10

Gen. lxxviii. 11

And it fortuneth on a certayne comenient daye, that Joseph entered into the house, to do hys busynesse: and there was none of the householders in the house. And he caught hym by the garment sayinge: come slepe with me. And he left hys garment in hys hande and fled, and goot hym oute. And it chaunced. When the laide that he had left hys garment in hys hande, and was fled out, she called vnto the men of his house, and tolde them, sayinge: he hath broughte in an Hebrew vnto us to do vs shame: for he came in to me, for to haue slepe with me. And they came to crye with a loud voice. And she hearde that Ioseph by my voyce & cryed, he left hys garment with me, & fled awaye, and got hym out.

And she layed by hys garment by her, vntill hys Lorde came home. And she tolde hym with these wordes sayenge: This Hebrew seruaunte whiche thou hast brought vnto vs, came into me to do me shame. But as soone as I lyft vpon my voyce and cryed, he left hys garment with me and fled out. When his master was (beinge to light of candle) heard these wordes of hys wyfe whiche tolde hym sayinge: after this maner dyd the seruaunte to me, he wared wrooth.

And the master toke Joseph and put him in * prison tye into the place where the kinges prisoners laye bounde. And there continued he in prison, but the Lorde was with Joseph, and shewed hym mercede, and got hym fauoure in the syghte of the Lorde of prison. And the keeper of the prison committed to Josephs hande all the prisoners that were in the prison house. And whatsoever was done there, that dyd he. And the keeper of the prison loked vnto nothinge that was vnder hys hande, seying that the Lorde was with him. For whatsoever he dyd, the Lorde made it to prosper.

The xi. chapter.

Joseph expoundeth the dreames of the cheefe butler.

It chaunced after this, that the butler of the kynge of Egypte whose baker had offended the Lorde the kynge of Egypte. And Pharaon was angrye agaynste his two officers: agaynste the cheefe butler & the cheefe baker: & put the in wardes in hys chiefe stewardes house: euen in the prison and place where Joseph was bounde. And these stewardes gaue Joseph a charge with the, and he serued the. And they continued a season in wardes.

And they dreamed ether of them in one nyght: both the butler and the baker of the kynge of Egypte which were bounde in the prison house. ether of them had a dreame, and eache manes dreame of a sondre interpretation. When Joseph came in vnto them in the morninge, and loked vpon them: beholde, they were sad. And he asked Pharaons officers that were with hym in hys masters wardes sayinge: wherfore loke ye so sadly to daye? They answered hym: we haue dreamed a dreame, and haue no man to declare it. And Joseph sayd vnto them: Do not interpruge it belouge to God: yet tell me. And the cheefe butler tolde his dreame to Joseph, and sayde vnto hym: In my dreame I thought there stode a hynde before me, and in the hynde were iii. bunches, and it was as though it had eaten, and her draught was as the grapes of the vine, and she

of one stalk, full of saye, & seven other eares agayne, wythered thyme and blasted w the easte wynde, & change vp after them. And the thyme eares denoured the seven good eares. And I haue tolde it vnto the so the sayers, but there was noman that could tell, what it meaneth. And Joseph answered Pharaos: both Pharaos dreames are one. And God hath shewed Pharaos what he is aboute to do. The seven good hyne are seven yerres: & the seven good eares are seven yerres also, & it is but one dreame. A yherw ple, the seven thyme and euell fauored hyne that came out after them, are seven yerres: and the seven empye, and blasted eares, shalbe seven yerres of hunger. Thys wyche I haue sayde vnto Pharaos, it is that God is aboute to do, & sheweth it vnto Pharaos.

Beholde there come seven yere of great plenteousnes throughe oute all the lande of Egypt. And agayne, there shall arys after the seuf yerres of hunger. And also plenteousnes shalbe forgotten in the lade of Egypt. And the hunger shall consume the lande: neither shall the plenteousnes be knowne in the lande, by reason of that hunger that shall be after, for it shalbe exceeding greafe. And as concerninge that the dreame was doubled vnto Pharaos the seconde tyme, beholde, the thynge is certainly prepared of God, & God wyll shortly bynge it to passe.

Nowe therfore, let Pharaos prouyde for a man of vnderstandynge & wysdome, and sett hym ouer the lande of Egypt. And let Pharaos do thys also, that he make officers ouer the lande and take vp the fyfth parte of the lande of Egypt in the seven plenteous yerres, and let them gather all the fooode of thes good yerres that come, & laye vp coyne vnder the hande of Pharaos, that there maye be fooode in the cyties, and there let them kepe yt: that there maye be founde in store in the lande, agaynste the seven yerres of hunger wyche shall come in the lande of Egypt, that the lade peryshe not thowome hunger.

And the sayng pleased Pharaos & all his seruantes. Then sayde Pharaos vnto his seruantes: where shall we fynde such a man as thys ys, in whom is the sperte of God? And Pharaos sayde vnto Joseph: for as moche as God hath shewed the all thys there is no man of vnderstandynge as of wysdome lyke vnto the. Then therfore shalte thou be ouer my house, & accordinge to the wordes shall all my people be ruled, onely in the hynges sent wyll I be aboute the. And Pharaos sayde agayne vnto Joseph: beholde, I haue set the ouer all the lande of Egypt. And he toke of his rynge from his hande, & put yt vpon Josephs hande, and arrayed hym in clothe of raynes, and put a golden cheyne aboute his necke, and set hym vpon the best charet that he had, saue one. And they cryed before hym: Bows the kner, and Pharaos made hym ruler ouer all the lande of Egypt.

And Pharaos sayde vnto Joseph: I am Pharaos, wythout the shall no man lye vpon his hande as kote in all the lande of Egypt. And he called Josephs name & zaphnath paena. And he gaue hym to wyfe Asenath the daughter of Putiphar prestre of On. Than went Joseph abrode in the lande of Egypt. And he was thyrtye yere olde when he stode before Pharaos kynge of Egypt. And Joseph departynge from the presence of Pharaos, went thowome out all the lande of Egypt.

And in the seven plenteous yeres they made sheues and gathered vp all the fooode of the seven plenteous yeres wyche were in the lande of Egypt, and layed vp the same in the cyties. The fooode of the seides that growe round about euery cyte, layed he vp in the same. And Joseph layde vp coine in store, lyke vnto the lande of the see, in multitude out of measure, vntyll he left nought nge: for it was without nombre, and vnto Joseph were hoine two sonnes (before the yeres of hunger came) wyche Asenath the daughter of Putiphar prestre of On, bare vnto hym. And Joseph called the name of the fyfthe sonne: Manasse, for God (sayd he) hath made me forget all my labour and all my fathers householde. The name of the seconde called he Ephraim, for God (sayd he) hath caused me to growe in the lande of my trouble.

And when the seven yeres of plenteousnes that was in the lande of Egypt were ended then came the seven yeres of hunger accordinge as Joseph had sayde. And the verthe was in all landes: but in all the lande of Egypt was there yet fooode. And when the lade of Egypt also began to hunger, the people cryed to Pharaos for bread. And Pharaos sayde vnto all the Egyptians, goe vnto Joseph, & what he sayth to you, that doe. And the verthe was thowome out all the lande. And Joseph opened all that was in the cyties, & lode vnto the Egyptians. For the hunger waxed sore in the lande of Egypt. And all countreys came to Egypt to Joseph for to bye coine: because that the hunger was so sore in all landes.

The xlii. Chapter.

Josephs brethren come into Egypt to bye coine. And Joseph sheweth vnto them his glorye, and they are moued. Josephs brethren are comforted. Josephs brethren are comforted. Josephs brethren are comforted.

And when Joseph sawe that his brethren were comforted, he said vnto them, I am Joseph.

Ad Jacob seynge that there was cozne in Egypte, sayde vnto hys sonnes: why gaue ye one vpo another? And he sayd: behold, I haue hearde that there is cozne in Egypte. * Gett you downe thither and bye vs cozne from thence, that we maye lyue and not dye. So wente Josephs ten brethren downe to bye cozne of the Egyptians. But Ben Jamin Josephs brother wolde not Jacob sende to his other brethren, for he sayd: lest some infortune happen hym.

And the sonnes of Israel came to bye cozne amonge other that came, for there was dearth in the lande of Canaan. And Joseph was gouerner in the lande, and solde to all the people of the lande. And hys brethren came, and fell flat on the grounde before hym.

When Joseph sawe hys brethren, he knewe them: and made hym selfe straunge vnto them, and spake roughly vnto them, sayinge: Whence come ye? They answered: out of the lande of Canaan, to bye vnto you. And Joseph knewe his brethren, but they knewe not hym.

And Joseph remembred hys dreames wherof he dreamed of them, and sayd vnto them: ye are spies, ad to se where the lande is weake is your compynge. And they sayd vnto hym: nay my Lord: but to bye vnto you the seruantes are come. We are all one mans sonnes, & meane truly, & the seruantes are no spies. And he said vnto them agayne, nay, but euen to se where the lande is weake is your compynge. And they sayde: we the seruantes are. xii. brethren, the sonnes of one man in the lande of Canaan. And he holde, the yongest is thys daye with our father, & one, no man woteth where he is. And Joseph sayde vnto them, that is it that I spake vnto you, sayinge: ye are spies. here by ye shal be proued. By the life of Pharaos, ye shall not goo hce, excepte your yongest brother come hyther. Sende out one of you wherof maye lett your brother, & ye shal be kept in prison, that your wordes maye be proued, whether there be anye treuth in you: or els by the life of Pharaos, ye are but spies. And he put them in ward the thre dayes.

And Joseph sayde vnto them the thre dayes: Thys is howe and howe, for I feare God. If ye meane no hurt, lett one of your brethren be bounde in the house of your prison, and goo ye & buye the necessarie foode vnto your households, but buye your yongest brother vnto me: that your wordes maye be tryed, and that ye dye not. And they dyd so.

And one sayde to another: we haue verely synned agaynst our brother, in that we sawe the angur of his soule when he brought vs, & we wolde not heare hym: and therfore is thys trouble come vpon vs. And Ruben answered them sayinge: sayde I not vnto you that ye shalde not synne agaynst the ladde and ye wolde not heare. And se his bloude is required. They were not aware that Joseph vnderstode them, for he spake vnto them by an interpreter. And he turned from them and wepte: and turned to them agayne, and comened with the, & toke out Symeon from amonge them, and bounde hym before they eyes, and Joseph commaunded to fyll theyr saches with cozne, and to put euery mans money in hys sache, and to geue them vnto you to spende by the waye.

And thus dyd he vnto them. And they laden theyr asses with the cozne and departed thence. And as one of them opened hys sache, for to geue hys ass pender in the inne, he spyed hys money: for it was in hys saches mouth. And he sayde vnto hys brethren: my money is restored me agayne: for lo, it is euen in my sache. And they harte sayled them, and they were assayed, and sayde one to another: why hath God dealt thus with vs? And they came vnto Jacob their father vnto the lande of Canaan, and tolde hym all that had happened them, sayinge: The man, euenshe Lorde of the lande spake roughly to vs, and toke vs for spies of the countre. And we sayde vnto hym: we meane truly and are no spies. We be twelue brethren, and sonnes of our father, one is awaye, and the yongest is thys daye with our father in the lande of Canaan. And the Lorde of the countre sayde agayne vnto vs: here by shall I knowe if ye meane truly: leaue one of your brethren here with me, and take foode necessary for your household and get you a waye, and buye your yongest brother vnto me, & I maye knowe that ye are no spies, but meane truly: So will I deliuer you your brother & ye shall occupy in the lande.

And it fortuned as they emptied theyr saches, beholde: euery mans bundell of money was in hys sache. And when bothe they and theyr father sawe the bundells of money they were afraide.

And Jacob their father sayde vnto the: We haue ye robbed of my chyldren: Joseph is awaye, and Symeon is awaye, & ye take Ben Jamin awaye. All these thynges are agaynst me. Ruben sayde vnto hys father: Siler my two sonnes, & I buye hym not to the agayne. Deliuer hym to my hande, and I will buye hym to the agayne: And he sayde: my soule shall not go downe with you. For hys brother is dead, and he is left alone. If some infortune happen vnto hym by the waye wherof ye goo, yet shall I buye my grasse heade with sayoure vnto the grave.

When Ben Jamin was brought, they returned with grates. Jamin is delivered out prison. Joseph goeth a lepe and wepeth. They feast together.

Ad the derthe was great in the lade. And it fortuneth when they had eaten up the corne whiche they brought out of the lande of Egypt, they father sayde unto them: god agayne, & by vs a lytle foode. Juda answered hym, & sayde: the man dyd te-stiffe unto vs, sayinge: * loke that pe see not my face, except your brother be with you. If thou wylte sende our brother with vs, we wyl go downe, and bye the foode. But if thou wylte not sende hym, we wyl not go downe: for the man sayde unto vs: loke that pe se not my face, excepte your brother be with you. And Israel sayde: wherfore delte pe so cruelly wth me, as to tell the man that pe had yet a brother? They answered: The mā asked vs straitly of our kynred sayinge, ys your father yet aliver? haue pe not yet another brother? And we tolde hym accordyng to these wordes. Coude we knowe that he wolde save: byng your brother downe with you? Than sayde Juda unto Israel hys father: Sende the ladde wth me, that we maye ryle & goon, & that we maye lyue and not dye: bothe we, & thou and also oure chyldren. I wyl be suretye for hym, of my handes: shalt I requyre hym. If I byng hym not to the agayne, and let hym before thyne eyes, & than let me beare the blame for ever. Truly except we had made thys taryenge: by thys, we had bene there twyle & come agayne.

* Gen. xliii. c.

And they father Israel sayde unto them: If yt must nedes be so now: than do thus. Take of the beste frutes of the lande in youre vessels, & byng the man a presente, a curtyse dawline, & a curtyse of hony, spyes & myrrre, nothes & almondes. And take double money in your hande. And the money that was brought agayne in youre sakes, take it agayne wth you, lest paraenture it was some ouer syghte.

Take also youre brother wth you, & aryle, & goo agayne to the man. And God almyghty geue you marcye in the syghte of the man, & he maye deliuer you your other brother, & thys Ben Jamin, & I shal be robbed of my chyldre, as I haue bene.

Thus toke they the present & twyle so moche more money in theyr hāde wth Ben Jamin. And rose up, went downe to Egypt, and stode before Joseph. When Joseph sawe Ben Jamin with them, he sayde to the ruler of hys house: byng these men home and slep and make redye, for these men shall dyne wth me at none. And the man dyd as Joseph bad, and brought them unto Josephs house.

When the men were brought into Josephs house, they were afrayed, & sayde: because of the monye that came in oure sakes, mouthes at the fyfte tyme, are we brought in, that he maye pycke a quarell wth vs, & to laye some thing to our charge, & to bring vs in bondage & oure asses also. Therefore came they to the man & was the ruler ouer Josephs house, & commened wth hym at the doore of the house, & sayde:

Oy hyr, we came downe hyther at the fyfte tyme to bye foode: & as we came to an inne, it happened that we opened oure sakes: & beholde, euery mannes * money was in hys sacke wth full weyghe. And we haue brought it agayne in our hande, & other money haue we broughte also in oure handes, to bye foode, but we cannot tell who put oure money in oure sakes. And he sayde: pence be vnto you, feare not: your God and the God of youre father hath gyuen you that treasure in youre sakes. I had youre money. And he broughte Simeon out to them, & the man led them into Josephs house, & gaue them water to washe theyr fete, & gaue theyr asses prauender. And they made redye theyr present agaynst Joseph came at none, for they heard saye that they shulde eate breade there. When Joseph came home, they broughte the presente into the house to hym, whiche was in theyr handes, & fell flat on y ground before hym. And he welcomed them curteously sayinge, is your father that olde man whiche pe tolde me of, in good healtbe? & is he yet a lyue? they answered: thy seruauant our father is in good healtbe, & is yet a lyue. And they bowed downe theyr heddes, & made obayssaunce.

And he lysteinge up hys eyes, behelde hys brother Ben Jamin hys mothers soune, & sayde: * is thys your yonger brother of whom ye sayde vnto me? And he sayde: God be mercyfull vnto the my soune. And Joseph made haste (for * hys herte dyd melle upon hys brother) & sought where to wepe, & entered into hys chamber, & wepte there. And he washed hys face & came out, & refrayned hym selfe, & sayde, set bread on the table.

And they prepared for hym by hym selfe & for them by them selues, & for the Egyptians whiche dyd eate wth hym by them selues, because the Egyptians maye not eate bread wth the hebrues, for that is an abhominacyon vnto the Egyptians. And they sett before hym: the eldest accordyng vnto the aage, & the yongest accordyng vnto hys youth. And the men merueled amonge them selues. And they broughte rewardes vnto them from before hym: but Ben Jamins parte was lyue tymes so moche as any of the ym. And they dynyng were dyoune wth hym.

The xliiii. Chapter.

Joseph accused by his brother at Chon. Juda becometh surreptitious for Ben Jamin.

Ad he commaunded the ruler of hys house sayinge, fyll the mens sackes wyth fooode, as moche as they can carpe, & put euery mans mony in hys sacke mouth, and put my spiner cup in the sacke mouth of the poungest, & hys come mony also. And he dyd accorpyng to the worde that Joseph had sayde. And in the moynynge assoone as it was lyght, the men were let go, they & theyr asses.
And when they were oute of the cytye & not yet farre wape. Joseph sayde vnto the ruler of hys house: hy & folowe after the men, and whan thou dost ouer take them, thou shalt saye vnto them: wherfore haue ye rewarded euell for good? is yf not the cuppe in yf wyche my Lord bynkereth, & for the wyche he prophcyeth ye haue euell done that ye haue done.

And whan he cuertokethem, he sayde the same wordes vnto them. And they answered hym: wherfore sayth my Lord loche wordes? God forbyd yf thy seruantes shul-de do so: beholde, the monye wyche we founde in oure sackes mouthes, we brought agayn to the oute of the lande of Canaan: howe then shuld we steale oute of thy Lordes house, ether spiner or golde? wyth whom looure of thy seruantes ye be founde, lette hym dye, and we also will be my Lordes bond-men, And he sayde: Howe also let ye be accorpyng vnto poure wordes: he wyth whome it is founde. Shalbe my seruante: and ye shal be harmelesse.

And attonce euery man toke downe hys sacke to the grounde, and euery man opened hys sack. And he serched, and begane at the eldest and left at the poungest. And the cuppe was founde in Ben Jaminis sacke. Then they & tent theyr clothes, and laded euery man hys asse, and went agayne vnto the cy-tie. And Juda and hys byethym came to Josephs house for he was yet there. And they fel before hym on the grounde. And Joseph sayde vnto them: what haue ye done? whyche ye haue done? wote ye not that soche a man as I can prophesie?

Then sayde Juda: what shall we saye vnto my Lord? what shall we speake? or what excuse can we make? God hath founde out the wychednesse of thy seruantes. Beholde boch we and he wyth whom the cuppe is founde, are my Lordes seruantes. And he answered. God forbyd that I shulde do so, but the man wyth whom the cuppe is founde, he shalbe my seruante. And go ye in peace vnto poure father.

Then Juda went vnto hys father and sayde vnto my Lord, let thy seruante speake a word de in my Lordes eares, and be not wrooth wyth thy seruante: for part ent as Pharao.

My Lord asked hys seruante sayinge: haue ye a father or a brother. And we answered my Lord: we haue a father that is olde, and a poungest lad wyche he begat in hys age:
and the brother of the sayde lad is dead and he is all that is left of that mother. And hys father loneth hym. And thou saydest vnto thy seruantes: bynke hym vnto me, that I maye sett myne eye vpon hym. And we answered my Lord, that the lad coule not go from hys father, for yf he shulde leaue hys father, he were but deed. Then saydest thou vnto thy seruantes: excepte poure poungest brother come wyth you, loke that ye le my face no moare.

And when we came vnto thy seruante oure father, we shewed hym what my Lord had sayde: And our father sayde vnto vs: go agayne, & by vs a lytle fooode. And we answered: we cannot go downe. Reuert he lesse yf oure poungest brother go with vs, then wyl we go downe, for we may not le the mannes face, excepte oure poungest brother be with vs. And thy seruante oure father sayde vnto vs: ye knowe that my wyfe hare me two sonnes. And the one went out fro me, and & sayde: of a surety he is: tozine in peaces, and I haue hym not sence. And ye take this also awaye from me. If some mys-fortune happen vpon hym, & ye shall bynke my gray heed in sorrowe vnto the grave.

Howe therfore, when I come to thy seruante my father, and the lad be not with vs (syrnge that hys lyfe hanged by the laddes lyfe) then shall it come to passe, that as soone as he seeth that the lad is not come, he wyl dye. So shall we thy seruantes & bynke the gray heede of thy seruante oure father wyth sorrowe vnto the grave. For yf thy seruante became surety for the lad before my father and sayde: yf I bynke hym not vnto to the agayne, I wyl bere the blame vnto my father all my lyfe longe. So we therfore let me thy seruante byde here for the lad, & be my Lordes bondman: & let yf lad goo by wyth his byethym. For howe can I goo by compe father, yf the lad be not w me, onlesse I make le the wychednesse that shal come vnto my father.

rao herde it. And Joseph sayde vnto hys bretherne: I am Joseph, dothe my father yet lyue? And hys bretherne coude not answer hym, they were so abashed at hys presence. And Joseph sayde vnto hys bretherne: come neare to me, and they came neare. And he sayde: * I am Joseph your brother: whom ye solde into Egypte. Howe therfore he not greued therewith, neither let ye seame a cruell thyng in youre eyes, that ye solde me hyther. For God byd sende me before you to saue lyfe. * For thys is the seconde yere of dearthe in the lande, and fyue mo are behynde in whiche there shall neither be earunge nor heruelle.

Wherfore, God sente me before you to make prouysyon, that ye myght continue in the erth, & to saue youre lyues by a greete deliuerance. So now it was not y out that sente me herther, but God: whych hath made me a father vnto Pharaos and Lord of all his house, & ruler thowowe out all the lande of Egypte. Haste you, and go vp to my father. * Tell hym. Thys sayth thy sonne Joseph: God hath made me Lord of all Egypte. Come downe therfore vnto me, carpe not. And thou shalt dwell in the lande of Gosan and byde by me, thou and thy chyldren, & thy chyldrens chyldren: thy shepe & thy bestes, & all that thou haste. And there wyl I make prouision for the, for there remaine yet fyue yeres of dearth, lest thou & thy household and all that thou haste come to pouertye.

And beholde, youre eyes dole, & the eyes also of my brother Ben Jamin, that myne owne mouth speaketh to you. Therfore tell my father of all my honoure in Egypte, and of all that ye haue sene, and make haste, & byngne my father hyther. And he tell on hys brother Ben Jamins necke and wepte, and Ben Jamin wepte on hys necke. Wherouer he kyssed all hys bretherne and wepte vpon them. And after that hys bretherne talked w hym. And the byngnes came vnto Pharaos house so that they sayd: Josephs bretherne are come, & it pleased Pharaos well and all hys seruantes.

And Pharaos spake vnto Joseph: saye vnto thy bretherne, thys do ye: lade your bestes & get you hence, vnto the lande of Canaan. Take youre father, and your householdes and come vnto me, and I wyl geue you the good of the lande of Egypte, and ye shall eate of the fat of the lade. And thou also shalt commaunde them. Thys do ye: take charrettes wyth you out of the lande of Egypte, for youre chyldren & for youre wyues & byngne youre father, & come. Also, regarde not youre knasse, for the good of all the lande of Egypte is yours.

And the chyldren of Israel byd enen so, And Joseph gaue the charrettes accordyng to the commaundement of Pharaos, ad gaue them bytaylor also to spende by the waye. And he gaue vnto eche of them chaunge of rayment: but vnto Ben Jamin he gaue thre hundred pices of syluer, and fyue chaunge of rayment. And vnto hys father he sent after y same maner ten asses laden wyth good out of Egypte, and ten the asses laden wyth corne, byed and meate: for hys father by the waye. So sente he his barche awaye to departe. And he sayde vnto them: se that ye fall not out by the waye.

They departed therfore from Egypte & came into the lande of Canaan vnto Jacob theyr father, and tolde him sayinge: Joseph is yet alive, and is gouernour ouer all the lade of Egypte. And Jacobs hart waned, for he beleued them not. And they tolde hym all the wordes of Joseph, which he had sayd vnto them. And whē he sawe the charrettes, whiche Joseph had sent to carpe hym, the sperte of Jacob theyr father reuyned. And Israel sayde: I haue ynough that Joseph my sonne is yet alive: I wyl go and se him per that I dye.

tes haue bene men occupped aboute cattell, from oure chyldhode vnto this tyme. We and oure fathers, that ye maye dwell in the lande of Golan. For euerie shepe keeper is abhominacion vnto the Egyptians.

Gen. xliii. a Jacob cometh before Pharaon, & sheweth hym the lande of Golan. He maketh hys sonnes to shewe his charyte.

Joseph came therfore and tolde Pharaon and sayde: my father and my brethren, they: shepe and they: oxen and all that they haue, are come out of the lande of Canaan, and beholde, they are in the lande of Golan. And Joseph toke of the hymnost of hys brethren: euen tyne men, and presented them vnto Pharaon. And Pharaon sayde vnto hys brethren: what is your occupation? And they answered Pharaon: sheperdes are thy seruantes, both we and also oure fathers. They sayde moreover vnto Pharaon: for to sojourn in the lande are we come, for thy seruantes haue no pasture for they: shepe, so sore is the famine in the lande of Canaan. Howe therfore let thy seruantes dwell in the land of Golan.

Gen. xliii. b And Pharaon sayde vnto Joseph: thy father & thy brethren are come vnto the. The lande of Egypte is before the: In the beste place of the lande make hys father & thy brethren dwell: euen in the lande of Golan let them dwell. Make ouer, if thou knowe any man of acrypte amonge them, make them rulers ouer my cattell. And Joseph broughte in Jacob hys father, and let hym before Pharaon. And Jacob blessed Pharaon. And Pharaon sayde vnto Jacob: howe arte thou? And Jacob sayde vnto Pharaon: the dayes of my pilgrimage are an hundred and. xxx. yeres. Fewe and euell haue the dayes of my lyfe bene, & haue not acrypted vnto the yeres of the lyfe of my fathers, in the dayes of they: pilgrimages. And Jacob blessed Pharaon and wente out from hym. And Joseph prepared breddynge for hys father & hys brethren, & gaue them possessions in the lande of Egypt, in the beste of the lande: euen in the lande of Ramesses, as Pharaon had commaunded. And Joseph made wyll for hys father, hys brethren, & all hys father & household with bread, euen as ydgyng they were as fed.

Gen. xliii. c There was no bread in all the land, for the deth was exceedinge sore: so that the lande of Egypte and the lande of Canaan, were famished by the reason of the deth. And Joseph broughte together all the money that was found in the lande of Egypte and of Canaan, for the cause wherof they boughte: and he layde up the money in Pharaons house. When money failed in the lande of Egypte of Egypt & of Canaan, all the Egypciens came vnto Joseph and sayde: geue vs bread: wherfore sufferest thou vs to dye before the whan oure mony is spent? Than sayde Joseph: buynge youre catell, & I wyll geue you for youre catell, yf ye be without money. And they brought theyr catell vnto Joseph. And Joseph gaue them breade for horses & shepe, & oxen, & asses, and fed them wyth breade for all theyr catell that yere.

But when that yere was ended, they came vnto hym the nexte yere, and sayde vnto hym: we wyll not hyde it fro my Lorde how that oure mony is spent, my Lorde also had oure catell & beastes, nether is there oughte left in the syght of my Lorde, but euen oure bodies & oure landes. Wherfore letttest thou vs dye before thyne eyes, & the lande to go to noughte: bye vs & our lades for breade: and bothe we & oure landes wyll be bothe to Pharaon. Onely geue vs seed, that we maye lyue & not dye, & that the lande go not to waste.

And so Joseph boughte all the lande of Egypt for Pharaon. For the Egypciens solde euery man his lande because the dearthe was soze vpon them: & so the lande became Pharaons. And he appoynted 5 people vnto the cyties, from one syde of Egypt vnto 5 other: onely the lande of the Priestes boughte he not. For the Priestes had an ordynance of Pharaon, that they shoulde eate of whych was appoynted vnto them: whych Pharaon had gyven the wherfore they solde not their lades.

Then Joseph sayde vnto the folke: beholde I haue boughte you this daye & youre lade for Pharaon. Take there breade & lede & sowe the lande. And of the increase, ye shall geue the fyfte parte vnto Pharaon, and foure partes shalbe your owne, for 5 seed of 5 felde & for you, and them of youre households, and for youre chyldren, to eate. And they answered: Thou hast saved oure lyues. Let vs fynde grace in the syght of my Lorde, & we wyll be Pharaons seruauntes. And Joseph made it a lawe ouer the lande of Egypt vnto this daye: that Pharaon shoulde haue the fyfte parte, excepte the lade of the Priestes on ly, whych was not Pharaons.

And Israel dwelt in Egypt: euen in the countre of Gosh. And they had theyr posteritys therein, & grew & multiplied exceedingly. Moreover, Jacob liued in the lande of Egypte .xlii. yeres, so that the hole age of Jacob was an hundred and .xlii. yere.

When the tyme drew nye, & Israel was old, he sette for his sonne Joseph, & sayde vnto hym: If I haue found grace in the syght, Oh, put thy hande now under my thigh, & deale mercifully & truly wyth me, that thou burye me not in Egypt, but I wyll lye with my fathers, and thou shalt carrie me out of Egypte, and burye me in theyr buryall. And Jacob tooke speche. He berethen Ephraim and Manasse his two sonnes, and blessed them.

After those deades it happened, that a messaunger sayde vnto Joseph: thy father is sicke. And he toke with hym his two sonnes Manasses and Ephraim. Then was it sayde vnto Jacob: beholde, thy sonne Joseph cometh vnto the. And Israel toke his strength vnto hym, and lay vpon the bed, & Jacob sayde vnto Joseph: God almighty apered vnto me at 5 land of Canaan, & blessed me, & sayde vnto me beholde, I wyll make the growe, & wyll multiply the, & wyll make a great nombre of people of the, & wyll geue this lande vnto thy seed after the vnto an everlasting posselsion. And now thy 5 sonnes Manasses & Ephraim which were borne vnto 5 in the land of Egypt, before I came 5 into Egypt, are myne: eue as Ruben & Simeon are myne. And 5 chyldren whych I haue gotten after the, shalbe thyne owne, & shalbe called after 5 names of theyr brethren in their enterpyntance. And whan I cam from Mesopotamia, Rabel & dyed vpon my harte in 5 land of Canaan, by the waye: wher there was but a feldes breade to eate vnto Ephraim. And I buried her there in the waye to Ephraim. The place is Bethlehem.

And Israel beche Josephs sonnes and sayde what are these? Joseph sayde: vnto his father they are my sonnes whych God hath gyven me here. And he sayde: Oh, buynge them to me, and let me blesse them. And the eyes of Israel were drymme for age, so he coulde not well see. And he brought them to hym, & he kyssed them and embraced them. And Israel sayde vnto Joseph: I had not thoughte to haue seene thy face, and yet loe, God hath shewed it me & also thy seed. And Joseph toke them awaye fro his lappe, and worshipped on the grounde before hym.

Israels ryghte hāde, & broughte them vnto hym. And Israell stretched ouce hys ryghte hande and layde it vpon Ephraims heade, whych was the yonger, & his lefte had vpon Manasses heade, gydyng his handes wyley for Manasses was the elder. And he blessed Joseph and sayde: God befoze whom my fathers Abraham and Isahar did walke, God whych hath fedd me all my lyfe longe vnto this daye, and the angell whych hath deliuered me from all euyl, blesse the laddes, ad let my name be named in them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isahar, and that they maye growe into a multitude in the myddes of the earth.

When Joseph sawe that hys father layd his ryghte hande vpon þe heade of Ephraim, it displeased hym. And he lyfed vp hys fathers hande, to hane remoued it fro Ephraims heade vnto Manasses heade, & Joseph sayde vnto his father: Not so my father, for this is the eldest. But thy ryghte hande vpon his head. And his father wolde not, but sayde: I knowe it well my sonne, I knowe it well. He shalbe also a people & shalbe great. But his yonger brother shalbe greater than he, and his sede shalbe ful of people. And he blessed them that daye and sayde: In the, let Israell blesse and saye: God make the as Ephraim befoze Manasses.

And Israell sayde vnto Joseph: beholde, I dye. And God shalbe wyth you and bynnege you agayne vnto þe lāde of your fathers. Moreover, I haue geuen vnto the, a porcyll of a lande aboue the byethen, whych I gat out of þe hande of the Amozite in my swerde and in my bowe.

And when Jacob had commaunded all that he wolde vnto his sonnes, he plucked vp his fete vnto the bed and dyed, and was * put vnto his people. And Joseph fel vpon his fathers face, and wepte vpon hym, and kyssed hym.

The .i. Chapter.

¶ Jacob is buried. Joseph to gether his brethren the mourning that they had to hym. And he dyeth.

And Joseph commaunded his seruantes the Philicpous, to embawme his father, and the Philicpous embawmed Israel. xl. dayes longe for so longe both the embawmyng last, and the Egyptians bewailed hym. lxx. dayes.

And when the dayes of wepyng were ended, Joseph spake vnto the houle of Pharaon, sayinge: If I haue founde fauoure in your eyes, speake in the eares of Pharaon sayinge: my father made me swere: & sayde: I loo, I dye, * burie me in my graue, whiche I haue made me in the lande of Canaan.

¶ Nowe therfore let me go and burie my father, & than will I come agayne. And Pharaon sayde: goo and burie thy father, accordinge as he made the to sweare.

And Joseph went vp to burie his father and with hym wente all the seruantes of Pharaon that were the elders of his house, & all the elders of the lande of Egypte, and all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, & his fathers house, only theyr chyldren and theyr shepe and theyr catell left they behynde in the lande of Golan. And there wente with hym also charrettes and horlmen: ad it was an exceedinge great compaigne.

And they came to the coyne floore of Atad whych is beyonde Iordane, and there they made a great and exceedinge soze lamentacyon. And he * mourned for his father. vii. dayes. And when the inhabitants of the lade (euen the Cananites) sawe the mourninge in the coyne floore of Atad, they sayde: this is a great mourninge vnto the Egyptians. Wherfore the name of the place is called, the mourninge of the Egyptians, and it is beyonde Iordane: and his sonnes dyd vnto him accordinge as he had commaunded them. For his sonnes caried hym * into the lande of Canaan, ad buried hym in the double caue of the felde: whych caue * Abraham boughte, and the felde also, to be a place to bury in, of Ephron the Hethite before Hamre. And Joseph returned into Egypte agayne, he and his brethren (ad all that went with hym to burie his father,) allone as he had buried hym.

And when Josephs brethren sawe that theyr father was dead, they sayde: Joseph myghter fortune to hate vs & * rewardes vs agayne al the euell which we dyd vnto him. And they dyd a commaundement vnto Joseph sayinge: thy father charged vs before his death sayinge: Thy wyfe shall ye saue vnto Joseph, for gene (I praye the) the trespass of thy brethren, and their synne: for they rewarded the euell. And nowe (we praye the) for geue the trespass of the seruantes of thy fathers God. And Joseph wepte, whē they spake vnto hym.

For his brethren came vnto hym, & fell flat before his face sayinge: beholde, we be thy seruantes. To whō Joseph sayd * feare not. Joseph dwelt in Egypte, he and his fathers houle. And Joseph lyued an hundred and x. yere. And Joseph sawe * Ephraim chyldren, euen vnto the thyrde generation. And vnto Machir the sonne of Manasse were chyldre borne, on Josephs knees.

And Joseph sayde vnto his brethren: I dye. And God will surely viset you and byngge you out of this lande, vnto the lade whych he sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. And Joseph toke an oth of the chyldren of Israel, sayinge: God will not forsake but viset you: and ye shall carie my * bones hence. And so Joseph dyed, when he was an hundred and x.

And he looked round aboute, and when he sawe no man by, he slew the Egyptian, and hyd him in the sande. And whā he was gone out another daye: behold, two hebrues stroue together. And he sayde vnto hym that hyd the wronge: wherfore smyttest thou thy fellowe? he answered: * who made the a man of auctoryte to iudge vs? Speakest thou to kyll me, as thou killedest the Egyptian? And Moses feared & said: of a surtye thys thyng is knowne: And Pharaos herde of it, and went aboute to slea Moses: And Moses fleye fro the face of Pharaos, dwelt in the lande of Midian, & he sat downe by a wellles syde.

The priest of Midian had vii. daughters which came & drew water, and fylled the trowghes, for to water theyr fathers shepe. And the shephardes came and dyone the awaye: but Moses stode vp and helped the, & watered theyr shepe. And when they came to Raguell theyr father, he sayde: howe day peneth it that ye are come so soone to daye? And they answered: a man of Egypte deliuered vs fro the hande of the shephardes, and so drew vs water, & watered the shepe. he sayde vnto hys daughters. And wher is he? why haue ye so left the man? Moses kept the shepe of * Israhel hys father in lawe, priest of Midian, and he drew the flocke to the backeside of the desert, and came to the mountayne of God, Horeb. * And the angell of the Lorde appeared vnto hym in a flame of fyre oute of the myddes of a bush. And he looked, and beholde, the bush burneth wth fyre, and the bush was not consumed. Therfore Moses sayde: I wpll go nowe, & see thys greute syght, howe it cometh that the bush burneth not. And when the Lorde sawe that he came for to see, God called vnto hym out of the myddes of the bush, and sayd: Moses, Moses. he answered: here am I. And he sayde: come not hyther, put thy shooes of thy fete: for the place wheron thou standest is holy grounde. And he sayde: I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isahac & the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face, for he was afrayed to loke vpon God.

And the Lord sayd: I haue surely sene the trouble of my people which are in Egypt, & I haue herde theyr crye fro the face of chiefe taskmasters. For I knowe theyr sorowes, and am come downe to deliuer them oute of the hande of the Egyptians, and to brynge them out of that lande vnto a good lande in a large: and vnto a lande that floweth wth myche and hony: euen vnto the place of the Cananytes and Hethytes, and Amorites, and Hethites, and Hethites, and of the Jebusites. Nowe therfore, the complaynt of the chyldren of Israel is come vnto me, and I haue also sene the oppresyon wherewith the Egyptians oppresse them. Come thou therfore, and I wpll sende thee vnto Pharaos, that thou mayest brynge my people the chyldren of Israel out of Egypt. And Moses sayde vnto God: what am I to go vnto Pharaos, and to brynge the chyldren of Israel oute of Egypt? And he answered: I wpll be wth the. And thys walde a token vnto the, that I haue sente the: after that thou shalt brynge the people oute of Egypt, ye shall serue God vpon thys mountayne.

And Moses sayde vnto God: beholde, when I come vnto the chyldren of Israel I shall saye vnto them: the God of youre fathers hath sente me vnto you, and ye saye vnto me, what is hys name, what answer shall I geue them? And God answered Moses: I am that I am: and he sayde: thus shalt thou saye vnto the chyldren of Israel: I am hath sent me vnto you. And God spake further vnto Moses: thus shalt thou saye vnto the chyldren of Israel: the Lord be God of youre fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isahac, and the God of Jacob hath sent me vnto you: thys is my name for euer.

for ever, and this is my memorie all into generation and generation. So and gather the elders of Israel together, and thou shalt say unto them: the Lord God of your fathers, & God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob appeared unto me, and sayde: In visyngne haue I visited you, and knowe that whych is done to you in Egypt. And I haue sayde, I will brynge you oute of the tribulacion of Egypt vnto the lande of the Canaanites, and Hethites, and Amorites, and Phereptes, and Hemythes, ad Je bulytes: euen vnto a lande y floweth wth mylke and hony.

And when they heare thy voyce, then go, both thou and the elders of Israel shall goo vnto the kynge of Egypt, & saye vnto him: The Lord God of the Hebrewes hath met wth vs: and nowe wyl we go therfore. iiii. dayes iourney into the wyldernesse, and do sacrifice vnto the Lord oure God. And I am sure, that the kynge of Egypte wyl not let you go, no not in a myghte hande: and I wyl stretche oute myne hande and smyte Egypte wth all my wonders which I wil do in the myddes thereof. And after that he wyl let you goo. And * I wyl get this people fauoure in the syghte of the Egyptians: so that when ye go, ye shall not goo emptye: but a wyfe shall bozowe of hyr neyghboure, and of her that lodged with hyr, house iewels of syluer and of golde and raymente. And ye shall put them on your sonnes and daughters, & shall robbe the Egyptians.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Of the receaued signes of his callinge and howe he came into Egypte. In the iij. chaptere circumcised hyr sonne Aaron meteth with agayne. Agayn he taketh hyr leave of hyr father in lawe.

And Moses answered and sayde: Be, they wyl not beleue me noz her he vnto my voyce: but wyl saye: The Lord hath not appeared vnto the. And y Lord said vnto him: what is that whych is in thyne hande: he answered a rodd. And he sayd: cast it on y grounde. And he cast it on the grounde, and it became a serpente. And Moses fled from the syght of it. And the Lord sayde vnto Moses: put forth thyne hande and take it by the tayle. And therfore he put forth his hande & caught it, and it became a rodd in hyr hande. For this thinge (sayth he) shall they beleue the, that the Lord God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob hath appeared vnto the.

B And the Lord sayde furthermore vnto hym: thrust thyne hande into thy bosome. And he thrust hyr hande into hyr bosome. And wha he toke it out agayne, beholde, his hande was leperous euen as snowe. And he sayde: put thyne hande into thy bosome agayne. And he put his hande into his bosome, agayne, and plucked it out of hyr bosome, & beholde, it was turned agayne as hyr other fleshe. Therfore yf they wyl not beleue the, nether heare the voyce of the first token, yet wyl they beleue for the voyce of the seconde token. But and yf they wyl not beleue the two signes, nether herken vnto thy voyce, thou shalt take of the water of the cyster, ad powre it vpon the drye lande. And y water which thou takest out of y cyster, shall turne to bloude vpon the drye lande.

Moses sayd vnto the Lord: oh my Lord, I am not eloquente from yesterdape & yesterday, & namely sence thou hast spoken vnto thy seruauant: but I am slowe mouthed and slowe tonged. And the Lord sayde vnto hym: who hath made mans mouth, & who hath made the domme or the deafe, the seynge or the blynde: haue not I the Lord? Therfore * I wyl be wth thy mouth, and teache the what thou shalt saye. He sayd: oh my Lord, sende I praye the by the hande of hym whom thou wylte sende. And the Lord was angrey wth Moses, and sayde do not I knowe Aaron thy brother the Leuite, that he can speake? For lo, he cometh forth to mete the, and when he lefth the, he wyl be glad in hyr herte. Therfore thou shalt speake vnto hym, and put these wordes in hyr mouth, and I wyl be wth thy mouth and wth hyr mouth, and wyl teache you what ye ought to do. And he shalbe thy spokesman vnto the people: he also shal be thy mouth and thou shalt be his God: and thou shalt take this rodd in thy hand, wherwyt thou shalt do myracles.

Therfore Moses wente and returned to Jethro his father in law agayne, and sayde vnto hym: I wyl go nowe, ad turne agayne vnto my biethren whych are in Egypte, ad se whether they be yet aliv. And Jethro sayde to Moses, goo in peace. And the Lord sayde vnto Moses in Midian: goo and returne agayne into Egypte: for they are dead wherche wente aboute to kyll the. And Moses toke hyr wyfe, and his sonnes, & put the on an asse, & went agayne to Egypte, ad Moses toke the rodd of God in hyr hande.

And the Lord sayde vnto Moses: when thou arte entred and come into Egypte agayne, se that thou do all these wonderes before Pharaos which I haue put in thy hande: but I wyl holde * hyr herte, & he shal not let the people goo. And thou shalt saye vnto Pharaos, thus sayeth the Lord: Israel is myne eldest sonne, and I haue sayde vnto the that thou shouldest let my sonne go, that he maye serue me. And thou wouldest not let hym go, beholde, I wyl * smyte thyne eldest sonne.

And it chaunced by the way in the ynn that the Lord met hym, and wold haue hilled him. And zephora toke a stone, & cut awaye the foreskynne of hyr sonne, and set at his fete, & sayd: a bloudy husbnde art thou vnto me. Then he let hym go. And she sayd a bloudy husbnde, because of the circumcyspon. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Aaron: go mete Moyses in the wyldernesse. And he wente and met hym in the mounte of God, and kissed him. And Moyses tolde Aaron all the wordes of the Lorde which had sent him, and all the tokens which he had charged him withall. So went Moyses & Aaron and gathered all the elders of the chyldren of Israel. And Aaron tolde all the wordes whych the Lorde had spoken vnto Moyses, and byd the myracles in the syghte of the people, and the people beleued. And when they herde that the Lorde had visited the chyldren of Israel and had looked vpon theyr tribulacion, they bowed theyr head, and worshipped.

The .v. Chapter.

¶ Moyses & Aaron goeth vnto pharaon. The people of Israel are oppressed more & more, and they crye out vpon pharaon and Aaron therfor.

¶ Job. xxi. b

Moyses & Aaron went in afterwarde, ad tolde pharaon, thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: Let my people goo, that they maye kepe holpe daye vnto me in the wyldernesse. And pharaon sayde: who is the Lorde, that I shulde heare his voyce, and let Israel go? I knowe not the Lorde, neyther wyl I lett Israel go. And they sayde: the God of the hebrews hath met with vs: and therfore wyl we go. iii. dayes iourney into the desert and sacrifice vnto the Lorde oure God: lest there happen vnto vs, ether pestilence or swerde. Then sayd the kynge of Egypte vnto the: wherfore do ye (Moyses and Aaron) let the people from theyr worke, get you vnto poure laboure. And pharaon sayd furthmore: behold, there is moche people now in the lande, and ye make them leaue theyr worke.

And pharaon commaunded the same daye vnto the taskemasters which were amonge the people and vnto the officers, sayinge: ye shall geue people no more strawe, to make hycke wythall, (as ye dyd in tyme passed,) let them goo and gather them strawe them selues and the nombre of hycke whych they were wont to make in tyme passed laye vnto theyr charges also, and mynys the nothing therof. For they be ydell and therfore crye sayinge: we wyl go & do sacrifice vnto oure God. They must haue more worke layed vpon them, that they maye laboure therein, and not regarde daye wordes.

Then went the taskemasters of the people and the officers out: ad tolde the people, Thus sayeth pharaon: I wyl geue you no more strawe, goo poure selues and gather you strawe where ye can fynde it, yet shall none of poure laboure be mynyshed. And so were the people scattered abrode thowowe out all the lande of Egypte for to gather stubbyll in stede of strawe.

And the taskemasters hastened them forward sayinge: fulfyll poure worke daye by daye, euen as ye had strawe. And the officers of the chyldren of Israel whych pharaon taskemasters had set ouer them, were beate. And they sayde vnto them: wherfore haue ye not fulfyllid your taske in makinge hycke, both yesterdays and to daye, as well as in tymes past?

The officers also of the chyldren of Israel, came & complayned vnto pharaon, sayinge: wherfore dealest thou thus with thy seruantes: there is no strawe geue vnto the seruantes, and they sape vnto vs: make hycke. And thy seruantes are beaten, and thy people is foule intreated. He sayde, ydell are ye, ydell, and therfore ye sape: We wyl go ad do sacrifice vnto the Lorde. Goo therfore nowe and worke, & there shall no strawe be geuen you, & yet shall ye deliuer the whole tale of hycke.

And the officers of the chyldren of Israel byd with penynges loke on them that sayde: ye shall mynys the nothinge of poure daylye makinge of hycke. And they mett Moyses & Aaron, which stode in there waye as they came out to pharaon, & sayd vnto the: The Lorde loke vpon you and iudge you, whych hath made the sauoure of vs syncke in the eyes of pharaon & in the eyes of his seruantes & haue put a swerd in their hande to sle vs.

Moyses returned vnto the Lorde, & said: Lorde, wherfore hast thou dealt cruelly with this people, & wherfore hast thou sent me? For see I come to pharaon to speake in thy name, he hath feared foule with this folke, ad yet I haue not deliuered the people at al. Then the Lorde sayde vnto Moyses: Howe shalt thou see, what I wyl do vnto pharaon, for in a mighty hand shall he lett them goo, and in a myghty hande shall he dyue them out of his lande.

people go. Set the vnto Pharaon in the morninge, so he wyl come vnto the water, and thou shalt stonde vpon the ryuers bynche agaynst he come, and the rodd whiche turned to a serper, shalt thou take in thyne hand. And thou shalt saye vnto hym: the Lord God of the Hebrewes hath sent me vnto the, sayenge: let my people go, that they maye serue me in the wilderness: And beholde, herterto thou woldest not heare. Thus sayth the Lorde: In this thou shalt knowe that I am the Lorde. Beholde, I wyl smyte (with the staffe þ is in myne hand) the water that is in the ryuer, and it shall turne to bloude. And the fische that is in the ryuer shall dye, and the ryuer shall drynke: and it shall greue the Egyptians to drynche of the water of the ryuer.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saye vnto Aaron: take thy staffe, and stretch out thyne hande ouer þ waters of Egypte, ouer they streames, ouer they ryuers & podes, and all pooles of water, whych they haue, & they maye be bloud, and that there maye be bloud thowme out all the lande of Egypte: both in vessels of wodd and also of ston.

And Moses and Aaron dyd euen as the Lorde commaunded. And he lyfte vp the staffe & smote the waters that were in the ryuer in the syght of Pharaon and in þ syght of his seruantes, and all the water þ was in the ryuer, turned into bloude. And the fische that was in the ryuer dyed, * and the ryuer stank: and the Egyptians coulde not drynche of the waters of þ ryuer. And there was bloude thowme oute all the lande of Egypte.

Exod. ix. 1. and. viii. 17.

And the enchaunters of Egypte dyd lyke wyse with they sojceries, and he hardened Pharaon hert: neyther dyd he harken vnto them: as the Lorde had sayd. And Pharaon turned hym selfe, and went agayne into his house, and let not his herte there vnto. And the Egyptians dygged rounde aboute the ryuer for water to drynche, for they coulde not drynche of the water of the ryuer. And it continued a weke after that the Lorde had smyten the ryuer.

The viii. Chapter.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses: Go vnto Pharaon & tell him, thus sayeth the Lord: * let my people go: þ they maye serue me. If I wylde not let them go: beholde, I wyl smyte all the lande with frogs. And the ryuer shall strow with frogs, whychshal go vp and come into thyne house and into thyne chamber where thou sleepest, and vpon thy bed, and into the house of thy seruantes, & vpon thy people, and into thyne ouens, & vpon thy meates. And þ frogges shal come vpon the and on thy people and vpon all thy seruantes.

* And the Lorde spake vnto Moses: saye vnto Aaron: stretch forth thyne hande with thy rod ouer the streames, ouer the ryuers, and ouer the podes, that thou mayest bringe vp frogges vpon the lande of Egypt. And Aaron stretched vpon the lande of Egypte, and the frogges came vp, & couered the lande of Egypt. And þ sojcerers dyd lyke wyse with they sojcery, and broughte frogges vp vpon the lande of Egypte.

Then Pharaon called for Moses & Aaron and sayd: * praye ye vnto the Lorde that he maye take awaye the frogges from me and from my people, for I wyl let the people go, that they maye do sacrifice vnto the Lorde. And Moses sayde vnto Pharaon: relesse thou ouer me, and appoynte when I shall praye for the and for thy seruantes, and for thy people, to dryue awaye the frogges from the, and thy houses, and that they maye remayne but in the ryuer only. He sayde: I morowe. And he sayde: euen as thou hast sayde, that thou mayest knowe that there is none lyke vnto the Lorde ouer God. And so the frogges shal departe from the and from thy houses, from thy seruantes and from thy people, and shall remayne in the ryuer only.

Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaon, and Moses cryed vnto the Lorde vpon þ appoyntment of frogges, whiche he had made vnto Pharaon. And the Lorde dyd as cōdyng to the saying of Moses. And þ frogges dyed out of the houses, out of þ countre and felde. And they gathered the together vpon heapes, and the lande stank of them.

But when Pharaon sawe that he had not greuen hym, he hardened his herte and hearkened not vnto them, as the Lorde had sayde. And the Lorde sayd vnto Moses: saye vnto Aaron: stretch out thy rodd and smyte the dust of the lande, that it maye turne to lye thowme out all the lande of Egypt. And they dyd so. For Aaron stretched out his hand with his rodd & smote the dust of the lande, whych turned to lye in me and beast. So that all the dust of the lande turned to lye, & thowme out all the lande of Egypte.

And the enchaunters assayed lyke wyse with they enchauntmentes to bringe forth lye, but they coulde not. And the lye was both vpon men and beastes. Then sayde the enchaunters vnto Pharaon: it is the synger of God. And Pharaon hart remained obstinate, and he harkened not vnto them, euen: as the Lorde had sayde.

And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: crye

Exod. viii. 17. and. viii. 17.

by early in the morning, and stande before Pharao, for he will come forth unto the water and thou shalt saye vnto hym: thus sayth the Lord: Let my people go, that they may ser-ue me. Els, yf thou wylte not let my people go, beholde, I will sende all maner of fyles hothe vpon the and thy seruantes, and thy people, and into the houses. And the houses of the Egyptians shalbe full of fyles, and grounde wherupon they are. And the lande of Gosen where my people are, wyl I cause to be wonderfull in that daye: so that there shal no fyles be there. Wherby thou shalt knowe, that I am the Lord in the myddes of the erthe. And I wyl put a dyuysion betweene my people & thyne. And euen to mo-rowe shal this myracle be doone.

And the Lord dyd euen so: and there came noysome fyles into the house of Pharao, & into his seruantes houses, & into all the lande of Egypt: & the lande was corrupte wth these fyles. And Pharao called for Moyses and Aaron, and sayde: Go and do sacrifice vnto your God in the lande. And Moyses answered: it is not mete that we do so. For then we muste offer vnto the Lord our God, that whiche is an abhominacyon vnto the Egyptians. But and yf we sacrifice that, which is an abhominacyon vnto the Egyptians before they eyes, shulde they not knowe vs? we wyl go thar dayes iourney into deserte, & sacrifice vnto the Lord our God as he hath commaunded vs:

And Pharao sayde: I wyl let you go yf ye maye sacrifice vnto the Lord your God in the wilderness: but go not farre awaye, praye for me. And Moyses sayde, beholde, I wyl go out fro the, & pray vnto the Lord, & the fyles may departe fro Pharao, & fro his ser-uantes & fro his people to morowe. But let Pharao from hence forth be become nomore, that he wyl not let the people go to sacrifice vnto the Lord.

And Moyses went out from Pharao and prayed vnto the Lord. And the Lord dyd ac-cordinge to the prayenge of Moyses, & the fyles departed from Pharao, & from his seruantes, & from his people, & there remayned not one. And Pharao hardened his herte euen then also, & dyd not let the people go.

The ix. Chapter

The manner of beastes. The plague of haules & foyles. The haule his death, chaunce, and the foyles.

The Lord sayd vnto Moyses: go in vnto Pharao & thou shalt tell hym: thus sayth the Lord God of the Egyptians: let my people go, & they maye serue me. If thou wylte not let them go, & wylte holde them tyll, beholde, the haule of the Lord is vpon thy flocke whiche is in the feldes for vpon holes, asses, camels, oxen & shepe, there shalbe a myghty great moynage. And the Lord shal do wonderfully betwene the beastes of Israel and the beastes of Egypt: so that there shal nothyng be dyed of al that pertayneth to the chyldren of Israel. And the Lord appointed a tyme, sayng: to morowe the Lord shal finishe this woode in the lande.

And the Lord dyd it on the morow, and all the cattell of Egypt dyed: but of the cattell of the chyldren of Israel dyed not one. And Pharao sent, and beholde, ther was not one of the cattell of the Israelites dead. And the hert of Pharao was hardened that he wolde not let the people go.

And the Lord sayde vnto Moyses and Aaron: take your handes full of asphes out of the fornace, and Moyses shal sprinkle it vpon into the ayre, in the sight of Pharao, and it shal turne to dust in all the lande of Egypt:
that ther maye be swellng sores with blaynes both on man and best: & thowse out all the lande of Egypt. And they toke asphes oute of the fornace, and stode before Pharao, & Moyses sprinkled it vpon into the ayre. And there were sores with blaynes both in men and in beastes: and the sores could not stande before Moyses because of the blaynes, for ther were hatches vpon the enchaunters & vpon al the Egyptians. And the Lord hardened the hert of Pharao, & he hardened not vnto them: as the Lord had sayd vnto Moyses.

And the Lord sayd vnto Moyses: rise vp early in the morninge, and stande before Pharao, & thou shalt tell hym: thus sayth the Lord God of the Egyptians: Let my people go, that they maye serue me: or els I wyl at this tyme sende all my plagues vpon thyne best, and vpon thy seruantes and on thy people, that thou mayeste knowe, that there is none lyke me in all the erthe. For nowe I wyl stretch out my hande, & I maye smyte the people with pestilence: & thou shalt perishe from the erth. And in very dede: for thy cause haue I kept the, for to shewe the my power: and that they myght declare my name thowout all the world.

Yet thou exaltest thy selfe agaynst my people, that thou wylte not let them go: be-holde, to morowe this tyme I wyl sende downe a myghty greete haile: euen such a one as was not in Egypt, send it was gradu-ded vnto this tyme. Sende therefore now, and gather thy beastes, and al that thou haste in the feldes. For vpon all the men and bestes whiche are founde in the feldes, and not broughte home, shall the haile fall, and they shal dye. And as many as feared the wo-de of the Lord amonge the seruantes of Pharao, made they seruantes and they beastes flic into the houses but he that neglected not the woide of the Lord, lette he ser-ue

seruantes and bys beastes in the felde.

E And the Lord sayd vnto Moses: stretch forth thyne hand vnto heuē, that there may be hayle in all the lande of Egypt: vpon mā and vpon beastes and vpon all the herbes of the felde, thowout the lande of Egypt. And Moses stretched out bys rod vnto heauen: and the Lord thondred and hayled, and the fyre ran a longe vpon the ground. * And the Lord so hayled in the lande of Egypt, that there was hayle eþer myngled wth the hayle, so greuous, & such as there was no ne thowout all the lande of Egypt, sence people inhabyted it. And þ hayle smote thowout all the lāde of Egypt, all that was in the felde bothe mā & beaste. And the hayle smote all the herbes of the felde, & brake all the trees of the felde: onely in þ lande of Goshā, where the chyldren of Israel were, was no hayle. And Pharaos sent & called for Moses & Aaron, & sayde vnto them: I haue now synned: the Lord is ryghteous: & I and my people are vngodly. * Pray ye vnto the Lord: for it is moche that there shulde be thōders of God & hayle. I wyll let you go, & ye shall tary no longer. Moses sayd vnto hym: aslone as I am out of the cýte, I wyll spede abrode my þades vnto the Lord, & the thōder shall cease, nether shall there be any more hayle, & thou mayest knowe how þ the erth is þ Lordes. But I knowe that thou & thy seruantes yet feare not the face of the Lord God,

G And so the flaxe & the barley were smytte: for the barley was shote vp, & the flaxe was bouled: but the whete and the rye were not smytten: for they were late sowne.

And Moses went out of the cýte from Pharaos and spede abrode bys handes vnto the Lord: and the thonder and hayle ceased nether rayned it vpon the erthe. And when Pharaos sawe that the rayne and the hayle & thonder were ceased, he synned agayn: & hardened bys herte, he & bys seruantes. And þ herte of Pharaos was hardened: nether wold he let the chyldren of Israel go, as the Lord had sayde by the hande of Moses.

The .x. Chapter.

The best of Pharaos is hartened of God. The grethoppers, & the cheche barckan.

And the Lord sayde vnto Moses go in vnto Pharaos: for * I haue hardened bys herte, & the herte of bys seruantes, that I myght put these my sygnes amongest them: and that thou tell in the eardes of thy sonne, & of thy sonnes sonne, what thynges I haue done in Egypt, & the myracles which I haue done amōge the: þ ye may knowe how þ I am þ Lord. And so Moses & Aarō came vnto Pharaos & sayd vnto hym: Thus saythe the Lord God of the Egyptians howe longe shall it be oʒ thou wyllt submyt thy selfe vnto mer? Let my people go, that they maye serue me. Or els, & (if thou do not) I wyll not let my people go, beholde, to morrow wyll I bring grethoppers into thy castles, & they shall couer þ face of the erthe, & it cannot be sene: & they shall eate the residue whych remaineth vnto you: and is escaped from the hayle: and they shall eate euery grene tree that beareth þon frute i the felde, and they shall fyl þy houses, and all thy seruantes houses, and the houses of all the Egyptians, after suche a maner as neyther thy fathers, nor thy fathers fathers haue sene, sence the tyme they were vpon the erthe vnto this daye. And he turned hym selfe aboute and went out from Pharaos.

And Pharaos seruantes sayde vnto hym, howe longe shall he be a slaunders vnto vs? Let þ men go, that they maye serue the Lord thy God: knowest thou not that Egypte is destroyed? And Moses & Aarō were brought agayne vnto Pharaos, and he sayde them Go, & serue the Lord poure God.

Also are they that shall go? And Moses answered: we wyll go wth oure wyues & wth oure olde: yee, & wth oure sōnes and wth oure daughters, & wth oure shepe, & wth oure oxen we muste go. For we muste holde a feaste vnto the Lord.

And he sayde vnto them: let it be so. The Lord be wth þon. When I let you go, and þon chyldre also, take hede, for ye haue som myschefe in hande. Saye, not so: but go they that are men & serue the Lord: for that was þoure desyre. And they thurst the out of Pharaos vyolence.

And þ Lord sayd vnto Moses: stretch out thyne hande ouer the lande of Egypt for grethoppers, that they maye come vpon the lande of Egypt, and eate all the herbes of the lande, & all that the hayle left behynde. And Moses stretched forth bys rod ouer the lāde of Egypt: & the Lord brought an east wynde vpon the lande, all that daye, and all that nyght. And in the moynynge, the east wynde broughte the grethoppers, & the grethoppers went vp ouer all the lande of Egypt and remayned in all quarters of Egypt very greuously. Before them were ther no sch grethoppers, nether after them shalbe: for they couered all the face of the earth: so that the lande was darke. And they dyd eate all the herbes of the lande, and all the frutes of the trees, and whatsoever the hayle had left: there was no grene thynges left in the trees and herbes of the felde thowout all the lande of Egypt.

Therfore Pharaos called for Moses & Aarō in þall, & sayde: I haue sinned agayn the Lord

Lozde poure God & agaynst you. And nowe forgiue me my synne onely this once: & pray vnto þe Lozde poure God, that he maye take awaye from me this deeth onely. And Moyses wēt out frō Pharaos, & prayed vnto þe Lozde And þe Lozde tozned a myggyt stronge weste wind, & it toke awaye þe grethoppers & cast the into þe red see, so that there was not one gre-thopper in all þe coſte of Egypte. And þe Lozde hardened Pharaos herte, so that he wolde not let the chyldren of Israel go.

And the Lozde ſayde vnto Moyses: stretch out thy hande vnto heauen, that there maye be vpon the lāde of Egypte darkenes which maye be felt. And Moyses stretched forth his hande vnto heauen, & there was a tpyche darkenes vpon all the lande of Egypte thre dayes lōge, noman ſawe another, nether roſe vp from the place where he was by the ſpace of thre dayes: but all the chyldren of Israel had lpyght where they dwelled.

And Pharaos called for Moyses & ſayde:
go, and ſerue the Lozde, onely let your ſhepe and your oxen abyde, & let your chyldre go with you. And Moyses ſayde: thou muſte ge-ue vs alſo offerpuges & burnt offerings for to ſacrifyce vnto the Lozde oure God: oure catell alſo ſhall go wth vs, & there ſhall not one hoſte be leſte behynd: for therof muſt we take to ſerue þe Lozde, oure God. Eſther do we knowe what wor ſhall offer vnto the Lozde, vntyll we come thither.

But the Lozde hardened Pharaos hert: and he wolde not let them go. And Pharaos ſayde vnto him: get the fro me, & take hede to thy ſelfe, & ſe my face nomoze. For when ſouer thou commeſt I my ſpyght, thou ſhalt dye. And Moyses ſayde: Let it be as þe haſte ſayde, I wyl ſe thy face nomoze.

The xi. Chapter.

The Lozde commaundyth to rāde the Egyptians. The deeth of all the fyrſte begotten in Egypte.

And the Lozde ſayde vnto Moyses: yet wyl I brynge one plague moze vpo Pharaos & vpon Egypte: & after that, he wyl let you go, he ce. And wyl he letteſy you go, he ſhall bitterly dyne you here. Speke þe therfore in þe eares of the people, & every man buyowe of his neyghbour, & every womā of her neybour: & Jewels of ſyluer & Jewels of golde.
And þe Lozde ſhall geue þe people favour in þe ſpyght of þe Egyptians. Whereouer, & Moyses was very gret in þe lāde of Egypt, in þe ſpyght of Pharaos ſervantes & in þe ſpyght of the people.

And Moyses ſayde: thus ſayth the Lozde:
& I ſynnyſhe wyl I go out into the moydes of Egypte, and all the fyrſte borne in the land of Egypt ſhall dye, euen from the fyrſt borne of Pharaos that ſytteth on his ſeate, vnto the fyrſt borne of the mayde ſervante that is, behynde the mylle, and all the fyrſte gebred of þe catell. And there ſhall be a great crye thowowout all the lāde of Egypte, ſuch as there was neuer none lyke, nor ſhalbe.

But amonge the chyldren of Israel ſhall not a dogge moue his tonge, nor yet man or beaſt: þe ye maye knowe howe þe Lozde, (by ſome miracle) putteth a difference betwene þe Egyptians & Israel. And theſe thy ſer-uantes ſhall all come downe vnto me. And fall before me, & ſaye: get the out & all þe people þe are vnder the, and then wyl I departe.
And he went once from Pharaos wth an angry countenance.

And the Lozde ſayde vnto Moyses: Pharaos ſhall not heere you, & my wonders may be multiplyed in þe lāde of Egypte. And Moſes & Aaron dyd al theſe wonders. (And ſome wyl ſaye witten) before Pharaos. And þe Lozde hardened Pharaos herte, ſo þe he wolde not let the chyldren of Israel go out of his lande.

The deeth of all the fyrſte begotten in Egypte. The ſervyng of D Moles called for the elders of Israel & sayde vnto them: chose out and take you to-euery houtholde of you a shepe, and kyll yt for passeouer. And take a bunche of plope, & dyp it in the bloude that is in the bason, and stryke the upper postre and the two syde po-

And whē ye be come into y lande which hath promysed, ye shall kepe thys scrupce.

* And when your chyldre aske you what maner of scrupce is thys ye do, ye shall saye it is y sacrifyce of y Lozdes passeouer which passed ouer the houses of the chyldren of Israell in Egypte, as he smote the Egypcyans, and saued oure houses. And the people boweed them selues, and wo:shipped: And y chy-dren of Israell wente, and dyd as the Lozde had commaunded Moles and Aaron. Cum lo dyd they.

And at y mydnyght, the Lozde smote all the fyrste borne in the lande of Egypt, from the fyrste borne of Pharaos that sat on yns seate, vnto the fyrste borne of the captiue & was in ynsel and all the fyrste genows of catell. And Pharaos rose vp in the nyght, & and all hys seruantes & all the Egypcyans:
 * & there was a greates cryenge in Egypte:
 for there was no house where there was not one deed.

And he called vnto Moles and Aaron by nyght, sayeng: rse vp & get you out from amonge my people: bothe ye & also the chy-dren of Israell, and go and serue the Lozde as ye haue sayde. And take poure shepe and pour droues wth you as ye haue sayde, and departe and * blese me. And the Egypcyans were fearce vpon y people, that they myght sende them out of the lande in haste: for they sayde we dye all.

And y people toke they dowgh beforē it was sowied, and they wyrtayles bounde in clothes vpon they shullders. And y chy-dren of Israell dyd accordynge to the sayeng of Moles: and they borrowed of the Egypcians * Jewels of syluer, Jewels of golde, and rayment. And the Lozde gaue the people fauoure in the syghte of the Egypcyans: so that they graunted suche thynges as they requyred. And they robbed the Egypcy-ans. And the chyldren of Israell toke they forney frome Rameses to Suchoth: fyve hundred thousande men of fote, besyde chy-dren. And moch comon people went out also wth them, & shepe and oxen, an excreadynge great flocke. And they baked swete cakes of the dowgh whych they brought out of Egypte, for yt was not sowied. For whē they were thynste oute by yde Egypcyans, they coude not tarpe to prepare them selues any prouysyon of meate.

The dwellinge of the chyldren of Israel, whych they dwelled in Egypte, was * .iii.
 hundred and .xxx. yeres: and when the .iii.
 hundred and .xxx. yeres were crypted, euen the selfe same dape departed all the hoodes of the Lozde out of the land of Egypte. Y is a nyght to be obserued to the Lozde, in the whiche he brought them out of the lande of Egypte. Thys is that nyght of the Lozde whiche all the chyldren of Israell must kepe thowowout they generacions.

And

And the Lorde sayde vnto Moyses and Aaron: This is the lawe of the passeouer: there shall no strainger eate therof. But euery seruaunt that is bought for money (after that thou hast circumsised him) shall eate therof. A strainger and an hyred seruaunt shall not eate therof. In one house shall it be eaten.

Thou shalt carpe none of the fleshy out at the house. * Neether shall ye breake a bone therof. All the multitude shall obserue it, ¶ As a strainger also dwell amonge you, & wyl holde Passeouer vnto the Lorde, let hym circumcise all that be males: and then lette hym come and obserue it, and he shall be as one that is borne in the lande. For the vncircumcised persone shall eate therof. One manner of lawe shall be vnto hym that is borne in the lande: and vnto the strainger that dwelleth amonge you. And all the chyldren of Israel dyd as the Lorde commaunded Moyses and Aaron. Euen so dyd they. And the self same daye dyd the Lorde bringe the chyldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypt wth theyr armyes.

The. xliij. Chapter.

The spise begotten must be sanctified vnto the Lorde. The memoriaill of theys despayraunce. Why they were ca: 172: thozowe the wyldernes. The bones of Ioseph. The pylle of the cloude.

Ad the Lorde spake vnto Moyses sayenge * Sanctify vnto me all the first borne, that open all manner matryces amonge the chyldre of Israel, aswell of ma as of beaste: for it is myne. And Moyses sayd vnto the people: thynke on this daye in which ye came out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage: for thozow a myghtye hande the Lorde broughte you out from thence. There shall no leuended breade be eaten. This daye come ye oute in the moneth when cozne begynneth to ryse.

* When the Lorde hath broughte the into the lade of Canaanites, Hetites, Amozites, Heuites, & Jebusites: * whych he swaue vnto thy fathers, that he wolde geue the a lande wherein mylke & honny flowethe, thou shalt kepe this seruyce in this same moneth. Seuen dayes thou shalt eate swete breade: and in the seventh daye, it is the feast of the Lorde. Swete breade shall be eaten seuen dayes, & there shall no leuended breade be sene, nor yet leuen wth the in all thy quarters.

And thou shalt shewe thy sonne in that daye sayenge this is done, because of that whych the Lorde dyd vnto me, when I came out of Egypt. And it shall be a signe vnto the vpon thyne hande, and for a remembrance betwene thyne eyes, & the Lordes lawe maye be in thy mouth. For * in a stronge hande the Lorde broughte the out of Egypt. Nepe therefore this ordinance in thy season fro yere to yere. And ye wyl come to passe, that the Lorde shall bringe you into the lade of the Ca-nanites, whych he swaue vnto the and to thy fathers: and shall geue it the. And then thou shalt appointe vnto the Lorde all that openeth the matryce. And euery calfe thinge that fynde doth open the matryce of a beaste whych thou hast: if they be males, they shall be the Lodes. And euery fynde gender of an asse, thou shalt redeeme wth a lambe: if thou redeeme hym not, thou shalt breake his neck. All the first borne amonge thy chyldren also, shalt thou bye out.

And when thy sonne asketh the to morowe, sayinge what is this, thou shalt saye vnto hym: With a myghtie hande the Lorde broughte vs out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. And when Pharaos was loth to let vs go, the Lorde slewe al the first borne in the lande of Egypt: aswell the fynte borne of man as of beast. Therefore I sacrifice vnto the Lorde all the males that open the matryce, and all the first borne of my chyldre I redeeme. This shall be a token vpon thyne hande, and a remembrance betwene thyne eyes, that the Lorde broughte vs out of Egypte thozow we amyghtye hande.

It cam to passe: that when Pharaos had let the people go, God carped them not thozowe the waye and lande of the Philistines whych was the more nye waye. But God sayde: lest the people happily repente when they se warre: & to tourne agayne to Egypte. But God led the people aboute thozowe the waye of the wyldernes of the reed see. And the chyldre of Israel went up harnessed oute of the lande of Egypt. And Moyses toke the bones of Ioseph wth hym: for he made the chyldre of Israel sweare, sayng: * God will surely vyset you, and ye shall take my bones awaye wth you. * And they toke theyr iourney from Oncoth: and abode in Etbam in the edge of the wyldernes. * And the Lorde wet before the by daye in a pylle of a cloude to leade them the waye: & by nyghte in a pylle of fyre to geue them lyght, & they myghte go both by day & by nyght. * The pylle of a cloude departed not by daye, nor the pylle of fyre by nyght, out of the syght of the people.

The. xliij. Chapter.

Pharaos heere is hardeneth and tole with the Israelites, wth all his hoode and captaynes, and is brought. The people greuer. They go thozow the red see.

Ad the Lorde spake vnto Moyses sayenge: Speche to the chyldren of Israel, that they turne and remayne before the face of the Lorde, and saye: * Betweene Egypte and the see, ouer agayne. * And I will saye: * before that shall they vyset by the see. For Pharaos wyl saye of the chyldren of Israel: they are tangled in the lande, the wyldernes hath shut the in. And I will harden Pharaos herte, that he shall folowe after you: and I will

I am the Lorde. And they dyd euen so.

B And it was tolde the kynge of Egypte of the people fled. And the herte of Pharaos of hys seruantes turned agaynste the people and they sayd: why haue we thys done that we haue let Israel go out of oure seruyce: & he made ready hys charettes: and toke hys people wth hym and toke sixe hundred chosen charettes, and all the charettes of Egypt and captaynes vpon euery one of them. And the Lord hardened the hert of Pharaos kynge of Egypte, & he folowed after the chyldren of Israel. But the chyldren of Israel wente out wth * an hye hande, & the Egypcyans folowed after them, and all the hoyses and charettes of Pharaos and hys hoysmen and hys hoost ouer toke them abydyng by the see, belyde the hyroth befoze Baalzephon. And when Pharaos dydwe nre, the chyldren of Israel lyfte vp thery eyes & beholde, the Egipcyans folowed after them, & they were sore afrayed: * and the chyldren of Israel cryed out vnto the Lorde.

But they sayd vnto Moyses: because there were no graues i Egypte, hast thou therfoze brought vs awaye for to dye in the wyldernes: wherfoze haste thou serued vs thus, for to cary vs out of Egypte? Dyd not we tell the this in Egypte, sayenge: let vs be in rest, for we maye serue the Egypcyans: for it had bene better for vs to haue serued the Egipcyans then for to dye in the wyldernesse. And Moyses sayde vnto the people: * feare ye not stande still, & beholde, howe the Lorde shall saue pou thys dape. For ye that haue sene the Egypcyans this dape, shall se the nomoze for euer. The lorde shall fyght for pou, & ye shall holde your peace.

* 21. Mat. ff. c

D And the Lorde sayd vnto Moyses: wher-foze cryest thou vnto me / speke vnto the chyldren of Israel that they go forwarde. But lyft thou vp thy rod, and streche out thy han-de ouer the see, and drypde it a sonder, and let the chyldren of Israel go on drye grounde thorowe the myddest of the see. And behold, I will harden the herte of the Egypcyans they maye folowe them. And I will get me honoure vpon Pharaos & vpon all hys hoys-te, and vpon his charettes & vpon his hoysmen.
And the Egypcyans shall knowe that I am the Lorde when I haue gotten me honoure vpon Pharaos, vpon hys charettes and vpon hys hoysmen.

E And an angel of God whiche was befoze the hooste of Israel remoued and begonne to go behynde them. And the clowden pyller that was befoze the face of them begonne to stande behynde them, and came betwene the hooste of the Egypcyans and the hooste of Israel. It was also a darke cloud, and gaue lyght by nyght: and all the nyght longether one came not at the other.

And Moyses stretched forth the hys hande ouer the see: and the Lorde carped awaye the see, by a very stronge. Easte wynde all that nyght, and made the see drye lande, and the waters were drypde. And the chyldren of Israel wet out into the myddest of the see vpon the drye grounde. And the waters were a walle vnto them, on the ryght hande, and on the left hande. And the Egypcyans followed and wente in after them to the myd-dest of the see, euen all Pharaos hoyses, hys charettes and hys hoysmen. * And in the mornyng watche, the Lorde looked vnto the hooste of the Egypcyans out of the fyre & clowdy pyller: and trobled the hooste of the Egypcyans, & toke of hys charet wheels & carped them awaye vpolently. So that the Egypcyas sayd: Let vs flee from the face of Israel: for the Lorde fyghteth for them agaynst the Egypcyans. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moyses: stretch out thyne hand ouer the see, that the waters maye come agayne vpon the Egypcyans, vpon this charettes & vpon hys hoysmen.

And Moyses stretched forth the hys hande ouer the see, and it came agayne to hys come early in the mornyng, & the Egypcyas fled agaynste it. And the Lorde ouer threwe the Egypcyas in the myddest of the see: & the water returned & couered the charettes & the hoysmen: & all the hoost of Pharaos came into the see after them, so that there remayned not one of the.
But the chyldren of Israel walked vpon drye lande: thorowe the myddest of the see, & the waters were a walle vnto them on the ryght hande of them, & on the left. * Thus the Lorde deliuered Israel the selfe same dape out of the hande of the Egypcyans: & Israel sawe the Egypcyans ded vpon the see syde. And Israel sawe that myghty powre whyche the Lorde shewed vpon the Egypcyans: * & the people feared the Lorde, and beleued the Lorde and hys seruaunte Moyses.

age of anken: the better waters were swete. God made

M When Moyses & the chyldren of Israel sawe thys longe vnto the Lorde and sayde: * I will syng vnto the Lorde: for he hath triumphed gloriously: the hoys and hym that rode vpon hym hath he ouerthrowne in the see. * The Lorde is my strengthe and prayse, and he is become my saluacyon.

also are drowned in the red see, the depe waters haue couered them: they sonche to þe bottom as a stone. Thy ryghte hande Lorde, is become gloriouse in powre: thy ryghte hande Lorde hath all to dashed the enemye. And in thy great glorie thou haste ouerthrowne the that rose vp agaynst the: thou sentest forth thy wrath whych consumed them euē as a scorbrell. Thowowe the wynde of thy nassrells þe water gathered together, the floudes stode styll as an deape, & the depe water congeled together in the herte of the see.

The enemye sayde: I wyl folowe on them: I wyl ouer take them, I wyl deuyde þe spoyle, I wyl satysfye my luste vpon them, I wyl drawe my sword, myne hande shall destroye them. Thou blewdest wth thy wynd þe see couered them, theye sank as leed in the myghty waters. Who is like vnto þe Lorde, amonge goddes: who is lyke þe to gloriouse in holynes, fearfull in praptes, shewing wonders? Thou stretchest out thy ryghte hande, & erth swallowed them. Thou in thy mercye haste carryed this people whych thou deliueredst: and haste broughte them in thy strength vnto thy holy habytacyō. The nacyns herde & were afrayed, sorowe cam vpo þe Philistines. Then þe dukes of þe Edomites were amased, and the myghtiest of the Moabites, tremblinge came vpon them: all the inhabyters of Canaā waxed faynt harted.

Let feare and dreade fall vpon them in the greatenes of thyne arme, let them be as styll as a stone, tyll the people passe thowowe, O Lorde, while this people passe thowow whych thou haste gotten. Thou shalt brynge them in, and plante them in the mountayne of thyne inherytaunce, the place, Lorde, whych thou haste made for to dwell in, the sanctuary, O Lorde, whych thy handes haue prepared. The Lorde shall rayne euē and all way for þe pharaos hoyle went in wth þys charrettes and horsmen into the see, & the Lorde broughte the waters of the see vpon them.

But the chyldren of Israel wente on dyne lade in the myddeste of the see. And Miriam a prophetyse the syster of Moyses toke a tymbrel in her hande and all the women came out after her with tymbrels & daunces. And Miriam sauge before them: & syng ye vnto þe Lorde for he hath triumphed gloriously: þe hoyle & þe ryder hath be ouerthowme in the see. And so Moyses broughte Israel fride þe red see, & they wente out into þe wyldernes of shur. And they wente the dayes longe in þe wyldernes, & found no waters. And when they came to Mara, they coulde not drynche of the waters of Mara: for they were bitter therfore the name of the place was called, Mara. (that is to saye bittrenesse.) And the people murmured agaynst Moyses, sayenge what shall we drynke? And he cryed vnto the Lorde: and the Lorde shewed him a tree, whych when he had caste into the water, the waters were made swete.

There he made them an ordynauce & a lawe, and there he proued hym, & sayde: If thou wylt hearken vnto the voyce of þe Lorde thy God, and wylt do þe which is ryght in his syght, and wylt geue eare vnto his commaundementes, & kepe all þys ordynauces: then wyl I put none of these displeas vpon the whych I broughte vpon the Egyptians: for I am the Lorde that healeth the.

The chyldren of Israel cam to Elim where were. xii. welles of water and. lxx. palme trees, and they abode there by the waters.

And they toke theye iorney from Elim: & all the hole company of the chyldren of Israel cam to þe wyldernes of sin which is betwene Elim and Synai: the. xv. day of the. ii. moneth after theye departynge out of þe lande of Egypt. And the hole multitude of the chyldren of Israel: murmured agaynst Moyses & Aaron in þe wyldernes: & the chyldren of Israel sayde vnto them: wold to God we had dyed by the hande of the Lorde in þe lande of Egypt, wold we sat by þe fleshy pottes, and when we had eate bread ouer lyen full: for ye haue broughte vs oute into this wyldernes, to kyl this hole multitude wth hunger.

Then saide the Lorde vnto Moyses: behold, I wyl rayne & dreade from heauen to you, & the people shall go out, & gather dawe by dawe & I maye pte them, whether they wyl walke in my lawe or no. The. vi. dawe they shall prepare for the fetter & which they wyl brynge in, and let ye be sure almaych as they gather in dawe. And Moyses & Aaron sayde vnto all the chyldren of Israel: at euē ye shall knowe that it is the Lorde, whiche broughte you out of the lande of Egypt: and in the mornynge, ye shall se the glory of the Lorde because he hath heard your gragynge agaynst the Lorde. And what are the ye haue murmured agaynst the Lorde? Moyses sayde: Let man that þe Lorde geue you dawe to eate, and in the mornynge shall pte you to eate, and in the euenynge shall pte you to eate.

for the Lorde hath hearde your murmurynges which ye murmur agaynst him: for what are we? your murmurynge is not agaynst vs but agaynst the Lorde.

And Moyses spake vnto Aarō: Say vnto all the company of the chyldren of Israel come forth before the Lorde: for he hath heard your grudginges. And as Aaron spake vnto the hole multitude of the chyldren of Israel, they looked towards the wyldernes: and beholde, the gloire of the Lorde appered in the cloude. And the Lorde spake vnto Moses: saying: I haue hearde the murmurynge of the chyldren of Israel, tell them therfore and saye: at euen ye shall eate fleshe, & in the mornyng ye shall be fylled wth bzeed, & ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde your God.

* Num. xi. 5

And at eue the * quayles came and covered the grounde where they laye. And in the mornyng, the dewe laye rounde about the host.
And whē the dewe was fallen, behold, it laye vpon the grounde in the wyldernes, small & round & thynne as the hoze froste on the ground. And when the chyldren of Israel sawe it, they sayd euery one to hys neyghboure: It is * Manna. For they wylte not what yt was. And Moyses sayde vnto the: this is the bread which the Lorde hath geue you to eate.
This ys the worde whych the Lorde hath commaunded, gather yt euery man for hym selfe to eate: a gomer full for a man accordyng to the nombre of you, & take euery man for the whych are in hys tente.

ii. Cor. xii. 9

And the chyldren of Israel dyd euen so & gathered some more, some lesse, and when they dyd meate it wth a gomer, vnto him that had gathered moche, remayned nothing ouer, & vnto hym that had gathered lytle, was there no lacke: euery mā gathered sufficient for hys eatynge. And Moyses sayde vnto the that noman let ought remayne of it tyll the mornyng. Not wthstandyng they harkened not vnto Moyses: but some of the lesse of it vntyll the mornyng, and it waxed full of wormes and stanche, and Moyses was angry wth them.

And they gathered it all moyniges, eu-ry man for hys eatynge. And allone as the heate of the sunne came, it moulte. And the syxt day, they gathered twise so moche bread two gomers for one man: & all the rulers of the multitude came & tolde Moyses. He sayde vnto the: this is that whych the Lorde hath sayd: to morow is the reste of the holy Sab-both vnto the Lorde: take that whych ye wyl bake, and leth that ye wyl leth, and that whych remayneth, laye it vntyll the mornyng. And they layde it vntyll the mornyng, as Moses bad: and it stanche not, neither breed there any worme therein. And Moyses sayde: that eate this day: for it is the Sabboth vnto the Lorde: to daye ye shall not fynde yt in the felde. Syxe dayes shall ye gather it, and the seuenth daye which is the Sabboth, ye shall be none. Not wthstandyng, there went out some of the people in the seuenth daye to gather, & they founde none. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moyses: howe longe refuse ye kepe my commaundementes and my lawes?

Se, the Lorde hath gyuen you a Sabboth, therfore he gyueth you the syxte daye bread for two dayes. Wyde therfore euery man at home & let no man go out of his place the seuenth daye. And the people rested the seuenth daye. And the house of Israel called it Manna.

* And it was lyke vnto Coriandze seed, whych: and the taste of it was lyke vnto fers made wth honye. And Moyses sayde: this is that whych the Lorde commaundeth, tyll a gomer of it, whych maye be kepte for your chyldren after you: for they maye le the bread wherewith I haue fed you in wyldernes, whē I brought you out of the lād of Egypt.
And Moyses spake vnto Aaron: take a cruse and put a gomer full of Manna therein, and laye it vnto the Lorde to be kepte for your chyldren after you, as the Lorde commaunded Moyses. So Aaron layed it vnto the testimonie to be kepte. * And the chyldren of Israel dyd eate Manna fourtye pere, vntyll they came vnto a lande inhabited. And so they dyd eate Manna euen vntyll they came vnto the borders of the land of Canaan. A gomer is the tenth parte of an Epha.

The xviii. Chapter.

The Israelites come into Raphidim, they find no water: & geuen them out of the rocke. An ower holiday by hys handes, and they ouer come the Amalechites.

And all the company of the chyldren of Israel thozowout their armyes went from the wyldernes of Sin, after the commaundement of the Lorde, and pyched in * Raphidim: where was no water for the people to drinke. And the people chode wth Moyses, and sayde, geue vs water to drynke.
Moyses sayde vnto them: why chode ye wth me: wherfore do ye tempte the Lorde?
There the people thyrsted for water, and the people murmured agaynst Moyses, and sayde:
* wherfore hast thou thus broughte vs out of Egypte: to kyll vs and oure chyldren? cattell whych thyrste.

And Moyses cryed vnto the Lorde, say-enge: what shall I do vnto this people? they be almoste ready to ston me. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moyses: go before the people, and take wth the of the elders of Israel, & thy rod wherewith thou smotest the ryner, take in thyn hande, and go. Beholde, * I stonde before the rocke that is in Horeb: & thou walte smyte the rocke, and there shall come water out thereof, that the people maye drynke.

* And Moyses did euen so before the eyes of the elders of Israel, And he called the name of the

of the place * Massa and * Meriba, because of the chidinge of the chyldren of Israel, ad because they tempted the Lorde, sayings: is the Lorde amonge vs or not?

Then came Amalech and foughte wyth Israel in Raphidim. And Moses sayde vnto Joshua: chuse vs out men, and goo fyghte with Amalech. And to morowe I wyl stode on the toppe of y hyll, and the rodd of God shalbe in my hande. Joshua dyd as Moses bad him, & foughte with Amalech. And Moses, and Aaron, & Hur went vp to the toppe of the hyll. And it happened, that whē Moses helde vp hys hāde, Israel had the better. And when he late hys hande downe, Amalech had the better.

But Moses hādes were heuie, and therefore they toke a stone and put it vnder hym, and he sat downe there on. And Aaron and Hur stayed vp by hys hādes, the one on the one syde, & the other on the other syde. And hys handes remayned stedye vntyll the goynge downe of the sonne. And Joshua discomfeted Amalech and hys people, wyth the edge of the swerde.

And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: write thys for a remembraunce in a booke, and committe it vnto the eares of Joshua, for I wyl vetterly put out the remembraunce of Amalech from vnder heauen. And Moses made an autler and called the name of it. * The Lorde is he that worketh myracles for me. For he sayd: the hāde is on the seate of God the Lorde wyl haue warre wyth Amalech from generation to generation.

The xxiii. Chapter.

Jethro the prest of Madian Moses father in lawe berde of all y God had done for Moses and for Israel hys people; and thus the Lorde had broughte Israel out of Egypt. * Then saide he toke up hys wyle. After he had sente her backe, and hys two sonnes, of whiche the one was called * Gerson, for he sayd: I haue bene an alien in a strange lande. The name of the other was Eliezer: for the God of my father (sayd he) was myne helpe, and deliuered me fro the swerde of Pharaos. And Jethro Moses father in lawe came wyth hys two sonnes, and his wife vnto Moses into the wilderness: where he abode by the mounte of God. And he sayde vnto Moses: I thy father in lawe Jethro am come to the, and thy wife also and hys two sonnes with her. And Moses went out to mete his father in lawe and dyd obeysaunce and kyssed hym, and eache asked other of his health, and they came into the tente. And Moses tolde hys father in lawe all that the Lorde had done vnto Pharaos and to the Egyptians for Israels sake, and all the trouaile that had happened them by the waye, and howe the Lorde deliuered the. And Jethro reioysed ouer all the goodnesse whiche the Lorde had done to Israel, and because he had deliuered them out of the hande of the Egyptians. And Jethro sayde: blessed be the Lorde whiche hath deliuered you out of the hande of the Egyptians, and oute of the hande of Pharaos, whiche hath also deliuered hys people from the captiuite of the Egyptians. Nowe I knowe that the Lorde is greater then al goddes, for in the thyng where by they deale cruelly wyth them, are they them selues perished. And Jethro Moses father in lawe offered burntofferings ad sacrifices vnto God. And Aaron and all the elders of Israel came to eate bread wyth Moses father in lawe before God.

And it chauced on the morowe, that Moses sat to iudge the people, and the people stode aboute Moses from mornynge vnto euen. And whan Moses father in lawe saw all that he dyd vnto the people, he sayde. what is thys that thou doeste vnto people? why lyttest thou thy selfe alone, and all the people stonde aboute the from mornynge vnto euen? And Moses sayde vnto hys father in lawe: because the people come vnto me to seke counsell of God. When they haue a matter, they come vnto me, and I iudge betwene every mā and hys neyghboure. ad shewe them the ordynances of God and hys lawes.

And Moses father in lawe said vnto him: it is not well that thou doeste. Thou both weyrest thy selfe, & this people that is wyth the: for this thyng is of more weyght, then * thou art able to perforce the selfe alone. Heare nowe therfore my voyce, and I wyl geue the counsell, and God shalbe wyth the. Be thou vnto the people to Godwarde, that thou mayest bringe the causes vnto God, and thou shalt teache them ordynances, and lawes, and shewe them the waye wherein they must walke, ad the worke that they must do. Moreover, thou shalt sele out amonge all the people, men of actiuite, and such as feare God: true men, hatynge couetousnes: and make them prebys ouer the

If thou shalt do thys thyng, (and God charge the wyth all) thou shalt be able to endure, and yet the people shall come to thy place in peace.

And so Moses obeyed the voyce of hys father in lawe, and dyd all that he had sayd, and chose actyue men oute of all Israell and made them as heedes ouer the people: namely, captaynes ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fyfye and ouer ten. And they iudged the people at all seasons, but brought the harde causes vnto Moses: and iudged all small matters them selues. And Moses lett hys father in lawe departe, and he wente in to hys owne lande.

Ex. xxi. 2.

In the thyrde moneth, whā þe chyldren of Israel were gone oute of þe land of Egypt, the lame daye came they into þe wilderness of Sinay. For they were departed fro Raphidim, & were come to the deserte of Sinay, and had pitched their tentes in the wilderness. And there Israel abode before the mounte. * But Moses went vp vnto God, And the Lord called to him out of the mountayne, saying: thus saith thou saie vnto the house of Jacob, and tell the chyldren of Israel: ye haue sene what I dyd vnto Egyptians, and toke you vp vpon Eagles wynges, and haue brought you vnto my selfe. Nowe therfore * ye ye wyl heare my voyce in dede, and kepe myne appoyntments, ye shall be myne awne, aboue all nations, for all the erth is myne. Ye shal be vnto me also a kyngdome of * prestes and an holpe people: & these are the wordes wherch thou shalt saie vnto the chyldren of Israel.

Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and layde before they faces all these wordes wherch the Lord commaunded him. And the people answered all together, and sayde. * All that the Lord hath sayde, we wyl doo. And Moses brought the wordes of the people vnto the Lord. And the Lord sayde vnto Moses: Lo, I come vnto the in a thyrke cloud, & the people may heare me talkyng wyth the, & beleue the for euer. Moses shewed the wordes of the people vnto the Lord.

And the Lord sayd vnto Moses: Go vnto the people, and sanctifye them to daye & to morowe, and let them washe they clothes: & be redy agaynst the thyrde daye. For the thyrde daye the Lord wyl come downe in the lychte of all the people vpon mounte Sinay. And thou shalt set marches rounde about the people and saie: beware that ye go not vp into the mounte, or touche the border of it. Whosoener toucheth the * mounte, shall surely dye. There shall not an hande touche it: Els he shalbe stoned or shot thow we: whether it be beast or man, it shall not lyue: when the trompe bloweth longe, then maye they come vp into the mountayne.

And Moses went downe fro the mounte vnto the people, and sanctified them, and they washed they clothes: And he sayd vnto the people: be redy agaynst the thyrde daye, and come not at poure wyues. And the thyrde daye in the moornyng there was thunder, and lychtenyng, and a thyrke clowde vpon the mounte, and the voyce of the trompe excedyng lowde, so that all the people that was in the hoste was afrayed. And Moses brought the people oute of the tentes to mete wyth God, and they * stode vnder the hyll.

And mounte Sinay was all together on a smooke: because the Lord descended downe vpon it in fyre. And the smoke therof ascended vp, as the smoke of a kele, and all the mount was excedyng fearfull. And whā the voyce of the trompe blew and waied lowder and lowder: Moses spake, and God answered hym by a voyce. And the Lord came downe vpon mounte Sinay, euen in the toppe of the hyll, and whā the Lord called Moses vp into the toppe of the hyll, Moses went vp.

And the Lord sayde vnto Moses: Go downe: charge the people, that they preste not vp to se the Lord, and so many of them perishe. And let the prestes also wherch come to the Lord sanctifye them selues, lest the Lord destroye them. And Moses sayde vnto the Lord: the people cannot come vp into the mounte Sinay, for thou chargedest vs sayyng: set marches about the hyll, and sanctifye it. And the Lord sayde vnto hym: awaye, and get the downe: and thou shalt come vp, thou and Aaron wyth the. But let not not the p̄iestes and the people presume for to come vp vnto the Lorde: lest he destrope them. And so Moyses went downe vnto the people and tolde them.

¶ The. xx. chapter.

¶ The ten commandmentes are given vnto Moses.

In my syght. And God spake all these woꝝ des & sayd: I am the Lord thy God, which haue brought y out of the lade of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt haue none other goddes in my syght. * Thou shalt make the no grauen ymage, netter any similitude y is in heauē aboue, ether in the erth beneth, or in y waters vnder the erth. * Thou shalt not woꝝ-shyppe them, netter serue them: for I the Lorde thy God, am a gelouise God, & vyset the synne of the fathers vpon the chyldren vnto the thyrde and fourth generacion of the that hate me: and shewe mercye vnto thousandes in them that loue me and kepe my comaundementes.

B Thou shalt not * take the name of the Lorde thy God in vayne, for the Lord wyll not holde hym gylelesse that taketh his name in vayne. * Remember the Sabboth daye that thou sanctifie it. Sixe dayes shalt thou laboure and do all that thou hast to do: but the seuenth daye is the Sabboth of y Lorde thy God, in it y shalt do no maner of woꝝke, thou and thy sonne, and thy daughter, thy manseruaunte and thy maydeseruaunt, thy catell and the straunger that is wthyn thy gates. For in syxe dayes y Lorde made heauen and erth, the see and all that in them is,
and * rested the seuenth daye: wherfore the Lorde blessed the sabboth day and halowed
it. * Honour thy father and thy mother, that thy dayes maye be longe in the lande, whych the Lorde thy God enueth the.

C Thou shalt not kyll.
* Thou shalt not breake wedlocke.
* Thou shalt not steale.
* Thou shalt not bere false witness agtst

Thou shalt not couet * thy neyghbours house: netter shalt y couet thy neyghbours wyfe, or hys man seruaunte, or hys mayde, or hys oxe, or hys asse, or whatsoeuer thy neyghboure hath.

And all the people sawe the thunder and the lpgderynge, and the nyfle of the trompe, and the mountayne smokyng. And whē the people sawe it, they remoued and stode a farr off, and sayd vnto Moyses: talke thou with vs, and we wyll heare: but let not God talke with vs, lest we dye. And Moyses said vnto the people: feare not, for God is come to proue you, and y his frace may be in your face, that ye synne not.

And the people stode a farr off: And Moses went into the thyrde clowde where God was. And the Lord sayd vnto Moyses: thus thou shalt saye vnto the chyldren of Israel.
Ye haue sene that I haue talked with you from out of heauen. Ye shall not make therfore wyth me goddes of syluer, netter shall ye make you goddes of golde. * An alter of erth thou shalt make vnto me, and thereon offer thy burntofferpynges and thy peace of-ferpynges, thy shepe and thyne oxen. In all places where I shall put the remembraunce of my name. I thyrder I wyll come vnto the and blesse the. And if thou wilt make me an alter of stone, se thou make it not of hewē stone. Els yf thou lyfte vp thy coule vpo it, thou hast polluted it. Neyther shalt thou go vpon by stepes vnto myne alter, that thy synnynesse be not shewed there on.

Thou shalt not oppresse a straunger, for ye knowe the herte of a straunger, seynge ye were straungers in the lande of Egypte.

* Wythe peres thou shalt lowe thy lande, ad gather in the frutes therof: and the seuenth pere thou shalt let it rest and lye fyll, that the poore of thy people maye eate, & what they leaue, the beastes of the felde shal eate. In lyke maner thou shalt do also wth thy vynegarde and thyne olyue trees.

* Wythe dayes thou shalt do thy wyche, and in the seuenth daye thou shalt reste, that thyne ore and thyne asse maye rest, and the sonne of thy mayde and the straunger maye be refreshed. In al thynges that I haue sayd vnto you, be circumspere. And make no rehearsal of the names of straunge goddes: ther let it be hearde out of thy mouth.

Thy feastes thou shalt holde vnto me in a pere. * Thou shalt kepe the feaste of swete bread, that thou eate vnto leuend bread seuen dayes longe as I commaunded the, in ^{the} tyme of the moneth whā coyne beginneth to rype, for in that moneth ye came oute of Egypte: * and se that no man appeare befoze me in a pere. * Thy tymes in a pere shall all thyne chyldren appeare befoze the Lorde God.

* Thou shalt not offer the bloude of my sacrifice vpon leuended bread: nether shall the fat of my feaste remayne vntyll the morninge. * The fyfth of the fyfth frutes of thy lande thou shalt bynng into the house of the Lorde thy God: * thou shalt also not sette a kydd in hys mothers mylke.

Beholde, I sende an Angell befoze the, to kepe the in the waye, and to bynng the into the place whych I haue prepared. Beware of hym, and heare his voyce, and resyst hym not: for he wyll not spare poure mysdedes & my name is in hym. But and if thou shalt herken vnto his voyce, & do al that I speake, I wyll be an enemye vnto thyne enemyes, ad an aduersarye vnto thyne aduersaryes.

For myne * Angell shall go befoze the, and bynng the in vnto the Amosites, and the Chytes, & Pherezites, and Cananites, Heuties, & Jebusites, and I shall destroye them. Thou shalt not worshippe they: * goddes, nether serue them, nether do after the wyshes of them: but ouerthrowe the and breake downe the ymages of them. And ye shall serue the * Lord your God, and he shal blesse thy bread and thy water, and I wyll take all sickness awaye from the myddes of the.

There

There shall be no woman childlesse or barrenfull in thy land: the nombre of thy dayes wyl I fullfill. I wyl sende my feare before the, and wyl trouble all the people wher thou shalt go. And I wyl make all thyne enemyes turne theyr backs vnto þe, and I wyl sende hornettes before the, whych shall dysue out the Hewites, the Cananites, and the Hethites before þe. Neuertheles, I wyl not cast them oute in one yere, lest the lande growe to a wilderness: and the bestes of þe feilde multiplye against the. By litle & litle I wyl dysue them oute before the, vntill thou be increased, & inheret the lande. And I wyl make thy costes from the reddy see vnto the see of the Philistines, and from the deserte vnto the ryuer. For I wyl deliuer the inhabytters of the lande into thyne hande, as thou shalt dysue the out before the. * Thou shalt make none appoyntement with them, nor wylth theyr goddes. Neither let the dwel in thy lande, lest they make þe synne agaynst me: for yf thou serue theyr goddes, it wyl be thy decaye.

The Lorde sheweth Moses the shalyn on the toppe of the mount, and the thynge that shal be made.

And þe Lorde spake vnto Moses sayng: speake vnto þe chyldren of Israel that they bryng me an heueoffryng: of every man that geueth it wyllyngly wyth his harte, ye shall take it.

This is þe heueoffryng whych ye shall take of the golde & syluer & brasse: yelowe hynde purple, scarlet, whyte sylke, & goates herynnes saymes þe are reddy, and the saymes of tarys, and sethim wood, oyle for lyght, spices for anoyntinge oyle, and for sweete censur. Ony stones and stones to be set in þe Ephod and in the brest lappe.

And let them make me a sanctuary (that I may dwell amonge the.) And according to all that I shewe the both after the tabernacle of the habytacyon, and after the shalyn of all the ornaments thereof, euen so shall ye make it. And they shall make an * arke of sethim wood, & they shall overlaye it with golde and an halfe wynde and a cabyle & an halfe wynde. And thou shalt overlaye it wylth pure golde.

golde, wythin and without shalt thou ouerley it, and shalt make an hye vpp̄ it a crowne of golde rounde aboute. And thou shalt cast foure rynges of golde for it, and put the in the foure corners therof, ii. rynges shalbe in the one syde of it, and ii. in the other. And thou shalt make barres of sethim wood, and couer them wyth golde, and put the barres in the rynges alonge by the sydes of the arke, to bere it wyth all. And the barres shalbe in the rynges of the arke, and shal not be take awaye fro it. And thou shalt put in the arke the wytnesse whych I shall geue the.

And thou shalt make a mercyseate of pure golde, ii. cubytes and an halfe longe and a cubite & a halfe bryde. And thou shalt make ii. cherubins of golde: Euen of a whole worke shalt thou make the in the two endes of the mercyseate: As the one cherub shalt thou make on the one ende, and the other on the other ende. Eue of the same mercyseate shalt thou make Cherubyns in the two endes therof. And the Cherubyns shall stretch theyr wynges abrode ouer an hye, couering the mercyseate wyth theyr wynges, and theyr faces shall loke one to another: euen to the mercyseate warde, that the faces of the Cherubyns be. And thou shalt put a mercyseate aboue vpp̄ the arke, and in the arke thou shalt putt the wytnesse whych I will geue the.

And from thence I will testyfy vnto the and wyl comon with the from vpon the mercyseate: from between the two Cherubyns which are vpon the arke of wytnesse, of all thyng whych I wyl geue the in commaundement vnto the chyldren of Israel.

* Thou shalt also make a table of sethim wood of two cubytes longe, and one cubite bryde, and a cubyt and an halfe hye. And thou shalt couer it wyth pure golde, & make there to a crowne of golde rounde aboute. And make vnto that an whorpe of foure synghers bryde, rounde aboute. And make a golden crowne also to a whorpe rounde aboute. And make for it foure rynges of golde, and put the rynges in the corners that are on the foure sctes therof: euen ouer agayn a whorpe shall the rynges be, to put in barres, to bere the table wythall. And thou shalt make the barres of sethim wood, and ouerlaye them wyth golde, that the table maye be borne in them. be halowed. And ꝑ ſhalt anoynt Aaron & his ſonnes, and conſecrate them, that they maye mynyſtre vnto me.

And thou ſhalt ſpeake vnto ꝑ chyldze of Iſraell, ſaying: thys ſhalbe an holy opnttyng oyle vnto me, thorowout your generacyōs. Vpon mannes fleſhe ſhall yt not be powred: neyther ſhall ye make any other after the makinge of yt, for yt is holpe: and ſhalbe holpe vnto you: whoſoever maketh lyke that, or whoſoever putteth any of yt vpon a ſtraunger, ſhall perſhe from among hys people.

And the Lorde ſayd vnto Moſes: take vnto ꝑ ſwete ſpces: balme, Onycha, ſmagalbanum, theſe ſpces wth pure franchi-ſence, of eache lyke moche, and make of them ſwete ſmellinge incenſe, after ꝑ craſte of the apoticarpe, myngled together, pure & holpe.
And beate it to powder and put of yt befoze ꝑ wytnelle in ꝑ tabernacle of wytnelle, where I wyl mete the. It ſhalbe vnto you moſt holp. And ſe that ye make none after the makyng of that. It ſhalbe vnto you holpe for the Lorde. Whoſoever ſhall make lyke vnto ꝑ, to ſmell therto, ſhal perſhe from among hys people.

all maner of worke, to kynde out ſotte ſeates and to worke in golde, ſyluer and bzaſſe: and in the craſte to ſet ſtones, & to carue in trebze, and to worke in all maner of workman-ſhip. And beholde, I haue geuen hym to be hys compoꝝy Ooliab the ſonne of Aſamach of the trybe of Dan, and in the beſtes of all ꝑ are wyle harted, haue I put wiſdome to make all that I haue commaunded the,
the tabernacle of wytnelle, the Arche of wynelle, and the mercy ſeate that is thereon: and all the ozdāmetes of the tabernacle, and the table and hys ozdāmetes, and the pur candellſyck wth all hys apperell, & the auter of enſence: and ꝑ aulter of burntſacrify-hys ſote. The veſtimentes to mynyſtre in & the garmentes of hys ſonnes to mynyſtre in, and ꝑ anoyntyng oyle: and ſwete cenſe for the ſanctuarie, accordyng to all that I haue commaunded the ſhall they do.

And ꝑ Lorde ſpake vnto Moſes, ſayeng ſpeake vnto ꝑ chyldze of Iſrael & ſayeg:

ſabbath therfoze: for it is holp vnto you.
he that he that despoyleth ye, shalbe slayne. For whosoeuer workech therein, the same soule shal-be roted out from amonge hys people. Wyre dayes shall men worke. And in the seuenth daye is the Sabbath of the holpe rest of the Lorde. Whosoener doth any worke in the Sabboth daye, shall dye: wherfore let the chyliden of Israel kepe the Sabbath, that they obserue yt thorowout theyr generacyons, that yt be an appoyntment for euer. For yt is a signe betwene me and the chyliden of Israel for euer. * For in syre dayes the Lorde made heauen & earth: & in the seuenth daye he rested, & was refreshed.

And when the Lorde had made an ende of comynge with Moses vnto the mounte Sinai, he gaue hym two tables of wyntes euen tables of stone, wynten with the spy-ger of God.

C The xxxii. Chapter.

The golden calfe. Moses prayeth for them. He breakech the tables for anger. He churched Aaron. The phylatres are slayne.

AD when the people sawe, & it was longe or Moses cam downe out of y^e mountayne, they gathered them selues to gether vnto Aaron, and sayde vnto hym: *
Up, make vs goddes to go before vs: for of thys Moses (y^e felowe y^e brought vs out of y^e lande of Egypt) we wot not what is become.

And Aaron sayde vnto them: * pluche of the golden earynges whych are in the e-ares of youre wyues, your sones, and of your daughters: and brynge them vnto me. And all y^e people plucked of y^e golden earynges, whych they had in theyr eares, and broughde them vnto Aaron. And he receaued them of theyr handes, and fashyoned it with a gra-ner, and made of yt a calfe of molten metall.
And they sayde: * These be thy goddes, O Israel whych broughte the oute of the lande of Egypt.

B And when Aaron sawe that, he made an altare before it. And Aaron cryed sayinge: to morowe is y^e holy daye of the Lorde. And they rose vp in the morning, & offered burnte offerings, & brought peace offerings also.

* And the people sat them downe to eate & drynke & rose bp agayne to playe.

And y^e Lord sayde vnto Moses: * go, get the downe: the people whych y^e brought-est out of the lande of Egypt, haue merced all, they are turned at once out of the waye, whych I commaunded them: * for they haue made them a calfe of molten metall, & haue worshipped yt, and haue offered therto, sayinge: These be thy goddes, O Israel whych hath broughte the out of the lande of Egypt. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: * I haue sene this people: and beholde, it is a stiffnecked people: & nowe suffre me, & my wrath maye waxe hote agaynst them, & consume them: & I wyl make of the a mygd-ye people.

And Moses besoughte the Lorde hys God, And sayde: O Lorde, why dothe thy wrath waxe hote agaynst thy people, whych thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypt, with great powre & with a mygdye hande:
* wherfore shulde the Egypcyas speke and saye: For a myschete dyd he brynge them out euen for to slepe them in the mountaynes, & to consume them frome the face of the erther.
Turne from thy seuerer wrath, and turne from thys euell (deuyed) agaynst the people. Remembre Abraham, Isaac, & Israel thy seruantes: to whom thou swarest by thyne awne selfe & saydest vnto them: * I wyl multiplye youre seed: as the starres of heauen, & all thys lande that I haue spoken of wyl I geue vnto youre seed, & they shall enheret it for euer. And y^e Lorde refrayned him selfe from y^e euell. Whych he sayde he wold do vnto hys people.

And Moses turned his backe and went downe from the hyll and the two tables of wyntesse were in hys hande: and the same tables were wynten on bothe the leaues, & were the worke of God, and the wyntynge was the wyntynge of God grauen in the tables. And when Josua hearde the noyse of the people, as they shewed, he sayde vnto Moses: there is a noyse of warre in the host.
And he answered: yt is not the crye of them that haue the mastery, nor of them that haue the worse: but I do heare the noyse of them that synge.

And yt fortuned, asone as he cam nye vnto the dooste, he sawe the calfe and the daunsynge, and Moses wrath waxed hote, and he caste the tables out of hys handes, & brake them beneath the hyll. * And he toke the calfe whych they had made, and burned it l the fyre, and stampde yt vnto powder, and strawed yt in the water, & made the chyliden of Israel dryncke of yt. And Moses sayde vnto Aar: what dyd thys people vnto the,
that thou hast broughte so greute a synne vpon them?

And Aar answered: let not y^e wrath of my Lorde waxe seuer, thou knowest the people that they are euen set on myschete: For they sayde vnto me: make vs goddes to go before vs, for we wot not what is become of Moses, the felowe y^e broughte vs out of y^e lande of Egypt. And I sayde vnto them: let them that haue golde pluche it of, & brynge it me: & I dyd caste yt into the fyre: and therof came out thys calfe.

Moses therfore sawe y^e people toke hales (and that Aaron had made them) and had vnto theyr synne amonge theyr ene-myes.

mpes) and he went and stode in the gate of the hooſte, and ſayde: If any man pertayne vnto the Lorde, let hym come vnto me. And all the ſonnes of Levi gathered them ſelues together, & came vnto hym. And he ſayde vnto them. Thus ſayth the Lorde God of Iſrael, put euery mā hyſ ſweard by hyſ ſyde, & go in & oute, from gate to gate thowout the hooſte, & ſlepe euery man, hyſ brother & euery man hyſ companion, & euery man hyſ neyghboure. And the chyldren of Levi dyd as Moſes had ſayde. And there fell of þe people the ſame daye aboute thre thouſade me. And Moſes ſayde: ſpall poure hādes vnto the Lorde thys daye, euery man vpon hyſ ſonne & vpon hyſ brother, and þe there maye be geuen you a bleſſynge thys daye.

And on the morowe it fortuneth þe Moſes ſayde vnto the people: Ye haue ſpynned a greate ſpynne. And nowe I wyll go vp vnto the Lorde: yf peradventure I may purchaſe an atonement for poure ſpynne. Moſes therfore went agayne vnto the Lorde, & ſaide: O, this people haue ſpynned a greate ſpynne and haue made them goddes of golde. And nowe I praye the, eyther forgive them theſe ſpynne: or (yf thou wylte not) wyſpe me out of thy booke, whyche thou haſte wyſpen. And the Lorde ſayde vnto Moſes: I wyll put hym out of my booke that hath ſpynned agaynſte me. And nowe go thou, byngne the people vnto the place whych I ſayde vnto the: be- holde, myne angell ſhall go before the. After thelater in þe daye when I wyſet, I wyll wyſet theſe ſpynne vpon them. And the Lorde plagued the people, becauſe they made the calfe whych Aaron made.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The Lorde ſendeth an angell before hyſ people. The Lorde ſuffereth to go vp wyth the people. The people ſanctifye ſpynne. Moſes ſpeaketh wyth the Lorde.

And the Lorde ſayde vnto Moſes departe and go hence: thou and þe people, whych thou haſte brought out of the lād of Egypte, vnto þe land whych I ſware vnto Abraham, Iſaac, & Jacob, ſayinge: * vnto thy ſeed wyll I geue yt * (and I wyll ſende an angell before the: & wyll caſte oute the Cananytes, the Amorytes & the Hethytes, the Pherezites, the Hethites, and þe Jebuſites) a lande that floweth wyth mylke & donye. For I wyll not go amonge you my ſelfe: * for ye are a ſpynnecked people: leſte I conſume þe in þe waye. And when þe people hearde thys euell tidynge, they ſozowed: & noman put on hyſ belt rayment.

And the Lorde ſpoke vnto Moſes: ſaye vnto þe chyldren of Iſrael: ye are a ſpynnecked people: I muſte come once ſodenly vpon you, & make an ende of you. Therfore nowe put thy goodly rayment from the, & I maye wyt what to do vnto the. And the chyldren of Iſrael layde theſe goodly rayment from them, euen by the mounte of Horeb.

And Moſes toke þe tabernacle, & pitched yt wythout the hooſte a ſarre of from the hooſte, & called it the tabernacle of wytnes. And ſo yt cam to paſſe that euery man whych wolde praye vnto the Lorde, went out vnto the tabernacle of wytnes, whych was wythout the hooſte. And yt fortuned, that when Moſes wente out vnto the tabernacle, all the people roſe vp: and ſtoode euery mā at hyſ tente dooze: and looked after Moſes, vntyll he was gone into the tabernacle. And as ſone as Moſes was entred into the tabernacle, the cloudy pylle deſcended, and ſtoode at the dooze of the tabernacle, and he talked wyth Moſes. And all the people ſaw the cloudy pylle ſtande at the tabernacles dooze, and they roſe vp, & worſhypped euery man in hyſ tente dooze.

And the Lorde ſpoke vnto Moſes: face to face, as a mā ſpeaketh vnto hyſ frende: & he turned agayne into the hooſte. And þe child Joſua hyſ ſeruaunte the ſonne of Nun, departed not oute of the tabernacle. And Moſes ſayde vnto the Lorde: ſe, thou ſayeſt vnto me: leade thys people fourth, and thou haſte not ſhewed me whom thou wylte leade wyth me. And thou haſte ſayde moztuer: I knowe the by name, & thou haſte alſo founde grace in my ſyghte. Howe therfore yf I haue founde fauoure in thy ſyghte, then ſhewe me thy waye, & I maye knowe the, & that I maye ſynde grace in thy ſyghte. And conſyder alſo that thys nacyon, is thy people. And he ſayde: my preſence ſhall go wyth the: and I wyll geue the reſte. He ſayd vnto hym: Yf thy preſence go not wyth me, earpe vs not hence: for howe ſhall yt be knowne here, that I and the people haue founde fauoure in thy ſyghte, but in that thou goeſt wyth vs? Yf thou go wyth vs, ſhall not I & thy people haue preemynence before all the people that are vpon the face of the earth? And the Lorde ſayde vnto Moſes: I wyll be thys alſo that thou haſte ſayde, for thou haſt founde grace in my ſyghte, and I knowe the by name.

And he ſayde: I beſeeche þe, ſhewe me thy gloze. And he ſayde: I wyll make of my good go before the, & I wyll be called in thys name of the Lorde before þe: * and wyll ſhewe mercye to whom * I wyll ſhewe mercye, & wyll haue compaſſyō on whom I wyll haue compaſſyō. And he ſayde furthermore: thou mayeſt not ſe my face: for * there ſhall no man ſe me, and lyue.

And the Lorde ſayde: beholde, there is a place by me, & thou ſhalte ſtande vpon a rocke: & whyle my gloze goeth forth, I wyll put the in a cleft of the rocke: & wyll put myne

C The .xxxiii. Chapter.

The tables are renewed. The mercie of God. To haue fellowship with the Gentiles is forbidden: and they shal also. & thepe feathers.

Ad the Lord sayde vnto Moyses* hewe þ two tables of stone lyke vnto þ fyrste, & I wyl wyte vpo them the wordes þ were in þ fyrste tables whych þ brakeste. And be ready in þ moynge, that thou maiest come vp early vnto þ mount of Synai: & stand there wyth me in þ top of the mount. Ther shal no mā com vp w þ, nether let any mā be sene thowomt all þ mounte, nether let the shepe nor oren fede before the hyll.

And Moyses hewed two tables of stone lyke vnto the fyrste, and rose vp early in the moynge, and went vp vnto the mount of Synai, as the Lord had commaunded hym: and toke in hys hade the two tables of stone. And the Lord descended in the clowde, and stode wyth hym there: & he called vpon the name of the Lord. And when the Lord walked before hym, he cryed, Lord* Lord God, mercifull & gracious, long suffering, and aboundaunte in goodnes & trueth, & hepyngge merce in store for thousandes, forgyuinge wyckednesse, vngodlynes & synne, & not leauing one innocent, wyspynge þ wyckednes of the fathers vpon the chyldren and vpon chylders chyldren, euen vnto þ thyrde & fourth generatio. And Moyses bowed hym selfe to þ earth quychly, & worshypped, & sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy syghte (O Lord) then let my Lord go wth vs: for it is a stubborne people, & thou shalt haue merce vpon oure wyckednes & oure synne, & shalt take vs for thyne enderpytaunce.

And he sayde: beholde, I make an appoyntemente before all þ people, & I will do many thynges: such as haue not bene done in all the worlde, neyther in all nacyns. And all the people amonge whych thou arte, shall se the worke of the Lord: for yt is a terribil thyng that I will do wth the: hepe thos thynges that I commaunde the this daye. Beholde, I caste out before þ, the Amorytes Canaanites, Hethytes, Pherysies, Hephzites and Jebusites. * Take hede to thy selfe, that thou make no compacte with the inhabyters of the lande whether thou goest, lest yt becaule of cupne amonge pou. But ouerthrowe theyr aulters, & bythe theyr ymages and cut downe theyr groues. Thou shalt worshype no straunge God. For the Lord is * called gelous, because he ys a gelous God: lest if thou make any agremente wth the inhabyters of the lande, and they go a whoynge after theyr goddes, and do sacryfyce vnto theyr goddes, they call the, & thou eate of theyr sacryfyce: & thou take of theyr daughters vnto thy sonnes, & theyr daughters go a whoynge after theyr goddes, and make thy sonnes go a whoynge after theyr goddes also.

Thou shalt make the no goddes of men. The feaste of the swete breade shalt þ kepe. Seuen dayes thou shalt eate vnlentred breade, as I commaunded the in the tyne of the moneth, when corne begynneth to rypp. For in the moneth when corne begynneth to rypp, I cammest out of Egypt. * All that breaketh vpon the matryce is myne: and all that breaketh þ matrice amonge the catel, yf yt be male: whether yt be oxe or shepe. But the fyrste of the asse thou shalt bye out with a lambe. And yf thou redeme hym not, thou shalt breake hys necke. All the fyrste borne of thy sonnes shalt thou redeme. * And se that no mā appere before me emptye.

Seue dayes thou shalt worke, & in the seventh daye thou shalt reste, both e from earpyng & reappynge. * Thou shalt obserue þ feaste of weekes wth theyr fyrste frutes of whete heruest, & the feaste of ingathering at the peares ende. Thyse in a peare shall all poure men chyldren appere before þ Lord Jehoua God of Israel. Wha I caste out þ nacyns before the, & enlarge thy coastes, so þ no man shall despye thy lade, thou shalt go vp to appeare before þ Lord thy God chyse in the peare.

* Thou shalt not offre þ blonde of my sacryfyce vpon leuen, nether shall oughte of the sacryfyce of þ feaste of Passouer be left vnto the moynge. * The fyrste rypp frutes of the lade thou shalt byng vnto the house of the Lord thy God. And þ shalt not seeth a kyd in hys mothers mylke.

And þ Lord sayd vnto Moyses: write these wordes: for after the tenoure of thes wordes I haue made a coneuente wth the and wth Israel. * And he was there wth the Lord forty dayes and fortye nyghtes, and dyd nether eate breade nee drinke water. * And he wrote vpon the tables the wordes of the coneuente, euen ten verses.

And it fortuned, whē Moſes cam downe frome mounte Synai, the two tables of witneſſe were in Moſes hand, when he came downe from the mounte. The xxxv. Chapter.

The Sabbath. The ſyſte frutes are requyred. The rebuyne of the people to offer. Bezaleel and Aholiab are prayſed of Moſes, and ſet to worke.

And Moſes gathered all the chpany of the chyldre of Iſraell together, & ſayde vnto them: theſe are the wordes whych ſ Lord hath comaunded ſ ye ſhulde do them: *

Syre dayes ye ſhall worke: but the ſeuenth daye ſhalbe vnto you the holpe Sabbath of ſ Lordes reſte: whoſoener doth any worke therein, ſhall dye. Ye ſhall kyndel no fyre thowout all your habytacyon vpon ſ Sabbath daye.

And Moſes ſpake vnto al ſ multitude of ſ chyldren of Iſraell ſayinge: * thys is ſ thyng whych ſ Lorde comaunded, ſaying: Take from amōge you an heueoſſering vnto the Lorde. Whoſoener is of a wyllynge herte, let hym brynge it for ſ heueoſſeringe of ſ Lorde. Namelye golde, ſyluer, & braſſe, & yeloweyſpke, purple, ſharlet, whyte ſpke, goates heere, and rāmes ſkynnes red, & tarys ſkynnes w ſethim wod: oyle for lyghte & ſpyces for the anoyntynge oyle and for the ſweete encenſe. And Dnyr ſtones & ſtones to be ſet in ſ Ephod & in the bzeſtelleppe.

And let all them ſ are wyle herted amonge you, come & make all that the Lorde hath comaunded: ſ habytacyon with ſ tent therof & hys couerynge, & hys rynges, & hys borders, hys barres, hys pylers, & hys ſockettes: ſ arche & the ſtaues therof: wyth the mercy ſeate & the vaille that couereth it: ſ ta-

And all ſ company of the chyldren of Iſraell departed from ſ preſence of Moſes. And every one came (as many as they hertes coaged them, & as many as they ſpites made them wyllynge) & broughte a preſent for the Lorde, to ſ makinge of ſ tabernacle of wytenneſſe, & for all hys vſes, & for the holy veſtimentes. And they came both men & women (euen as many as were wyllynge herted) & broughte brazeletteſ, & earynges, rynges & chapynges, which ſewels were all of golde: & all the mē broughte a waueoſſering of golde vnto ſ Lorde. And Bezaleel made A arke of Setherim wodd, two cubytes & an halfe longe, & a cubyte & a halfe bzaide, & a cubyte ad a halfe hie: & overlappede it wpyth fyne golde within & without, & made a crowne of golde to it rounde about, & cast for it foure rpynges of golde for the foure corners of it: two rpynges for $\frac{1}{2}$ one syde, & two for the other, and made barres of Setherim wodd, & couered the with golde, ad put the barres in the rpynges a longe by the syde of the arke, to beare it wythall.

And he made the mercysate (that is to saye Gods answeryng place) of pure golde: two cubytes and a halfe was the length therof, ad one cubyte and a halfe the bzaide: & he made two Cherubyns of thycke golde vpon the two endes of $\frac{1}{2}$ mercysate. One Cherub on the one ende, & another Cherub on the other ende. Euen of the mercysate made he the Cherubyns: namely, in the edes therof. And the Cherubyns spred oute theyr wynges aboue an hie, ad couered the mercysate therewith. And theyr faces were one to another: euen to the mercysate warde, were the faces of the Cherubyns.

And he made the table of Setherim wodd two cubytes was the length therof ad a cubyte the bzaide, ad a cubyte and a halfe the heygth of it. And he overlappede it wpyth fyne golde, and made therto a crowne of golde rounde aboute, ad made therto an whope of an hande bzaide, rounde aboute and made vpon the whope a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and cast for it foure rpynges of golde, and put the rpynges in the foure corners that were in the foure sete therof. Euen harde by the whope were the rpynges, into the whiche the barres were put, to beare $\frac{1}{2}$ table wythall. And he made the barres of Setherim wodd, & couered the with gold to beare $\frac{1}{2}$ table wythall, and made the vessels (for the table) of pure golde: the dysches, spoones, flat peces ad pottes to powze wythall.

Exod. xxxix.

And he made the chandelie of pure golde: euen of one pece made he the chandelie. For his fote, hys shafte, hys cuppes, hys knoppes & hys floures were of one pece. Wythe bzaunches proceeding out of the sydes therof, thye out of the one syde, & thye out of the other. And in one bzaunche thye cuppes made lyke vnto almondes wyth knoppes & floures: ad in another bzaunche thye cuppes made lyke almondes wyth knoppes & floures. And so thozowe out the fyre bzaunches that proceded out of the chandelie. And vnto the chandelie self were. iiii. cuppes for the facion of almondes wyth knoppes & floures: vnder euery two bzaunches a knoppe. And the knoppes and the bzaunches proceded out of it, and it was all one pece of thycke golde. And he made his seuen lampes with the tonges and snotters therof, of pure golde. Euen of an hundred wyghte of pure golde, made he it wyth all the vessels of the chandelie.

And he made the cens alter of Setherim wodd. The length of it was a cubyte, and the bzaide a cubyte, for it was, fourty square two cubytes hie, with hornes proceeding out of it. And he couered it wpyth pure gold, and the toppe and the sydes therof round about, & the hornes of it, ad made vnto it a crowne of golde rounde aboute. And he made two rpynges of golde for it, eue vnder the crowne therof in the two corners of it ad in the sydes therof to put barres in, for to beare it wythall: & made the barres of Setherim wodd and ouer lapde the with golde. And he made the holy anoyntynge oyle, & the swete incens after the apotecaryes crafte.

The xxxviii Chapter.

The alter of burnt offeringes. The brasen laver. The summe of that the people offered.

And he made the burnt offering A alter of Setherim wodd, fyue cubytes was the length therof, and fyue cubytes the bzaide: euen. iiii. square, & iii. cubytes hie. And he made vnto it hornes in the foure corners of it proceeding out of it, & he overlappede it wpyth bzaile. And he made al the vessels of the alter: the cauldrons, shewels, basins, skibokes and colepanes. All the vessels that made he of bzaile.

And he made a brasen grebzyen of netwoke vnto $\frac{1}{2}$ alter, rounde about alowe beneth vnto the myddes of the altare, and cast iiii. rpynges of bzaile for the iiii. endes of the grebzyen to put barres in. And he made the barres of Setherim wodd and couered them with bzaile, and put the barres into the rpynges in the foure corners of the altare, to beare it wythall and made the alter holowe wpyth in the bordes. And he made $\frac{1}{2}$ lauer of bzaile and the fote of it also of bzaile: in the syde of them that byd watch at the doze of the tabernacle of wytnesse.

And he made the courte on the south syde, & the hangynges of the court were of wythe twyned lyke, haupng an hundred cubytes. The pylers were twenty, and theyr lockettes twenty. But the knoppes of $\frac{1}{2}$ pylers, & the whopes were of spiner. And on the north syde the hangynges were an hundred cubytes. Theyr pylers were. xx. & theyr lockettes of bzaile. xx. But the knoppes ad the whopes of the pylers were of spiner. On the west syde, were hangynges of. i. cubytes. & pylers pillers & they: .x. sockettes. But the knoppes & the whopos of β pillers were of syluer. And toward the east syde, were hanginges of .l. cubytes: β hanginges of the one syde of the gate were systene cubytes longe, with thre pillers, and thre sockettes. And of the other syde of the court gate were hanginges also of .xv. cubytes longe, with thre pillers and thre sockettes. All the hanginges of the court rounde aboute, were of whyte twyned sylke: but the sockettes of β pillers were of brasse: and the knoppes & the whopos of the pillers were of syluer, and the couerynge of the heades was of syluer, and all the pillers of the court were whoped about with syluer. And the hanginge of the gate of the court was nedele worke, of yelow sylke purple, scarlet and whyte twyned sylke .xx. cubytes longe, and syue in the bredth, ouer agaynst the hanginges of the court. And they: pillers were foure, and they: foure sockettes of brasse and the knoppes of syluer, and the heades overlaped with syluer, and whoped about with syluer, and all the pyennes of the Tabernacle & of the court rounde about, were of brasse.

This is the summe of the habitacyon of witnesse, as it was colited accordeinge to the comaundement of Moyses for the offyce of the Leuites by the hande of Ithamar sonne to Aar the preast. And Bezaleel the sonne of Eli β sonne of Hur of β trybe of Iuda, made all that the Lozde commaunded Moyses, and with him was Aholiab sonne of Ahisamach of the tribe of Dan, a conynge grauer and a worke of nedleworke in yelow sylk, purple, scarlet and whyte twyned sylke.

All the golde that was occupied for all β worke of the holy place, was the gold of the waueofferynge, eul. xxix. hundred weyghte, and seuen hundred & .xxx. syles, accordeinge to the sicle of the Sanctuary. And the summe of syluer that came of the multitude, was .v. thozre hundred weyghte, and a thousande seuen hundred and .lxxv. syles after the sicle of the Sanctuary. For euery man an halfe weyghte, euen halfe a sicle after the sicle of the Sanctuary, for all them that wente to be nombred fro .xx. yere olde and aboue, eul. for .vi. hundred thousande & thre thousande and .v. hundred and .l. men.

And of the .v. thozre hundred weyghte of syluer, were cast the sockettes of the Sanctuary, and the sockettes of the bayle, an hundred sockettes of the syue thozre hundred weyghte an hundred weyghte to euery sockette. And of the thousande sent hundred & .lxx. syles, he made knoppes to the pillers, and overlaped the heades and whoped them.

And the brasse of the waueofferyng was lxx. hundred weyghte, and two thousande, & iii. hundred syles. And therwith he made the sockettes to the doze of the Tabernacle of witnesse, & the brassen altar and the brassen grebyren for it, with all the vessels of the altar, and the sockettes of the court rounde about, & the sockettes for the court gate, & all the pyennes of the habitacyon, and all the pyennes of the court rounde aboute.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Of the apparel of Aaron and his sonnes, all that the Lozde commaunded Moyses.

Ad of the yelow sylke, purple & scarlet, they made the vestimentes of ministracion to do seruice in β holy place and made the holy garmentes for Aar, as the Lozde commaunded Moyses.

And he made the Ephod of golde, yelow sylke, purple, scarlet & whyte twyned sylke. And they byd beate the gold into thynne plates, & cutte it into wyers: to worke it in the yelow sylke, purple, scarlet, and in the syue whyte, with brodyed worke. And they made two sydes for it, to closethem up by the two edges. And the brodyng of the gyrdell that was upon it, was of the same stuffe, and after the same worke: of golde, yelow sylke, purple, scarlet, and twyned whyte sylke, as the Lozde commaunded Moyses.

And they wrought Onix stones closed in ouches of gold, and graued as sygnettes are grauen with the names of the chyldren of Israel, and put them on the shoulders of the Ephod, that they shuld be stones for a remembrance of the chyldren of Israel, as the Lozde commaunded Moyses.

And he made the breastlappe of conynge worke, and lyke the worke of the Ephod: euen of golde, yelow sylke, purple, scarlet & twyned whyte sylke. It was .iiii. square, ad they made the breastlappe double, an hande breadeth longe and an halfe breadeth brode. And they fylled it with .iiii. rowes of stones. The fyrst rowe, a Sardios, a Topas & a Smaragdus: the seconde rowe, a Rubys, a Sapphir and a Diamonde: in the .iii. rowe, a Ligurius, an Achat, and an Amatis: in the fourth rowe, a Turcas, an Onix, and a Jaspy. And they were closed in ouches of gold in they: inclosers. And the .xii. stones were grauen as sygnettes with the names of the chyldren of Israel: euery stone with his name, accordeinge to the .xii. trybes.

And they made vpon the breastlappe, two fastenynges cherynes of wycthen worke and pure golde. And they made two bohes of golde, & two golde rynges, and put the two rynges in the two cornes of β breastlappe. And they put the two charynes of golde in β two rynges, in the cornes of β breastlappe: And the two endes of the two charynes they fastened in the two bohes, and put them on the shoulders of the Ephod vpon the fars front of it.

And they made two rynges of golde, and put them on the two corners of the brest-lappe vpon the edge of it whych was on the insyde by the Ephod. And they made two golden rynges, and put them on the two sydes of the Ephod, beneth on the foreside of it and ouer agaynst hys fellowe, aboue vpon the brestpyng of the Ephod, and they strayed the brestlappe by hys rynges vnto the rynges of the Ephod, wpth a lace of yelow spylke: that it myght be vpon the brestpyng of the Ephod, so that the brestlappe shulde not be lowsed fro of the Ephod: as the Lord commaunded Moyses.

E And he made the tynple vnto the Ephod of woun woche, altogether of yelow spylke, and there was an hole in the myddeste of the tynple, as the coler of a partlet, with a bode rounde aboute the coler, that it shulde not rent. And in the tynple they made hemmes with pomgranates, of yelow spylke, purple scarlet, and whyte twyned spylke. And they made lytle belles of pure golde, and put the amonge the pomgranates rounde aboute vpo the edge of the tynple: a bell and a pomgranate, a bell and a pomgranate rosede aboute the hemmes of the tynple to mynstre in, as the Lord commaunded Moyses.

And they made cotes of fyne whyte of woun woche for Aaron and hys sonnes, & a mytre of fyne whyte, and goodly bonettes of fyne whyte, and lyncen breeches of twyned whyte, and a gyrdell of twyned whyte, yelow spylke, purple and scarlet: euen of nedle woche, as the Lord commaunded Moyses.

I And they made the plate for the holy croune of fyne golde, and wrote vpon it wpth grauen woche, the holynes of the Lord: and fyd vnto it a lace of yelow spylke to faste it an hys vpon the mytre, as the Lord commaunded Moyses.

Thus was all the woche of the habytacyon and of the Tabernacle of wytnesse fynlyshed. And the chyldre of Israel dyd accordyng to all that the Lord had comaunded Moyses: euen so dyd they. And they brought the habytacyon vnto Moyses: the tent and all hys apparell, buttones, boordes, barres, pillars and sockettes, the couerynge of rams skynnes redd, & the coueryng of taxus skynnes, and the hangyng vayle, the arche of wytnesse and the barres therof, and the mercyseate: the table and all the vessels therof, & the shewbred: the pure candelsycke, wpth the lampes therof: euen wpth the lampes to be prepared and all the vessels therof, so the oyle for lyght: the golden altare, and the anoyntyng oyle, and the swete cens, and the hangyng of the Tabernacle doore, and the brasen alter with hys greddyn of brasse his barres and all hys vessels, the lauer and hys sote: the hangynges of the court wpth hys pillers and sockettes: the hangyng to the court gate, and hys pyennes and coardes, & all the vessel of the seruyce of the habytacyon for the Tabernacle of wytnesse: the mynstre vestimentes to serue in the holy place, and the holy vestimentes for Aaron & prest, and hys sonnes raymentes to mynstre in accordyng to all that the Lord commaunded Moyses: euen so the chyldren of Israel made all the woche. And Moyses beheld all the woche, and se, they had done it euen as the Lord commaunded: euen so had they done, and Moyses blessed them.

The xl. Chapter.

The Tabernacle is reared vp. The gloire of the Lord appeareth in a cloudy covering of the tabernacle.

And the Lord spake vnto Moyses say- inge. In the first daye of the fyrst moneth, shalt thou set vp the habytacion and the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and put therein the arche of wytnesse, & couer the arche wpth the vayle, and byngge in the table and apparell it accordyng to the order therof.

And thou shalt byngge in the candelsycke, and lyght hys lampes, and set the cens alter of golde befoze the arche of wytnesse, and put the hangyng at the doze of the habytacion.

And set the burnt offering alter befoze the doze of the habytacion and tabernacle of wytnesse, and set the lauer betwene the tabernacle of wytnesse and the alter and put water therein, and make the court rounde aboute, and hange vp the hangyng at the court gate.

And thou shalt take the anoyntyng oyle, and anoynte the habytacyon, and all that is therein, and halowe it with all the vessels therof, that it maye be holy. And thou shalt anoynte the altare of burnt offering and all hys vessels, and sanctifye the altare, that yt maye be an altare most holy. And thou shalt anoynte also the lauer and hys sote, and sanctifye it.

And thou shalt byngge Aaron and his sonnes vnto the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and washe them wpth water. And thou shalt put vpon Aaron the holy vestimentes, and anoynt hym, and sanctifye hym that he maye mynstre vnto me. And thou shalt byngge hys sonnes, and clothe the with garmentes, and anoynte them as thou dydest anoynt they: father, that they maye mynstre vnto me. For they: anoyntyng shall be an euerylastyng presthode vnto them thowtwe out they: generacions. And Moyses dyd accordyng to all that the Lord commaunded hym: euen so dyd he.

Thus was the Tabernacle reared vp the fyrst daye in the fyrst moneth in the secode yere. And Moyses reared vp the Tabernacle and fastened hys sockettes, and set vp the boordes the boordes therof, and put in the barres of it and reared vp his pillars, and spred abroad the tent ouer the habitacion, and put the conerynge of the tent an hye aboue it: as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

And he toke the testimonie, and put it in the arke, & set the barrest to the arke, and put the mercysate an hye vpon the arke, & brought the arke into the habitacion, & hangd vp the vayle, & couered the arke of wptnesse, as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

And he put the table in the tabernacle of witnesse in the northsyde of the habitacion, (but wythout the vayle) and set the bread in ordre before the Lorde, euen as the Lorde had commaunded Moyses.

And he put the candellstyeke in the tabernacle of wptnesse ouer agaynst the table towarde the southsyde of the habitacion, & set vp the lampes before the Lorde: as the Lorde commaunded Moyses. And he put the golde alter in the tabernacle of wptnesse before the vayle, and bzent sweete cense thereon, as the Lorde commaunded Moyses. And he hangd vp the hangynge at the doze of the habitacion, and set the burnt offering alter by the entrynge in of the habitacion of the tabernacle of witnesse, and offered burnt offeringes and meat offeringes thereon, as the lord commaunded Moyses.

* And he set the lauer betwene the tabernacle of wptnesse and the alter, and powred water therein, to wash withal. And Moyses Aaron & his sonnes washed theyr handes & their fete therat: whē they went into the tabernacle of wptnesse, & whē they went to the alter they washed them selues, as the Lorde commaunded Moyses. And he reared vp the court rounde aboute the habitacion and the alter, & set vp an hanginge at the court gate: and so Moyses synysed the worke.

* And the cloude couered the tabernacle of wptnesse, and the glorie of the Lorde fylled the habitacion. And Moyses coulde no entre into the tabernacle of wptnesse, because the cloude abode thereon, and the glorie of the Lorde fylled the habitacion.

And when the cloude was taken vp from of the habitacion, the chyldren of Israel toke theyr iorneyes thowowe out their armyes. And whan the cloude was not taken vp, they iorneyed not tyll it was taken vp: for the cloude of the Lorde was vpon the habitacion by daye & fyre by nyght: in the syght of all the house of Israel thowowout al their armyes.

The first Chapter.

The order of the burnt offeringes.

And the Lord called Moyses, & spake vnto him out of the tabernacle of witnesse saying: I speake vnto the chyldre of Israel, & thou shalt saye vnto the. If a man of you bringe a sacrifice vnto the Lorde, ye shall bringe your sacrifice fro amonge these catel, eue fro amonge oxen & the shepe. If his sacrifice be an burnt offering, let him offer a male of the oxe wythout blemyshe, ad bring him (of his awne volutary wyll) vnto the doze of the tabernacle of witnesse before the Lorde. And he shall put hys hande vpon the head of the bzentsacrifice, and it shall be accepted for hym, to be his attonement. And he shall kyll the kalfe of the doze before the Lorde. And the prestes Aarons sonnes, shall bring the bloude, & spynckle it round about vpon the altare, & is by the doze of the tabernacle of witnesse. And then shall he slaye the burnt offering, & bewee hym in peces. And the sonnes of Aaron the prest shall put fyre vpon the altare, & put wodd vpon the fyre. And the prestes Aarons sonnes shall laye the partes (euen the head & the fat) vpon the wodd that is on the fyre in the altare. But the inwardes and the legges thereof shall he washe in water, & the prest shall burne all in the altare, that they maye be a burnt sacrifice for a sweete odoure vnto the Lorde.

And if his sacrifice be of the flockes (namely of the shepe or goates) let hym bringe a male without blemyshe for a burnt offering. And let hym kyll it on the northsyde of the altare before the Lorde. And the prestes Aarons sonnes shall spynckle the bloude of it rounde aboute vpon the altare. And it shall be cut in peces: euen with hys head and hys fat, and the prest shall put them vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre in the altare. But he shall washe the inwardes and the legges legges with water, & the presse shall brynge all together, and burne it vpon the alter for a burnt offering of a swete sauoure vnto the Lord. Pf the burnt offering for the sacrifice of the turtledones, or of the pigeons. And the priest shall brynge it vnto the alter, and wyngge the necke a lundre of it, & burne it on the alter. But the bloude therof shall runne oute vpon, by the syde of the alter. And he shall plucke away his crop wth hys fethers, & cast the besyde the alter on the east parte in the place of ashes. And he shall breke the wynges of it, but plucke the not a lundre. And the priest shall burne it vpon the alter, euen vpon the woodd that is vpon the fyre, that it maye be a burnt sacrifice for a swete sauoure vnto the Lord.

The ii. Chapter.

The order of meate offerings.

The soule that wyl offer a meate offering vnto the Lord, the same of ferynge shalbe of fyne flour, & he shall poure oyle vpon it, and put frankencens thereon, and shall brynge it vnto Aarons sonnes the priestes. And he shall take therout his handfull of the flour, & of the oyle wth all the frankencens, and the priest shall burne it for a memoriall of hym vpon the alter: to be an offering for a swete sauoure vnto the Lord. And the remnant of the meate offering shalbe Aarons, & hys sonnes, a thyng most holy of the sacrifices of the Lord. Pf thou bryng also a meate offeringe & is baken in the oue, let it be a swete cake of fyne flour mingled wth oyle, or an unleuened wafer anoynted w oyle. Pf thy meate offeringe be baken in the ferynge pan, it shalbe of swete flour mingled wth oyle. And thou shalt mynce it smal, & powre oyle thereon, that it maye be a meate offeringe.

And pf thy meate offeringe be a thyng brypled vpon the grebyen, let it be of flour myngled wth oyle. And thou shalt brynge the meate offeringe & is made of these thynges vnto the Lord, & shalt deliuer it vnto the priest that he maye offre it vpon the alter, and the priest shall take of the meate offeringe a memoriall, & shall burne it vpon the alter: that it maye be a burnt offeringe for a swete sauoure vnto the Lord. And pf whych is left of the meate offeringe shalbe Aarons and his sonnes. It is a thyng most holy of the offerings of the Lord.

All the meate offerings whiche ye shall bryng vnto the Lord, shalbe made without leuen. For ye shal neither burne leue nor hoyle in any offering of the Lord. Notwithstanding ye shall bryng the fyrst thynges of them vnto the Lord: but they shal not come vpon the alter for a swete sauoure.

* All the meate offerings also shalt thou season with salt: neither shalt thou suffre the salt of the couenant of thy God to be lacking from thy meate offeringe: but vpon all thyne offerings thou shalt brynge salt.

And pf thou offre a meate offeringe of the fyrst type frutes vnto the Lord, thou shalt offre for the meate offering of thy first frutes, eares of corne dyped by the fyre, and corne beaten as meale. And thou shalt putt oyle vpon it, and laye frankencens thereon, that it maye be a meate offeringe. And the priest shall burne parte of the beated corne & parte of that oyle wth all the frankencens, for a remembrance. And it shalbe a sacrifice vnto the Lord.

The iii. Chapter.

The order of peace offerings.

Ad pf hys sacrifice be a peace offeringe, and he take it from amonge the bzoues, (whether it be a male or female) he shall bryng such as is without blemyshe, before the Lord: & put his hande vpon the head of his offeringe, & kyll it at the doze of the tabernacle of witness. And Aarons sonnes the priestes shall spynkle the bloude vpon the alter rounde aboute. And he shall offre somewhat of the peace offeringe to be a sacrifice vnto the Lord: euen the fat that is aboute the inwardes, and all the fatt that is aboute the inwardes: and two kydneyes, & the fat that is on them and vpon the lynes: and the abudaunce that is on the luer shall he take awaye wth the kydneyes. And pf he offre a shepe for hys sacrifice, he shall brynge it before the Lord, and put hys hande vpon hys offerings heade, and kyll it before the doze of the tabernacle of witness, and Aarons sonnes shal spynkle the bloude therof rounde aboute the alter.

And of the peace offering, let hym brynge a sacrifice vnto the Lord: the fat therof, & the rompe altogether, whych they shal take of, harde by the backe bone: and the fat that couereth the inwardes, and all the fat that is vpon the inwardes, and the two kydneyes, and the fat that is vpon them and vpon the lynes, and the abudaunce that is vpon the luer shall he take awaye wth the kydneyes. And the priest shal burne them vpon the alter, to be the foode of a sacrifice vnto the Lord.

If his offeringe be a goate, he shal brynge it be-

And he shall bringe therof, of hys offering, euē a sacrifice vnto the Lord: the fat that couereth the inwardes, and all the fat that is vpon the inwardes, and the two kydneyes, & the fat that is vpon them and vpon the lynes, & the abudaunce vpon the lyuer shall he take awaye wyth the kydneyes. And the preast shall burne them vpon the alter for food of the sacrifice: that all the fat may be a sweete sauoure vnto the Lord. Let it be a perpetuall statute for youre generations thorowout your dwellinges, that ye eate nether fat nor bloude.

The iiiij. Chapter.

Ad the Lord spake vnto Moses sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, & saye: If a soule synne thorow ignorance, and hath done any of those thynges whych the Lord hath forbydden in his commaundementes to be done. As yf the preast that is anoynted do synne, (accordinge to the synne of the people) let hym bringe for hys synne whych he hath synned a ponge ore wythout blemyshe vnto the Lord for a synneoffering. And he shall bringe the ponge ore vnto the doore of the tabernacle of wytnesse before the Lord, and shall put hys hande vpon the ponge ore heade, and kyll the ponge ore before the Lord. And the preast that is appoynted shall take of the ponge ore bloude, and bringe it into the tabernacle of wytnesse, and the preast shall dyppe hys synger in the bloude and spynkle therof seuen tymes before the Lord, euen before the hangyng of the holy place. And he shall put some of the bloude before the Lord, vpon the hornes of the alter of sweete cens, whych is in the tabernacle of wytnesse, and shall powre all the bloude of the ponge ore vnto the bottom of the alter of burnt offering, whiche is at the doore of the tabernacle of wytnesse. And he shall take awaye all the fat of the ore that is for synne, the fat that couereth the inwardes, and all the fat that is aboute the inwardes, and the two kydneyes, and the fat that is vpon them, and vpon the lynes and the abudaunce of the lyuer shall he take awaye wyth the kydneyes: as it was taken awaye in the ore of the peaceofferynges, and let the preast burne them vpon the altare of burnt offering. But the synne of the ponge ore, and all his fleshe, wyth hys heade, and hys legges, wyth hys inwardes, and hys donge, shall he beare out and carye the ponge ore all together out of the doore vnto a cleane place: euē where the ashes are powred out, and burne him there on wood in the fyre: euē by the place where the ashes are caste out, shall he be bzant. If the whole congregacyon of Israel synne thorow ignorance, and the thyng be byd from theyr eyes, so that they haue comitted any of those thynges whych the Lord hath forbydden to be done in hys commaundementes, and haue offended. Altho the synne whych they haue synned in, is knowne, the congregacyon shall bringe a ponge ore for the synne, and bringe hym before the tabernacle of the wytnesse, & the elders of the multitude shall put theyr handes vpon the head of the ponge ore before the Lord. And the ponge ore shall be slayne before the Lord. And the preast that is anoynted, shall bringe of hys bloude into the tabernacle of wytnesse, and the preast shall dyppe hys synger in the bloude, and spynkle it seuen tymes before the Lord, euen before the vayle. And shall put of the bloude vpon the hornes of the alter, whych is before the Lord in the tabernacle of wytnesse, and shall poure all the bloude vnto the bottom of the alter of burnt offering whych is before the doore of the tabernacle of wytnesse, and shall take all hys fatt from hym, and burne it vpon the alter, and shall do wyth this ponge ore, as he byd wyth the ponge ore for synne: euen so shall he do wyth this. And the preast shall make an attone-ment for them, and it shall be for gent them. And he shall bringe this ponge ore wythout the doore, and burne hym as he burned the fyrst. For it is an oblacyn for the synne of the congregacyon.

When a Lord synneth, and comytteth thorow ignorance any of these thynges (whych the Lord hys God hath forbydden to be done in his commaundementes) and hath offended. And if this synne be shewed vnto him whych he hath done, he shall bringe his offering: euen an hee goat wythout blemyshe and laye hys hande vpon the head of the hee goat, and kyll it in the place where the burnt offering is vsed to be kyllid before the Lord. For it is a synneoffering. And let the preast take of the bloude of the offering wyth his synger, & put it vpon the hornes of the burnt offering alter, and powre hys bloude vnto the bottom of the burnt offering alter, and burne all hys fatt vpon the alter, as the fat of the peaceofferynges. And the preast shall make an attone-ment for hym, as concerning his synne, and it shall be for geuen hym.

If one of the comen people of the lande synne thorow ignorance, and comytte any of the thynges whych the Lord hath forbydden in hys commaundementes to be done, and so hath trespassed: If this synne whych he hath synned, come to his knowledge he shall bringe for hys offering, a hee goat from amonge the flockes, wythout blemyshe for hys synne whych he hath synned, and laye hys hande vpon the head of the offeringe, ad lieke in the place of burnt offeringes. * And the preast shall take of the blood therof with hys synger, and put it vpon the hornes of þ burnt offeringe alter, and poure all the blood vnto the botome of the alter, and shall take awaye all hys fat, as the fat of the peace offeringes is taken awaye. And the preast shall burne it vpon the alter, that it maye be a sweete sauoure vnto the Lorde, & the preast shall make an attonement for hym, and it shall be forgiven hym.

¶ And yf he bynge a shepe for a synne offeringe, he shall bynge a female without blemyshe, and laye hys hande vpon the head of the offeringe, and lieke it for a syn offeringe in the place where they kyll the burnt offeringe. And the preast shall take of the blood of the offeringe wyth hys synger, and put it vpon the hornes of the burnt offeringe alter, & shall poure the bloude therof vnto the botome of the alter: * And he shall take awaye all the fat therof, as the fat of the shepe of the peace offeringe is wont to be taken awaye. And the preast shall burne it vpon the alter, that it maye be the Lordes burnt sacrifice, and the preast shall make an attonement for hys synne, that he hath commytted, and it shall be forgiven hym.

¶ Of othes. The cleansing of hym that toucheth vncleane thynges. The purgacion of an othe, & of synne done by ignorance.

¶ Yf a soule synne & heare the voyce of swearing, ad is a witnesse: whether he hath sene or knowne of it, yf he haue not vttered it, he shall bere hys synne. Ether yf a soule touche any vnclene thyng: whether it be a carion of an vnclene beast, or of vnclene catell, or vnclene woyme, & is not ware of it: behold, he is vnclene and hath offended. Ether yf he touche any vnclennesse of man (whatsoever vnclennesse it be that a man is wont to be defyled withall) and is not ware of it, and cometh to the knowledge of it, he hath trespassed. Ether yf a soule sweare and pronounceth with his lippes to do euell or to do good (whatsoever it be that a man vleweth to pronounce with an othe) and the thyng be hyd from hym, and cometh to the knowledge of it, and hath offended in one of these. And it shall come to passe that when he hath synned in one of these thynges, he shall confesse that he hath synned in þ thyng. Therfore shall he bynge hys trespass offeringe vnto the Lorde, for hys synne whych he hath synned. A female from the flocke, a lambe or a she goate, for a synne offeringe. And þ preast shall make an attonement for hym, concerning hys synne. * And yf he be not able to bynge such a shepe, he shall bynge for hys trespace whych he hath synned, two turtyn doves or two yonge pygeons vnto the Lorde one for a synne offeringe, and the other for a burnt offeringe. And he shall bynge them vnto the preast, whych shall offer the synne offeringe fyrst, and wyng the necke a lundze of it, but plucke it not cleue of. And he shall spynkle of the bloude of the synne offeringe vpon the syde of the alter: ad the rest of the bloude shall he powze by the botome of the alter: for it is a synne offeringe. And he shall offer the seconde for a burnt offeringe as the maner is: ad so shall the preast make an attonement for hym (for the synne whiche he hath synned) and it shall be forgiven hym. And yf he be not able two byng to turtyn doves or to yonge pygeons, then he that hath synned shall bynge for hys offeringe: the tenth parte of an Ephah of fyne flour for a synne offeringe, but put none oyle thereto, nether put any frankincense thereon, for it is a synne offeringe. And let the preast offer it, and the preast shall take hys handfull of it, for a remembrance therof, & burne it vpon the alter, to be a sacrifice for the Lorde, it is a synne offeringe. And the preast shall make an attonement for him as touching his synne that he hath synned in one of these, and it shall be forgiven. And the remnaunte shall be the prestes, as a meat offeringe.

¶ And the Lord spake vnto Moses, saying: ¶ Yf a soule trespace and synne thoroowe ignorance in thynges that are consecrated vnto the Lorde, let hym bynge for hys trespace vnto the Lorde a ram without blemyshe out of the flockes, valued in money at two cycles after the cycle of the sanctuary, that it maye be for a trespass offeringe. And he shall make amendes for the harme þ he hath done in the holy thyng, and let hym put the fyfth parte more thereto, ad geue it vnto the preast. And the preast shall make an attonement for hym wyth the ram that is for the trespace, and it shall be forgiven hym.

¶ Yf a soule synne and commyt any of these thynges whych are forbydden to be done by the commaundementes of the Lorde: and wyll it not, and hath offended, he shall bere hys synne and shall bynge a ram without blemyshe out of the flocke that is esteemed to be worth a trespass offeringe, vnto þ preast. And the preast shall make an attonement for hym concerning hys ignorance, when in he erred and was not ware, and it shall be forgiven hym. This is the trespass offeringe, whych he offered vnto the Lord for the trespace.

¶ The offeringe for synnes whiche are done with purpose.
The lawe of the burnt offeringes: The fyre must abyde be euermore vpon the auter, The offeringe of blood, and hys manner.

And

And the Lord spake vnto Moses, saying: yf a soule synne and trespasse agaynst the Lord, and denye vnto his neygh-boure that whych was taken hym to kepe, or that was put into his handes, or doth vyolent robbery or wronge vnto his neyghboure, or yf he haue soude that whych was lost, and denyeth it, and sweareth falsely, vpon whatsoe-uer thyng it be that a man dothe, and synneth therein: yf he haue so synned, or trespassed, he shall restore agayne that he toke vyolently a waye, or the wronge whych he dyd or yf whych was deliuered hym to kepe or the lost thyng which he founde, and al that about which he hath sworne falsely, he shall restore it agayne in the whole summe, and shall adde the fyfth parte more thereto, and geue it vnto hym to whome it pertaineth the same daye that he offereth for his trespasse, and let hym brynge for his trespasse vnto the Lord, a Ram without blemyshe out of the flocke (the same is esteemed worth a trespasse offering) vnto the preeast. And the preeast shall make an attonement for hym, before the Lord, & it shall be forgiven him, whatsoever thyng it be that he hath done and trespassed therein.

And the Lord spake vnto Moses, saying: commaunde Aaron and his sonnes, saying: this is the lawe of the burnt offering.
* The burnt offering shall be vpon the barth of the alter all nyght vnto the morninge, & the fyre shall be kyndled on the alter. And the preeast shall put on his linnen albe, and his linnen breeches vpon his fleshe, and take awaye the ashes vpon the whych the fyre consumed the burnt sacrifice in the alter, & he shall put the same besyde the alter, & put of his rayment, & put on other, & carrie the ashes out without the doore vnto a cleane place.

The fyre vpon the alter shall burne still & neuer be put out. But the preeast shall laye wood on it euery day in the morninge, & put the burnt sacrifice vpon it, & he shall burne theron the fat of the peace offerings. The fyre shall euer burne vpon the alter, and neuer go out.

* This is the lawe of the meat offering: whych Aarons sonnes shall brynge before the Lord, euen before the alter: and one of them shall take his handfull of the flour of the meat offering and of the oyle and all the franchencens whych is vpon the meat-offering, and shall burne it vnto a remembrance vpon the alter for a sweete sauoure enue a memorial of it vnto the Lord. And of the rest thereof, shall Aaron and his sonnes eate: vnto the court of the tabernacle of witness they shall eate it. It shall not be ba-ken with leuen. I haue geuen it vnto them for they: porcion of my sacrifices. It is most holy, as is the synne offering and trespasse offering. All the males amonge the chyldre of Aaron shall eate of it: It shall be a statute for euer in youre generacions concernynge the sacrifice of the Lord: let euery one that toucheth it be holy.

And the Lord spake vnto Moses, saying: this is the offering of Aaron & of his sonnes whych they shall offer vnto the Lord in the daye when he is anoynted: the tenth part of an Ephah of flour, for a meat offering perpetuall: halfe in the morninge and halfe at nyght. In the frye pan it shall be made with oyle. And when it is fryed, thou shalt brynge it in, & the baken offerings of thy oblation mynsed small, shalt thou offer for a sweete sauoure vnto the Lord. And the preeast of his sonnes that is anoynted in his steade shall offer it: It is the Lordes duty for euer it shall be burnt all together. For euery meat offering that is made for the preeast, shall be burnt all together, and shall not be eaten.
And the Lord spake vnto Moses, saying: speak vnto Aaron, and vnto his sonnes & saye: This is the lawe of the synne offering.
In the place where the burnt offering is kyl-led, shall the synne offering be kylled before the Lord, for it is most holy. * The preeast that offereth it, shall eat it: In the holy place shall it be eaten: euen in the court of the tabernacle of witness. Roman touche the flesch therof, saue he that is halowed. And who so sprinketh of the bloude therof vpon any garmente, thou shalt washe it in the holpe place, there as it is sprinkled vpon. * But the earthen pot that it is sodden in, shall be broken. And yf it be sodden in a brasen pot, it shall be scowred, and rynsed in the water. All the males amonge the preeastes shall eate therof, for it is most holy. And no synne offryng, whose bloude is brought into the tabernacle of witness to reconceale with al in the holy place, shall be eaten: but shall be burnt in the fyre.

The vii. Chapter.

* Trespasse offerings. Arne offerings and peace offerings. The fat and the bloude maye not be eaten.

And this is the lawe of trespasse offryng: it is most holy. In the place where they kyl the burnt offering, shall they kyl the trespasse offering also, & his bloude shall be sprinkled rounde aboute vpon the alter. All the fat therof shall they offer: the roumpe and the fat therof that conereth inwardes, and the ii. kidneys, and the fat that is on them and vpon the lynes: and the aboundance that is on the luer shall thou take awaye with the kidneys, & the preeast

preaste shall burne them vpon the alter, to be a sacrifice vnto the Lorde: for it is a tref passcofferynge.

All the males amonge the preastes shall eate therof in the holy place, for it is moost holy. As the synneoffrynge is, so is the tref passcofferynge, one lawe serueth for both, & it shalbe the preastes that reconpleth therewith. And the preast that offreth any mas burntoffrynge, shall haue the skynne of the burntoffrynge which he hath offered. And all the meatoffrynge that is baken in the oven and that is dressed vpon the greddren, and in the fryenge pan, shalbe the preastes that offreth it. And euery meatoffrynge that is myngled with oyle & that is drye, shal pertayne vnto all the sonnes of Aaron, ad one shall haue as much as another. This is the lawe of the peaceoffrynge, whan it is offered vnto the Lorde. If he offer it to geue thanches, he shal byynge vnto his thanckoffring sweete cakes myngled with oyle, and sweete wafers anoynted with oyle, & cakes myngled with oyle of fyne flour fryed. He shall byynge hys offrynge vpon cakes of leuend bzeade for hys peaceoffrynges to geue thanches: and of all the sacrifice he shall offer one for an heueoffrynge vnto the Lorde and it shalbe the preastes that spynckled þ bloude of the thanckoffrynge in his peaceoffrynges shalbe eaten the same daye that it is offered. And let hym laye vpon nothyng of it vntyll the morowe. But if he offer hys sacrifice by reason of a vowe, or of his owne frewyl, it shalbe eat the same daye that he offreth hys sacrifice. And if ought remaine vntyll the morowe it maye be eaten: but as moche of the offered fleshe as remaineth vnto the thyrde daye, shalbe burnt with fyre. And if any of the flesch of hys peaceoffrynges be eaten in the thyrde daye, then shall he that offreth it, obtayne no fauoure nether shall it be rekened vnto him, but shalbe an abhominacion. Therefore the soule that eateth of it shall beare his synne.

And the flesch that toucheth any vncleane thyng shall not be eaten, but burnt with fyre: and all that be cleane, shal eate þ flesch. But if any soule eate of þ flesch of the peaceoffrynge that pertayneth vnto the Lorde haupnge his vncleanness vpon him: þ same soule shal perishe from amonge his people. Moreover, þ soule that doth touche any vncleane thyng, þ is of the vncleanness of man or of any vncleane beast or any abhominacion that is vncleane: & then eate of the flesch of the peaceoffrynge which pertayneth vnto the Lorde þ soule shall perishe from his people.

And þ Lorde spake vnto Moyses, saying: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel and saye.

* Ye shall eate no maner fatt of oxen of

shepe and of goates: neuer the later the fatt of the beast that dyeth alone, and the fatt of that which is tozned wyth wyld beasts, shalbe occypied in any maner of vse, but ye shal in no wise eate of it. For whosoever eateth the fatt of the beast of wyche men vse to byynge an offrynge vnto the Lorde, that soule that eateth it shall perishe from his people. Moreover, ye shall eate no maner of bloude, whether it be of soule or of beast. Whatsoever soule it be that eateth any maner of bloude, the same soule shal perishe from hys people.

And the Lorde talked with Moyses, saying: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel and saye: he that byyngeth his peaceoffryng vnto the Lorde, let him byynge his gyfte vnto the Lorde of his peaceoffrynge: let his owne handes byynge the offrynges of the Lorde: cut the fatt wyth the best shal be byynge: that the best maye be waued for a waueoffrynge before the Lorde. And the preast shal burne the fatt vpon the alter, and the best shalbe Aarons and his sonnes. And the ryght shoul der shal ye geue vnto the preast, for an heue offrynge, of your peaceoffrynges. The same that offreth the bloude of þ peaceoffrynges and the fatt, amonge the sonnes of Aaron, shal haue the ryght shoul der for hys parte, for the wauebeste and the heue shoul der haue I taken of the chyldren of Israel euen of theyr peaceoffrynges, and haue geuen it vnto Aaron and vnto hys sonnes: by a statute for euer of the chyldren of Israel.

This is the anoyntyng of Aaron and þ anoyntyng of his sonnes in the sacrifice of the Lorde, in the daye when he offered the to be preastes vnto the Lorde. And these be the sacrifices which the Lorde commaunded to be geue them (in the daye of theyr anoyntyng) of the chyldren of Israel, by a statute for euer in theyr generacions. This is the lawe of the burntoffrynge and of the meatoffrynge, and of the sacrifice for synne and trespass, for consecration & for the peaceoffrynge: which the Lorde commaunded Moyses in the mount of Synai, when he commaunded the chyldren of Israel to offer theyr sacrifices vnto the Lorde in the wyldernes of Synai.

The viii. Chapter.

The anoyntyng of Aaron and his sonnes.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses saying: take Aaron and his sonnes with him, and the vestures and the anoyntyng oyle, & a ponge ore for synne, and two rammes, & a basket with sweete bzead: & gather thou all the congregation together vnto the doore of the tabernacle of wytnesse. And Moyses dyd as the Lorde commaunded hym and him, and the people were gathered together vnto the doore of the tabernacle of witness. And Moyses sayde vnto the congregacyon: this is the thyng which the Lorde commaunded to be done.

And Moyses brought Aarō & his sonnes, and washed them with water, and put vpon hym the albe, & gyrded hym with a gyrdle, & put vpon him the tuncle, ^(of palowe spike) and put f Ephod thereon, whych he gyrded wyth the broder gyrdell that was in the Ephod, and bounde it vnto hym therwyth. And he put the best lappe thereon, ad put in the best lappe Arim & thumim. And he put the mytter vpon hys head, and put vpon the mytter (euen vpon the forefrent of his face) the golden plate of the holpe crowne, as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

And Moyses toke the anoyntynge oyle, and anoynted the Tabernacle and all that was therein, and sanctified them, and spynkled therof vpon the alter seuen tymes, and anoynted the alter and all hys vessels, f lauer & his fote, to sanctifye the ^(wyth the oyle.) And he powred of the anoyntynge oyle vpon Aarons head, and anoynted him, to sanctifye hym. And Moyses brought Aarons sonnes, & put ables vpon them, and gyrded them with gyrdels, & put bonettes vpon their heads: as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

And he brought the ponge ore for synne, And Aaron and his sonnes put their hādes vpon the head of the pōge ore that was for synne. And Moyses slewe hym, & toke of the bloude, which he put vpon the hornes of the alter rounde about with his synger, & purified it, and powred the bloude vnto the bottom of the alter, & sanctified it, and reconyled it. And he toke all the fatt that was vpon the inwardes, and the abundaunce of the lyuer and the two kydneys, and theyr fat, & Moyses burned it vpon the alter. But the ponge ore and hys hyde, his flesch ad hys donge, he burnt wyth fyre wythout f hoost as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

And he brought the ram for the burnt offryng, and Aarō and hys sonnes put theyr hādes vpon the head of the ram, whych Moyses kyled, and spynkled f bloude vpon the alter rounde about, and Moyses cut the ram in peces and burnt the head, the peces & the fatt, and washed the inwardes ad the legges in water, and Moyses burnt the ram euey wyth vpon the alter, for a burnt sacrifice that it might be a swete sauoure, and an offryng vnto the Lorde, as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

And he brought the other ram, namely the ram of consecraciō ^(of the prestes) & Aaron & hys sonnes put theyr hādes vpon the head of the ram: which Moyses slewe, & toke of the bloude of it, and put it vpon the rype of Aarons ryght eare, & vpon the thombe of his ryght hāde, & vpon the great too of his ryght fore. And Moyses brought Aarōs sonnes, & put of the bloude ^(of the ram) on f rype of the ryght eare of the, & vpon the thōbes of theyr ryght handes, and vpon the greates toores of theyr ryght fete, and Moyses spynkled the bloude vpon the alter rounde about.

And he toke the fatt and the rounpe, and all the fat that was vpon the inwardes, and the abundaunce of the lyuer, and f. ii. kydneys w theyr fatt, & the ryght shoulder. And out of the basket of swete breade f was befoze the Lorde, he toke one swete cake of oyled breade, & one wafer, & put the on the fat & vpon the ryght shoulder: & put al together vpon Aarōs hādes, & vpon hys sonnes hādes, & waued it a waueoffring befoze the Lorde. And Moyses toke them from of theyr handes, & burnt them vpon the alter, eue vpon the burnt offryng alter: for it was the sacrifice of consecracyn, for a swete sauoure and sacrifice vnto the Lorde. And Moyses toke the breaste and waued it for a waueoffring befoze the Lorde, for it was of the ram of the consecracyn, & it was Moyses parte, as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

And Moyses toke of f anoyntynge oyle, and of the bloude which was vpon the alter, and spynkled it vpon Aarō and vpon hys vestimētes, vpon hys sonnes & on hys sonnes vestimētes with him, and sanctified Aarō, hys vestures & his sonnes, & hys sonnes vestures wyth hym. And Moyses sayde vnto Aaron and hys sonnes: bope f slepe in the doore of the tabernacle of witness, and there ^{(eate it wyth the breade that is in the basket of consecracyn, as I commaunded,} sayinge: Aarō and hys sonnes shall eate it: and that which remayneth of f breade, shall ye burne wyth fyre.

And ye shall not departe from the doore of f tabernacle of witness. vii. dayes, vntyll the dayes of youre consecraciō be at an ende. For vii. dayes shall be fpl youre hāde as he dyd thys daye: euen so the Lorde hath commaunded to do, to recōyle you withal. Therfoze shall ye abyde in the doore of the tabernacle of witness daye and night seue dayes longe: & kepe the watche of the Lorde and ye shall not dpe: for so I am commaunded. And so Aarō & his sonnes dyd all thynges whych the Lorde commaunded by the hande of Moyses.

The ix. Chapter.

The first offrynges of Aaron, Aaron blessed the people, the glory of the Lorde is shewen.

And it fortuneth that in the ryght daye, Moyses called Aaron and his sonnes, and the elders of Israhel: & sayd vnto Aaron: take the a calfe, a pōge one out of the droue, for synne, and a ram for for a burnt offering: both without blemish, and bringe the before the Lorde. And vnto the childre of Israel thou shalt speake, saying: take ye an he goate for synne, & a calfe and a lambe both two of a yeare olde, without blemish for a burnt offering, & an ore & a ram for peace offerings, to offer before the Lorde, & a meat offering mingled with oyle for to daye the Lorde will appeare vnto you. And they brought that which Moses commanded before the tabernacle of witness, and all the congregacion came and stode before the Lorde. And Moses sayd: this is the thing, which the Lorde commanded that ye shulde do: and the glorie of the Lorde shall appeare vnto you. * And Moses sayd vnto Aaron: go vnto the alter and offer thy sacrifice for synne, and make an attonement for the and for the people: & thou shalt offer the offering of the people, to receyue them, as the Lorde commanded.

and. vii. 8

Aaron therfore went vnto the alter, and slewe the calfe which he had for synne. And the sonnes of Aaron brought the bloude vnto him, and he dypte his finger in the bloude and put it vpon the hornes of the alter, and powred the bloude vnto the bosome of the alter. But the fat and the two kidneies & the abudaunce of the lyuer of the synne offering, he burnt vpon the alter as the Lorde commanded Moses: The fleshe & the hyde he burnt with fyre without the hooft. And he slewe the burnt offering, * and Aarons sonnes brought vnto hym the bloud, which he spynkled rounde aboute vpon the alter. And they brought the burnt offering vnto him with the peeces thereof, and the head: and he burnt it vpon the alter, and dyd walke in wardes and the legges, and burnt them vpon the burnt offering in the alter.

* Lev. xiii. 8

And then he brought the peoples offering, takinge the goate that the people had for sacrifice of synne, and slewe it and offered it for synne, as he dyd the first. And brought the burnt offering, and offered it as the manner was * and brought the meat offering, and fylled hys hande thereof, and burnte it vpon the alter, besyde the burnt sacrifice of the morninge.

* Lev. xi. 8

He slewe also the ore & the ra for the peace offering, that the people had for them selues: and Aarons sonnes brought vnto him the bloude which he spynkled vpon the alter rounde about, and toke the fat of the ore and of the ram, theroumpe, and the fat that couereth the inwardes and the kidneies and the abudaunce of the lyuer: and they put the fat vpon the brestes, and he burnte the fat vpon the alter: but the brestes and the ryght shoulders Aaron waied for a waue offering before the Lorde, as the Lorde commanded the people, and blessed the, and came downe from offering of the synne offering, burnt offerings and peace offerings. And Moses & Aaron went into the tabernacle of witness and came out, and blessed the people, and the glorie of the Lorde appeared vnto all the people. * And there came a fyre out from before the Lorde and consumed vpon the alter the burnt offering and the fat. Which when all the people sawe they gaue thanks, and fell on they faces.

And Moses. And Aaron lyfte vp his hande ouer

The .x. Chapter.

* Nadab & Abihu are slayne. Israel mouereth for them. The high priestes are to be doon wyne.

And * Nadab and Abihu, the sonnes of Aaron, toke ether of them hyss calfe, and put fyre therein, and put censur there vpon, and offered straunge fyre before the Lorde: which he commanded them not, & there went a fyre out from the Lorde, and consumed them, and they dyed before the Lorde. Then Moses sayde vnto Aaron: this is it that the Lorde spake, sayinge: I will be sanctified in them that come nye me and be fore all the people I will be glorified. And Aaron helde his peace. And Moses called Eliael and Elisapham the sonnes of Oziel the vncle of Aaron, and said vnto the: come on, carpe your brethren from the holy place out of the hooft. And they went to the, and carped them in theyr albes out of the hooft, as Moses had sayde.

And Moses sayde vnto Aaron and vnto Eleazar and Ithamar his sonnes: * vncouer not your heades, neither rent youre clothes, lest ye dye, and lest wrath come vpon all the people: But let youre brethren shole house of Israel betwepe the burninge whiche the Lorde hath kyndled. And go not ye out fro the doore of the tabernacle of witness, lest ye dye: for the anoyntinge oyle of God is vpon you. And they dyd as Moses sayd.

And the Lorde spake vnto Aaron, saying: Thou shalt not dryncke wyne and stronge dryncke, thou and thy sonnes that are with the: when ye go into the tabernacle of witness, lest ye dye. Let it be a lawe for euer thow rowe out your generacions, and ye maye put difference betwene holy & unholy, betwene vncleane & cleane, & ye may teach the children of Israel all the statutes which whych the Lorde hath spokē vnto them by the bande of Moyses.

C And Moyses sayde vnto Aaron and vnto Eleazar and Ithamar hys sonnes þ were left: take the meatofferynge that remaineth of the sacrifice of the Lorde, and eate it wythoute leuen besyde the alter: for it is moost holy: ye shall eate it in the holy place, because it is thy dutye and thy sonnes duty of the sacrifices of the Lorde: for so I haue commaunded. And the wauebreast and heuethoulder shall ye eate in a cleane place: þ and thy sonnes and thy daughters wth the. For they be thy dutye & thy sonnes dutye geue out of the peaceofferynges of the chyldre of Israel. The heuethoulder and the wauebreast shall they byngne in wth the sacrifices of the fat, to waue it before the Lorde, and it shall be thine and thy sonnes with the: by a lawe for euer as the Lorde hath commaunded.

D And Moyses sought the goate that was offered for synne, and se, it was burnt. And he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar the sonnes of Aaron, whych were left alpye, saying: wherfore haue ye not eate the synne offerynge in the holy place, seynge it is moost holy: and God hath graue it you, to beare the synne of the congregacyon, to make agreement for them before the Lorde: Beholde, the bloude of it was not brought in within the holy place. Ye shoulde haue eate it in the holy place, as I commaunded. And Aaron sayde vnto Moyses: beholde, this daye haue they offered they synneofferynge and they burnt offerynge before the Lorde, and it is chauficed me after thys maner. And yf I had eaten the sacrifice to daye, shulde it haue bene accepted in the syght of the Lorde? And when Moyses hearde that, he was content.

The. xi. Chapter.

Of beastes, which be cleane, and which be vncleane.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses and Aaron and sayde vnto them: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, and say * these are the beastes which ye shall eate, amonge all the catell that are on the earth: whatsoeuer parteth the hoofe, and deuydeth it into two clawes, and chaweth cud amonge the beastes, that shall ye eate. Neuerthelesse, these shall ye not eate, of them that chewe cud, and deuydeth the hoofes: as is the camell, which chaweth cud, but he deuydeth not þ hoofe, therefore is he vncleane vnto you, euen so the coney, whych chaweth the cud but deuydeth not the hoofe: he is vncleane to you. And þ hare though he chaweth þ cud, yet because he deuydeth not the hoofe, he is therfore vncleane to you. And agayne, the swyne, though he deuydeth the hoofe into two clawes, yet he chaweth not the cud. He is vncleane to you. Of theyr flesch shall ye not eate, and theyr carcases shall ye not touche, but lette them be vncleane to you.

B These shall ye eate of all that are in the waters: whatsoeuer hath synnes and scales in the waters, sees and rpuers; that shall ye eate. And all that haue not synnes and scales in the see and rpuers, of al that moue and lyue in the waters, let them be abhominacyon vnto you: Ye shall not eate of theyr flesch, but abhorre theyr carcases. Let all þ haue no synnes nor scales in the waters, be abhominable vnto you.

C These are they whych ye shall abhorre amonge the foules, & þ ought not to be eaten, for they are an abhominacyon. The eagle, þ goshauke, & the cozmozaur, the vultur and the hype after hys kynde, and all ranens after they kynde, the eltrych, þ myght crowe, þ coochowe, and the owle after hys kynde, the falcon, the storcke, the great oule, the bakke, the pellycane, the pye, the heron, the Jape after hys kynde, the lapwinge: & the swalowe. Let all foules that crepe and goo vpon all foure, be an abhominacyon vnto you.

D Yet these maye ye eate, of euery creeping thinge that hath wynges & goo apon foure fete: euen those that haue knees about vpon theyr fete, to lepe wth all vpon the erthe, euen these of them ye maye eate * the. * Arbe after hys kynde: the * Sciaam after hys kynde: the * Hargoll after hys kynde, and the * Hagab after hys kynde. All other foules that moue and haue foure fete, shall be abhominacyon vnto you. In loche ye be vncleane, and whosoener toucheth the carcas of them, shall be vncleane vnto the euen: and whosoener bereth the carcas of them, shall walke hys clothes, and be vncleane vntyll euen.

E And euery beast that hath hoofe and deuydeth it not into two clawes, ner chaweth cud, suche are vncleane vnto you: euery one þ toucheth them, shall be vncleane.

And what soeuer goeth vpon hys handes amonge all maner beastes that goo on all foure fete, suche are vncleane vnto you: and who so doth touche theyr carcas * shall be vncleane vntyll the euen. And he that beareth the carcas of them, shall walke hys clothes, and be vncleane vntyll the euen, for so che are vncleane vnto you.

And let these also be vncleane to you amonge the thinges that crepe vpon the erth, the vrasell, and the moule, and the toade, after they kynde, the hedgehogge, the stello, the lacerte, the mayle, and the melle: these are vncleane to you amonge all that crepe: whosoener doth touche them when they be dead,

And what soeuer any of the dead carkasses of the doth fall vpon, shalbe vncleane: whether it be vessel of wood, or raymet, or skynne, or bagge or whatsoeuer vessel it be that any worke is wrought in. I All maner of erthe vessel wherinto any of them falleth, shalbe vncleane, wyth all that therein is: and it shalbe brokē. All maner meat also that is vled to be eatē of any such water come vpon, it shalbe vncleane. And all maner drynke that is vled to be drynke in al maner such vessels, shalbe vncleane. And euery thyng that the carcase falleth vpon, shalbe vncleane: whether it be ouen or kettel, let it be brokē. For they are vncleane, and shalbe vncleane vnto you: Auert the later, yet the fountaynes and welles & collectiō of waters shalbe cleane still. And who so toucheth the carkasses, shalbe vncleane.

Of the deade carkase of any such fall vpon any seed vled to sow, it shall yet be cleane still: but and if any water be powred vpon the seed, and a deade carkasse fall thereon, it shalbe vncleane vnto you.

G Let euery creeping thyng that creepeth vpon the earth be an abomination, and not be eaten. Whatsoeuer goeth vpon the best and whatsoeuer goeth vpon four, or that hath moose among al creeping thynges that crepe vpon the earth, of that ye eat not for they are abominable. Ye shal not make your soules abominable with nor thyng that creepeth, neither make your selues vncleane wyth them: that ye shulde be defyled thereby. For I am the Lorde your God. Be sanctified therefore, and ye shalbe holpe. For I am holy: and ye shal not defyle your soules wyth any maner of creeping thyng, that creepeth vpon the earth. ¶ The. xii. Chapter.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, sayenge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel and say: if a woman hath conceaued, and borne a manchild, she shalbe vncleane seven dayes: euen in the manner as when she is put a parte in time of her natural disease. And in the eighth daye the fleshe of the childes foreskynne shalbe cut awaye. And she shall then continue in the bloude of her purgynge thre and thirtie dayes. She shall touch no halowed thyng nor come into the sanctuary, vntyl the tyme of her purgynge be out. If she beare a maydechild, she shalbe vncleane two weekes, as when she hath her naturall dyscase. And she shall continue in the bloude of her purgynge thre scoze and fyve dayes.

* And when the dayes of her purgynge are out: whether it be for a sonne or for a daughter, she shal bringe a labe of one yere olde for a burnt offering, and a ponge pyged or a turtill doue for synne vnto the doore of the Tabernacle of witness and vnto the priest: whych shall offer them before the Lorde, and make an attonement for her and she shalbe purged of the issue of her bloude. * And this is the lawe for her that hath borne a male or female. But and if she be not able to bringe a lambe, she shal bringe two turtills or two ponge pygons: the one for the burnt offering, and the other for synne.

And the priest shall make an attonement for her, and she shalbe cleane.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ The priestes must iudge who are Lepers.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses and Aaron sayenge: when there appeareth a rylunge in any mans flesh, ether a scabbe, or a gylstring whete: and the plage of leprosy be in the skynne of his fleshe, he shall be brought vnto Aaron the priest, or vnto one of his sonnes the priestes: and the priest shall looke on the soze in the skynne of his fleshe. And when the heare in the soze is turned vnto whete, & the soze also seme to be lower the the skynne of his fleshe it shalbe a plage of leprosy, and the priestes shal looke on hym, and iudge hym vncleane.

If there be but a whete plecte in the skynne of his fleshe, and seme not to be lower then the skynne, nor the heare thereof is turned vnto whete, the priest shall shut hym vpon seven dayes. And the priest shal looke vpon hym agayn the seventh day: And if the plage seme to him to abyde still, & the plage growe not in the the skynne, the preast shall shut hym vp yet vii. dayes mo. And the preast shall loke on hym agayne the. vii. day. The yf the plage be darker, & not growen in the skynne, the preast shall iudge him cleane, for it is but a shyft. And he shall washe his clothes, & be cleane. But yf the scabbe growe in the skynne after that he is sene of the preast, & iudged cleane, he shall be sene of the preast agayne. Yf the preast se the scabbe be growen abrode in the skynne, the preast shall make him vncleane: for it is a leprosy.

¶ When the plage of the leprosy is in a man he shall be brought vnto the preast, and the preast shall se hym. And yf the rpyng be whete in the skynne, and haue made the beare whete, and ther be rawe flesh in the soze it shal be an olde leprosy in the skynne of his fleshe. And the preast shall make hym vncleane, and shall not shutte hym vp seynge he is vncleane.

¶ Yf a leprosy breake out abrode in the skynne, & couer all the skynne, fro his heed to his foote, wher soeuer the preast loketh, and the preast loke vpon him. And yf the leprosy haue couered all his fleshe, he shall iudge the plage to be cleane because it is all turned into whitenesse, & he shall be cleane. But yf ther be rawe flesh on hi wher he is sene, he shall be vncleane. And the preast shall se the rawe flesh, and declare him to be vncleane. For the rawe flesh is vncleane seynge it is a leprosy. Or yf the rawe flesh departe agayne & chaunge vnto whete, he shall come to the preast, and the preast shall se hym & beholde: Yf the soze be chaunged vnto whete, ^(and couer the whole ma) the preast shall iudge the plage cleane & he shall be cleane: The flesh also in whose skyn ther is a hyle & is healed, & in the place of the hyle there appeare a whete rpyng, ether a rpyng whete & somewhat reddish, it shall be sene of the preast. And yf when the preast seyth hym, it appeare lower than the skynne & the beare therof be chaunged vnto whete the preast shall iudge hym vncleane: for it is a plage of leprosy, broken out of the hyle.

¶ But and yf the preast loke on it and there be no whete heares therein, & yf it be not lower than the skynne, but be darker, the preast shall shut hi vp. vii. dayes. And yf it sprede abrode in the fleshe, the preast shall make him vncleane, seynge it is the plage. But and yf the spot stande styll, and growe not, it is the pynnt of an hote hyle, and therfore the preast shall declare hym to be cleane. Yf there be any fleshe, in whose skynne there is a hote burnyng, and the flesh that burneth haue a whete spotte, somewhat reddish or whete, the preast shall loke vpon it. And yf the beere in that byght spot be chaunged to whete, and it appeare lower than the skynne, it is a leprosy broken out of the burnyng. And therfore the preast shall iudge hym vncleane, seynge it is the plage of leprosy. But yf the preast loke on it & there be no whete beare in the byght spot, and be no lower than the other skynne, but be darker, the preast shall shut hym vp seuen dayes. And the preast shall loke on hym the seuen daye: And yf it be growen abroad in the skynne, the preast shall iudge him vncleane, seynge it is the plage of leprosy. And yf the spot stande styll in it, & growe not in the skynne, but is darcke, it is a rpyng of the burnyng, & the preast shall therfore declare hym cleane, seynge it is the pynnt of the burnyng.

¶ Yf man or woman hath a soze vpon the head or the beard, the preast shall se it. And yf it appeare lower than the skynne, & ther be in it a palowe beare: & the skynne ^(more than it was wont to be) the preast shall iudge him vncleane, seynge that the same frettinge is a token of leprosy vpon the head or berde. And yf the preast loke on the soze of the pynnt, & it seme not lower than the skynne, and that the beare is not blacke, the preast shall shut vp the frettinge soze seuen dayes. And in the seuen daye the preast shall loke on the soze: and yf the soze be not growen, & there be in it no palowe beare, and the soze seme not lower than the skynne, he shall haue: but the place of the soze shall be not spauce, & the preast shall shut vp the soze seuen dayes mo. And in the seuen daye the preast shall loke on the soze: And yf the soze be not growen in the skynne, ner seme lower than the other skynne, the preast shall clyse hym, ad he shall washe his clothes, and be cleane. But yf the soze growe in the fleshe after his clysynge, the preast shall loke on hym. And yf the soze be growne in the skynne, the preast shall not seke for pelowe beare for he is vncleane. But yf he se the pynnt stande styll, and that there is blacke beare growne vtherin, the soze is healed, and he shall be cleane, and the preast shall declare hym to be cleane. Yf there be whete spottes in the skynne of the fleshe of man or woman, the preast shall loke vpon it. And yf the spottes in the skynne of the fleshe be somewhat darcke & whete wythall, ^(he maye be sure, that it is no leprosy) it is a fre-hell growyng in the fleshe: Therfore is he cleane.

¶ And the man (whose heade is desypute of beare, wherby he is made balde) is cleane. And he that hath his beare oute in his foreheade, is foreheade balde and cleane. If there be in the baulde heed or baulde foreheade a whete reddish soze scabbe, there is leprosy spronge vp in his baulde heed or baulde foreheade. And the preast shall loke vpon hym and yf the rpyng of the soze be whete reddish in his baulde heed or baulde foreheade after the maner of leprosy whiche is in the skynne skynne of the fleshe, the he is a leperous man and vncleane. And the preast shall make him vncleane, for the plague therof is in his heade. The leper in whome the plague is, shall haue hys clothes rent, and his head bare and shall put a couerpyng vpon hys lyppe, and shall be called vncleane and despyed. iii. Reg. 7. a

The cloth that the plague of leprosy is in, whether it be linnen or wollen, whether it be in the warpe or woofe of linnen or of wollen: ether in a skynne or any thyng made of skynne, if the dyscase be pale or somewhat reddish in the cloth or skynne: whether it be in the warpe or woofe or any thyng that is made of skynne, then it is a plague of leprosy and shall be shewed vnto the preast. The preast therfore shall see the plague, and shut it vp seven dayes, and loke on the plague the seuenth daye. Whiche if it be increased in the cloth (whether it be in the warpe or woofe, or in a skynne) or in any thyng that is made of skynne it is the leprosy of a frettynge soze: it is vncleane: and that cloth shall be burnte, ether warpe or woofe whether it be wolle or linnen, or any thyng that is made of skynne, wherein the plague is, for it is a frettynge leprosy, it shall be burnt in the fyre.

If the preast see that the plague is not grown in the clothe: ether in the warpe or woofe or in whatsoeuer thyng of skynne it be, the preast shall commaunde them to washe the thyng wherein the plague is, and he shall shut it vp seven dayes mo. And the preast shall loke on the plague agayne, after that it is washed. And if the plague haue not chaunged his colour, and is spreade no further abroad, it is vncleane. Thou shalt burne it in the fyre, for it is fret inward: in part or in altogether. And if the preast see that the plague is darker after that it is washed, he shall rent it out of the cloth, or out of the skynne, or out of the warpe or out of the woofe. And if it appeare any moze in the cloth (ether in the warpe or in the woofe or in any thyng made of skynne) it is a warpyng plague.

Thou shalt burne the plague that is in it. Whoeuer the clothe, ether warpe or woofe or whatsoeuer thyng of skynne it be which thou hast washed, if the plague be departed there from, it shall be washed once agayne: and then shall it be cleane. This is the lawe of the plague of leprosy in a cloth whether it be wollen or linnen: ether in the warpe or woofe, or in any thyng of skynnes, to make it cleane or vncleane.

And the Lord spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: * this is the lawe of the leper in the daye of his clesynge: he shall be brought vnto the preast, and the preast shall go out without the doore, and loke vpon hym. And if the plague of leprosy be healed in the leper, then shall the preast commaunde that he which is to be clesed, bypynge two lypynge byrdes and cleane, and cedar wood, and purple cloth, and psope. And the preast shall commaunde that one of the byrdes be kylled in an earthen vessel and vpon rennyng water. And he shall take the lypynge byrde with the cedar wood, the purple and the psope, and shall bypynge them and the lypynge byrde in the bloude of the slayne byrde, vpon the rennyng water, and spynke vpon hym (that must be clesed of his leprosy) seven tymes, and clesse hym, and shall let the lypynge byrde goo fre into the felde.

And he that is clesed, shall washe his clothes, and haue of al hys heare, and wash hym selfe in water, that he maye be cleane. And after that shall he come into the doore, and shall tary without hys tent seven dayes but in the seuenth day he shall haue of al his heare, namely, hys head, hys bearde and his browes: euen all hys heare shall haue of. And he shall washe his clothes & hys fleshe in water and he shall be cleane.

In the epyght daye he shall take two lambs wythoute blemyshe and an yewe lambe of a yere olde wythout blemyshe, and the tenthdeales of fyne flour for a meatofferyng mingled wyth oyle and a logge of oyle. And the preast shall make hym cleane, shall bypynge the ma that is to be made cleane and those thynges, before the Lord, euen before the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the preast shall take one lambe, & offer hym for trespass, and the logge of oyle, and waue the before the Lord. And he shall see the lambe in the place where the synneckeryng and the burnt offeryng are slayne: eue in the holy place.

For as the synneckeryng is, euen so is the trespass offeryng the preast: syngge it is moost holy.

And the preast shall take of the bloude of the trespass offeryng, & put it vpon the rymme of the epyghte care of hym that is to be clesed, and vpon the thombe of hys epyghte hande and vpon the great too of hys epyghte foot. The preast shall take of the logge of oyle, & powre it into the palme of hys left hande, and bypynge his epyghte synger in the oyle that is in hys left hande, and spynke of the oyle with his synger seven tymes before the Lord.

Lord. And of the rest of þe oyle that is in his hande, that the þreaste put vpon the tpype of the ryghte eare of hym that is for to be censed, and vpon the thombe of his ryghte hand, and vpon the great too of his ryghte fore, euen vpo the bloude of the trespasseoffrynge. And the remnaunte of the oyle that is in the þreastes hand, he shall powze vpo the head of hym that is for to be censed: and the þreaste shall make an attonement for him before the Lord.

And the þreaste shall offer the synneoffrynge, and make an attonement for hym that is to be censed, for his uncleynesse.

And then shall he kyll þe burnt offering, and the þreaste shall offre the burnt offering & the meateoffrynge vpon þe altar: & þe þreaste shall make an attonement for hym, and he shall be cleane. * If he be pooze, and can not get so moche, he shall take one lambe for a trespasseoffring to waue it for his censing, and a tenth deale of fyne flour myngled w oyle for a meateoffring, and a logge of oyle,

And two turtill doves or two younge pyngons, suche as he is able to get, wherof the one shall be for synne, & the other for a burnt offering. And he shall byng them the viii. daye for his censing vnto the þreaste before the doore of the tabernacle of wytnesse before the Lord.

And the þreaste shall take þe lambe that is for the trespasse, and the logge of oyle, & waue them before the Lord. And he shall kyll the lambe for the trespasse, & the þreaste shall take of the bloude of the trespasseoffrynge, and put it vpon the tpype of his ryghte eare that is to be censed, and vpon the thombe of his ryghte hande, and vpo þe greete too of his ryghtefote. And þe þreaste shall powze of the oyle into his ryghtehade and the þreaste shall wyth his synger sprinke of the oyle that is in his lefthade, seven tymes before the Lord.

And the þreaste shall put of the oyle that is in his hade vpon the tpype of the ryghte eare of hym that is to be censed, and vpon the thombe of his ryghte hande, and vpon the greete too of his ryghtefote: euen in the place where the bloude of the trespasseoffrynge was put. And thereste of þe oyle that is in the þreastes hade, he shall put vpon the head of hym that is to be censed: þe maye make an attonement for him before þe Lord. And he shall offer one of the turtill doves or of þe younge pyngons, soche as he can get: the one for a synneoffrynge, and the other for a burnt offering wyth þe meateoffryng. And the þreaste shall make an attonement for hym that is to be censed before þe Lord. Thys is the lawe of hym in whome is the plage of leprosy, and whose hande is not able to get that whiche pertayneth to his clensing.

And the Lord spake vnto Moses and Aaron sayinge: When ye be come vnto the lande of Canaan which I geue you in possession. And yf I put þe plage of leprosy in a house of the lande of youre possession, he that oweth the house shall come, and tel the þreaste, sayinge: me thynke that there is as it were a leprosy in the house. And þe þreaste shall comaunde the to emptye the house before the þreaste go into it to se the plage: that all that is in the house be not made vncleane, and then must the þreaste go into, se the house.

If the þreaste also se that the plage is in the walles of the house, and that there be holowe strakes pale or red which seme to be lower then the wall it selfe, the þreaste shall go oute at the house doores, and shut vp the house seven dayes. And they þreaste shall come agayne þe seuenth daye, and yf he se that the plage be increased in the walles of the house, the þreaste shall commaunde them to take awaye the stones in which þe plage is, & let them cast them into a foule place without the cytye, and he shall commaunde the house to be scraped wythin rounde about, and powze out þe duste (that they scrape of) wythout the cytye into a foule place. And they shall take other stones, and put the in the places of those stones, & other moztter, to plaster the house wythal. And yf the plage come agayne and bryake oute in the house, after that he hath taken awaye the stones and scraped the walles of the house, and after that he hath playstered þe house a newe: the þreaste shall come and se it. And yf he perceau that the plage hath the growne further in the house, it is a frettinge leprosy in the house. It is therfore vncleane. And he shall bryake downe the house. And the stones of it, and the tymber therof, and all the moztter of the house, shall be carpe out of þe cytye vnto a foule place. Moreover, he that goeth into the house all the whyle that it is shut vp, shall be vncleane vntill the euē. he that slepeth in the house, shall washe his clothes: he lyke wyse that eateth in the house, shall washe his clothes.

And yf the þreaste come and se, that the plage hath spede no further in þe house (after that it is newe plastered) þe þreaste shall iudge that house cleane, because þe plage is healed. And let him take to cense the house wythall: two byzdes, cedar wodd, purple clothe and ysope. And he shall kyll one of þe byzdes in an erthe vessel & vpon runnyng water: & take the cedar wodd, & the ysope, & the purple w þe runnyng byzde, & dryppe them in the bloude of the slayne byzde, and in the runnyng water, and sprinkle the house seven tymes, & cense the house wyth þe bloude

of the byrde and with the runnyng water, with the lpyng byrde, with cedar wodd, and the plope, ad the purple clothe. But he shall let the lpyng byrde flic oute of the towne into the byrde felde, and so make an attonemet for the house, & it shalbe cleane. Thys is the lawe for all maner plage of leprose and breakyng oute, and of the leprose of clothe and house: for a swellynge for a scabbe, and for a whete blyster. To teache whā it must be made vncleane & cleane. Thys is the lawe of leprose.

The .xv. Chapter.

The maner of purgynge the vncleane both of men and women.

Ad the Lord spake vnto Moyses and Aaron sayynge: Speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, & saye vnto them: Whosoever hath a runnyng yssue out of hys fleshe, is vncleane by reason of yssue. And thys shall be the token of hys vncleanness in hys yssue: when he is vncleane. If hys fleshe rone, or yf hys fleshe congele by the reason of hys yssue, then is it vncleane. Every couche wheron he lyeth that hath the yssue, is vncleane, and every thyng wheron he lyeth, is vncleane: Whosoever toucheth hys couche, shall washe his clothes, & bath hym selfe in water, & be vncleane vntill the eue.

And he that lyteth on any thyng wheron he sat that hath the yssue, shall washe his clothes, and bath hym selfe in water, & be vncleane vntill the euenyng. He that toucheth the fleshe of him that hath the yssue, shall washe his clothes, and bathe hym selfe in water, and be vncleane vnto the eue. If he also that hath the yssue, lyt vpon hym that is cleane, he shall washe his clothes, & bathe hym selfe in water, and be vncleane vntill the euen. And whatsoeuer he hath vpon hym, shall be vncleane. And whosoever toucheth any thyng that was vnder hym, shall be vncleane vnto the eue. And he that beareth any such thynges, shall washe his clothes, and bath hym selfe in water, and be vncleane vnto the euen. And whosoever he toucheth that hath yssue (& haue not yet washed his handes in water) shall washe his clothes, & bathe hym selfe in water, & be vncleane vnto the euen. * The vessel of erth that he toucheth, which hath the yssue, shall be broken: and all vessels of wodd shall be rused in water.

When he also that hath any yssue, is censed of hys yssue, he shall nombe .vii. dayes for hys censing, & washe his clothes, and bathe his fleshe in runnyng water, and so shall be cleane. And the .viii. daye he shall take to him two turtys or two yonge pygeons, and come before the Lord vnto the doore of the tabernacle of witness, & geue them vnto the priest. And the priest shall offer them: the one for a synne offering, and the other for a burnt offering: and the priest shall make an attonemet for him before the Lord, as concernynge his yssue.

If any mans seede departe from hym in hys slepe, he shall washe his fleshe in water, and be vncleane vntill the eue. And all the clothes and all the furre wherin is suche seede of slepe, shall be washed with water, and be vncleane vnto the euen. And yf he that hath suche and yssue of seed, do ly with a woman, they shall both washe them selues with water, and be vncleane vntill the euen.

If a womans naturall course of bloude do runne, she shall be put aparte .vii. dayes: Whosoever toucheth her, shall be vncleane vnto the eue. And all that she lyeth vpon, in the tyme of hys naturall disease, shall be vncleane lyke as every thyng also that she lyteth vpon, is vncleane. Whosoever toucheth her bedd, shall washe his clothes, and bath hym selfe with water, and be vncleane vnto the euen. And whosoever toucheth any thyng that she sat vpon, shall washe his clothes, and bathe hym selfe in water, & be vncleane vnto the euen: so yf whether he touche her couche or any vessel whereon she bath lyt, he shall be vncleane vnto the euen. * And yf man ly with her, & hys vncleanness come vpon hym, he shall be vncleane .vii. dayes, and all the couche wheron he lyeth shall be vncleane.

* When a womans bloude runneth longe tyme: out of the tyme of her naturall course: or yf it runne beynde hys naturall course, let all the dayes of the yssue be iudged vncleane, eue as the dayes of hys naturall disease. And she shall be vncleane. All her couches wher she lyeth (as longe as her yssue lasteth) shall be as her couche wher she bath hys naturall disease. And whosoever she lyteth vpon, shall be vncleane, as is her vncleanness when she is put aparte. And whosoever toucheth any of these, shall be vncleane, & shall washe his clothes, & bath hym selfe in water, & be vncleane vnto the euen.

And after that she is censed of hys yssue, she shall counte her leue dayes, and after that she shall be cleane. In the .viii. daye she shall take vnto her two turtys or two yonge pygeons, & bringe them vnto the priest before the doore of the tabernacle of witness. And the priest shall offer the one for a synne offering, and the other for a burnt offering: and make an attonemet for her before the Lord, as concernynge the yssue of her vncleanness. Therefore shall he separate the chyldren of Israel from their vncleanness, yf they dye not in their vncleanness: yf they be syle my habitacyon that is amonge them.

Thys is the lawe of hym that hath a runnyng yssue, and of hym whose seed runneth from hym from hym in his flepe, and is defyled therein, and of her, that (for hyr naturall disease) is put a parte, and of whosoever hath a runnyng yssue, whether it be man or woman, and of hym that lyeth wyth her whych is vncleane.

The xvi. Chapter.

What Aaron must do. The cleansing of the sanctuary. Of the feare of the cleansing. Aaron confesseth the synnes of the chyldren of Israel.

And the Lord spake vnto Moses* after the death of the two sonnes of Aarō, when they offered before the Lord. & dyed: And he sayde vnto Moses: speake vnto Aaron thy brother, that he come not at all tymes into the holy place wythin the vayle before the mercysseate, which is vpon the ark, that he dye not. For I will appeare in the cloud vpon the mercysseate.

But with this thyng shall Aaron come into the holy place: euen with a bullock for synne, and with a ram for a burnt offering. He shall put the holy linnen able vpon hym, & shall haue a linnen breeche vpon his fleshe, & shall be girded wyth a linnen gyrdell, & put the linnen mytre vpon his head: These are holy garmentes: therfore shall he washe his fleshe in water, whā he doth put the on. And he shall take of the multitude of the chyldren of Israel, two he goates for synne, and a ram for a burnt offering.

And Aaron shall offer the bullocke for synne, & make an attonement for him, and for his house. And he shall take the two goates, and present them before the Lord at the doore of the tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aaron shall cast lottes ouer the ii. goates: one lotte shall be for the Lord, and the other for the scapegoate. And Aaron shall brynge the goate vpon whych the Lordes lotte fell, and offer hym for synne. But the goate on which the lotte fell to scape, shall be set alyue before the Lord, to reconyle with, and to let him goo (as a scape goate) fre, into the wyldernesse. And Aaron shall brynge his bullocke for synne, and recōyle for him selfe, and for his house, & shall kyll the bullocke for synne.

And he shall take a censur full of burning coles out of the alter before the Lord, and shall fyl the handfull of swete cens, beaten small, and brynge them wythin the vayle, and put the cens vpon the fyre before the Lord: that the cloude of the cens may couer the mercysseate that is vpon the wytnesse, & that he dye not. And he shall take of the bloude of the bullocke, & spynkle it wyth his synger vpon the mercysseate eastwarde: and before the mercysseate shall he spynkle of the bloude wyth his synger seuen tymes.

Then shall he kyll the goate that is the peoples synneoffering, & brynge his bloude wythin the vayle, & doo wyth that bloude, as he dyd wth the bloude of the bullocke, spynklynge it vpon the mercysseate, and before the mercysseate. And he shall reconyle the holy place from the vncleannes of the chyldren of Israel, and from their trespasses in all their synnes. And so shall he doo for the tabernacle of wytnesse that is set amonge them, euen amonge their vncleannes.

And let there be no bodie in the tabernacle of wytnesse, whē he goeth in to make an attonement in the holy place, vntyll he come out. And let hym make an attonement for him selfe and for his houshoulde, and for all the multitude of Israel. And he shall go out vnto the alter & is before the Lord, and reconyle vpon it, & shall take of the bloude of the bullocke, & of the bloude of the goate, and put it vpon the hornes of the altare rounde aboute, and spynkle of the bloude vpon it wyth his synger seuen tymes, and cense it, & halowe it from the vncleannes of the chyldren of Israel.

And when he hath made an ende of reconcyllynge the holy place, and the tabernacle of wytnesse, and the alter, he shall brynge the lyue goate: and Aaron shall put both his handes vpon the head of the lyue goate, and confesse ouer hym all the mysdeades of the chyldren of Israel, and all theyr trespasses, in all their synnes, puttynge them vpon the head of the goate, and sende hym awayne (by the hande of a conuenient man) into the wyldernesse. And the goate shall beare vpon hym all theyr mysdeades vnto the wyldernesse, and he shall let the goate goo fre into the wyldernesse.

And Aaron shall come into the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and put of the linnen clothes which he put on (when he went in into the holy place) and leaue the there. And let him washe his fleshe with water in the holy place, and put on his awne rayment, and then come out, and offer his burnt offering & the burnt offering of the people, and make an attonement for hym selfe and for the people, and the fat of the synoffering shall he burne vpon the alter. And he that carryed forth the goate to Azazel, shall washe his clothes, and bathe his fleshe in water, and then come into the hoste.

And the bullock which is for synne, and the goate that is for synne, (whose bloude was brought in, to cense the holy place) shall one carpe out wythout the host to be burnt in the fyre, with their skynnes, their fleshe & their donge. And he that burneth them shall washe his clothes, and bathe his fleshe in water, and then come into the hoste. And this shall be an ordynance for euer vnto you: that

that in the tenth daye of þe ſeuenth moneth, ye humble your ſoules, and do no worke at all, whether it be one of your ſelues or a ſtraunger that ſoiourneth amonge you, for that daye ſhall þe preſt make an attonement for you to cleaſe you, and that ye maye be cleane from all your ſynnes before þe Lorde. Let it be a Sabbath of reſte vnto you, and ye ſhall humble your ſoules, by an ordinance for euer.

¶ And the preſte that is anoynted, and whole hande was conſecrated (to miniſtre in hyſ fathers ſtede) ſhall make the attonement, and ſhall put on the lynclothes & holy veſtmentes, and reconyle the holy ſanctuary ad the Tabernacle of wytnelle, and ſhall cleaſe þe alter, and make an attonement then, for the preſtes and for all þe people of the congregacyon. And this ſhalbe an euerlaſtyng ordinance vnto you, that he make an attonement for the chyldren of Iſrael for all their ſynnes once a yere: & he ſyd as the Lorde commaunded Moſes.

All ſacrifice muſt be brought to the doore of the tabernacle. To deuylls maye they not offer.

And the Lorde ſpake vnto Moſes, ſayinge ſpeake vnto Aarō and vnto hyſ ſonnes, and vnto all the chyldren of Iſrael, & ſaye vnto them: This is þe thyng which þe Lord hath charged, ſayinge: what man ſoener of þe houſe of Iſrael kylleth an oxe, or lambe or goate in þe doore, or that kylleth it oute of the doore, and bringeth it not vnto þe doore of the tabernacle of wytnelle, to offer an offeringe vnto the Lorde before the dwellinge place of the Lorde, bloude ſhalbe imputed vnto þe man, as though he had ſhed bloude, and that man ſhal be roted out from amonge his people.

Wherefore, when the chyldren of Iſrael bringe their offerings, that they offer in the wyde felde, they ſhulde bringe them vnto þe Lorde: euē vnto the doore of the tabernacle of wytnelle to the preſte, to offer them for peace offerings vnto the Lorde. And þe preſte muſt ſprynkle þe bloude vpon the alter of the Lorde which is before the doore of the tabernacle of wytnelle, and burne the fat for a ſweete ſanoure vnto the Lorde. And let there be no moare offer their offerings vnto deuyls, after whom they haue gone a whoynge. Thys ſhalbe an ordinance for euer vnto them in theyr generacions.

¶ And thou ſhalt ſaye vnto the: whatſoener man it be of þe houſe of Iſrael, or of the ſtraungers whych ſoiourne amonge you þe offereth a burnt offeringe or ſacrifice, & bringeth it not vnto the doore of þe tabernacle of wytnelle to offer it vnto þe Lorde, that man ſhall perſhe from amonge hyſ people. And whatſoener man it be of the houſe of Iſrael or of the ſtraungers that ſoiourne amonge you, that eateth any maner of bloude, I will ſet my face agaynſt that ſoule that eateth bloude, and will deſtroye him from amonge hyſ people: for the lyfe of the fleſhe is in the bloude, and I haue geuen it vnto you vpon the alter, to make an attonement for your ſoules, for bloude ſhal make an attonement for the ſoule. And therfore I ſayde vnto þe chyldren of Iſrael: let no ſoule of you eate bloude. Neyther let any ſtraunger that ſoiourneth amonge you, eate bloude.

And whatſoener man it be of the chyldren of Iſrael or of the ſtraungers that ſoiourne amonge you, whych hunteth and catcheth any beaſt or ſoule þe maye be eaten, let hym powze out the bloude thereof, & couer it with erthe, for the lyfe of all fleſhe is in þe bloude of it, therfore I ſayde vnto þe chyldren of Iſrael: ye ſhall eate the bloude of no maner of fleſhe, for the lyfe of all fleſhe is in þe bloude thereof: whoſoener eateth it, ſhall perſhe. And euery ſoule that eateth it whych dyed alone, or that which was tozned with wyde beaſtes, whether it be one of your ſelues or a ſtraunger, he ſhal waſhe his clothes, and bathe hym ſelfe in water, and be vncleane vnto the euen, and then ſhal he be cleane. Ye ſhall waſhe them not, nor bathe hyſ fleſhe, he ſhall beare hyſ ſynne.

What degrees of hatred maye marie together.

And the Lorde ſpake vnto Moſes, ſayinge: ſpeake vnto the chyldren of Iſrael, and ſaye vnto them: I am the Lorde your God. After the doynges of the lande of Egypte wherein ye dwelt, ſhall ye not doo: and after the doynges of the lande of Canaan, whether I will bringe you, ſhall ye not doo, neyther walke in their ordinances, but do after my iudgements, and kepe my ceremonyes, to walke therein: I am the Lorde your God. Ye ſhall kepe therfore myne ordinances, & my iudgements: which if a man doo, he ſhall lyue in them. I am the Lorde.

Be that none go to hyſ nygheſt kynred, for to vncouer their ſecrettes. I am þe Lorde. * The ſecrettes of thy father, and the ſecrettes of thy mother, ſhalt thou not vncouer: for ſhe is thy mother, therfore ſhalt þe not diſcouer her ſecrettes. * The ſecrettes of thy fathers wyfe ſhalt thou not diſcouer, for it is thy fathers ſecrettes. * Thou ſhalt not diſcouer þe pryncipe of thy ſyſter, the daughter of thy father or of thy mother: whether ſhe be born at home or without. Thou ſhalt not vncouer þe ſecrettes of thy ſones daughter or thy daughters daughter, for that is thyne awne pryncipe. Thou ſhalt not vncouer the ſecrettes of thy fathers wyues daughter.

I am the Lorde. Let the hepe therfore myne ordinaunce, lest they for the same lade synne vpon them, and dye for it, yf they despyle it. The Lorde sanctifye them.

*Exod. xiii. c.

There shall no strainger eate of the holy thynges, neyther a gentyl of the prestes, neyther shal an hyerd seruaunt eate of the holy thynges. But yf the prestes by any soule with money, he shall eate of it, lyke as he is bozne in his house, shall they eate of his bread. If the prestes daughter also be married vnto a strainger, she maye not eate of the halowed beuofferpnynges. Not withstandinge yf the prestes daughter be a wedowe or deuorced & haue no chyld, but is returned vnto her fathers house agayn, she shall eate of her fathers bread, as well as she dyd in her pouth. But there shal no strainger eate thereof. If a man eate of the holy thynges vnto wittingly, he shall put the fyfthe parte ther vnto, & geue it vnto the prestes with the halowed thynges. And the prestes shall not despyle the holy thynges of the chyldren of Israel (which they offer vnto the Lorde) to lade the selues with mysdoynge & trespasses whyle they eate the holy thynges, for the Lorde do halowe them.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses saying: speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes and vnto all the chyldren of Israel, and saye vnto the: whatsoeuer he be of the house of Israel a strainger in Israel, he will offer his sacrifice for all his vowes, and for all his freewill offerings which they wyl offer vnto the Lorde for a burnt offering, ye shall offer (to recompyle your selues) a male without blemyshe of the oren, of the shepe, or of the goates. But whatsoeuer hath a blemyshe, he shall not offer, for ye shall get no fauoure therof.

And whosoever bringeth a peaceoffering vnto the Lorde (according as he is appointed) or a vowe, or a freewill offering, in ore or shepe, that is without defoympte, he shal be accepted. There shal be also no blemyshe therein: blynde, or broke, or wounded, or hane a wen, not be mawnged, or scabbed. Ye shall not offer soche vnto the Lorde, nor put an offering of any soch vnto the Lorde.

An ore or a shepe that hath any member out of proportion mayest offer for a freewill offering, but for a vowe it shall not be accepted. Ye shall not offer vnto the Lorde which is broke, or broke, or plucked out, or cut a waye, nether shal ye make any soch in your lande, nether of a straungers hande shall ye offer breade vnto your God of any soche. Because they corrupte is in them, and they haue defoymte in the selues, and therfore shall they not be accepted for you. And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, saying: When an ore, or a shepe, or a goate is brought forth, it shal be seue dayes vnder the damme. And fro the viii. daye forth, it shall be accepted for a sacrifice vnto the Lorde. And whether it be ore or shepe, ye shall not kylle it, & her pounge both in one daye.

When ye wyl offer a thankofferinge vnto the Lorde, offer it that ye maye be accepted. And the same daye it must be eaten vnto that ye leaue none of it vntyll the morow. I am the Lorde. Therfore shall ye kepe my commaundementes and do them. I am the Lorde. Neyther shall ye polute my holy name, but I wyl be halowed amonge the chyldren of Israel. I am the Lorde which halowe you, and that brought you out of the lande of Egypte, to be your God: I am the Lorde.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, sayinge, speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, and saye vnto them: These are my feastes, wherof ye shall call holy conuocacyons. *The dayes ye shall worke, but the seventh daye is the Sabbath of reaste, an holy conuocacyon: so that ye doo no worke therein, it is the Sabbath of the Lorde, in all your dwellpnynges. These are the feastes of the Lorde, euen holy conuocacyons, wherof ye shall proclayme in theyr seasons: In the xiiii. daye of the fyfthe moneth at euen is the is the Lozde. * Pascheouer. And on the fyfteneth daye of the same moneth is the feaste of sweete breade vnto the Lozde: seven dayes ye muste eate vniuened breade. * In the fyfte daye ye shall haue an holpe conuocacyon: ye shall do no labourous worke therein. But ye shall offer sacrifices vnto the Lozde thow oute these seven dayes, & in the seventh daye is an holy conuocacyon: ye shall do no laborious worke therein.

¶ And the Lozde spake vnto Moyses: say-eng, speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, and saye vnto them * when ye be come into the lande, which I geue vnto you & reape downe the harueste therof, ye shall brynge a shefe of the fyfte frutes of youre harueste vnto the preste, whiche shall haue the shefe befoze the Lozde to be accepted for you: & euen the mo-rowe after the Sabboth, the shefe shall waue it. And ye shall offer that daye when ye haue the shefe, an he lambe without blem-me of a yere olde, for a burnt offeringe vnto the Lozde: & the meate offeringe therof, shalbe made of two tenth deales of fyne flour mingled with oyle, to be a sacrifice vnto the Lozde for a sweete sauoure: and the drynkoffring therof shalbe of wyne, euen the fourth deale of an hyn. And ye shall eate neither bze-ad, nor parched corne, nor surmentye, nor newe corne vntill the selfe same daye that ye haue broughte an offeringe vnto youre God.
Let this be a lawe for euer in youre generations and in all youre dwellinges.

¶ And ye shall counte from the morowe after the Sabath: euen from the daye that ye broughte the shefe of the waue offeringe. vnto the Sabathes complete: euen vnto the moro-we after the seventh Sabboth shall ye number fyfte dayes. And ye shall brynge a new meate offeringe vnto the Lozde. And ye shall brynge oute of youre habitacions two waneloues made of two tenth deales of fyne flour, and that are made wyth leuen for fyfte frutes vnto the Lozde. And ye shall brynge wyth the breade seven laves without defoz-myte of one yere of age, & one yonger one & two rames, whiche shall serue for a burnt offeringe vnto the Lozde, wyth meate offeringes & theyr drynk offeringes, to be a sacri-fyce for a sweete sauoure vnto the Lozde.

¶ The ye shall offre an he goate for a syn-ne offeringe: & two lambes of one yere olde for a peace offeringe. And the preste shall waue them wyth the breade of the fyfte frutes befoze the Lozde, and wyth the two lam-bes. And these holpe thynges of the Lozde, shalbe the prestes. And ye shall proclarme the same daye, that it maye be an holpe conuocation vnto you: ye shall do no labourous worke therein: let it be a lawe for euer in all your dwellinges, and in all youre generations.

* And when ye reape downe youre harueste thou shalt not make cleane ribdances of the felde, nether shalt thou make any aftergatheringe of thy harueste: but shalt leaue it vnto the poore and the straunger. I am the Lozde youre God.

¶ And the Lozde spake vnto Moyses: sayinge, speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, & saye
In the seventh moneth, in the fyfte daye of the moneth shall ye haue reste, & euen the remembraunce of blowynge, an holpe conu-ocacyon: ye shall do no labourous worke therein, but offer sacrifice vnto the Lozde.

¶ And the Lozde spake vnto Moyses sayinge: the * tenth daye also of the selfe seventh moneth is a daye of reconcylynge, therfoze shall it be an holpe conuocacyon vnto you & ye shall humble youre soules, and offer sacri-fyce vnto the Lozde. Ye shall do no worke the same daye, for it is a daye of reconcyl-ing, to make an atonement for you befoze the Lozde your God. For what soeuer soule ye be that humbleth not hym selfe the daye, he shall be destroyed from amonge his people. And whatsoeuer soule do any worke that daye, the same soule wyll I destroye from amonge his people. Ye shall do no maner worke therfoze: Let it be a lawe for euer in your ge-neracions & in all youre dwellinges. Let it be vnto you a Sabboth of reste, & ye shall humble youre soules in the nynt daye of the moneth at euen: from eue to euen shall ye rest in youre Sabboth.

¶ And the Lozde spake vnto Moyses say-
inge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, & saye:
* the fyfteneth daye of the same seventh mo-neth is the feaste of tabernacles, seven dayes vnto the Lozde. The fyfte daye is an holpe conuocacyon: ye shall do no labourous worke. Seven dayes ye shall offer sacrifice vnto the Lozde, & in the egypte daye shalbe an holy conuocacyon vnto you, and ye shall offer sacrifices vnto the Lozde. It is the collec-cyon, and ye shall do no labourous worke therin.

These are the feastes of the Lozde, which ye shall call holpe conuocacions, for to offer sacrifice vnto the Lozde, burnt offeringe, meate offeringe, peace offeringe, and drynk-offeringes, euer daye bys due sacrifice besyde the Sabbothes of the Lozde, and be syde your gyftes, be syde your vowes, and all your freewill offeringes, whiche ye geue vnto the Lozde.

¶ Moreover, in the fyfteneth daye of the seventh moneth when ye haue gathered in the frute of the lande, ye shall kepe holpe daye vnto the Lozde seven dayes. The fyfte daye shalbe as a Sabboth: lyke wyse in the egypte daye shalbe the rest of the Sabboth. And ye shall take you in the fyfte daye, the frutes of goodly trees, brynches & palme trees, and the

the bowes of hycke trees, & wyllowes of þ brooke, & shall reioyce befoze the Lorde your God seven dayes. And ye shall kepe this feaste vnto the Lorde seven dayes in the yere.
It shalbe a lawe for euer in youre generacyons, that ye kepe it in the seventh moneth.
Ye shall dwell in boothes seven dayes: euen all þ are Israelites bozne, shall dwell in boothes, þ your chyldzen after you maye know, howe that I made the chyldzen of Israel to dwell in boothes, when I brought them out of the lande of Egypte: I am the Lorde your God. ¶ And Moles spake vnto þ chy-ldzen of Israel cōcernynge the feastes of the Lorde.

*The oyle for the lampes. He that curseth must be stoned.
He that killeth shalbe kyled &c.*

Ex. xxviii. d.

And þ Lord spake vnto Moses, sayinge: * commaunde the chyldzen of Israel that they bypunge vnto the, pure oyle olpue beaten for light-tes, to cause the lampes to burne allwape: wythout þ vayle of wytnesse: in the tabernacle of wytnesse shall Aarō dresse them bothe euen & moynynge befoze the Lorde all-wapes. Let it be a lawe for euer in your generacyōs. He shal dresse þ lampes vpo the pure cādellspcke befoze þ Lorde perpetuallp.

And thou shalte take fyne floure, & bake twelue wassels therof, two tēthdeales shal-be in one wassell. And thou shalte set them in two rowes, syxe on a rowe vpon the pure table befoze the Lorde, and put pure frankencence vpon the rowes, that they maye be bze-ade of remembzaunce, and an offerynge to the Lorde. Euery Sabboth he shall put the in rowes befoze þ Lorde euermoare: of the chyldzen of Israel shal they be offered for an euerlastynge couenaunte. * And they shall be Aarons and hys sonnes, whych shall eate them in the holy place. For they are moſte holy vnto hym of the offerynges of the Lorde by a perpetuall statute.

Ex. xxviii. d.

And the sonne of an Israelitthe wyfe whose father was an Egyptyan, wente out amonge the chyldzen of Israel. And thys sonne of the Israelitthe wyfe & a man of Israel, stroue together in the hoste. And the Israelitish womans sonne * blasphemed þ name of the Lorde & : curseth, & they broughte hym vnto Moles. hys mothers name was Dalomith, whych was the daughter of Dibry, of the trybe of Dan: and they * put hym in ward, that the mynde of the Lorde myghte be shewed them.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moles sayinge: bypung the cursed speaker wythout the hoste, and let all that hearde hym, put theyr handes vpon his heade, and let al the multitude ston hym. And thou shalte speake vnto the chyldzen of Israel sayinge: Whoso-uer curseth hys God, shall beare hys synne.

And he þ blasphemeth the name of the Lorde, let hym be slayne, & all the multitude shal ston hym to deth.

Whether he be bozne in the lande of a straunger, when he blasphemeth the name of þ Lorde, let hym be slayne. And * he that kylleth any man, let hym dye the death. And he þ killeth a beaste, let hym make hym good, soule for soule. And if a man mayne hys neyghboure, as he hath done, so shall he be done to hym: broke for broke & eye for eye & toth for toth: euen as he hath maymed a mā, so shall he be maymed agayne. And he that kylleth a beaste, let hym paye for it: & he that kylleth a man, let hym dye. Ye shall haue one maner of lawe: eue for the straunger as well as for one of youre selues, for I am the Lord your God.

And Moles tolde þ chyldzen of Israel, and they broughte hym (that had curset) out of the hoste, & stoned hym wyth stones. And the chyldzen of Israel dyd as the Lorde commaunded Moles.

The xxv. Chapter.

The Sabboth of the. vii. yeres, and of the yere of iudete, & of the yere of the. vii. yeres.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses in mount Sinaï sayinge: speake vnto the chyldzen of Israel, and saye vnto them: when ye be come into the lande whych
I geue you, the lande shall reste, and kepe Sabboth vnto the Lorde. * Syxe yeres thou shalt sowe thy felde, & syxe yeres thou shalt cut thy vyngarde, & gather in the frute therof. But the * seventh yere shall be a Sabboth of reste vnto the lande. The Lor-des Sabboth ye shalbe: thou shalt neyther sowe thy felde, nor cut thy vyngarde. That whych groweth of the owne accorde thou shalt not reape, neyther gather the grapes that thou haste left behynde, for it is a yere of reste vnto the lāde. And the reste of the lā-de shalbe meate for you: euen for the, for the seruaunte, and for thy mayde, for thy hyrd seruaunte, and for the straunger that loge-ourneth wyth the: and for thy catell, and for the beastes that are in the lande. Shall all the encrease therof be meate. And thou shalt bz seven Sabbathes of yeres vnto þ euen seven tymes seven yere: and the space of the seven Sabbathes of yeres will be vnto þ nyne & fortye yere. And then thou shalt make a trompe blowe: in the tenth daye of þ seventh moneth, euen in the daye of attonmente shall ye make the trompe blowe, tho-rowe out all youre lande.

And thou shalt halowe that yere: euen the syftieth yere, and proclayme lybertie

the thowme out the lande vnto all the inhabytters therof, for it shalbe a yere of iudelye vnto you, and ye shall retourne: euery man vnto hys possessyon, and euery mā vnto hys kynred agayne. A yere of iudelye shall that syftrieth yere be vnto you. Ye shall not sowe nether reape that whych groweth of yt selfe, nether gather þ grapes that are left. For that yere of iudelye shalbe holy vnto you: but ye shall eate of the increase thereof out of the felde. In the yere of thys iudelye ye shall returne euery mā vnto hys possessyon agayne.

If thou sellest ought vnto thy neyghbour, or byeste of thy neyghbours hande, ye shall not dysceane one another: but accordynge to the nombze of yeres after the iudelye yere thou shalt bye of thy neyghbour, & accordynge vnto the nombze of yeres of the frutes, he shall sell vnto the. Accordynge vnto þ multitude of yeres, he shall increase the pryce therof, and accordynge to the fewnesse of yeres, he shall mynysh the pryce of yt: for the nombze of frutes dothe he sell vnto the. * Dysceane not ye therfore euery man hys neyghbour, but þ shall feare the God. For I am the Lorde your God: wherfore, ye shall do after myne ordinaunces and kepe my lawes, and do them, and ye shall dwell in the lande in safetie. And the lāde shall geue her frute, & ye shall eate your fill, & dwell therein in safetie.

And yf ye shall saye: what shal we eate the seventh yere, for we shali not sowe, nor gather in our increase: I will sende my blessing vpon you in the syxte yere, & yt shall byynge forth the frute for thre yeres: and ye shall sowe the eyghte yere, and eate yet of olde corne vntill the nynte yere: euen vntill her frutes come, ye shall eate of olde stoare.

The lande shall not be solde to be waste: for the lande is myne, & ye be but straungers & sojourners with me. In all the lāde of your possessyon, ye shall graunt a redempcyon for the lande.

* Yf thy brother be wared pooze, & hath solde a waye of hys possessyon, and yf any of hys kynne come to redeme yt, let him by out that whych hys brother solde. And yf he haue no man to redeme yt, let hys hande get as muche as maye be suffyciente to bye yt out agayne, and let hym counte howe longe yt hath bene solde, and deliuer the reste vnto the man to whome he solde yt, þ he maye retourne to hys possessyon agayne. But and yf hys hande cannot gett suffycient to restore to the other agayne, then that whych ys solde shall remayne in the hande of hym that hath boughte yt, vntill the yere of iudelye: and in the iudelye yt shall come oute, and he shall retourne vnto hys possessyon agayne.

And yf a mā sell a house of a dwelinge wythin the walles of a cytie, he maye bye yt oute agayne wythin a whole yere after yt is solde: euen ony daye of the yere shall he redeme yt agayne. But yf he bye yt not oute agayne wythin þ space of a full yere, then the house that is in the walled cytie shalbe stablyshed, and be hys owne that boughte it, & hys successours after hym, & shall not go out in the iudelye. But the houses of villages whych haue no walles rounde aboute them, are counted as the felde of the countre & therfore they maye be bought out agayne, & shall retourne in the iudelye.

Notwithstandinge, the cyties of the leuites, and the houses of the cyties of the possessyon, maye the leuites redeme at all seasons. And yf a man purchase oughte of the leuites, the house that was solde, and þ cytie of the possessyon shall go oute in the yere of iudelye: for the houses of the cyties of the leuites, are the possessyon amonge þ chyldren of Israel. But the felde of the suburbe that is besyde their cyties, maye not be sold: but is the perpetuall possessyon.

If thy brother be wared pooze & falle in decaye to the, thou shalt releue him, both the straunger & sojourner, that he maye lyue wyth the. * And thou shalt take none vsurye of hym, or vantage. But thou shalt feare the God, that thy brother maye lyue wyth the. Thou shalt not geue hym thy money vpon vsurye, nor lende him thy corne for increase. I am the Lorde your God, whych broughte you out of the lande of Egypte to geue you the lande of Canaan, & to be your God.

* If thy brother the dwelleth by the, be wared pooze, and he solde vnto the thou shalt not compell hym to the bondage of seruantes: but as an hyred seuante and as a sojourner he shalbe wyth the, and shall serue the vnto the yere of iudelye, & then shall he depart from the: bothe he & hys chyldren wyth hym, & shall retourne vnto hys awne kynred agayne, & vnto the possessyon of hys fathers: for they are my seruantes, whych I broughte out of the lande of Egypte, and shall not therfore be solde as bōdmen. Thou shalt not raygne ouer hym cruelly, but shalt feare the God. Thy bondseruant, and thy bondmayde whych thou shalt haue, shalbe of the hepten that are rounde aboute you: of them shall ye purchase seruantes & maydes, and of the chyldren of þ straungers that are sojourners amonge you, and of the generacions that are wyth you, whych they begate in your lande. These shalbe your possessyon, and ye shall take them as in herp tace for your chyldren after you, to possesse the, they shalbe your bōdmen for euer. But ouer your byetren the chyldren of Israel, pe shall not raighe one ouer another cruelly.

G If a sojourner or straunger waxe rich by the, & thy brother that dwelleth by hym waxe poore, & sell hym selfe vnto the straunger as a sojourner by the, or to any of the straungers kynne: after that he is solde, he may be redeemed agayne: one of his brethren (which wyl) either his vncle or his vncles sone may bye hym oute: or any that is nye of kynne vnto hym of his kynred, maye redeme hym: ether yf his hande can get so moch, he maye be loosed. And he shall reken to him that boughte hym, from the yere that he was solde in, vnto the yere of iubelpe & the pryce of his bypyng shall be valued accordyng vnto the nombre of yeres. As an hyred seruante shall he be wryth him. If there be yet many yeres be hynde, accordyng vnto the lett him geue agayne for his deliuerance, of the money that he was bought for. If there remayne but fewe yeres vnto the yere of iubelpe, let hym counte wryth hym agayne, and accordyng vnto his yeres geue hym agayne for his redempcyon, and he shall be wryth hym yere by yere as an hyred seruante and the other shall not raygne cruelly ouer hym in thy syghte. If he be not redeemed thus, he shall go oute in the yere of iubelpe, both he and his chyldren wryth hym: for the chyldren of Israell are my seruantes, whych I broughte out of the lande of Egypte. I am the Lorde your God.

The xxv. Chapter.

They are belid that kepe those thynges that God byd doth.

Deut. b. a.

Ye shall make you no ydolles nor grauen ymage, neyther reare you vp any stone nether shall ye set vp any ymage of stone in youre lande to worshippe it: for I am the Lorde your God: ye shall kepe my Sabbothes, & feare my sanctuary: for I am the Lorde.

If ye walke in myne ordynances & kepe my commaundementes, and do them, I wyl sende you rayne in the ryght season and the lande shall yelde her increale, and the trees of the felde shall geue theyr frute. And the thyrsyng shall reach vnto wyne barnes, and the wyne barnes shall reach vnto lowyng tyme, and ye shall eate your bread in plenteousnes, & dwell in youre lande peacefully. And I wyl sende peace in the lande, & ye shall slepe wrythout any man to make you afraide.

And I wyl ryd euell bestes out of the lande, & there shall no swearde go thorowe out youre lande. And ye shall chase your enemyes, and they shall fall before you vpon the swearde. And foure of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousande to flyghte, & your enemyes shall fall before you vpon the sweard. For I wyl haue respect vnto you, & make you encrease and multiplye you, & set vp my couenaunte wryth you. And ye shall eate olde stoare, and carpe out olde for the newe. And I wyl make my dwellinge place amonge you, & my soule shall not loothe you. I wyl walke amonge you, and wyl be your God & ye shall be my people. For I am the Lorde your God which brought you out of the land of Egypte, that ye shulde not be theyr bondemen & I haue broken the cheynes of your yoke, & made you go vpryghte.

But & yf ye wyl not harken vnto me, nor wyl not do after these commaundementes: And if ye shall dyspise myne ordynances, ether yf your soule abhorre my lawes, so that ye wyl not do all my commaundementes, but breake myne appoyntementes, I also wyl do thus vnto you. For I wyl bypunge vpon you fearfullnesse, swellinge of body, and the burnyng agewe to consume your eyes, and gendre sorowe of hert. And ye shall sowe your seede in vayne, for your enemyes shall eate it, And I wyl set my face agaynst you, and ye shall fall before your enemyes, & they that hate you shall rayne ouer you: & ye shall flee, when noman foloweth you.

And yf ye wyl not yet for all this harken vnto me, then wyl I punyche you seuen tymes moze for your synnes, & wyl breake the pryde of your stubburnesse. And I wyl make your heauen as yron, and your erth as brasle: And your labour shall be spent in vayne. For your land shall not geue you increase, nether shall the trees of the lande geue theyr frutes.

And yf ye walke contrary vnto me, & wyl not harken vnto me. I wyl bypunge seuen tymes moze plagis vpon you, accordyng to your synnes. I wyl also sende in wylde bestes vpon you, whych shall robbe you of your chyldren, & destroye your catell, and make you fewe in nombre, and cause your hye wayes to growe vnto a wyldernes.

And if ye maye not be reformed by the se thynges but shall walke contrary vnto me, then wyl I also walke contrary vnto you, and wyl punyche you yet seuen tymes for your synnes. And I wyl sende a swearde vnto you, that shall auenge my testamēt. And when ye are gathered together wryth in your cities, I wyl sende the pestilence amonge you, & ye shall be deliuered into the hande of the enemye. And when I haue broken the staffe of your breade: your wyues shall bake your breade in one oven, & they shall deliuer you your breade agayne by wyrght: ye shall eate, and not be satysfied. And

And if ye will not yet for all this be-ken vnto me, but shall walke agaynste me, I will walke contray vnto you also in in-dignacion, & will chastice you seven times for your synnes. * And ye shall eate the flesh of your sonnes, and of flesh of your daughters shall ye deuoure. I will destroye your hye places, and roote out your ymages, & caste your carhasses vpon the body-es of your ydolles, and my soule shall abhorre you. And I will make your cities desolate, and byyng your sanctuarie vnto nought & will not smell of sweetnesse of your odoures.

I will byyng the lade vnto a wyldernes, & your enemyes whych dwell the-rin, shall wonder at yt. And I will strowe pon amonge the hethen, and will drawe out a swerde after you, and your lande shall be waste, and your cyties desolate. Then shall the lande enioye her Sabbothes, as longe as ye lyeth voyde, and ye shall be in your e-nemyes lande: euen then shall the lande rest, and reioyce in her Sabbothes. As longe as it lyeth voyde it shall rest, because it dyd not reste in your Sabbothes, when ye dwelte vpon it.

And vpon them that are left a lyue of you, I will sende a fayntenesse into theyr bertes in the lade of theyr enemyes: & the sounde of a shakynge lease, shall chase them, & wha they see a swerde, they shall fall: no ma folowynge vpon them. They shall fall one vpon another, as it were before a swerd, eue no ma folowing vpon them, & ye shall haue no powre to stonde before your enemyes:
And ye shall perishe amonge your hethen, & the lade of your enemyes shall eate you vp.

And they that are left of you, shall pyne awaye in theyr vncyghtenousnes, euen in their enemyes lande, & in the mysdeades of theyr fathers shall they consume. And they shall crosse theyr mysdeades & the mysdeades of theyr fathers for theyr trespass, which they haue trespassed agaynste me, and for that allof they haue walked contray vnto me.

Therefore, I also will walke contray vnto them, and will byyng them into the lande of their enemyes. And then at the last waye their vncircumcised bertes shall be tamed, & they shall make an attoument for their mysdeades.

And * I will remember my couenaunt, with Jacob, & my bode with Isaac & myne appoyntment with Abraham will I remember, & will thynke on the lade. The lade shall be left of them, & shall enioye her Sabbothes while the lyeer waste without them. And they shall make an attoument for their misdeades, because they disobeyed my lawes, & because their soule refused myne ordinaun-ces: And yet for all that when they be in the lade of their enemyes, * I will not caste them awaye, neether will abhorre them, to destroye them utterly, & to breake myne appoyntment with them: for I am the Lord their God. I will for their sakes remember my couenaunt made vnto their fathers whom I broughte out of the lade of Egypt in the synode of the be-the, & I myghte be their God: I am the Lord.

These are the ordinaunces, & iudgemetes, & lawes whiche the Lord made betwene him & the children of Israel in mount Sinai, by the hande of Moyses.

The xxvii. Chapter.

Of the offeringe of the firstfrutes, and of the firstfrutes.

And the Lord spake vnto Moyses sayynge: Speake vnto the children of Israel, & saie vnto them: If any ma wil geue a synful offeringe vnto the Lord accordynge to the value of his soules, the value of his male fro twayne yere olde vnto sixtye shall be fifty & sixties of siluer, after the weyght of sanctuarie. And if it be a female, the value shall be thirtie sicles. And fro syue yeres to twayne, the male shall be set at twentie sicles, & the female at ten sicles. And from amoneth vnto syue yere, the male shall be set at syue sicles of siluer, & the female at thre. And he that is sixty yere olde, & aboue, shall be valued at fiftene sicles, and the woma at ten. But if he be to poore so to be sette, he shall presente hym selfe before the Priest: & the Priest shall value him, accordynge as the hande of hym that vowed is able to get, euen so shall the Priest value him.

If it be a beaste of which men byinge an offeringe vnto the Lord: all that any man geueth of stocke vnto the Lord shall be counted holpe. He shall not alter yt nor chaunge it: a good for a badde, or a badde for a good. And if he chaunge beaste for beaste, then bo the the same beaste and it also wherewith it was chaunged shall be holy. If it be any maner of vncleane beaste, of which men do not offer a sacrifice vnto the Lord, he shall sette the beaste before the Priest, & the Priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad. And as the Priest letteth it, so shall it be. But if he will bye it agayne, he shall geue the fift part more aboue that it was set at.

If any man dedicate his house, to be holy vnto the Lord, the Priest shall set it, whether it be good or bad: & as the Priest hath set it so shall the value be. And wha he thus sanctified it will redeme his house, let hym geue the fift part of the money that it was indiged at therto, & it shall be holy.

If a man halowe a peece of his endereted lade vnto the Lord: yt shall be set accord-g iii byng

dyng to þe ſerue therof. If it beare an homes of berly it ſhalbe ſet at fyfte ſicles of ſyluer.
If he ſhalowe his ſelde immediatly from þe are of iubele, it ſhalbe worth accordyng as it is eſtymed. But if he ſhalowe his ſelde af ter þe iubele, þe þreſte ſhall rehen þe money accordyng to þe nombre of þe peares þe remay ne vnto the peares of iubele folowing and there after it ſhalbe lower ſet.

If he that coſecrated þe ſelde, will rede me it agayne, let hym put the fyfte parte of þe price that it was ſet at ther vnto, & it ſhal be his. And if he will not redeme þe ſelde, but ſelleth þe ſeld to another mā, he ſhall (that he ſell) maye redeme it nomore. But when þe ſelde goeth out in þe peare of iubele, it ſhalbe ho ly vnto þe Lorde: euen as a ſelde þe is utterly put awaye, & it ſhalbe the þreſtes poſſeſſy on.

If a mā ſanctifie vnto þe Lorde a ſelde whiche he hath bought, & is not of his enhe ritauce, þe þreſte ſhal reke vnto him what it is worth vnto þe peare of iubele, & he ſhal geue þe price þe it is ſet at, þe ſame daye, as a thyng coſecrated vnto þe Lorde. And in the peare of iubele, the ſelde ſhall returne vnto him, whoſe enheritaunce of lāde it is.

And all ſettinge ſhalbe accordyng to þe ſicle of þe ſanctuarie. One ſicle conſeinet twentye halſepens.

* But the firſte bozne of the beaſtes that is appoynted vnto the Lorde, maye no man ſanctify: whether it be ore or ſhepe, for it is the Lordes alreddie. If it be an vncleane beaſte, he ſhall redeme it, as it is ſet at, and geue the fyfte parte moare thereto: Or, if it be not redemed, it ſhalbe ſolde, accordyng to the value.

For wyth ſaydyng, no damned thyng ge that a mā putteth from him & dedicateth vnto þe Lorde of all þys good (whether it be mā or beaſt or lāde of his enheritaunce) may be ſolde or redemed: for euery thyng ſo put awaye, is moſte holpe vnto þe Lorde. Let no damned thyng be at a mā ſeparateth, be re demed, but dye the death.

Euery tythe of þe lāde which is of the ſerde of the land, or of the frute of the trees, is the Lordes, & is ſanctified vnto þe Lorde.
And if a man wyll redeme oughte of his ty thes, let hym adde þe fyfte parte thereto. And euery tyth of ore & of ſhepe & of euery beaſte that goeth vnder þe rod eue euery tenth ſhal be holy vnto the Lorde. He ſhall not loke yf it be good or bad, ner chaung it. Els if he chaunge it, bothe it, & that it was chaunged withall, ſhalbe ſhalowed vnto þe Lorde and maye not be redemed.

Theſe are þe commaundementes whiche the Lorde commaunded by Moſes vnto the chyldren of Iſrael in mounte ſinai.

The. v. Chapter.

Of the knowyng of synne. The cleansing of synne. The lawe of the first frutes, and of gelousye.

Ad the Lorde spake vnto Moses, sayinge: commaunde the chyldren of Israel that they * put out of the hoste, euery leper and euery one that hath an yllue, ad whosoener is defyled vpon a soule. Both male and female shall ye put out: euen oute of the hoste shall ye put them, that they defyle not the tentes amonge whiche I dwell. And the chyldren of Israel dyd so, and put the out of the hoste, eue as the Lorde spake vnto Moses, so dyd the chyldren of Israel.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel: wherher it be * man or woman. If they haue committed any synne that a ma doeth, and haue trespassed agaynst the Lorde, that soule hath done amysse: Therefore they shall knowlege their synne whiche they haue done, and let hym restore agayne the hurte that he hath done in the hole, and put the fyfte parte of it more therto, and geue it vnto hym whom he hath trespassed agaynst. But and if there be not a man to restore the hurte vnto, nor a kynsman of hys, let the trespass be made good vnto the Lorde, and it shalbe the pceasse, besyde the ram of the attonement wherby an attonement shalbe made for hym. And euery beue offering that is made of the holy thynges of the chyldre of Israel wherch they bynge vnto the pceasse, shalbe hys, and euery mans halowed thynges shalbe his: ad whatsoener any man geueth the pceasse, it shalbe hys.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, ad save vnto them: If any mans wyfe go a syde ad trespace agaynst hym, so that another man lye wyth her fleschly, and it be hyd from the eyes of her husbande, and is not come to lpghe that she is defyled, and ther is no wytnesse agaynst her, neyther she taken with any maner, and the sperte of gelousye cometh vpon hym, so that he is gelouse ouer hys wyfe which is defyled: or if the sperte of gelousye come vpon hym, so that he is gelouse ouer his wyfe which is yet vndefiled: the let the man bynge his wyfe vnto the pceasse, and bynge wyth her an offeringe for her: tenth parte of an Ephra of barlye meale, but let him put none oyle vpon it, nor put frankensin thereon: for it is an offeringe of gelousye, an offeringe for a remembraunce, an offeringe the synne to be thought vpon.

And the pceasse shall bynge her and let her befoze the Lorde, and let hym * take holy water in an erthen vessel, and of the dust that is in the flooze of the habitacyon, and put it into the water. And let the pceasse let the woman befoze the Lorde, and vncouer the womans head, and put the memorvall of the offeringe in her handes whiche is the gelousye offeringe, and the pceasse shal haue bytter and curlyd water in hys hande, & the pceasse shal charge her, & save vnto the woman. If no man haue lye wyth the, neither hath gone a syde to vnclemesse wythout the husbande, ten haue thou no harme of this bytter, and curlyd waters.

But and if thou hast gone asyde behynde thyne husbande, and art defyled, and some other man hath lye wyth the besyde thyne husbande, (& the pceasse shal charge the woman with an horrible curse, & the pceasse shal save vnto the woman) the Lorde make the to be an abhominacyon and a curse amonge thy people: when the Lorde doth make thy thyne rotte, and thy hely swell: These curlyd waters go into the bowels of the, that they maye make thy hely swell, & thy thyne rotte, & let the woman save, Amen Amen.

And let the pceasse wyte these curses: And when they be clemed, let hym cast them into bytter waters, & geue the woman those bytter and curlyd waters to dypnche, that those curlyd & bitter waters maye entre into her. And then the pceasse shal take the gelousy offeringe out of the womans hande, & waue it befoze the Lorde, & bynge it vnto the alter & the pceasse shal take an handefull of the offeringe for a memorvall, & burne it vpon the alter, & then make the woman dypnche water: & when he hath made the woman dypnche the waters (if she be defyled & haue trespassed agaynst her husbande:) then shal the curlyd & bytter waters go into her, ad her hely shal swell, & her thyne shal rotte, & the woman shalbe a curse amonge her people. And if the woman be not defyled but is cleane, she shal haue no harme, but shal conceaue ad beare.

This is the lawe of gelousye, wher a wyfe goeth asyde behynde hys husbande, and is defyled, or when the sperte of gelousy cometh vpon a man, & he bynge gelousy ouer hys wyfe, doth bynge her befoze the Lorde. And the pceasse shal do accordynge vnto all this lawe, and the man shalbe gyltlesse, and the woman shal beare her synne.

The. vi. Chapter.

Of the lawe of adynure, The blessinge of the people. And

Ad the Lorde spake vnto Moyses sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, and saye vnto them: when ether man or woman doth separate them selues to vowe a vowe of an absteyner, and ap-poynte them selues vnto the Lorde, he shall separate hym selfe from wyne and stronge dryncke, and shall dryncke no vynagre of wyne or of stronge dryncke, nor shall dryncke whatsoeuer is pressed out of grapes: ad shall eate no frethe grapes nether yet dryed. As longe as hys abstinence endureth, shall he eate nothyng that is made of the vyne tre, or of the cornels, or of the huske of the grape.

And as longe as he voweth, and is separated, there shall no rasure come vpon hys head: but vntyll hys dayes be oute, in the which he separateth hym selfe vnto the Lorde, he shall be holy, and shall let the lockes of his heere growe. As longe as he consecrateth hym selfe vnto the Lorde, he shall come at no dead body: he shall not make hym selfe vncleane at the death of hys father, mother, brother or syster: because that the vowe of the abstinence of hys God is vpon his head.
All the dayes of hys abstinence he is holpe

And yf it fortune that any man by cha-unce dye suddenly before hym, the head of hys burntofferynge, and make an attonement a soule, and shall halowe hys head the same daye, and he shall consecrate hym selfe vnto the Lorde (the tyme of hys abstinence) and shall byng a lambe of a yere olde for trelost, because hys abstinence was defyled.

tyme of his abstinence is out, he shall be brought vnto the doze of the tabernacle of wytnesse, and he shall byng hys offerynge vnto the Lorde: an he lambe of a yere olde wyth lambe of a yere olde wythout blemyshe for synne, a ram wythout blemyshe also for a peaceofferynge, and a basket of swete bredd cut cakes of fyne flour mingled wyth oyle, and wafers of swete bredd anoynted wyth oyle wyth theyr meatofferynges and drynke offerynges.

And the preast shall byng hym before the Lorde, and offer his synofferyng and his burntofferynge, and shall offer the ram for a peaceofferynge vnto the Lorde, wyth the basket of swete bredd, and the preast shall offer also his meatofferynge and his drynkeofferynge.

And he shall haue the head of the absteyner in the doze of the tabernacle of wytnesse: eue the head of his abstinence, and shall take the heere of his sober head, and put it in the fyre, which is vnder the peaceofferynge. And the preast shall take the soden shoulder of the ram, and one swete cake out of the basket, and one swete wafer also, and put them vpo the handes of the absteyner (after he hath haue his abstinence of) and the preast shall waue them before the Lorde. And these holy thynges shall be the preastes with the wauchzeit ad heue shoulder: ad the the absteyner maye dryncke wyne. This is the lawe of the absteyner whiche hath vowed hys offerynge vnto the Lorde for hys consecracyon: Besydes those thynges that hys hande can get, accordynge to the vowe whiche he vowed, euen so he must do after the lawe of hys abstinence.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, saying: speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes, saying:
of this wyse ye shall blesse the chyldren of Israel, and saye vnto them.

The Lorde blesse the, and kepe the.

The Lorde make hys face shyne vpo the,
and be mercifull vnto the.

The Lorde lyfte vp hys countenance vpo the, and geue the peace. And they shall putt my name vpon the chyldren of Israel, and I wyll blesse them.

Exod. xxi. a
Leu. ii. b

* For al the fyrst borne of the chyldren of Israel are myne bothe man and beast: sens the daye that I smote euery first borne in the lande of Egypte, I sanctified them for my selfe: and I haue taken the Levites for al the fyrst borne of the chyldren of Israel, ad haue greuen the Levites as a gyfte vnto Aaron & his sonnes from amonge the chyldren of Israel, to do the seruice of the chyldren of Israel, to do the seruice of wytnesse, to make an attonement for the chyldren of Israel, & there be no plage amonge the chyldren of Israel, yf the chyldren of Israel come nye vnto the holy thynges.

And Moses and Aaron and all the congregation of the chyldren of Israel byd with the Levites, accordynge vnto all that the Lorde commaunded Moses concernynge the Levites: euen so byd the chyldren of Israel vnto them. And the Levites were purified, and washed theyr clothes. And Aaron waueed them before the Lorde, and made an attonement for them, and cleansed the. After that went the Levites in to do their seruice in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, before Aaron and his sonnes: as the Lorde had commaunded Moses concernynge the Levites, euen so they byd vnto them.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saying: this is it that belongeth vnto the Levites: * frō. xxi. yere ywarde they shall go in, to waite vpon the seruice of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, ad from the age of fyfye yere, they shall cease waytyng vpon the seruice thereof, & shall seme no moze: but shall minystrer vnto theyr byethien in the tabernacle of wytnesse, to waite, but shall do no moze seruice. Thus therfore shalt thou do vnto the Levites in theyr watche.

The ix. Chapter.

The passage of the cloude.

Ad the Lorde spake vnto Moses in the wyldernesse of Synay, in the fyrste moneth of the seconde yere, after they were come out of the lande of Egypt, saying: let the chyldren of Israel offer passeouer in bys season: euen the. xiiii. daye of this mo-nethe at euen let them kepe it in bys season, accordynge to all the ceremonyes of it, accordynge to all the maners thereof. And Moses spake vnto the chyldren of Israel, that they shoulde offer passeouer, & they offered passeouer the. xiiii. daye of the fyfth moneth at euen in the wyldernesse of Synay accordynge to all the Lorde commaunded Moses, euen so byd the chyldren of Israel.

And certayne men were despyed vpon the soule of a man, that they myghte not offer passeouer the same daye. And they came before Moses and Aaron the same daye. And the men sayde vnto hym: We are despyed vpon the soule of man: wherfore are we kepte backe that we maye not offer an offeringe vnto the Lorde in bys due season, amonge the chyldren of Israel? And Moses sayde vnto the. Men. Ityll, & I will heare what the Lorde will commaunde concernynge you. And the Lorde spake vnto Moses sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel and saye: yf any man amonge you or poure chyldren after you be vnclean by the reason of a coarce, or is in the waye farre from you, and wil offer passeouer vnto the Lorde: the. xiiii. daye of the seconde moneth at euen let them offer it, & eate it with swete bread ad lowze herbes: let them leane none of it vnto the moznyng. * noz breake any bone of it: But accordynge to all the ordynance of the passeouer let them offer it.

But the man that is cleane and is not in a iourney, & yet was neglyt to offer passeouer: the same soule shall perishe from the people, because he brought not the offeringe of the Lorde in bys due season: that man shall beare bys synne. And yf a straunger be amonge you, and wyll offer passeouer vnto the Lorde, accordynge to the ordynance of passeouer and maner thereof, he shall offer thus. Ye shal haue one lawe both for the stranger, and for him that was borne at home in the lande.

And the same daye that the Tabernacle was reared vp, a cloude conered the tabernacle, whiche was as a tabernacle of the wytnesse: and at euen there was vpon the habitacil, as it were the similitude of fyre vntill the moznyng. So it was alwaye, the cloude conered it by daye, and the similitude of fyre by nyght. And when the cloude was taken vp fro the tabernacle, then the chyldren of Israel iourneyed: ad where the cloude abode, there the chyldren of Israel pitched theyr tentes. At the mouth of the Lorde the chyldren of Israel iourneyed, ad at the mouthe of the Lorde they pitched. And as long as the cloude abode vpon the habitacil they laye ityll: and when the cloude taried vpon the habitacil longe tyme, the chyldren of Israel kepte the watche of the Lorde, and iourneyed not.

D And it chaunced þ̄ w̄h̄a the cloude abode a few dayes vpon the habitaciō, they abode in theyr tentes, accordynge to the commaundemēt of the Lorde: and they iorneyed also at the commaundemēt of the Lorde. And it hapened that when the cloude abode vpon the habitaciō from euen vnto the moornyng, and was taken vp in þ̄ moornyng, then they iorneyed. Whether it was by daye or by night that the cloude was takē vp they iorneyed. Oʒ if the cloude taryed two dayes or a moneth, or a longe season vpon the habitaciō, and remayned thereon, the chyldren of Israel abode styll, and iorneyed not. And as sone as the cloude was taken vp, they iorneyed. At the mouth of the Lorde, they rested in the tētes, and at the commaundemēt of the Lorde, they iorneyed, keepynge the watche of the Lorde, at the commaundement of the Lorde by the hande of Moyses.

¶ The .x. Chapter.

¶ The trompettes of syluer. The Israelites departe from Hina. The captaynes of the hoost are nombred. Hobab refuseth to go with Moyses.

Ad the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, sayynge: Make the two trôpettes of syluer: of an whole pece shalt thou make them, that thou mayest vse them to cal the congregacion together, and when the hoost shal iorney. Therfore shal they blowe with them, that all the multitude maye resorte to the before the doore of þ̄ tabernacle of wytnes. And yf they blowe but one trompet, the princes which are heades ouer the thousandes of Israel shal come vnto the. But yf ye trompe, the hostes þ̄ lye on þ̄ east partes shal go forthwarde. And yf ye trompe the seconde tyme, the hoost that lyeth on þ̄ southe syde shal take theyr iourneys: for they shal trompe when they take theyr iourneys. But when the congregacion is to be gathered together they shal blowe only, and not trôpe. And the sonnes of Aaron the prestre shal blowe with theyr trôpettes, & ye shal haue the as a lawe for euer in youre generacions.

B And yf ye go to warre in your lāde agaynst your enemyes that were you, ye shal blowe with the trompettes: and ye shal be remembred before the Lorde your God, to be saued from your enemyes. Also in the day of your gladnes, and in your feast dayes, and in the beginning of your monethes, ye shal blowe the trompettes ouer your burnt sacrifices & peaceofferynges, that they maye be a remembrance for you before your God. I am the Lorde your God.

And it came to passe the twetyth daye of the second moneth in the secōd yere, that þ̄ cloude was taken vp from of the habitacion of wytnesse. And the chyldren of Israel toke theyr iorney out of the desert of Hina, & the cloude rested in the wyldernes of Pharān.

And the first toke theyr iorney at þ̄ mouth of the Lorde, by the hāde of Moyses. In the fyrst place wēt the standarde of the hoost of Iuda, accordynge to their armyes: whose captayne was Nahabon the sonne of Ami nadab. And ouer the hoost of þ̄ trybe of the chyldre of Isachar, was Nathanael þ̄ sonne of Iuar. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of þ̄ chyldre of Zabulon, was Eliab the sonne of Helon. And þ̄ habitaciō was taken downe: and the sonnes of Gerson & Merari wente forth bearynge the habitacion.

C And the hoost of Ruben wēt forth with their standarde and armyes, whose captayne was Elizur the sonne of Sedeur. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the chyldren of Simeon was Salamiel þ̄ sonne of Suri Saddai. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of þ̄ chyldren of Gad was Eliasaph þ̄ sonne of De-guel. The Gabaathites also went forthwarde and bare the sanctuarie, and the other vpd set vp the habitacion agaynst they came. And the standarde of þ̄ hoost of the chyldren of Ephraim went forth according to theyr armyes, whose captayne was Elisama the sonne of Amud. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the sonnes of Manasse, was Gamaliel the sonne of Pedazur. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the sonnes of Ben Jamin was Abidan the sonne of Gedeoni.

And the standarde of the hoost of the chyldre of Da came forth (haug al the hoostes together) thowout theyr armyes: whose captayne was Abiezzer the sonne of Ammi Saddai. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the chyldren of Aser, was Pagiel þ̄ sonne of Othnam. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the chyldre of Repphaly, was Ahira þ̄ sonne of Enā. These are the iourneys of the chyldre of Israel thowout theyr armyes: and thus the hoostes remoued.

D And Moyses sayde vnto Hobab the sonne of Raguel þ̄ Madianite: whych was Moyses father in lawe: we go into the place of which the Lorde sayd: I will geue it you. Comethou therfore wyth vs, & we wyll do the good: for the Lorde hath promysed good vnto Israel. And he answered hym: I wyll not go: but will departe to myne owne land and to my kynred. He sayde: Oh naye, leaue vs not: for thou knowest oure manysions in the wyldernes: and thou hast bene to vs in steade of eyes. And yf thou go with vs loke what goodnesse the Lorde sheweth vnto vs: the same wyll we shewe vnto the.

And they departed from the moūt of the Lorde, thre dayes iorney: and the arcke of the testament of the Lorde wēt before them in the thre dayes iourneys, to serche out a resting place for them. And the Lorde made a shadowe for the thowout the cloude by day, when they went out of the tentes.

¶ And

And it fortuned, that whā the arch went forth, Moyses sayde: * Ryle vp Lorde, and let thynne enemyes be scattered: and let them that hate the, flye befoze the. And when the arch rested, he sayde: Returns O Lorde vnto the many thousandes of Israel.

¶ The xi. Chapter.

The people murmureth. They desire flesh. They lothe manna. The murmuringe of Moyses. The Lord beareth the burden of Moyses to seruente of the auncestres, & they prophesy. It raineth quailles. The lecher countres are punished.

Ad it fortuned, that whā * the people dyd wyckedlype, it was a dyspleasure in the eares of the Lorde. And when the Lorde heard it, hys countenance was prouoked to wrath, and the fyre of the Lorde burnt amonge them, and consumed them that were the vttermoost of the hooste. And the people cried vnto Moyses. And whā Moyses made intercession vnto the Lorde, & fyre quenched. And the name of þ place was called Thaberah, because the fyre of þ Lorde burnt amonge them.

And the rascall people that was amonge them, fell a lustyng, and turned them selues and wepte (euen as dyd also the chyldren of Israel) and sayde: who shall geue vs flesh to eat? we remember the fysh whych we dyd eate in Egypt for naught, & the cucumbers and melons, lekes, onyons & garlike. But now our soule is dyed awaye, for we can se nothyng els, saue Manna.

 Exo. xvi. a.* The Manna was as * coziander seed, and (to se to) lyke Bedellyp. And the people wet about and gathered it, and ground it in mylles, or bet it in morters, and baked it in pannes, and made cakes of it. And the taill of it was lyke vnto þ tayll of an oyle cake. And when the dewe fell downe vpon the hoost in the nyght, the Manna fell vpon it.

End when Moyses herde the people wepe thozoutont they: householders, euery mā in þ doze of hys tente, the face of the Lorde was prouoked vnto wrath exceedingly: & it greued Moyses also. And Moyses sayde vnto the Lorde: wherfoze hast thou dealt cruelly with thy seruant? And wherfoze haue I not found fauoure in thy sight, saying that thou puttest the weyght of all this people vpon me: haue I conceaied all this people? Or haue I begotten the: that I shuldest saye vnto me: carry the in thy bosome (as a nurse beareth þ suckynge childe) vnto the lande, which thou swarest vnto they: fathers: where shulde I haue flesh, to geue vnto all this people, whiche wepe befoze me, sayinge: geue vs flesh that we maye eat. I am not able to beare all this people alone, sayinge it is to heuy for me. If thou deale thus wyth me, kill me, I praye the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, that I se not my wretchednes.

 Exo. xvi. b.* And the Lorde sayde vnto Moyses, * gather vnto me. Ixx. me of the elders of Israel, whiche thou knowest, that they are þ elders of the people and officers ouer them, & thou shalt byng the vnto the tabernacle of byness: & they maye stand there with the. And I wyl come downe, and talke with þe, and take of the sprete which is vpon the, and put vpon them, and they shal beare the burden of the people wyth the, lest thou be constrained to beare it alone.

And saye thou vnto the * people: be halowed agaynst tomorrow, and ye shall eat flesh: for your whynnyng is in the eares of þ Lorde, seinge ye sayd: who shall geue vs flesh to eat? we were happye in Egypt: therefore the Lorde wyll geue you flesh, and ye shall eat. Ye shall not eat one daye nor two, nor fyue dayes, neyther ten, nor twentye dayes: but euen a moneth longe vntyll it come out at the nastreis of you: and make you to puke, because that ye haue cast the Lorde: whych is amonge you: and haue wepte befoze hym, sayinge: why came we thus out of Egypt?

 Exo. xvi. c.* And Moyses sayde: * fyre hundred thousande soteims are there of the people, among which I am. And thou hast said: I wil geue them flesh, that they maye eat a moneth longe. Shall the shepe & the ox be slayne for them, to fynde them: ether shall all the fysh of the see be gathered together for them to serue the? And the Lorde sayd vnto Moyses: Shal * the Lordes hande be waxed weaker? Thou shalt se now whether my word shal come to passe vnto the, or not.

And Moyses went out, and tolde the people the saying of the Lorde, and gathered the lxx. elders of the people, and set them rounde aboute the tabernacle. And the Lorde came downe in a cloude, and spake vnto hym, and toke of the sprete that was vpon hym, and gaue it vnto the lxx. elders. And it fortuned that when the sprete rested vpon them, they prophesied, & dyd not cease. But there remayned two of þ in the hoost: the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of þ other Ebedad. And the sprete rested vpon the, and they were of them that were wyrtten, & yet not out vnto the tabernacle, but prophesied in the hoost. And there ran a yonge mā, and tolde Moyses and sayde: Eldad and Ebedad do prophecy in the hoost. And Josua þ sonne of Nun the seruante of Moyses one of hys yonge men, answered and sayd: master Moyses, * forbyd them. And Moyses sayde vnto him: enuyest thou for my sake? * wolde God that all the Lordes people coulde prophesy: and that the Lorde wold put hys sprete vpon them. And Moyses gat him into the hoost, & the elders of Israel.

And there went forth a wynde from the Lorde: and * broughte quailles from the sea: and let

and let the fall about the hoste, euen a dayes iourney rōide aboute on euery syde of þe hoste and a (they are ripe in the ayre) as it were two cu-bites hye ouer the earth. And þe people stode vp, and all that daye & all that nyght, ad on the moiwne they gathered quayles. And he that gathered a lytle, gathered ten homers ful And they spred them a bryde rōunde aboute the hoste. * And whyle the flesch was yet betweene they, teth, and per it was chewed vp: beholde, the countenance of the Lorde was moued agaynst þe people, & the Lorde * slewe the people with an exceedinge great plague.
And the name of the place was called, the grauens of luste, because they buried the people that lusted, there. And the people toke they: * iorneyed from the grauens of lust vnto hazeroth, and bode at hazeroth.

¶ The. xiiij. Chapter.

¶ Aaron & Miriam grudge agaynst Moyses.
¶ Miriam is stricken with leproly, and healed at the prayer of Moyses.

Ad * Miriam and Aaron spake agaynst Moyses, because of the womā of Inde whych he had taken: for he had takē to wyfe one of In-de. And they sayd: Hath the Lorde in dede spoken onlye thow Moyses: hath he not spoken also by us? And the Lorde hearde it. But Moyses was a very * meke man, aboue all the mē of the earth. And the Lorde spake at once vnto Moyses vnto Aaron and to Miriam, come out ye thre vnto * the tabernacle of witnesse and they came out all thre.

And the Lorde came downe in the * pyller of the cloude, and stode in the * doore of the tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam.
¶ And they went out both of the. And he sayd: heare my wordes. If there be a prophete of the Lordes amonge you, I wilde knowne of hym in a vylion: and wyl speake vnto hym in slepe. My seruānt Moyses is not so, which is saythful in al myne house. Vnto him wyl I speake * mouth to mouth in a vylion: but in rydels and symilitudes doeth not he se the Lorde. Wherefore then were ye not afrayed to speake agaynst my seruānt Moyses? And the Lorde was moued vnto wrath agaynst them, and he went his waye: and the cloude departed from the tabernacle. And beholde, Miriam was become * leprous, as it were shode. And Aaron looked vpon Miriam & beholde, she was leprous, and Aaron said vnto Moyses: I beseeche the my Lorde, put not þe synne vpon vs, which we haue foolishly committed ad synned. Oh, let her not be as one that commeth ouer of hye mothers wombe, and whose halfe flesch is eaten awaye.

¶ And Moyses cryed vnto the Lorde, saying: Heale her O God, I beseeche the. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moyses: If her father had spyt in her face, shulde he not be ashamed seuen dayes? let her be shut out of the hoste seuen dayes, and after that let her be receaued in agayne. And Miriam was shut oute of the hoste seuen dayes, & the people remoued not, tyl she was brought in agayne. * And afterwarde the people remoued fro hazeroth, and pytched in the wylbernes of þe paran,

¶ The. xliij. Chapter.

Ad the Lorde spake vnto Moses sayenge: * Sende men out to searche the lande of Canaa whych I geue vnto the chyld-zen of Israel: of euerye trybe of they, fathers shall ye sende a man, and let the all be suche as are rulars amonge them. And Moyses at the commaun-dement of the Lorde sent forth out of the wylbernesse of þe paran suche men as were al hea-des of the chyldzen of Israel: They, names are these.

Of the trybe of Ruben, Sammua the sonne of zacur. Of the trybe of Symeon, Saphat the sonne of hozi. Of the trybe of Juda, Caleb the sonne of Iephune. Of the trybe of Isachar, Igeal the sonne of Joseph.
Of the trybe of Ephraim, Osea the sonne of Aun. Of the trybe of Ben Iamin, Balchi þe sonne of Raphu. Of the trybe of zabulon, Gadiel the sonne of Gadi. Of the trybe of Joseph, namelpe of the trybe of Manasse, Gaddi the sonne of Gusi. Of þe trybe of Da-uid, Amiel the sonne of Semai. Of the trybe of Aser, Serhur the sonne of Michael. Of the trybe of Neptali, Nabezi þe sonne of Naphsi. Of the trybe of Gad, Suel the sonne of Nachi. These are the names of the mē, whiche Moyses sente to spyre oute the lande. And Moyses called the name of Osea the sonne of Aun, Iosua.

And Moyses sent them forth to spyre oute the lande of Canaan, and sayde vnto them:
get you vp thys waye southwarde, that ye mā go vp into the hye contreye, and se the lande what maner thyng it is, & the people that dwelleth therein: whither they be strong or weake, ether fewe or many, and what the lande is that they dwell in, whither it be good or bad: and what maner of cyties they be, that they dwell in, whither they dwell in tentis or walled towne: and what maner of lande it is: whether it be fat or leane, and whether there be treys therein or not. Be of a good corage, and bynyge of the frute of the lande. And it was about the tyme that grapes are ripe & tyme.

And so they went vp, & searched oute the lande from the wylbernesse of zin vnto Hebub, as men come to Hemach, & they ascended vnto the south, and came vnto Hebron, where Adam was & Belai & Chalmam, þe sonne of the sonnes of Enack. Hebrs was buylt sent peate before 30an in Egypt. And they came vnto the ryuer of Escol, and cut downe ther a bzaunche wyth one cloustre of grapes and twayne bare it vpo a staffe: & they brought also of the pomgranates and of the fygges.

And the place was called, the ryuer Escoll:
because of the cloustre of grapes whiche the chyliden of Israel cut downe thence.

D And they turned backe agayne from fear chynge of the lande after forty dayes. And they wente and came to Moses and Aaron and vnto all the multitude of the chyliden of Isral, in the wilderness of Pharan: which is Cades, and brought them word, and also vnto al the congregacion, and shewed them the frute of the lande. And they tolde hym, and sayde: we came vnto the lande wherher thou sendest vs, and surely it floweth with mylke and honye: and here is of the frute of it. Neuerthelesse, the people be stronge that dwel in the lande, and the cyties are walled and exceadyngre greate: and mozeouer, we sawe 3 chyliden of Enack there. The Amalechites dwell in the south contreye, and the Hebrites, Jebusites, & the Amozites dwell in the mountaynes, and the Cananites dwel by the see, and by the coaste of Iordan.

D And Caleb spyled the ^{on} (murmur that was raped vp.) Of 3 people before Moses, saying: we wyl go vp, and conquere it: for we be able to overcome it. But the men that wente vp wyth hym, sayde: We be not able to goo vp against 3 people: for they are stronger tha we. And they brought vpan euell report of the lande whych they had searched, sayeng: vnto the chyliden of Israel: the lande which we haue gone thowoe to searche it out, is a lande that eateth vp the inhabytens therof: and the people that we sawe in it, are me of a great stature. And there we sawe also gy-auntens, the chyliden of Enack, whych come of the gyantens. And we seemed in our syght as it were greshoppers, & so we dyd in they syght.

¶ The. xliii. Chapter.

C The people murmur agaynst God, and wolde haue koned Caleb and Josue. The searchers of the lande dye. Amalech heloth the Hebrites.

A And all the multitude of the people cryed out, and wept thowow out that nyght, and all the chyliden of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron.

And the whole congregacyon sayd vnto them: wolde God that we had dyed in the lande of Egypte, eyther that we had dyed in thys wylidnes. Wherefore hath the Lorde brought vs vnto thys lande to fal vpon the sworde: and that our wyues, and our chyl-den shulde be a praye? Were it not better, that we retourne vnto Egypt agayne? And they sayd one to another: We wyl make a captayne, & retourne vnto Egypte agayne.

But Moses and Aaron fell on theyr faces before all the congregacyon and multy-tude of the chyliden of Israel. And Josue the sonne of Nun, and Caleb the sonne of Jo-phune (whiche were of the that searched the land) rente theyr clothes, and spake vnto all the compagne of the chyliden of Israel, sayinge: The lande which we walked thowoe to searche it, is a very good lande. If 3 Lord hath lust to vs, he wyl byngre vs into thys lande and geue it vs, whych is such a lande as floweth wyth mylke and honye. But in any wyse rebell not ye agaynst the Lorde.

* Herther nede ye to feare the people of the lande: for they are but bread for vs. Theyr shadowe is departed from them, & the Lorde is with vs, feare them not therfore.

But all they which were in that multy-tude, hade stoned them wyth stones. And the gloze of the Lorde appeared in the tabernacle of wytnesse, before all the chyliden of Israel. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: Howe longe do this people prouoke me, and howe longe wil it be yer they beleue me: for all 3 signes which I haue shewed among the I wyl smyte them wyth the pestilence and destrope them: and wyl make of the a greater nacyon and myghtier then they.

And Moses sayde vnto the Lorde: then the Egypcyans shall heare it, for 3 brought-test thys people in thy myght from amonge them. And it wylbe tolde to the inhabytens of thys lade also: for they haue hearde lyke wyle, that thou Lorde art amonge this people: and that thou Lord art sene face to face and that thy cloude standeth ouer them, and that * thou goest before them by daye tyme in a pyller of a cloude, and in a pyller of fyre by nyght. If thou shalte kyll all thys people as they were but one man, then the naci-ons which haue hearde the fame of the, wyl saye: The Lorde is not able to byng in this people into the lande, whych he swaue vnto them: but hath slayne them in the wyl-dernesse.

And nowe I beseeche the, let the power of my Lorde be great, accordyngre as thou hast spoken, sayinge: the Lorde is longer yer he be angrye, and full of mercede, and suffereth in-quitye, and synne, and leaueth no man innocent, and wylteth the vnyghte outnesse of the fathers vpon the chyliden, in the thyrde and fourth generacyon: be mercyfull I be-seche the vnto the synne of thys people, accordyngre vnto thy greate mercede, as thou hast forgiven thys people from Egypte, vntill nowe.

And the Lorde sayde: I haue forgiven it, accordyngre.

it, according to thy request. But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord. But all those men which have sene my glory and my miracles which I did in Egypt & in the wilderness ad haue tempted me nowe thys ten tymes, and will not hearken vnto my voyce, shall not see the lande which I swaie vnto theyr fathers: neither shall any of them that prouoked me see it. But my seruauit *Caleb: with whome there was another maner of sperte: and because he hath folowed me vnto the vrmooft hym will I byng into the lande which he hath walked in, and his seed shall inheret it, and also the Amalechites & Cananites which dwell in y playne contrey. To morow turne you, and get you into the wilderness: euen by the waye of the red see.

And the Lord spake vnto Moses & Aaron, saying: howe long both thys euell multitude murmur agaynst me? I haue heard y murmuringes of y chyldren of Israel with the which they murmur agaynst me. Tell them therfore: As truly as I live (sayth the Lord) I will do vnto you euen as ye haue spoken in myne eares. Your carkasses shall lye in this wilderness. And al you that were tolde thowowte youre nombres, from .xx. yere and aboue (whiche haue murmured agaynst me) shall not come into the land, ouer which I slyfted vp myne hande, to make you dwell therein, saue Caleb the sonne of Iephune, and Josua the sonne of Nun.

But your chyldre which ye sayde shulde be a praye, them I will byng in, & they shall haue the lande which ye haue refused, and your carkasses shall lye in this wilderness. And your chyldren shall wader in this wilderness .xl. yeaeres, and suffer for your whoredom, vntyll your carkasses be wasted in the wilderness, after the nombze of the dayes in which ye searched out the lande, euen forty dayes, * euery daye for a yeaer shall ye beare your vnrpygdcousnes euen .xl. yeaer, and ye shall knowe my dyspleasure. I the Lord haue sayde, that I will do it vnto all thys euell congregacion that are gathered together agaynst me. For in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and here they shall dye.

And the men which Moses sent to searche the lade, & which (when they came agayne) made all the people to murmur before him and brought vp a sleaunders vpon the lande, enst those men that dyd byngge vp y sleaunders vpon it, as though it had bene euell dyed in a great * plage before the Lord. But Josua the sonne of Nun, ad Caleb the sonne of Iephune which were of the men that wente to search the lande, slyued still. And Moses tolde these sayinges vnto all the chyldren of Israel, and the people toke great sorowe.

And they rose vp early in the morninge, and gat them vp into the toppes of the mountayne, sayinge: * lo, we be here, and will go vnto the place of whych the Lord sayd vnto vs, for we haue synned. And Moses sayde: wherfore will ye go on thys maner, beyonde the worde of the Lord? it wyl not come well to passe: go not vp therfore: (for the Lord is not amonge you) that ye be not slayne before your enemyes. For the Amalechites and the Cananites are there before you, & ye will fall vpon the swarde because ye are turned awaye from the Lord, & the Lord will not be with you.

But they presumed obstinately to go vp into the hyll top. Neuerthelater, the arch of the testament of the Lord, and Moses departed not out of the hooft. Then the Amalechites and the Cananites, which dwell in that hyll, came downe, and smote them, and betwed them euen vnto Hozma.

The .xx. Chapter.

The drinckoffringes of them that enter into the lande. The punishment of hym that synneth of a rogansey of ythe.

And the Lord spake vnto Moses, saying: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel and saye vnto the: * when ye be come into the lande of your habytacions, which I geue vnto you, & wyl offer an offeryng vnto the Lord. Namely a burnt offryng of a speyall sacrifice, eyther of a vowe or of a wyllyng mynde, and in your principal festes, to make a swete sauoure vnto y Lord of the oren or of the floske.

Then * let hym that offereth dys offeryng vnto the Lord, byng also a meat offryng of a tenth deale of flour, myngled w the fourth parte of an hin of oyle, and the fourth part of an hin of wyne for a drinck offryng, and offer with the burnt offryng or any other offeryng: when it is a lambe. Or yf it be a ram, thou shalt offer for a meat offryng, two tenth deales of flour, myngled with the thyrde parte of an hin of oyle: and for a drinck offryng, thou shalt offer y thyrde parte of an hin of wyne for a swete sauoure vnto the Lord.

And when thou offerest a bullocke for a burnt offryng or for a special vowe or peace offryng vnto the Lord, let him byng with a bullock a meat offryng of .iii. tenth deales of flour myngled with halfe an hin of oyle. And thou shalt byng for a drinck offryng euen halfe an hin of wyne, for an offryng of a swete sauoure vnto the Lord. After thys maner, shall it be done for an ore, or for a ra, or for a lambe or a hyd. Loke what nombze thou makest in these, such a nombze shalt thou make in the also. And according to the nombze of suche offrynges, thou shalt encrease y meat offrynges and the drinck offrynges.

All that are of your selues shall do these thinges after this maner. so offer an offering of swete sauoure vnto the Lorde. And yf a straunger sogeorne with you, or whosoener be amonge you in your generacions, & wyll offer an offering of a swete sauoure vnto the Lorde: euen as ye do, so he shal do. One ordynauce shalbe both for you of the congregacion, and also for the straunger. It shalbe an ordynauce for euer in youre generacions, both vnto ydu and to the straunger before y Lorde. One lawe and one maner shal serue, both for you & for the straunger that sogeorneth with you.

C And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel, and sape vnto them: * When ye be come into the lande to the which I byng you, then whē ye wyll eate of the breade of the lande, ye shall take vp an heueoffryng vnto the Lorde. Ye shall take vp a cake of the fyrst of your dow for an heueoffryng, * as ye do y heueoffring of the barne, euen so ye shall hene it. Of the fyrst of your dowe ye shal geue vnto y Lorde an heueoffryng in your generacions.

* Leu. xxiij. b

And yf ye ouerse youre selues, and obserue not all these commaundmentes, which the Lorde hath spoken vnto Moyses, euen al that the Lorde hath commaunded you by the hande of Moyses from the first daye that the Lorde commaunded Moyses, and hence forwarde amonge your generacions. Yf it happen that ought is comytted ignorantly of the congregacion, al the multitude shal offer a bullocke for a burnt offering, to be a swete sauoure vnto the Lorde, with the meat offering & drynck offering therto, accordyng to the maner, and an he goate for synne. And the preaste shall make an atonement for all the multitude of the chyldren of Israel, and it shalbe forgiven them: for it is ignorance. And they shall byng the they offering for a sacrifice vnto the Lorde: and they synne offering before the Lorde for they ignorance. And it shalbe forgiven vnto all the multitude of the chyldren of Israel, and vnto the straunger that dwelleth amonge you: seeing all the people were in ignorance. * Yf any one soule synne thoroowe ignorance, he shal byng a he goate of a yere olde for synne. And the preast shall make an atonement for the soule that synned ignorantly, with the synneoffering before the Lorde to reconcle him: and that it maye be forgiven him. And both thou that arte bozne of the chyldren of Israel and the straunger that dwelleth amonge you, shal haue both one lawe, who so doth synne thoroowe ignorance.

* Leu. xxiij. c

But the soule that doth oughte presumptuously, whether he be an Israelyte or a straunger, the same blasphemeth the Lorde. And that soule shalbe coted out fro amonge this people, because he hath despyed y commandment of the Lorde, & hath broken his commaundment, that soule therfore shal perishe, & his synne shalbe vpon hym.

And whyle the chyldren of Israel were in the wyldernesse, they founde a man that gathered styches vpon the * Sabboth daye. And they that founde him gatheringe styches, broughte hym vnto Moyses and Aaron and vnto all the congregacion: * and they put hym in warde, seyinge it was not declared what shulde be done vnto him. And y Lorde sayde vnto Moyses: Let the man bye: and let al the multitude stone him with stones withoute the host. And al the multitude broughte hym withoute the host, & stoned hym with stones, and he dyed as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel and byd them: that they * make them gardes in the quarters of they garments to row out they generacions, & put vpon the garde of the quarters a ryband of pelowe sylke. And the garde shalbe vnto you to loke vpon it, & ye maye remembre all the commaundmentes of the Lorde, and do the: and that ye like not after youre owne hearte or youre owne eyes: after the whiche ye wle to go a whyrng: but ye shall remembre rather and do all my commaundmentes, and be holy vnto youre God: I am the Lorde youre God, whiche broughte you oute of the lande of Egypte, for to be your God. I am the Lorde youre God.

C The. xvi. Chapter.

C The rebellion of Cozath, Dathan and Abiram.

Ad * Cozath the sonne of Jethar the sonne of Cadath the sonne of Leui, and Dathan Abiram the sonne of Elvad, and On the sonne of Peleth the sonne of Ruben: rose up before Moyses, with other men of the chyldren of Israell, two hundred and fiftie, whiche were capaynes of the multitude, greute and famous men in the congregacion: and they gathered them selues together agaynst Moyses and Aaron, and sayde vnto unto the: ye make much to do, seynge all þe multitude are holy every one of them, and the Lorde is amonge them. Why beaue ye your selues vp aboue the congregacyon of þe Lorde?

And when Moyses hearde it, he fell vpon his face, and spake vnto Corah and vnto all his company, sayinge: to morowe the Lorde wyll shewe who are hys, who is holy, & who oughte to appoyche nye vnto hym, and who he hath chosen to come to hym. This do therfore, take you syzypans, both Corah and all his company and do syze therein, and put cens in them befoze the Lorde to morowe. And þe man whome the Lorde doth chole, the same shalbe holy. Ye make much to do, ye chyldren of Leuy.

And Moyses sayde vnto Corah: * heare ye chyldren of Leui: It is but a small thyng vnto you, that the God of Israell hath sepe- rated you from the multitude of Israell: and brought you to hym selfe, to do the seruyce of the dwellynge place of þe Lorde, and to stande befoze the multitude, and to mynstre vnto hym: he hath taken the to him and all thy bye then the sonnes of Leui with the, ad seke ye the offyce of the pearsse also: For which cause both thou & all thy company are gathered toge ther agaynst þe Lorde: And what is Aaron, that ye murmur agaynst hym?

And Moyses sent, and called Dathan, and Abiram the sonnes of Eliab, whiche sayde: We wyll not come vp. Is it a small thyng that thou haste brought vs oute of a land þe floweth wyth mylke and hony, to kyll vs in the wyldernes, and to rapne ouer vs also? Hast thou brought vs vnto a land that floweth wyth mylke and honye, and geuen vs inheritaunce of felde and vyneyardes? Wyle thou pull out the eyes of these men: we wyll not come vp.

And Moyses wared very angry, and sayd vnto the Lorde. Turne not thou vnto theyr offerynge. I haue not taken so muche as an asse from theym, neyther haue I burte any of them. And Moyses sayde vnto Corah: Be thou and all thy company befoze the Lorde: both thou, they, and Aaron to morowe. And take every man his censler, & put cens in them that ye maye offre befoze the Lorde: every man of the two hundred and syttee take hys censoure, thou also Aaron, that every one may haue his censler. And they toke every man his censler, and put syze in them, & sayde cens ther on, and stode in the doze of the tabernacle of wytnesse wyth Moyses and Aaron. And Corah gathered all the congregacyon agaynst the vnto the doze of the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

And the glory of the Lorde appeared vnto all þe congregacyon. And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses and Aaron, sayinge: sepe- rate your selues from amonge this congregacyon that I may consume them at once. And they fell vpon theyr faces and sayde. * O mooste myghtye God of the spertes of all fleshe, yf one man hath synned, wyle thou be wrothe with all the multitude? And þe Lorde spake vnto Moyses sayinge: speake vnto the congregacyon and saye: Get you awaye from about the dwellyng of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram. And Moyses rose vp, and went vnto Dathan and Abirā, and the elders of Israell folowed him. And he spake vnto þe congregacyon, sayinge: departe from the tentes of these wicked men, and touche nothyng of theyr: lest ye perishe in al their synnes. And so they gate them from the dwellyng of Corah, Dathan and Abiram on every syde. And Dathan and Abiram came out and stode in the doze of theyr tentes wyth theyr wyues, theyr sonnes and theyr lytle chyldren.

And Moyses sayde: here by þe shal knowe þe Lorde hath sent me to do all these woordes, and that I haue not done them of myne owne mynde. Yf these men dye þe cometh death of all men: or yf they be visyted after the visytacyon of al men, then the Lorde hath not sent me. But and yf the Lorde make a newe thyng, and the earth open her mouth and swalowe them vp wyth all that they haue: and they go downe quyk into hell: then ye shal vnderstande, that these men haue prouoked the Lorde.

And it fortuneth þe assone as he had made an ende of speakenge all these wordes, * the grounde cloued asonder that was vnder the: & the erth opened her mouth, and swalowe them vp, and theyr houses, and all the men that were with Corah, and al their goodes. And they and all that they had, went downe alyue vnto hell, and the earth closed vpo the: and they perished from amonge the congregacyon. And all Israell that were aboute them fled at the crye of them. And they sayde: lest þe earth swalowe vs by also. And there cam out a fyre from the Lorde, and consumed the two hundred and syttee men that offered cens.

And þe Lorde spake vnto Moyses sayinge: Speake vnto Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the pearsse, that he take vp the censers oute of the burnyng, and shatter the fyre here & there, for the censers of these synners are halowed in theyr deatthes: and let them make of them thynne beaten plates for a couerynge of the aultare. For they offered them befoze the Lorde, and therefore they are halowed, and they shalbe a spgne vnto þe chyldren of Israell.

And Eleazar the pearsse toke the censers whych they that were burnte had offered, & beate them thynne for a couerynge of the aultare, to be a remembraunce vnto the children of Israel, & no straunger which is not of the seed of Aaron, come nere to offer cens before the Lorde, that it happē not vnto hym lyke as vnto Cozab and his companye, as the Lorde sayd of him by the hāde of Moyses.

But on the morowe all the multitude of the chyldren of Israel murmured agaynst Moyses and Aaron, sayinge: ye haue kyllēd the people of the Lord. And it fortunēd that when the multitude was gathered agaynst Moyses and Aaron, they looked toward the tabernacle of witnessse. And behold, when they were entred into it, the cloude couered it, and the glozpe of the Lorde appeared. And Moyses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of witnessse. And the Lord spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: Set you from amonge this congregation, that I maye consume them quickly. And they fell vpon theyr faces.

¶ And Moyses sayd vnto Aaron: take a censser, and put fyre therein out of the aulter, and poure on cens, and go quickly vnto the congregaciō, & thou mayest obtayne the forgiveness for them. For there is wrath gone oute from the Lorde, and there is a plague begon. And Aaron toke as Moyses commaunded him, and ran into the myddes of the congregaciō and beholde, the plague was begon amonge the people, & he put on cens, and made an attonement for the people. And when he stood betwene the deed and them that were alpye, the plague ceased. They that dyed in þe plague were. xiiii. thousande and seven hundred: besyde them that dyed aboute the busynesse of Cozab. And Aaron went agayne vnto Moyses before the doze of the tabernacle of witnessse, and the plague ceased.

¶ And the Lord spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Israel: and take of euery prince of them a rod, after the houses of theyr fathers, euen twelue rodde: and wyte euery mans name vpon his rod. And write Aarons name vpon the rod of Leui: for euery rod is for an house of theyr fathers. And put them in the tabernacle of witnessse, euen in the place where I mete you. And the mans rod whom I chole, shall blossom. And I wyl make cease from me the grudginges of the chyldren of Israel wherby they grudge agaynst you.

¶ And Moyses spake vnto the chyldren of Israel, and all the princes gaue hym euery prince ouer theyr fathers houses, a rod, euen twelue rodde: and the rodde of Aaron was amonge the rodde. And Moyses put the rodde before the Lorde, in the Tabernacle of wytnes. And on the morowe, Moyses went into the tabernacle of wytnes: and beholde, the rod of Aaron for the house of Leui was budded, and bare blossomes and almondes. And Moyses brought out all the rodde before the Lorde vnto all the chyldren of Israel: and they looked vpo them, & toke euery man hys rod.

¶ And the Lorde sayde vnto Moyses: bring Aarons rod agayne before the wytnes to be kepte for a token of the chyldrens rebellyon and that theyr murmuringe maye cease from me, and that they dye not. And Moyses did as the Lorde commaunded him, euen so dyd he. And the chyldren of Israel spake vnto Moyses sayinge: beholde, we are wasted awaye & consumed: we all come to naught: whosoever commeth npe the dwelling of the Lorde dyeth. Shall we utterly consume awaye?

¶ The. xliii. Chapter.

¶ The office of the Leuites. The synode and his truces must be geuen them. Aarons heritage.

¶ And the Lorde sayd vnto Aaron: thou and thy sonnes and thy fathers house with the shal beare the faute of that which is done amysse in the holpe place. And thou and thy sonnes with the shal beare the faute of that which is done amysse in your priesthode.

¶ They shal wayte vpon the & vpon al the tabernacle: onely let them not come npe the vesselles of the sanctuary and the alter, that they & ye also dye not. And they shal be by & and wayte on the tabernacle of wytnes for all the scrupce of the tabernacle, and let no straunger come npe vnto you.

¶ Therfore shall ye kepe the holy place and the aulter, & ther shall nomore wrath vpon the chyldren of Israel: beholde, I haue take your brethren the Leuites from amonge the chyldren of Israel, whiche as a gyft of yours are geue vnto the Lorde, to do the scrupce of the tabernacle of witnessse. Therfore shalt thou & thy sonnes w the take hede vnto your priestes office for all thynges & pertayne vnto the aulter, & for all & are with in the dayle. And se & ye serue: for I haue geuen your priestes office vnto you as a gyfte: and therfore the straunger that cometh npe, must be slayne.

¶ And the Lorde spake vnto Aaron: beholde, I haue geuen the the keepynge of myne deuor offeringes, of all the halowed thynges of the chyldren of Israel. Euen vnto the, I haue geuen them for the anoyntinge, and to thy sonnes, for a dutye for euer. They shall be thyne

And the Lord spake vnto Mo: * þ shal haue none inheritaunce in their land, neyther shalt thou haue any parte amonge them. I am thy parte and thy inheritaunce amonge the chyldzen of Israel. Beholde, I haue gyuen þ chyldzen of Leui all the tenth in Israel to inheryte, for the seruyce which they serue in the tabernacle of wytnesse. Seyther must the chyldzen of Israel henceforth come nye in the tabernacle of wytnesse and beare their Israel they possesse none inheritaunce. But the tythes of the chyldzen of Israel, which they paye as an beneofferpyng vnto þ Lord, I haue geuen the Leuites to inherite. And therfore I haue sayde vnto the. Amonge the Therfore thou shalt saye vnto the: when

Why haue ye broughte the congregacion of the Lozde vnto this wyldernes: that both we & our catell shuld dye in it? Wherefore haue ye made vs to go oute of Egypt, to byngne vs into this vnglacous place, whiche is no place of seed nor of fygges nor vynes, nor of pomgranates, nether is there any water to bynke?

And Moyses and Aaron went from the congregacion vnto ʒ doze of the tabernacle of wytnesse, & fell vpon theyr faces. And they cryed vnto the Lozde and sayde, O Lozde God heare the crye of this people, and open them thy treasure, ouen a founteyne of leuyn water, that they maye be satysfied, and that they murmurynge maye cease. And ʒ glozy of the Lozde appeared vnto them. And the Lozde spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: take the rod, and gather thou and thy brother Aaron the congregacion togyther, and speake vnto the rocke before theyr eyes, and it shall gyue forth his water. And thou shalt byngne them water out of the rocke, to gyue ʒ company bynke, and theyr bestes also.

* And Moyses toke the rod from before the Lozde, as he comaunded hym. And Moyses & Aaron gathered the congregacion togyther before the rocke: and Moyses sayde vnto them: heare ye rebellions, must we sette you water out of this rocke? And Moyses lyfte vp his hande, and with his rodde he smote the rocke two tymes, and the water came out aboundauntlye, and the multitude drank and theyr bestes also.

And the Lozde spake vnto Moyses, & Aaron: bycause ye beleued me not, to sanctifye me in the eyes of the chyldzen of Israel, therfore, ye shall not byngne this congregacion into the lande whiche I haue gyven them. This is the water of stryfe, bycause ʒ chyldzen of Israel stroue with the Lozde, and he was sanctified in them.

And Moyses sent messengers from Cades vnto the kynge of Edom. Thus sayeth thy brother Israel: Thou knowest all ʒ traunaple that hath happened vs. Oure fathers went downe into Egypt, and we haue dwelt in Egypt a longe tyme, and the Egyptians hated vs & oure fathers. And whā we cryed vnto unto the Lorde, he herde our voyce, and sent an aungell, & hath set vs vp out of Egypt. And beholde we are in Cadex, euen in p vttermost cpte of thy border. We wil go now thowow thy coultre * but we wil not go thro rowe the felde of wynepardes, neyther wyl we drynke of the water of the fountaynes: we wyl go by the kynges hye way, and nei ther tourne vnto the ryght hande nor to the left, vntyl we be past thy coultre. And Edom answered hym. Thou shalt not go by me, lest I come out agaynst the with the sword.

 The chyldren of Israel sayd vnto hym: we wil go by the beaten way: and yf I and my cattell drynke of thy water, I wyl paye for it, I wyl but onelye (without any harme) go thowow on my fete. he answered: Thou shalt not go thowowe. And Edom came out agaynst hym with moche people, and with a myghtye power. And thus Edom denyed to gyue Israel passage thowow his coultre: wherfore Israel turned a waye from hym.

And the chyldren of Israel departed from Cadex, and came vnto mount ho: with all the congregacion. And the Lorde spake vnto Moles and Aaron in mount ho:, harde by the coost of the lande of Edom, sayinge: Aaron shalbe gathered vnto his people, for he shall not come into the lande, whiche I haue gyuen vnto the chyldren of Israel, by-cause ye disobeyed my mouth at p water of stryfe. Take Aaron and Eleazar his sonne and bynge them vp into mounte ho:, and p shal strypp Aaron out of his vestementes and put them vpon Eleazar his sonne, and Aaron shalbe gathered vnto his people and shall dye there.

And Moles dyd as the Lorde commaunded: and they wet vp into mount ho: in the syght of all the multitude. And Moles toke of Aarons clothes, and put them vpo Eleazar his sonne * and Aaron dyed there in the topp of the mount. And Moles and Eleazar came downe out of p mount. When all the multitude sawe that Aaron was deed, they mourned for Aaron therty dayes, tho-rowe out all the householdes of Israel.

¶ The .xxi. Chapter.

¶ Israel banquisheth kyngs Arab. The hye serpent tes synge them. The kynges Sedon and Og are overcome in battayle.

¶ And when kyng * Arad the Cananite which dwelt towarde the south, harde tell p Israel came by the waye that the spyes had founde oute, he foughte agaynst Israel, and toke some of them prisoners. And Israel vowed a vowe vnto the Lorde, and sayd: Yf thou wylt deliuer this people into my hnde, I wil vterly destroy theyr cryes. And the Lorde herde the voyce of Israel, and deliuered the the Cananites.
 And they destroyed them and theyr cities, & called the name of the place * horma.

* And they departed from mount ho: by the waye of the red see: to copasse the lande of Edom. And the soule of the people sayn-ted by the way. And p people spake agaynst God & agaynst Moles * wherfore hast thou brought vs out of Egypte, for to dye in the wilderness: for here is neither byed nor water, & our soule lotheth this lyght byed.

* Wherfore the Lorde sent spher pe serpentes amonge the people, whiche stonge them: and moche people of Israel dyed. Therfore the people came to Moles and sayde: we haue synned, for we haue spoken agaynst p Lorde & agaynst the, * make intercessyon to the Lord, that he take awaye the serpentess from vs. And Moles made intercessyon for the people. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: make the a fyre serpent, and set it vp for a sygne, p as many as are byttē, maye loke vpon it, & lyue * And Moles made a serpent of brasse, and set it vp for a sygn. And when the serpentess had bytten any man, he beheld the serpent of brasse, and was healed

* And the chyldren of Israel departed thence, and pytched in Oboch. And they departed fro Oboch, and pitched at the heapes of Abarim: euen in the wylderneesse whiche is by the playne of Moab on the east syde.
 And they remoued thence, and pitched vpo the ryuer of zarad. And they departed thre and pitched on p other syde of Arno, which is in the wylderneesse, and cometh out of the coostes of the Amozites: for Arnon is the border of Moab, betwene Moab and the Amozites. Wherfore, it is spoken in p boke of the warre of the Lorde, what thynge he dyd in the red see, and in the ryuer of Arnon And the hed of the ryuers that goeth downe to the dwellyng of Ar, and stretcheth vnto the border of Moab, from thence it turneth vnto Beer. The same is Beer, as wel wher of the Lorde spake vnto Moles: gather the people togyther, and I wyl gyue them water. Then Israel sange this songe. Arple by well, synge ye vnto hym. The prynces dygged this well, the captaynes of the peple dygged it, with the teacher, and with theyr traues.

And from the wylderneesse they went to Watana,

Matana, and fro Matana to Nabaliel, & from Nabaliel to Bamoth, and from Bamoth to the valey þ is in the felde of Moab vnto the top of the hyll that appeareth befo re Iesumon. And Israel sent messengers vn to Sehon, kynge of the Amozites saynge:

* Num. 32. 1.
Deuter. 32. 1.
and. 32. 1.

* I wyll go thorow the thy lande: we will not tourne into þ felde or vyneyardes, neyther drinke of the waters of þ well: but we will go a longe by the kynges hye waye, vntyll we be past thy cōstre. * But Sehon wolde geue Israel no licence to passe thorow the hye cōstre, but gathered al his people together and went out agaynst Israel into the wyl-dernesse. And he came to Iabez a & fought agaynst Israel.

* Deuter. 32. 1.
Ios. 32. 1.

* And Israel smote him in the edge of the swerde, and conquered his lande fro Arnon vnto Iabok, and vnto the children of Ammon. For the border of the children of Ammon was, * stroge. And Israel toke all these cyties & dwelt in all the cyties of the Amozites: in Iesbon and in all the townes that longe therto. For Iesbon was the ctyte of Sehon the kynge of the Amozites, whiche fought befoze agaynst the kyng of þ Moabites, & toke all his lande out of his hande, euen vnto Arnon. Wherefoze they saie in þ prouerbe: come to Iesbon, and let the ctyte of Sehon be hyle & repayed: for there is a fyre gone out of Iesbon, & a flamme from the ctyte of Sehon, and hath consumed Ar in Moab, and the inherytours of þ hye places in Arnon. Al be to the Moab: o people of Chamos, ye are vndone, he hath put his sonnes to flyght, and hys daughters to capti-uyte vnto Sehon the kynge of Amozites. Theyr empyre is lost fro Iesbon vnto Dibon, and we made a wyl-dernesse euen vnto Sopha, whiche reacheth vnto Mediba. And thus Israel dwelt in the lande of the Amozites. And Moyses sent to serche oute Iazer, & they toke the townes belongyng therto, and rooted oute the Amozites that were there in.

* Deut. 33. 1.
and. 33. 1.

* And they tourned and went by tow- arde Balan. And Og the kynge of Balan came out agaynst them, he & all hys people to fyghe at Adrei. And the Lord sayde vnto Moyses, feare him not, for I haue deliuered him in thy hande, and al hys people, and his lande. And þ shalt do to hym as thou dydest vnto Sehon þ kynge of þ Amozites whych dwelt at Iesbo. They smote him therfoze, & hys sonnes, & all hys people, vntyll there was nothyng lefte hym. And they conquere d hys lande.

The xxii. Chapter.

Chapre Balac sendeth for Balaam (whose na- me in the hebrew is Balaam) Balaams alle speake.

And the chyldre of Israel depa- red and pitched in the felde of Moab, on the other syde of Iordan, ouer agayst Iericho. And * Balac þ sonne of ziphor, all that Israel had done to the Amozites & the Moabites were soze afrayed of the people, because they were many, & stode in feare of þ chyldre of Israell. And Moab sayde vnto the elders of Moabian: nowe that thy companye lyke vp all þ are rounde about vs, as an ore lyketh vp þ grasse of the felde. And Balac the sonne of ziphor was kynge of the Moabites at that tyme.

He sent messengers therfoze vnto * Balaam the sone of Beor in Bethor (whych is by the ryuer of the lande of þ chyldre of Israell folke) to call him, saying: beholde, there is a people come out of Egypte, & beholde, they couer þ face of þ erth, & dwell ouer agaynst me. Come nowe therfoze & curse this people for my sake. For they are to myghty for me, yf so peradventure I might be able to smyte them & to dypue them out of the lande. For I wote that he whome thou blestest, is blest, and whome thou curtest is cursed.

And the elders of Moab and þ elders of Moabian departed, hauyng the rewarde of the sothlayyng in theyr hande. And they came vnto Balaam, & tolde hym the wordes of Balac. He answered the: tary here this nyght, and I wyll bypunge you worde, euen as the Lord shall saie vnto me. And the Lordes of Moab abode wyth Balaam.

And God came vnto Balaam and sayd, what men are these wyth the? And Balaam sayde vnto God: Balac the sonne of ziphor kynge of Moab hath sent vnto me, saying: behold, there is a people come out of Egypt and couereth the face of the erth: come now therfoze, and curse them for my sake, yf so peradventure I maye be able to ouercome them in battell, and to dypue the oute. And God sayde vnto Balaam. Go not thou with them, neyther curse the people, for they are blessed.

And Balaam rose vp in the moynyng, & sayd vnto the Lordes of Balac: get you vnto your lande: for the Lord wyll not suffer me to go wyth you. And þ Lordes of Moab rose vp, & went vnto Balac and sayde: Balaam wolde not come with vs. And Balac sent agayne a greater companye of Lordes and moze honorable then they: whiche came to Balaam, and tolde him: Thus sayeth Balac þ sonne of ziphor: oh, let nothyng let þ, but come vnto me, for I wyll greatly promote the vnto greate honoure, and wyll do whatsoeuer þ sayest vnto me, come I praye the, curse this people for my sake.

And Balaam answered and sayde vnto þ the seruantes of Balac: * If Balac wolde geue me grieue me his house full of silver and gold, I can not go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to do lesse or moare. Nowe therfore tarpe here this nyght: that I maye wete, what the Lord wyll saye vnto me moare. And God came vnto Balaam by nyght, & sayd vnto him: If the men come to call the, ryse vp and go with them: but loke what I saye vnto the, that shalt thou do.

And Balaam rose vp early, and sadeld his asse, & went with the Lordes of Moab. And the countenance of God was angrie because he went. And the aungell of the Lord stode in the waye agaynst him, as he rode vpon his asse, and his two seruantes were with him. And when the asse sawe the aungell of the Lord stode in the waye, and hauping a swerde by a wien in his hande, the asse turned a syde out of the waye, and wet oute into the felde. And Balaam smote the asse, to turne her into the waye.

But the aungell of the Lord stode in a path betwene the vynesardes, and there was a wall on the one syde & another on the other. And when the asse sawe the aungell of the Lord, he breched vnto the wall, and thrust Balaams foote vnto the wall, and he smote her agayne. And the aungell of the Lord went forth & stode in a narrowe place, where was no waye to tourne, ether to the ryght hande or to the lyfte. And when the asse sawe the aungell of the Lord, he fell downe vnder Balaam: and Balaam was wroth, and smote the asse with a staffe. And the Lord opened the mouth of the asse, & he sayed vnto Balaam: what haue I done vnto the, that thou hast smitten me nowe these tymes? And Balaam sayde vnto the asse: because thou hast mocked me: I wolde also there were a swerde in myne hand, for euil nowe wolde I kyll the. And the asse sayde vnto Balaam: am not I thyne asse wherby thou hast rydden vpon lence thou wast bozne vnto this daye? Was I euer wont to do so vnto the? he sayde: naye.

And the Lord opened the eyes of Balaam and he sawe the aungell of the Lord standing in the waye, hauping a swerde by a wien in his hande. He bowed him selfe therfore, and fel flat on his face. And the aungell of the Lord sayd vnto him: Wherfore hast thou smitten thyne asse these tymes? behold, I came oute as an aduersarye, because I make the waye contrarye vnto me, & the asse sawe me, and wet backe fro me these tymes: or els if he had not turned from me (as he hath done in the waye,) I had surely slayne the, and saved her alpye. Balaam sayde vnto the aungell of the Lord: I haue synned: for I wyl not that thou shouldest in the waye agaynst me. Nowe therfore if it displease the I will turne home agayne. The aungell sayd vnto Balaam, go with the men: but, what I saye vnto the, thou shalt speake. And so Balaam went with the Lordes of Moab.

And when Balac herde that Balaam was come, he went out to mete hym vnto a cytie of Moab, which is in the border of Arnon, euen in the vtmost coast. And Balac sayde vnto Balaam: byd I not sende for the, to call the? And wherfore cameste thou not vnto me, because I am not able to promote the vnto honoure? And Balaam made answer vnto Balac: Lo, I am come vnto the. And can I nowe saye any thing at all. The word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speake. And Balaam went with Balac, & they came vnto a cytie of stretes. And Balac offered oren and shepe, & sent a reward for Balaam and for the Lordes that were with hym. And on the morowe Balac toke Balaam, and brought him vp into the hye place of Baal, that thence he myghte see the vtmost parte of the people.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Balaam blest the people.

And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: buyde me here seuen alters and prepare me here seuen oren and seuen rammes. And Balac bydas Balaam sayde. And Balac & Balaam offered on euery alter, on ore & a ram. And Balaam sayd vnto Balac: stande by the sacrifice, & I wil goo, yf happily the Lord wil mete me: & whatsoever he sheweth me, I will tell the, and he went forth alone. But God met Balaam, & Balaam sayde vnto hym: I haue prepared seuen alters, & haue offered vpon euery alter, an ore and a ram. And the Lord put a sayinge in Balaams mouth, and sayde: go agayne to Balac and saye on this wyle. And when he went agayne vnto hym, loo, he stode by his sacrifice, he & all the Lordes of Moab. And he toke vp his parable and sayde: Balac the kynge of Moab hath fet me from Mesopotamia out of the mostaynes of the east (sayinge) come, curse Jacob for my sake: come, & despyse Israel. Howe shal I curse hi, who God hath not cursed? or howe shal I despyse hym, who God hath not despyed? from the toppes of the rockes I see hym, and from the hylls I beholde hym: loo, the people shal dwell by the selfe, and shal not be rehered amonge the ryons. Who can tell the dust of Jacob, and the nombre of the fourth part of Israel? I praye God, & my soule maye dye the deathe of the ryghteous, & my laste ende maye be lyke his. And Balac sayd vnto Balaam: what hast thou done vnto me? I set the to curse myne enemyes, and beholde, thou hast blessed them. He answered & sayde: muste I not hepe that & speake it, which the Lord hath put in put in my mouth: And Balac sayde vnto hym: Come I praye the with me vnto another place, whence thou mayest se them, and thou shalt se but the vtmost parte of them, and shalt not se them al: curse the out of the place for my sake. And he brought him into a felde (where men myght se farre of) iene to the toppe of an hyll, & bylt seuen alters, and offered an oxe and a ram on euery alter. And he sayd vnto Balac, stode here by thy sacrifice, whyle I go ponder. And the Lorde met Balaam, and * put a word in hys mouth & sayde: go agayne vnto Balac, & saye thus. And when he came to hym: beholde, he stode by his sacrifice, & the Lorde of Moab with him. And Balac sayd vnto him: what hath the Lorde sayde?

And he toke vp his parable & answered: ryle vp Balac and heare, & herken vnto me thou sonne of ziphor. * God is not a man & he shuld lye, nether the sonne of a man that he shuld repent: shulde he saye: and not doo? or shulde he speake, and not make it good? beholde, I haue taken vpon me to blesse, for he hath blessed, and it is not in my power to alter it. He behelde no vanyte in Jacob, nor sawe trauayll in Israell. The Lorde hys God is with him, and & presence of & hyng is amonge them. * God brought them oute of Egypte, he hath strenght as an vnicozne. There is no sojercye in Jacob, nor sothsayinge in Israell. It is now tolde vnto Jacob & Israell, what God hath wrought. Beholde, & people shal rise vp as a lyoness, & breue vp him selfe as a lyon. He shal not lye downe, but pll he eate of the prape, and dypnche the bloude of them that are slayne.

* 1. Cor. x. 13 and 5. 2.

* nu. xliii. b.

And Balac sayde vnto Balaam: nether curse them nor blesse them. But Balaam answered & sayde vnto Balac: tolde not I the sayinge, all that the Lorde speaketh, that I must do? And Balac sayde vnto Balaam: come I praye the, and I will bringe the yet vnto another place: pf peradventure it wyl please God, & thou mayest thence curse the for my sake. And Balac brought Balaam vnto the toppe of Beoz, & boweth towarde the wilderness of Iesymmon. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: make me here seuen alters, and prepare me here seuen oxen, and seuen rammes. And Balac byd as Balaam had sayde, and offered an oxe and a ram on euery alter.

C The. xliiii. Chapter.

Balaam prophesieth of the kingdome of Israell & of the cominge of Christ. Balac is angrye with Balaam. The destruction of the Amalechites, and of the hemites.

And when Balaam sawe that it pleased the Lorde that he shulde blesse Israell, he went not as he byd twyse before to set sothsayinge: but set hys face toward the wyldernesse. And Balaam lyfte vp his eyes, and looked vpo Israell as he laye: cooptyng to hys trybes, & the spiryte of God came vpon him. * And he toke vp his parable & sayde. Balaam the sonne of Beoz hath sayd & a man whose eye is open hath sayd: he hath sayde, which heareth the wordes of God & seyth the visions of the almyghty, and falleth doune with open eyes.

Howe goodly are thy cistes, o Jacob, and thyne habitacions, o Israell! En as the mlers are they layed abrode, and as gardens by the ryuers syde: as the tentes whiche the Lorde hath pytched, and as cytters trees by the waters. The water droppeth out of his bouket, and his seed shalbe many waters: and hys kyng shalbe hyper the Agre. And hys kyngdome shalbe exalted. * God brought him out of Egypt: as the strength of an vnicozne is he vnto him. He shall eate the nacions hys enemyes, and gnawe their bones, & perce the thozowe w hys arrowes. * He couched hym selfe, and laye doune as a lyon, and as a lyoness, who shal strere hym vp: blessed is he that blesseth the, and cursed is he that curseth the.

And Balac was wroth woth Balaam, and smote hys handes together, and Balac sayde vnto Balaam: I sent for the to curse myne enemyes, and beholde, thou hast blesed the this thye tymes. Therfore now get the quickly vnto thy place. I thought that I wolde promote the vnto honoure, but in the Lorde hath kepte the backe fro wroth Balaam answered vnto Balac: tolde I not thy messengers which thou sentest vnto me sayinge: * If Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer and golde, I can not passe & worde of the Lorde, to do ether good or bad of myne a done mynde. But what the Lorde sayeth, that am I compelled to speake. And now beholde, I go vnto my people: come therfore, and I wil aduertise the, what this people shal do to thy folke in & later dayes. And he toke vp his parable and sayde: Balaam & sonne of Beoz hath sayde, the man whose eye is open, hath sayd. He hath sayd that heareth the wordes of God, & hath the knowledge of the most hygh, and beholde the vpspon of the almyghty, and & falleth with open eyes: I shal se him, but not now. I shal behold hi, but not nygh. * There shal come a starre of Jacob, and ryle a scepter of Israell, & shal * smyte the cottes of Moab & vndermyne all & chyliden of Beth. * And Edom shalbe possessed, & Seir shal fall to the possession of thes enemyes, and Israell shal do manfully. Out of Jacob shal come he that shal haue dominion, & shal destroye the remnaunt of the egypte.

And when he looked on Amalech, he toke vp his parable, & sayd: Amalech is the first of the nacions: but hys latter ende shal peryshe perpeth verely. And he looked on þe Kenytes and toke vp his parable, and sayde: Stronge is the dwelling place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rocke. Neuerthelesse, þe Kenyte shal be roted out, vntyl I Asur take the prisoner.

And he toke vp his parable & sayde: Alas, who shal lyue when God doeth thys? The shyppes also shal come out of þe colde of Italy, and subdue Asur, & subdue Eber, and he hymselfe shal perpeth at þe last. And Balaam rose vp, and went and returned to his place: and Balac also went his waye.

The xxv. Chapter.

The people committed fornicacyon with the daughters of Moab. Whiche helieth Jami and Cozbi. God commandeth to kill the Moabiters.

And Israel dwelt in Sittim and the people began to comitte whoredome with the daughters of Moab, which called the people vnto þe sacrifice of the gods.

* And þe people byd eate, & whorshipped the gods, and Israel coupled him selfe vnto Baal Peor. And the in-dignacyon of the Lord was prouoked agaynst Israel, and the Lord sayde vnto Moses: take all þe heades of the people, & hange the vp before the Lord agaynst the sonne, that the wrath of the Lordes countenaun-ce maye be turned a waye fro Israell. And Moses sayd vnto þe iudges of Israel: eue-ry one slaye his men that were ioyned vnto Baal Peor.

And beholde, one of the childre of Israel came and brought vnto his brethren, a Ma-dianitish wyfe even in the syght of Moses, and in the syght of all þe multitude of þe chyldre of Israel, that wepte before the doore of the tabernacle of wytnesse. * And whē Phinches the sonne of Eleazar the sonne of Aaron the preste sawe it, he rose vp out of the myddes of the cōpanye, and toke a weapon in his hande, and went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust the thowowe:
both the man of Israel and also the womā, eue thowowe the belly of her. And the plage ceased from þe chyldre of Israel. * And there died in the plage. xliii. thousande.

* And þe Lord spake vnto Moses sayinge: Phinches the sonne of Eleazar þe sonne of Aaron the preste, hath turned myne anger awaye from þe chyldren of Israel, why-le he was gelous for my sake amonge them that I had not consumed the chyldren of Israel in my gelousye. Wherefore saye: beholde, I geue vnto hym my cōuenaunt of peace, and he shal haue it, & his seed after hym, eue the cōuenaunt of the prestes office for euer because he was gelous for his Goddes sake and made an atonement for the chyldren of Israel. The name of þe Israelite which was slayne with the Madianitish wyfe was Jami the sonne of Salu, a Lord of an house and kynred of Simeon. And the name of the Madianitish wyfe was slayne, was Cozbi þe daughter of Zur, a head ouer the people of an house and kynred of Madian.

And the Lord spake vnto Moses, sayinge
* Were the Madianytes, and smyte the, for they trouble you with thei wyfes, whiche haue beggled you by disceate in the cause of Peor, and in the cause of thei syster Cozbi the daughter of a Lord of the Madianites, whiche was slayne in the daye of the plage for Peors sake.

The xxvi. Chapter.

The chyldren of Israel are nombred.

And it fortuned, þe after the plage, the Lord spake vnto Moses & vnto Eleazar the sonne of Aaron the preste, sayinge: * take the number of all the multitude of the chyldren of Israel from. xx. yere and aboue thowowe out thei fathers houses, all that are able to goo to warre in Israel. And Moses & Eleazar þe preste spake vnto thei in the felde of Moab, by Iordane ouer agaynste Jericho from. xx. yere and aboue, as the Lord commanded Moses and the chyldren of Israel, whan they were come out of Egypte.

* Ruben the eldest sonne of Israel. The chyldren of Ruben: Hanoch, of whom commeth the kynred of the Hanochites, & Palu of whom commeth the kynred of the Paluites. Of Hefron, commeth the kynred of the Hefronites: of Carmi, commeth the kynred of the Carmites. These are þe kynredes of þe Rubenites. And they were in nombre. xliii. thousande seue hundred & thyrtye. And the sonnes of Palu: Eliab. And the sonnes of Eliab: Amiel: Dathan and Abiram.

This is þe Dathan and Abiram, whiche were famous in þe congregacyon, & stroue

A And Moyses spake vnto the heades of the trybes of the chyldzen of Israel, sayinge: this is the thyng whych the Lord hath commaunded. * If a man vowe a vowe vnto the Lord, or sweare an oth to bynde hys soule: he shall not go backe wyth hys woide: but shall fulfill all that is pprocded out hys mouth.

If a woman also vowe a vowe vnto the Lord, and bynde her selfe beyng in her fathers house in the tyme of her pouth, & her father heare her vowe and bonde whych she had made vpon her soule, & holde hys peace therto: then all her vowes and bondes whych she hath made vpon her soule, shall stande in effecte. But and yf her father forbyd her the same daye that he heareth it, none of her vowes nor bondes whych she hath made vpon her soule shalbe of value: and the Lord shall forgyue her, because her father forbade her.

If she had an husbande when she vowed or pronounced ought out of her lippes, wher wyth she bonde her soule, and her husbande hearde it & helde his peace therr at the same daye he hearde it, then her vowes and her bondes wher wyth she bonde her soule shal stande in effect. And yf her husbande forbade her the same daye that he heard it: Ad made her vowe whiche she hath vpon her of none effect, and released the openyng of her lippes, wher wyth she bonde her soule, the Lord shall forgyue her.

C But every vowe of a wedolfe and of her that is deuorced (that they haue boude their soule withall) shall stāde in effecte with the.

If she vowed in her husbandes house, or bounde her soule with an othe, and her husbande heard it, and helde hys peace, and forbad her not, then all her voves and bondes wherewith she bounde her soule, shall stāde. But if her husbande disannulled the, & same daye that he heard them, then nothinge that proceedeth oute of her lippes in voves and bondes (wherewith she bounde her soule) shall stāde in effecte: for her husbande hath lowed them. And the Lorde shall forgive her.

D All voves & othes that bynde to humble the soule, maye her husbande stablyshe or bryake. But if her husbande holde his peace from one daye vnto another, then he stablysheth all her voves & bondes wherewith she had vpon her, because he helde hys peace & same daye that he heard them. But if he bryake them, after that he hath heard them, he shall beare her synne hym selfe.

And Mo- ses gaue that summe whych was the Lozdes deueroffryng, vnto Eleazar the priest: as the Lozde commaunded Moses. And the other halfe of the chyldzen of Israel whych Moses separated from the men of warre, (þ is to wete the halfe that perteyned vnto the congregacyon) was thze hundred thousande, and xxxvii. thousand and fyue hundred shepe: and xxxvi. thousande oren: and xxx. thou- sande asses, and fyue hundred and xvi. thou- sande soules of women. And Moses toke of thys halfe that perteyned vnto the chyldzen of Israel, one porcyon of fyfthe, both of the women and of the catell, and gaue them vn- to the Levites, whych wayted vpon the ha- tacyon of the Lozde, as the Lozde comaun- ded Moses. And the offycers of thousandes of the doolke, the captaynes ouer the thou- sandes, and the captaynes ouer the hundre- des came forth, & sayde vnto Moses: Thy seruauntes haue taken the summe of þ men of warre, whych are vnder oure auctozyte, and there lacketh not one man of vs. We haue therfore brought a present vnto þ Loz- de what euery man soude of iewels of gold, cherynes, dyacellettes, rynges, earynges, and spangels, to make an atonement for our sou- les befoze the Lozde.

And Moses and Eleazar toke the golde of them, iewels of all maner fashions. And all the golde of þ deueroffryng that they be- ued vnto the Lozde, (of the captaynes ouer thousandes and hundzedes) was xvi. thou- sande seven hundred & fyfthe species, for the men of warre had spoyled, euery mā for him selfe. And Moses and Eleazar the priest, toke the golde of the captaynes ouer þ thou- sandes & of the cap:aynes ouer the hundze- des, & bzought it into the tabernacle of wit- nes, for a memoypall of the chyldze of Israel befoze the Lozde.

The xxxii. Chapter.

¶ To Ruben and Gad and to haile the cryde of Aganasses, is prompely the possesyon der- pander Jordan eastward.

The chyldzen of Ruben and the chyl- dzen of Gad had an excedyng great multytude of catell. And when they sawe the lande of Jazer, and the lāde of Gi- lead þ it was vnayte place for catell, þ chyl- dzen of Ruben & the chyldzen of Gad came and spake vnto Mo- s: & Eleazar þ prieste and vnto the Lozdes of the congregacyon, sayinge: The lande of Astaroth and Dibon, Jazer and Remrah, Heshon and Elealeh, Sabam and Rebo & Beon: whych contreye the Lozde smote befoze the congregacyon of Israel: is a lande mete for catell, and we thy seruauntes haue catel: wherfore (sayd they) yf we haue soude grace in thy sygh, let this lande be geue vnto thy seruauntes to possesse and bynge vs not ouer Jordan.

And Moses sayde vnto the chyldzen of Gad and of Ruben: Shall poure bzethzen go to warre, & ye shall syt here? Wherfore dy- cozage ye the herte of the chyldzen of Israel, that they shulde not go ouer into the lande, whych the Lozde hath geuen them? * Thus dyd your fathers, when I sent them fro Ca- des Barne to se the lāde. For wbe they wet vp euen vnto the ryuer of Escol, & sawe the lande: they discozaged þ hertes of þ chyldzen of Israel, that they shulde not go into þ lāde whych the Lozde hath geuen them.

And the Lozde was wroth þ same tyme and sware, sayinge: * None of the men that came out of Egypte from twenty yeaere old and aboue, shall se the lande whych I sware vnto Abraham, Isahac and Jacob, because they haue not wholye folowed me: saue Ca- leb the sonne of Iephune the Kenesye, and Josua the sonne of Nun: for they haue folo- wed the Lozde. And the Lozde was angrye wyth Israel, and made them wandze in the wyldernes forty yeaere, vntyll all the gene- racion that had done euell in the sygh of the Lozde were consumed.

And beholde, ye are rysen vp in poure sa- theyn stede, as an excreat of synfull men, to augment the feare wrath of f Lorde, towarde Israel. For yf ye turne awaye from hym, he wyll yet agayne leaue the people in the wyldernesse, and ye shall destroye al this folke. And they went nere him and sayd: we wyll buyde thefeldes here for our shepe & for our catel, and w (wallas) cyties for our chyldren. But we our selues wyll go readye armed befoze the chyldren of Israel, vntyl we haue broughte the vnto theyr place. And our chyldren w (and whither we maye haue) shal dwel in the fenced cyties, because of the inhabytters of the lande. We wyll not returne vnto oure houses, vntyll the chyldren of Israel haue enhereted, euery man hys enheritaunce. Neyther wyll we enheret with them on y^e order syde Jozdan forwarde, because oure enheritaunce is fallen to vs on this syde Jozdan eastwarde.

And Moses sayde vnto them: yf ye wyll do this thyng, and go harnessed befoze the Lorde to warre, & wyll go all of you in harnesse ouer Jozdan befoze the Lorde, vntyll he haue caste oute hys enemyes befoze hym: and vntyll the lande be subdued befoze the Lorde, then ye shall returne and be wythout synne befoze the Lorde, and befoze Israel, & this lande shalbe your possession befoze the Lorde. But and yf ye wyll not do so, behold, ye haue synned agaynst the Lorde: & be sure your synne wyll synde you out.

Nowe therfore, buyde cyties for poure chyldren, & foldes for poure shepe, & do that ye haue spoken. The chyldren of Gad ad the chyldren of Ruben spake vnto Moses, sayinge: thy seruantes will do as my lorde commaundeth.oure chyldren, oure wyues, oure shepe & our catell shal remayne here in f cyties of Gilead. But w thy seruantes wyll go al harnessed to warre, and vnto battayll befoze the Lorde, as my lorde sayth.

And for theyr lakes, Moses commannded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the sonne of Nun, and the auncient fathers of the trybes of f chyldren of Israel: and Moses sayd vnto them: yf the chyldren of Gad and the chyldren of Ruben wyll go wyth you ouer Jozdan, all prepared to fyght befoze f Lorde, then when the lade is subdued befoze you ye shall gene the lande of Gilead to possesse: but and yf they wyll not go ouer wyth you in harnesse, they shal haue theyr possessions amonge you in the lande of Canaan. And the chyldren of Gad and the chyldren of Ruben answered, sayinge: As the Lord hath sayde vnto thy seruantes, so wyll we do.

w Mos. xlii. a. We wyll go harnessed befoze the Lorde in to the lade of Canaan: that f possession of our enheritaunce maye be on this syde Jozdan.

And Moses gaue vnto the chyldren of Gad, and to f chyldren of Ruben, and vnto halfe the trybe of Manasse the sonne of Joseph, the kyngdome of Sehon kyng of the Amozites, and f kyngdome of Og kyng of Basan, the lande with the cyties therof, & coastes & cyties of f countrey rounde about. And f chyldren of Gad buylt Dibon, & Arath, & Aroer, and Atroth, Sophan, and Jegabea, Bethnimra, & Betharan, fenced cyties, and they buylt foldes for shepe. And the chyldren of Ruben buylt Heliam, Eleale, Kyziathaim, Rebo, Baal, & Dema, & turned theyr names, and Sibama also gaue other names vnto f cyties whych they buylded. And the chyldren of Machir the sonne of Manasse went to Gilead, & toke it, and put out f Amozites that dwelt therein. And Moses gaue Gilead vnto Machir the sonne of Manasse, and he dwelt therein. And w Jahir the sonne of Manasse wote and toke the small townes therof, & called them Hamoth Jair. And Robah wente and toke Hamath, and the townes longynge therto, and called it Robath after hys owne name.

And possesse the lande & dwell therein, for I haue geuen you the lāde to enioye it. And ye shall druyde the enheritaunce of the lande by lot amonge poure kynredes, * and geue to many, & moze enherptaunce, and to the fewer the lesse enheritaunce. And poure enherptaunce shalbe in þe trybes of your fathers, euery mans enheritaunce in the place where his lot falleth.

* But and ye wyl not dryue oute the inhabitants of the lande befoze you, than those whiche ye let remayne of them, shalbe pyckes in poure eyes, and dartes in poure sydes, and shall bere you in the land wherein ye dwell. Wozeouer, it wyl come to passe, that I shall do vnto you, as I thoughte to do vnto them.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses in the felde of Moab by Iordan, ouer agaynst Jericho, sayenge: commaunde the chyldren of Israel, that they geue vnto the Levites of the inheritaunce of theyr possesyon, * cyties to dwel in. And ye shal geue also vnto the cyties of the Levites, suburbs hard by theyr cyties rounde about the cyties shal they haue to dwel in, and the suburbs for theyr catell, & for theyr possesyon and all maner of beastes of theyr. And the suburbs of the cyties whych ye shal geue vnto the Levites, shal reache from the wal of the cytie outwarde, a thousand cubytes rounde about. And ye shal measure without the cytie of the east syde, two thousand cubytes. And of the south syde, two thousand cubytes. And of the west syde two thousand cubytes. And of the north syde, two thousand cubytes also: and the cytie shal be in the myddes. And these shal be the suburbs of theyr cyties.

And from amonge the cyties whych ye shal geue vnto the Levites, * there shal be thre cyties for refuge, whych ye shal appoynte to that intente, that he whych killeth, maye flye thither. And to them ye shal adde .xlii. cyties mo: so that all the cyties whych ye shal geue the Levites, maye be .xlvii. with theyr suburbs. And the cyties whych ye shal geue, shal be oute of the possesyon of the chyldren of Israel. They that haue many, shal geue many. But of them that haue fewe, ye shal take fewe. Euery one shal geue of his cyties vnto the Levites accordyng to the inheritaunce whych he inheriteth.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses sayenge: speake vnto the chyldre of Israel and saye vnto them: * wha ye be come ouer Iordane into the lande of Canaan, ye shal appoynte yon cyties to be cyties of refuge, for you: that he whych sleeth a soule vntowards, maye flye thither. And the cytie shal be flye fed the auenger of bloude, that he whych killeth dye not, vntyll he stande before the congregacion in iudgement. And of theyr syre fre cyties whych ye shal geue, ye shal geue thre on this syde Iordane, and thre in the lande of Canaan. And these syre fre cyties shal be a refuge bothe for the chyldren of Israel, and for the straunger, and for hym that dwelleth amonge you: for all they whych kyll any personne vntowards, maye flye thither.

* And yf any man smyte another with an instrument of yron that he dye, then is he a murtherer, and shal dye for it. Yf he smyte hym with a throwyng stone so that a man maye dye with, and yf he dye, he that smote hym is a murtherer, let the same murtherer be slayne therfore. Or yf he smyte hym with a weapon of wood that a man maye dye with, then yf he dye, he is a murtherer, let the murtherer be slayne therfore.

The fyfth Chapter.

These be the wordes which Moses spake vnto al Israell, on thother syde Iordā in þ wilderness, in þ plain ouer agaynst the red see, betweene Phara & Thophel, Laban, Hazeroth & Disabab, eleue dayes iourney from Hozeh vnto Cades barne, by mount Seir. And it fortuned the fyfth day of the eleuenth moneth in fortieth yere, that Moses spake vnto the chylidren of Israel accordyng vnto al that the Lorde had gyuen hym in comaundment vnto them, after that he had smitten * Se-hon the kyng of the Amozites which dwelt in helbon, and Og kyng of Basan whiche dwelt at Astaroth in Edrai.

* Num. xxi. c.

On the other syde Iordan in the lande of Moab began Moses to declare thys lawe sayeng: the Lorde oure God spake vnto vs in Hozeh sayeng: ye haue dwelt lōg ynough in this mount, depart therfore & take your iourney, and go vnto the hyl of the Amozites and vnto al places nye there vnto: both vnto the playne, & hylles and dales: to the south, to the sees syde, to the land of Canaā

* Gen. xii. d
and. xvi. d.

And vnto Libanon: euen vnto the great ryuer Euphrates. Behold, I haue set þ land before pon: goo in and * possesse the land whiche the Lorde swaue vnto your fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to geue vnto them and they seide after them.

And I spake vnto you þ same reason say-eng: I am not able to beare you my selfe alone. For þ Lord your god hath multiplied you: & behold, ye are this day as the starres of heauē in nombze (the Lord God of your fathers make you a thousande tymes so many mo as ye are, & blesse you as he hath promysed you) howe can * I my selfe alone, beare the combzaunce, charge & strepe þ is among you: byyng (from among you) men of wyldome and of vnderstandyng, and ex-

and. xvi. d.

perre, accordyng to your trybes, and I make them rulers ouer you. And ye answered me and sayde: that which thou hast spoken is good for vs to do. And so out of your trybes I toke the captaynes, (men of wylddome and that were experre) and made the rulers ouer you: captaynes ouer thousand-des and ouer hundredes ouer fyfty and ouer ten, and offycers amonge your trybes.

And I charged your Iudges that same tyme sayeng: heare þ cause of your byerthe and * iudge righteously betwene euery man and his byother, and the straunger that is with him. Se that ye know no faces in iud-gement: * but heare the small as wel as the great, and be afrayde of no man, for the iud-gement is Gods. And the cause that is to
* harde for you, byyng vnto me, and I will heare it. And I commaunded you the same reason, all the thynges whiche ye shulde do.
And when we departed fro Hozeh, we went thorowe al that great and terrible wyldernesse, as ye haue sene a longe by the waye of the hyl of the Amozites, as the Lorde our God commaunded vs, and came to Cades Barne. And I sayd vnto you: Ye are come vnto the hyl of þ Amozites, whiche þ Lorde our God wyll geue vnto vs. Beholde, the Lorde thy God hath set the land before the:
go vp and conquere it, as the Lorde God of thy fathers hath sayde vnto the: * feare nether be discoraged. But ye came vnto me euery one and sayde: * we wyl sende men before vs, to searche vs out the lande, and to bring vs word agayne, what way we may go vp by, and vnto what cyties we shall come. And the sayeng pleased me well, and I toke twelue me of you, of euery tribe one whiche departed, and went vp into the hye cōtrei, and came vnto the ryuer Escol, and serched it out, & toke of the frute of the land (to declare the pittousnesse thereof) in theyr handes & brought it vnto vs, & brought vs word agayne, and sayde: it is a good land, whiche the Lorde our God doth geue vs.

Notwithstandyng, ye wolde not consent to go vp, but were disobedient vnto the mouth of the Lord your God, and murmured in your tentes, and sayde: because the Lorde hateth vs, therfore hath he brought vs out of the land of Egypte, to deliuer vs into the hande of the Amozites, and so de-stroye vs. Howe shall we go vp? Our byer-then haue discoraged oure hertes, sayeng:
* the people is greater and taller then we,
and haue cyties greate and walled euen vp to heauen, and mozeouer we haue sene the sonnes of the Enakims there.

And I sayde vnto you: dreade not noz be afrayde of the. The Lord your God whiche goeth before you, he shall fyght for you, ac-cordyng to al þe byd vnto you in Egypte before

before your eyes. In the wylbernelle also thou hast sene howe that the Lord thy God bare the, euen as a man doth beare his sone in all the way whiche ye haue gone by, vntyl ye came vnto this place. And yet in this thing ye did not beleue the Lord your God. He wente in the way before you, to searche you out a place to pytche your tentes in, * in tyme by nyghte, that ye myght se what way to go, and in a cloude by day.

And the Lord harde the voyce of your wordes, and was wrothe, & sware, sayeng: * there shall not one of these men and of his sward generaciō se y good land which I sware to geue vnto your fathers, saue Caleb the sonne of Iephune, he shall se it * and to him wyl I geue y lande y he hath troden vpon, and to hys chyldren, because he hath followed y Lord. (wonderful was the indignaciō agaynste the people, sayng that) * y Lord was angry with me lyke wyle for your sakes, sayeng: thou also shalt not go in thither. But Josua the sone of Nun which standeth before the, he shall go in thither. Golden him therefore, for he shall cause Israel to inherite the lād. * Woze ouer, your chyldre which ye said shulde be a pray, and your sonnes whiche in that dape had no knowledg betwene good and euyl, they shall go in thither, and vnto them wyl I geue it, and they shall enioye it. But as for you, turne your faces, and take your journey into the wylbernelle: euen by the way of the reade see. Then ye answered & sayd vnto me: * We haue sinned agaynst the Lord: we wyl go vp and fyght, accordyng to all that the Lord our God commaunded vs. And when ye had gyde on euery man his weapons of warre, beholde, ye were ready to go vp into the hyll. And the Lord sayd vnto me: say vnto them y they go not vp, and that they fyght not, for I am not a monge you: lest ye fal before your enemies. I tolde you therfore, & ye wolde not heare, but disobeyed the mouth of the Lord, and went presumptuously vp into the hyll.

And the Amozites whiche dwelt in that hyll, came out agaynst you, and chaied you (as bees ble to do) and smote you in Seir, eue vnto Hozma. And ye came againe, and wepte before the Lord: but the Lord wold not heare your voyce, nor geue you audience. * And so ye abode in Cades a long season, accordyng vnto y tyme that ye remayned in other places.

The. ii. Chapter.

That whiche was done from the tyme they departed from Cades barme, vnto the battell agaynst the hyngus & chon and Og.

When we * tourned our face, and toke our journey into the wylbernelle, eue by the way of the red see as the Lord spake vnto me. And we compassed mount Seir a longe tyme. And the Lord spake vnto me sayeng: Ye haue compassed thys moystayne long ynough, tourne you now thwarde. And warne thou the people sayeng: Ye shall go thozowe the coast of your brethren the chyldren of Esau which dwell in Seir, and they shall be afrayed of you: Take ye good hede vnto your selues therfore. Ye shall not prouoke them, for I wyl not geue you of theyr lāde, no not so muche as a fore bredeth * because I haue geue mount Seir vnto Esau to possesse, ye shall bye meate of them for money to eate, and ye shall procure water of them for money to dryncke. For the Lord thy God hath blessed the in al the workes of thy hand. He knewe thy entering into this greate wylbernelle this. xl. yeres, and the Lord thy God hath bene with the, so that thou hast lacked nothynge.

And when we were departed from our brethren the chyldren of Esau which dwell in Seir, the playne waye fro Elath & from Ezion Gaber, we turned & went by y waye of the wylbernelle of Moab. And the Lord sayd vnto me: * Thou shalt not fyght agaynst the Moabites, neyther prouoke the to batell, for I wyl not geue the of theyr lande to possesse: because I haue geue it vnto the chyldre of Lot to possesse. The terrible people y Emims dwelt therein in tymes past, a people great, many & tall, as y Enakims whiche also were taken for giannes as the Enakims: who the Moabites cal Emims. The Hozims dwelte in Seir before tyme, whose possession the chyldren of Esau occupied, and destroyed the before the, & dwelte in theyr stad: as Israel did vnto y lande of his possession, which the Lord gaue them. Rowe ryle vp (sayde I) & get you ouer the yuer zared: & we went ouer the riner zared. The space in whiche we came from Cades barme vntyll we were come ouer the ryuer zared was. xxxviii. yeres. vntyll all the generacyon of the men of warre were wasted out fro amonge y host, as the Lord sware vnto the. * For in dede the hande of y Lord was agaynst them, to destroye them from amonge the host, cill they were consumed.

And so it came to passe, that al the men of warre were consumed & deade from amonge the people. And the Lord spake vnto me, sayeng: Thou shalt go thozowe Ar y coast of Moab thys day: and when thou comest nye vnto the chyldren of Ammō, thou shalt not lay sege vnto them, ner moue warre agaynst the. For I wyl not geue the of y lād of the chyldren of Ammon a possession, but I haue geue it vnto the chyldren of Lot to possesse. That also is tald for a lād of giannes, and giannes dwelt therein in olde tyme whom the Ammonites call zāzumims. * A people that was great, many & talle, as the Enakims.

Enahims. But the Lord destroyed the be-foze them, & they succeded the in the inderi-taunce & dwelt in they: steade: as he did for the chyldren of *Esaui, which dwelt in Seir whan he destroyed the hoymys befoze them they conquered they: possession, & dwelt in they: steade vnto this day. And *Aunims which dwelt in Hazerim euen vnto Aza, & Capthorims which cam out of Capthor destroyed them and dwelt in they: steade.

Expse vnto therfoze, & take your tourney ouer the ryuer Arnon. Beholde, * I haue gyuen into thy hande Sehon the Amozite kyng of Heshon, and his lande. Go to ther-foze and conquere, and prouoke him to battell. This day wyl I begynne to sende the feare and drede of the, vnto all nations that are vnder all the heauen: so that they which here speake of the shall tremble and quake befoze the.

And so I sent messengers out of the wyl-dernesse of Redemoth vnto Sehon kyng of Heshon, with wordes of peace, sayng: * I wyl go thowbe thy lande I wyl go along by the hye way: I wyl neither turne vnto ryght hande nor to the left. Thou shalt sell me meat for money for to eate, and geue me water for money for to drinke, Onely graunt me, that I may go thowbe on my fote (as the chyldren of Esaui which dwelt in Seir, & the Moabites which dwell in Ar, byd vnto me) vntill I be come ouer Iordā, into the lande which the Lord our God gyueth vs.

But Sehon the kyng of Heshon wolde not let vs passe by hym, for the Lord thy God hardened his spete, & made hys herte tough because he wold deliuer him into thy hande as it is come to passe this day.

And the Lord sayde vnto me: beholde, I haue begon to let Sehon and hys lande be-foze the: go to and conquere, and possesse his lande. * Then both Sehon & all hys people came out against vs to fyght at Jaza. And the Lord let hym befoze vs, and we smote him and his sonnes and all his people.

And we toke al hys cyties & same ceason and slue the men, women and chyldren of al the cyties, and let nothynge remayne, saue cattell onely we caught vnto our selues, and the spoyle of the cyties whiche we toke, fro Aroer which is by the bynke of the ryuer of Arnon, and from the cytie which is in the ryuer, vnto Gilead: there was not one cytie to strong for vs. The Lord our God deliue-red all vnto vs: onely vnto the lande of the chyldren of Ammon I came not, nor vnto every place of the ryuer Iabok, nor vnto the cyties in the mountaynes, nor vnto whatsoeuer the Lord our God forbad vs.

The .iii. Chapter.

Chynges that chaunced from the victory of the two kynges Sehon and Og vnto the Antitrop of Jolur in Moab steade.

Then we turned & went vnto to Basan. * And Og the kyng of Basan came out agaynst he and all his people to battell at Edrai. And the Lord sayde vnto me: feare him not, for I wyl deliuer him, al his people, and his lande into thy hande.
Thou shalt do vnto him, as thou dydest vnto Sehon kyng of the Amozites, which dwelt at Heshon. And so the Lord our God deliuered into oure handes, Og also the kyng of Basan and all hys folke. And we smote him, vntill none was left him aloue.

And we toke al his cyties the same ceason (nether was there a cite which we toke from the) euenthyr scoze cyties thowbe all the regis of Argob, the kyngdom of Og in Basan. All these cyties also were made stronge with hye walles, gates and barres, besyde vntwalled towne a greate manye.
And we utterly destroyed them, as we byd vnto Sehon kyng of Heshon, byngynge to nought al the cyties, with men, women and chyldren. But all the cattell and the spoyle of the cyties, we caught for our selues.

And thus we toke the same ceason, out of the hande of two kynges of the Amozites, the lande that was on the other syde Iordā from the ryuer of Arnon vnto mount Hermon (which Hermon the Sidonians call Sy-rion, and the Amozites call it Seny) al the cyties that laye in the playne, and all Gilead and al Basan vnto Salecha and Edrai, cities of the kyngdom of Og in Basan. For onely Og kyng of Basan remayned of the remnaunt of the gyauntes, whose bed was a bed of yron. And is it not yet at Rabah mong the chyldren of Ammon: ix. cubytes dothe the length therof conteyne, and four cubytes the breadth of it, after the cubyte of a man. And so we conquered this lande the same tyme, from Aroer which is by the ryuer of Arnon, vnto halfe mount Gilead, & the cyties therof gaue I vnto the Rubenites & Gaddites. And the rest of Gilead and al Ba-san of the kyngdom of Og, gaue I vnto the halfe trybe of Manasse: euen all the region of Argob with all Basan: whiche is called the lande of gyauntes. Jair the sonne of Ma-nasse toke al the regyon of Argob vnto the coastes of Seluri & Maachati, and called them after his owne name: Basan Hamoth Jair vnto this day. And I gaue Gilead vnto Machir. And vnto the Rubenites and Gaddites I gaue halfe Gilead vnto the ryuer of Arnon, halfe the valey and beyonde, euen vnto the ryuer Iabok, whiche is the border of the chyldren of Ammon: the plaine also (of the wilderness) and Iordā & the coast therof, from Ceneroth euen vnto the see which is in the playne, euen the salt see vnder the springes of the byll, eastwarde.

* And

* And I commaunded you the same tyme sayeng: the Lorde your God hath gyuen you this lande to enioye it: ye shal go harnessed before your brethren the chyldren of Israel al that are mete for the warre. Your wyues onely, your chyldren, and your catell (for I wote that ye haue muche catell) shal abyde in your cyties, which I haue gyuen you, vntyll the Lorde haue gyuen rest vnto your brethren as well as vnto you, and vntyll they also haue conquered the lande, whiche the Lorde your God hath gyuen them beyond Jordan: and then shall ye retorne againe, every man vnto his possession which I haue gyuen you.

* And I warned Iosua the same tyme, sayeng: thyne eyes haue sene all þe Lorde your god hath done vnto these two kinges euen so shal he do vnto al kynngdomes whither thou goest. Ye shall not feare them, for the Lorde your God, he shall fyght for you.

And I besought the Lorde the same tyme sayeng: O Lorde God, thou haste begonne to shewe thy seruauent thy greatnesse & thy myghty hande, for els where is there a God in heauen or in earth, that can do after thy workes, & after thy power: let me go ouer and se the good lande that is beyond Iordā that goodly mountayne, and Libanon.

* But the Lorde was angrye with me for your sakes, and wold not heare me. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: be content, speake no more vnto me of this matter. * Get the vp into the toppes of the hyll, and lyft vp thyne eyes westwarde, northwarde, southwarde, and eastwarde, and beholde it with thyne eyes, for thou shalt not go ouer this Iordā. But charge Iosua: and courage him, & holde him. * For he shal go before this people, and he shal deuyde vnto them the lande whiche thou shalt se. And so we abode in the valey ouer agaynst the house of Beor.

¶ An exhortacion to gyue diligence hede vnto the lawe: ymagis may not be made to worship. The thre cyties of refuge.

A And now herke O Israel vnto the ordinaunces and lawes which I teach you for to do them, þ so ye may lyue and go in & coquer the lande, which þ Lorde God of your fathers gyueth you. * Ye shal put nothyng vnto the worde which I commaunde you, neither do ought therfrom, that ye may kepe the commaundementes of the Lorde your God which I commaunde you. Your eyes haue sene what the Lorde dyd vnto Baal Beor: * for al the men that folowed Baal Beor, the Lorde your God hath destroyed from amonge you. But ye that cleaue vnto the Lorde your God, are alwyse every one of you this day. Beholde I haue taught you ordinaunces and lawes, such as the Lorde my God commaunded me, that ye shulde do euen so in the lande, whether ye go to possesse it.

Kepe them therfore and do them, for that is your wysdome and vnderstandyng in the syght of the nations: that they may heare all these ordinaunces, and say: Surely it is a wyse and vnderstandyng people: it is a greate nacion. For what other nacion is so greate, that Goddes come lonye vnto: as the Lorde oure God is nye vnto vs, in all thynges: * as ofte as we call vnto hym: * and what nacion is so great, that hath ordinaunces and lawes so ryghteous, as al this lawe which I set before you this daye.

Take hede to thy selfe therfore, and kepe thy soule diligently, that thou forget not the thynges which thyne eyes haue sene, & that they departe not out of thyne harte, all the dayes of thy lyfe: but * teache them thy sonnes & thy sonnes sonnes: Specially the day that thou standest before the Lorde thy God in Horeb, when the Lorde sayde vnto me: gather me the people together, and I wyll make the heare my wordes, that they may learne to feare me al the dayes þ they shall lyue vpon the earth: * and þ they may teach theyr chyldren: ye came: * and stode also vnder the hyll & the hyll burne with fyre: euen vnto the myddes of heauen, and there was darckenesse, cloudes and myst. And þ Lorde spake vnto you out of þ myddes of the fyre, and ye herde the voyce of the wordes: * but sawe no ymage, saue herd a voyce onely.

And he declared vnto you his couenaunt which he commaunded you to do, en. x. verses whiche he wrote vpon two tables of stone. And the Lorde commaunded me that same reason, that I shulde teache you ordinaunces and lawes, whiche ye ought to do in the lande whether ye go to possesse it.

Take therfore good hede vnto your selues as percerpnyng vnto your soules, for ye sawe no maner of ymage in þ day that the Lorde spake vnto you in Horeb out of the myddes of þ fyre: lest ye marre your selues and make you a graue ymage and ppycture of any maner of fygure: the lykenesse of mā or woman, the lykenesse of any maner of beast that is on earth, or þ lykenesse of any maner feathered soule that flyeth in þ ayre or the lykenesse of any maner worme that crepeth on the earth, or the lykenesse of any maner fyre that is in the waters beneath þ earth. * Ye and lest thou lyfte vp thine eyes vnto heauen, and when thou seest the sonne the moone and the starres with all the hostes of heauen, shuldest be deceyued, and shuldest worship and serue the thynges, whiche the Lorde thy God hath made to serue all nations vnder the whole heauen.

But the Lorde hath taken you, & brought you you out of ϕ yron forname: euen out of Egypte, to be vnto hym a people & enderitaunce as ye be this daye. Furthermore, the Lorde was angrie wth me for your wordes, and sware ϕ I shuld not go ouer Iordan, & that I shulde not goo in vnto that good lande, whiche the Lorde thy God g^ueth the to enheritaunce. * But I must dye in this land, and shall nat go ouer Iordan. But ye shall go ouer, and conquere that good lande.

D Take hede vnto your selues, that ye for get not the appoyntment of the Lorde your God whiche he made with you, and that ye make you no graue ymage, nor any picture that the Lorde thy God hath forbydden the. * For the Lorde thy God is a consumynge fyre, and a gelouse God.

If thou dost beget chyldre and chyldres chyldre, & whā ye haue dwelte in ϕ lande, ye do wthche^{ly}, & make any maner of grauen ymage, & worke euell in the syght of the Lorde thy God, to prouoke hym to angre, I call heauen and earth to recorde agaynst you this day, that ye shall shortly perye the frō of the lande, whether ye go ouer Iordā, to possesse it: ye shall not prolonge youre dayes therein, but shall vterly be destroyed. And ϕ Lorde shal scatter you amonge ϕ nations, & ye shalbe leste fewe in nōbre amonge the people, whether ϕ Lorde shal bring you: and there ye shall serue goddes, which are ϕ

E worke of mans hande, wod & stone, whiche nether se, nor heare, nor eate, nor smel: And there thou shalt seke ϕ Lorde thy God: and shalt fynde hym, if thou seke hym with all thyne herte, and with all thy soule. When thou art in tribulacyon, and when all these thynges (ϕ be here spokē of) are come vpon the end in ϕ later dayes, thou shalt retorne agayne to the Lorde thy God, and be obedient vnto his voyce. For the Lorde thy God is a mercifull God: he wyl not forsake the, nether destroy the, * nor forget ϕ appoyntment of thy fathers, which he sware vnto the. For alke of ϕ dayes that are past, whiche were before the sence the day ϕ God created man v^o the earth, and (as he) from the one syde of heauen vnto the other, if euer there cam to passe such a great thing, or whether any suche lyke thing hath bene herde. Wd euer a nation heare the voyce of God speake vnto the out of the myddes of a fyre, as thou hast herde, & yet lynced: either whether God assayed to go & take hym a people from among nations thow^o the tēptacions, spynes, wonderys, warre, a myghty hande, a stretched out arme, and thow^o the great syghtes, accordyng vnto all that ϕ Lorde your God byd vnto you in Egypte before your eyes.

Unto the it was shewed, that thou myghtest knowe, howe that the Lorde he is God, & that there is none other but he. * Out of heauen he made the heare his voyce, & might nurtur the, and v^o the earth he shewed the his great fyre, and thou herdest his wordes out of the myddes of the fyre. And because he loued thy fathers, he chose theyr sede after them, and brought the out in his syght, and with his myghty power out of Egypte: to thrust out nations greates and mightier then thou, before the, and to bring the in, and to g^ue the theyr lande to enheritaunce: as it is come to passe this daye.

Understande therfore this day, & turne it to thyne herte, that the Lorde he is God in heauen aboue, and vpon the earth beneath: neither is there any other. Thou shalt heere therfore his ordinaunces, and his commandementes whiche I commaunde the this day that it may go well with the and with thy chyldren after the, and that thou maye longe thy dayes vpon the earth, whiche the Lorde thy God g^ueth the thy lyfe longe.

* Then Moses leuened the cities on the other syde Iordan toward the southe east: that he shuld s^{ee} the city, which had hym his neighbour vntowares, and hated him not in tyme past, and therfore shulde s^{ee} vnto one of the same cyties, and lyue: namely Bezer in the wildernesse, euen in the plainne coūtre of the trybe of Ruben: and Ramoth in Gilead of the trybe of Gad, and Golan in Basan of the trybe of Manasse.

And so this is the lawe which Moseske before the chyldren of Israel. These are the witnessse, statutes, and ordinaunces, which Moses tolde the chyldre of Israel after they came out of Egypte, on the other syde Iordan, in the valey ouer agaynst the house of Beor, in the lande of Sehon kynge of the Amozites whiche dwelte at Hesbon: whom Moses and the chyldren of Israel * smote, after they were come out of Egypte, & conquered his lande, and the lande of Og kynge of Basā two kynges of ϕ Amozites, which were on the other syde Iordan toward the sonne rysyng: from Aroer whiche is by the bancke of the ryuer Arnon, vnto Mount Syon which is Hermon, and all the playne on the other syde Iordan eastwarde: euen vnto the see, whiche is in the playne vnder the spynges of the byll.

¶ The v. Chapter.

¶ The ten commandementes.

Ad Moses called al Israel, & layde vnto the. Heare O Israel the ordinaunces & lawes which I speake in your eares this day, that ye may learne them, & fulfyll them in deede. The Lorde our God made an apoyntment with vs in Horeb. The Lorde made not this bonde with our fathers, but with vs: euen with vs, which are al here alpye this daye.

The Lorde talked wth you face to face in the mount: out of the myddes of the fyre. And I stode betwene the Lorde and you the same tyme, and shewed you the word of the Lorde. For ye were afrayed at the syght of the fyre, and went not vp into the mount, & he sayde: * I am the Lorde thy God, which brought the out of the lande of Egypte frō the house of bondage. Thou shalt haue none other goddes in my presence.

* Thou shalt make the no graue ymage of any maner of lykenesse that is in heuen aboue & is in erth beneth, and that is in waters beneth the earth. Thou shalt nether bowe thy selfe vnto them, nor serue the, for I the Lorde thy God, am a gelouse God, visiting the wyckednesse of the fathers vpon the chyldren, euen in the thyrde & fourth generation amonge them that hate me: & shewe mercy vpon thousandes, amonge them that loue me, and kepe my commaundementes.

* Thou shalt not take the name of the Lorde thy God in vayne: for the Lorde wyll not holde hym guiltlesse, that taketh his name in vayne. Kepe the Sabbooth daye, that thou sanctifye it, as the Lorde thy God hath commaunded the. * Syxe dayes thou shalt labour & do all that thou hast to do, but the seventh daye is the Sabbooth of the Lorde thy God: thou shalt not do any worke, thou and thy sonne, thy daughter, thy seruaunt, and thy mayde, thyne oxe & thyne asse, and all thy catel, & the straunger that is within thy gates, that thy seruaunt and thy mayde maye rest as well as thou. Remembre, that thou wast a seruaunt in the lande of Egypte, and howe that the Lorde thy God broughte the oute thence throughte a mygdre hande and a stretched out arme. For whiche cause the Lorde thy God commaunded the, to kepe the Sabbooth daye.

* Honour thy father and thy mother, as the Lorde thy God hath commaunded the: that thy dayes maye be prolonged, and that it maye go well with the in the lande, whych the Lorde thy God geneth the.

* Thou shalt not slaye.

* Thou shalt not breake wedlocke.

* Thou shalt not steale.

* Thou shalt not beare false wytnesse against thy neyghbour.

* Thou shalt not luste after thy neyghbours wyfe, thou shalt not couet thy neyghbours house, his felde, his seruaunt, or his mayde, his oxe, his asse, or oughte that thy neyghboure hath. These wordes the Lorde spake vnto all your multitude in the mount out of the myddes of the fyre, cloude and darkenesse, with a greates voyce, & added no more thereto, and wrote them in two tables of stone, and deliuered them vnto me.

And it fortuned, that whā ye heard the voyce out of the myddes of the darkenesse, and sawe, that the hill dyd burne with fyre, ye came vnto me with captaynes of your robes & your elders, and ye sayde: beholde, the Lorde oure God hath shewed vs his glory & his greatnesse, * & we haue hearde his voyce out of the myddes of the fyre: we haue sene this daye: that God doth talke with a man, & he yet lyueth. Now therfore, why shuld we dye that this great fyre shuld consume vs? If we heare the voyce of the Lorde oure God any more, we shall dye. For what shal hee doo if hee, that euer hearde the voyce of the lyuynge God speakynge out of the myddes of the fyre (as we haue done) and yet dyd lyue? Dost thou & heare all that the Lorde oure God sayeth, and tell thou vnto vs all that the Lorde oure God sayth vnto the, and we will heare it and do it.

And the Lorde heard the voyce of your wordes, when ye spake vnto me, & the Lorde sayd vnto me: I haue hearde the voyce of the wordes of this people, which they haue spoken vnto the, they haue well sayd all that they haue spoken. * Whā that there were suche an heart in the that they wolde feare me, & kepe all my commaundementes alwaye, that it might go well with them, & with their chyldren for euer. So I saye vnto them: get you into youre tentes agayne, but stande thou here by me, & I will tell the all the commaundementes, ordinaunces & lawes, which thou shalt teache them, that they maye do them in the lande which I geue them to possesse.

Take hede therfore, that ye do in dede as the Lorde your God hath commaunded you, & turne not asyde either to the ryght hand or to the left, but walke in all the wayes which the Lorde your God hath commaunded you, that ye maye lyue, and that it maye go well with you, and that ye maye prolonge youre dayes, in the lande whiche ye shall possesse.

The vi. Chapter.

The lawe of God maye not be forgotten.

These are the commaundementes, ordinaunces and lawes, which the Lorde your God commaunded me to teache you, that ye myght do them in the lande whither ye go to possesse it: nameely, that thou myghtest feare the Lorde thy God, and kepe al his ordinaunces and commaundementes, which I commaunde the: thou and thy sonne and thy sonnes sonne all dayes of thy lyfe, that thy dayes maye be prolonged. Heare therfore, O Israel, & take hede, that thou do therafter, that it maye go well with the, and that ye maye encrease myghtely, euen as the Lorde God of thy fathers hath promysed the a land, that floweth with mylke and honye.

* Heare

Moses repeteth.

Deuteronomium.

15 *Hear O Israel, the Lord our God is Lord only, and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, & with all thy soul, & with all thy might. *And these words which I commaunde the this daye, shall be in thine heart, and thou shalt shew the vnto thy chyldren, and shalt talke of them when thou art at home in thine house, and as thou walkest by the waye, and when thou lyest downe, & when thou ryst vp: & thou shalt brynde the for a sygne vpon thine hand. And they shall be warnynges betwene thine eyes and thou shalt wyte the vpon the postes of thy house and vpon thy gates.

And when the Lord thy God hath brought the into the lande, which he swaie vnto thy fathers, Abrahā Isaac, and Jacob, and genneth great & goodly cyties which thou buildest not, houses ful of all maner of goodes which thou fyldest not, & welles dygged which thou dyggedst not, vineyardes and olyue trees which thou plantest not, & when thou hast eaten & art full: Then beware lest thou forget the Lord, which brought the out of the lande of Egypt from the house of bondage.

*Thou shalt feare the Lord thy God, & serue hym, and sweare by hym name. De thou shalt walke not after straunge goddes: the goddes of the nacjons which are about you. For the Lord thy God is a gelous God amonge you, lest he countenance of the Lord thy God be knowen to wraath agaynst the, & destroue the from the earth.

*Ye shall not tempte the Lord your God as ye dyd in the tentacion. But kepe the commaundementes of the Lord your God and hys wytnesses and hys ordinaunces which he hath commaunded the, and thou shalt do that which is ryght & good in the syghte of the Lord: that thou mayest prospere, & that thou mayest go in, & coquerre that good lāde which the Lord swaie vnto thy fathers, to caste oute all thine enemyes before the as the Lord hath sayde.

*And when thy sonne asketh the in tyme to come, sayenge: What meaneth these witness, ordinaunces & lawes, which the Lord our God hath commaunded you? Then thou shalt saye vnto thy sonne: We were Pharaos bondmen in Egypt, and the Lord brought vs oute of Egypt with a myghtye hande. And the Lord shewed signes & wonderes greates & cruell vpon Egypte, vpon Pharaos & vpon all his householdes, before oure eyes, but brought vs oute from thence: to bringe vs in, and to geue vs the lāde which the Lord swaie vnto oure fathers. And the Lord hath commaunded vs, to do all these ordinaunces, & to feare the Lord our God, for our welth all the dayes of our lyfe, as it is come to passe this daye. Wherefore, this shall be oure righteousnes before the Lord our God, if we take hede & kepe all these commaundementes, as he hath commaunded vs.

The vii. Chapter.

The Israelites maye make no conenante with the Gentyles. They must destroue theyr Idolatres must be slayne.

When the Lord thy God hath brought the into the lande, whither thou goest to possesse, & hath cast out many nacjons before the: namely the Hethites, the Gergesites, the Amozites, the Cananites, the Perizzites, the Heuites & the Jebusites. Auen nacjons greater, & myghtyer than thou: and when the Lord thy God hath set the before the, thou shalt smyte them, & shalt destroue them, & make no conenante with them, nor haue compassyon on them. Thou shalt make no mariages with them, neither geue thy daughter vnto hys sonne, nor take his daughter vnto thy sonne. For they will dyscraue thy sonne, & he shalbe not feare the Lord thy God, but he shalbe a strange godde, & thou wilt be the wraathe of the Lord thy God agaynst you, and destroue you shortly.

But thus ye shall deale with them: thou shalt ouerthrowe their alters, & breake downe their pylers, cut downe their groves, & burne their graue ymages with fyre. For thou art an holy nacion vnto the Lord thy God: the Lord thy God hath chosen the, to be a senerall people vnto him selfe, above all nacjons that are vpon the erth. It was because of the multitude of you about all nacjons, that the Lord had luff vnto you, and chose you, sayenge ye were fewest of all nacjons. But because the Lord loved you, & because he wolde kepe the, & orde whiche he had sworne vnto poure fathers, therefore hath the Lord brought you oute of the house of bondage, and deliuered you oute of the house of bondage: even from the hande of Pharaos kynge of Egypte.

Understande therfore, that the Lord thy God he is God, and a true God: & he kepeth appoyntement & mercye vnto them that loue him & kepe his commaundementes, and thow oute a thousande generacyons, and rewarde the that hate hym before his face, so that he bringeth the to nauyge, & dothe not reuerse the tyme, but rewarde hym that hateth hym, before hys face. Thou therfore the commaundementes, & ordinaunces & lawes, which I commaunde the this daye that thou do them.

*If ye derken vnto these lawes, and do not serue & do them, the Lord thy God shall kepe vnto the & appoyntement, & the curse which he swaie vnto thy fathers. He shall loue the, & blesse the, & multiplie the: he shall also blesse the frute of thy wombe, & the frute of fruite of thy lande, thy corne, thy wyne, and thyne oyle, & the increase of thyne oren, and the flockes of thy shepe in the lade, which he swore vnto thy fathers to geue the. Thou shalt be blessed aboue all nacōs: there shal be neither mā nor woman vntruffall amōge you, nor any thyng vntruffall amōge your catell. Moreover, the Lorde will * take a waye from the all manner infirmities, & wyl put none of the euell diseases * of Egypte (wherof I knowest) vpon the, but will sende them vpon all them that hate the.

Thou shalt consume all the nacyns whych the Lorde thy God shall deliuer the:
thyne eye shall haue no pytie vpon them, ne ther shalt þe serue theyr goddes, for þe shall decaye, If thou sape in thyne herte: these nacyns are in mood than I, howe can I taste the oute? * Thou shalt not feare them, but remember what the Lorde thy God dyd vnto Pharaos & vnto all Egypte: the greate tempracions whych thyne eyes sawe, & the signes, & wonders, & the myghtie hand and stretched oute arme, where thou sawe the Lorde thy God broughthe the oute, euen so shalt þe Lorde thy God do vnto all the nacyns, of whom thou arte afraied.

* Moreouer, the Lord thy God will sende hōmettes amonge them vntill they be leste, & hyde them selves from the, & be destroyed. Thou shalt not feare them, for the Lord thy God is amōge you a myghty God and a terrible. For the Lord thy God will put out these nacpōns before the by a lytle & a lytle * thou mayest not consume them at once, lest they beastes of the felde encrease by the. But the Lord thy God shal geue them ouer before the, & shall destroye them wth a myghtie tempest, vntill he haue broughte them to naught. * And he shall deliuer their thynges into thyne hande, & thou shalt destroye they; name fro vnder heauen. There shall no man be able to stande before the, vntill thou haue destroyed them. The grauen ymages of they; goddes shalt thou burne wth fire & couet not the golde & siluer that is on the, nor take yt vnto the, lest thou be snared therein. For yt is an abhominacyō before the Lord thy God. Wynges not therefore abhominacyō vnto thyne house, lest they be a dāned thyng, as it is: but vterly despye it & adoute yt, for yt is a dāned thyng.

Thys also walke thou cōsider in thyne herte, that as a man nourtereth the hys sonne, euen so the Lorde thy God nourtereth the. Therfore walke thou kepe the commaundementes of the Lorde thy God, & thou walke in hys wayes; and feare him. For the Lorde thy God bryngeth the into a good lande, a lande in the whiche are ryuers of water, & fountaynes & springes that spraye out of walues and hylls: a lande wherin is wheat and barlye, vneyardes, fygrees, and pomegranates: a lande wherin is oyle olyue and haneie: a lande wherin thou shalt eate bread wythout charcensse, neither shalt thou lack anye thyng: a lande whose stoness are p^{er}ls, and oute of whose hylls thou shalt dygge brasle. When thou halte eaten therfore & fylled thy selfe, thou shalt blesse the Lorde thy God in that good lande, whiche he hath geuen the.

Beware that thou forget not þ Lord thy God, that thou woldeste not kepe hys commandementes, hys lawes & hys ordynances whiche I commande þ this day & ye, & when thou haste eaten, & filled thy selfe, & haste buylte goodly houses & dwelte therein, & when thy bestes, & thy shepe are waxed manye, & thy plough & golde is multiplied, & all þ thou haste is encreased, then beware, lest thyne herte ryle & thou forget þ Lord thy God whych brought þ out of þ lande of Egypte, & from þ house of bondage, & whych was thy gyde in þ greates & terribyle wyldernesse (wherin were) fyre serpentes, scorpions, & brouth about any water. But he brought out water for þ, euen out of þ roche of Synaie: he fed þ in the wyldernesse wth manna, whych thy fathers knewe nat, euen for to humble þ, & to proue the, & that he myght so do the good at thy latter ende.

Care O Israell, þ passeth ouer Jordan this daye, to go in, and conquere nacjons great er and myghtier then thy selfe: cyties great and walled vp to heauē,

He shall caste them out & bringe them to naught quickly as þe Lorde hath sayde vnto the.

Speake not thou in thyne herte (after þe Lorde thy God hath cast them out befoze þe sayinge: for my ryghteousnes þe Lorde hath broughte me in, to possesse this lande.

Say: but for þe wickednesse of these nacjons the Lorde hath caste them out befoze þe? It is not for thy ryghteousnes sake o? for thy right herte, þe thou goest to possesse their lande. * But for the wickednesse of these nacjons, the Lorde thy God doth cast them out befoze þe, euen to performe the woordes which the Lorde thy God swaie vnto thy fathers, Abraham, Isahar, and Jacob.

Understande therfoze þe it is not for thy ryghteousnes sake, that the Lorde thy God dothe geue the this good lande to possesse it sepunge thou arte a styfnecked people. Remembre and forget not, howe thou prouokedest the Lorde thy God in the wyldernes, sence the daye that thou dydest departe out of þe lande of Egypte vntyll ye came vnto this place, ye haue rebelled agaynst the Lorde. * Also in Horeb ye angred the Lorde, so þe Lorde was wrothe wyth you, euen to haue destroyed you, whan I was gone vp in to þe mounte, to receaue the tables of stone, & tables of appoyntemente, whiche the Lorde made wyth you. And I abode in the hyll .xl. dayes & .xl. nyghtes, whā I nether dyd eate breade nor drinke water. * And the Lorde deliuered me two tables of stone, wrytten wyth the fynger of God, & in them was accordinge to all the wordes which the Lorde sayde vnto you in the mounte out of þe myddelste of the fyre in the daye, of the gatheringe together.

* Exo. xxxii. 1

And when þe .xl. dayes & .xl. nyghtes were ended, the Lorde gaue me the two tables of stone, the tables of the conuaince & the Lorde sayde vnto me. * Up, and get the downe quickly from hence, for thy people whiche þe haste broughte out of Egypte, haue merred all. They are turned attonce out of the waye, whiche I commaunded them, & haue made them a molten ymage. Furthermoze, þe Lorde spake vnto me sayinge: I haue sene this people, and beholde, yt is a styfnecked people, let me alone, & I maye destroye the, & put out the name of them from vnder heauen, & I will make of the a myghtie nacjon and greater than they be.

And I turned me, & cam downe from the hyll (euen from the hyll þe burnte wyth fyre) & the two tables of the appoyntemente were in my handes. And I looked: & beholde, ye had synned agaynst þe Lorde poure God, & had made you a molten calfe, & had turned attonce out of the waye whiche the Lorde had commaunded you. * And I toke þe two tables and cast them out of my two handes and brake them befoze poure eyes. * And I fell downe flat befoze the Lorde: euen as at the fyrste tyme, & .xl. dayes & .xl. nyghtes I dyd nether eate breade nor drinke water, because of all poure synnes, whiche ye synned, in doyng wyckedly in þe syghte of the Lorde in þe prouoked hym vnto wrothe. For I was affrayed þe for the wrothe & furenesse wher to the Lorde was moued agaynst you, he wolde haue destroyed you. But þe Lorde herde me at þe tyme also.

The Lorde was very angrie w? I also, euen to haue destroyed hym, & I made intercessyon for Aaron also the same tyme. And I toke poure synne * þe calfe whiche ye had made, & burnte hym wyth fyre, & stamped hym & grounde hym a goodde, euen vnto smale duste. And I caste þe duste therof into þe broke, that descended out of þe mounte. Also at þe buryng: * at the tentacyon, & at the sepulchres of luste ye angred þe Lorde, whā wyse when þe Lorde sente you from Cadib Barne, sayinge, go vp, & conquere the lande whiche I haue geuen you: ye dysobeyed the mouth of þe Lorde poure God, & nether heeded hym nor hearkened vnto his voyce. Ye haue bene disobedient vnto þe Lorde, sence the daye that I knewe you.

And I fell downe flat befoze þe Lorde .xl. dayes, & .xl. nyghtes whiche I laue them, for the Lorde sayde, that he wolde destroye you. I made intercessyon therfoze vnto the Lorde, and sayde: * O Lorde God, destroye not thy people & thyne inheritaunce, whiche thou hast deliuered thowow thy greatnesse & whiche thou hast broughte out of Egypte thowowe a myghtie hande. Remembre thy seruantes Abraham, Isahar, & Jacob, and loke not vnto þe stubbornesse of this people, nor to theyr wickednesse & synne: lest þe land whence thou broughtest the say: The Loz-de is not able to bypunge them into the lande whych he promysed them: and because he hated them, therfore hath he caried them out, whych thou broughtest out in thy myghtie

In the same season þ Lord saytyons, as thou seest this dape.

* Circumcise therfore the foreskinne of

The. xii. Chapter.

Idolatry must the Israelites destroye and kepe. They must onely do that thyng which God commaundeth

These are the ordinaunces and lawes whiche ye shal obserue and do in the lande whiche the Lorde God of thy fathers geueth the to possesse it as longe as ye lyue vpon the earth. * Ye shal destroye all places wherin p nacjons whiche ye shal conquer serued theyr Goddes, vps hys mountaynes, on hylls & vnder euery thye tree. Ouerthrowe theyr alters, & breake theyr pylers, & burne theyr groues wth fyr & hewe downe the granen ymages of p Goddes that they haue, and byng the names of them to naughte oute of that place. Ye shal not so do vnto the Lorde your God, but ye shal seke the place, whiche the Lorde your God shal haue chosen out of all poure tribes, to put hys name there, & there to dwell. And * thither thou shalt come, & thither ye shal bynge poure burnt sacrifices, your offerynges, your tithes & heue offeringes of poure lande, poure vowes, poure frewill offerynges, & the fyfte gendred of your oxen & of your shepe. And there ye shal come before p Lorde your God & ye shal reioyce in all that ye put poure hande vnto bothe ye & poure householdes, wherin the Lorde your God hath blessed the.

Ye shal not do after all these thynges p we do here thys daye, euery man what semethe hym good in hys owne eyes. For ye are not yet come to rest, & to p inheryng whiche p Lorde your God geueth you. And when ye go ouer Jordan, & dwell in p lande which whych the Lorde your God hath geuen you to inherete, and whā he hath geuen you rest from all your enemyes rounde aboute, so y^e dwell in safetie, then vnto y^e place whych the Lorde your God hath chosen, to put hys name there, y^e shall bypnye all that I commaunde you: Namely: your burnt sacrificies, your offeringes, your tithes, y^e heue-offeryng of your hande, and all your speciall vowes, whiche y^e vowe vnto y^e Lorde. And y^e shall reioyce before the Lorde your God, y^e & your sonnes & your daughters your seruantes & your maydens, & the Leuite y^e is within your gates: for as much as he hath no parte nor inheritaunce to you.

Take heade y^e thou offer not thy burnt offeringes in euery place y^e thou see: but in the place whych y^e Lorde shall haue chosen in one of the trybes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt offeringes, & there thou shalt do all y^e I commaunde the. For wythstandyng thou mayest kill & eate fleshe in all thy cyties, whatsoeuer thy soule lusteth after, accordyng to the blessing of the Lorde thy God whych he hath geuen the: bothe y^e vncleane & the cleane maye eate therof, euen as y^e roo, or y^e herte: onely y^e shall not eate y^e bloude, but powze it vpon y^e erth as water.

Thou mayest not eate wythin thy gates y^e tithes of thy corne, of thy wyne & of thy oyle, & the fyfthe gendred of thyne oxen, & of thy shepe, neither any of thy vowes whych thou voweste, nor thy frewyllofferinges or heueofferyng of thyne hande: but y^e muste eate them before the Lorde thy God, in the place whiche y^e Lorde thy God hath chosen: thou & thy sonne, & thy daughter, thy seruante and thy mayde, and the Leuite that is wythin thy gates: and thou shalt reioyce (and be merry) before the Lorde thy God, in all y^e thou putteste thyne hande to. Beware, y^e thou forsake not the Leuite, as longe as thou lyuest vpon the earth.

If when y^e Lorde thy God hath enlarged thy border as he hath promysed y^e thou saye: I will eate fleshe, because thy soule lusteth to eate fleshe: y^e mayest eate fleshe whatsoeuer thy soule lusteth. If the place whiche y^e Lorde thy God hath chosen to put hys name there, be to farre from y^e, then thou shalt kill of thy oxen & of thy shepe whych y^e Lorde hath geuen the, as I haue commaunded y^e & thou shalt eate in thyne owne cite, whatsoeuer thy soule lusteth. And as the roo & y^e herte is eaten, euen so thou shalt eate them bothe y^e cleane and the vncleane shall eate of them. But be stronge & that thou eate not y^e bloude. For the bloude, that is in the lyfe, and thou mayest not eate the lyfe wyth the fleshe: thou shalt not eate yt, but powze yt vpon the erth as water. So thou eate it not that it maye go well wyth the and wyth thy chylidren after the: But thou shalt do that, whiche is righte in the syghte of y^e Lorde.

But thy holy thynges whiche y^e hast, and thy vowes: thou shalt take, and come vnto the place whych y^e Lorde hath chosen, & thou shalt offer thy burnt offeringes, bothe the flesh & bloude vpon the aulter of y^e Lorde thy God, & the bloude of thyne offeringes shall be powzed out vpon y^e aulter of y^e Lorde thy God, & thou shalt eate the fleshe. Take heade & heare all these wordes whych I commaunde the, y^e yt maye go well wyth the & wyth thy chylidren after y^e for ever, yf y^e doest y^e whiche is good and ryghte in y^e syghte of the Lorde thy God.

When the Lord thy God hath destroyed the nacjons before y^e, whether thou goest to conquire them, and y^e succeedeste in theyr inheritaunce, and dwellest in theyr lande: Beware, y^e thou be not taken in a snare after them, after y^e they be destroyed before y^e, and y^e thou aske not after theyr Goddes, sayyng: howe did these nacjons serue thei^r Goddes? I will do so lykewyse. Nay, thou shalt not so do vnto the Lorde thy God: for all abhomy nacjons, and y^e whych y^e Lorde hateth, y^e same haue they done vnto thei^r Goddes. For they burne bothe theyr sonnes and theyr daughters to fyre before theyr Goddes. Therefore whatsoeuer I commaunde pon, y^e take heede you do: (only, vnto the Lorde) y^e put y^e nought thereto nor take ought therfro.

The xlii. Chapter.

The laste prophete muste be put to death. God proueth ouer sayd by falsis myracles.

If there arys ambigye you a prophete or a dremmer of dremes, & geue the a sygne or wonder, & that sygne or wonder whych he hath sayd come to passe, and then saye: let vs go after straunge Goddes, whiche thou hast not knowen, and let vs serue them: herken not thou vnto the wordes of that prophete or dremmer of dreames. For the Lorde thy God proueth yon, to wete, whether y^e loue the Lorde your God wyth all your herte and wyth all your soule: y^e shall walke after the Lorde your God, and feare him kepe hys commaundementes, & herken vnto his voyce, serue hym, & cleane vnto hym.

And the prophete or dremmer of dremes shall dye, because he hath spoken to turne you a waye from the Lorde your God, (whych brought you out of y^e lande of Egypte, & deliuered you out of the house of bondage) to thynke the out of the waye, whych the Lorde thy God commaunded the to walke in: and therefore thou shalt put the euill awaye from the.

23 If thy brother, the sonne of thy mother, or thyne awone sonne, or thy daughter, or the wyfe that lyeth in thy bosome, or thy frende whych is as thyne owne soule vnto the, entyce þe secretly, sayinge: let vs go & serue strange Goddes, whiche thou haste not knowen nor yet thy fathers. And they be of the Goddes of þe people whych are rounde aboute you whether they be nye vnto the or farre of fro the, from the one ende of the earth vnto the other. Thou shalt not consent vnto him, nor herken vnto hym: thyne eye shall not pitye hym neither shalt þe haue compassyō on him nor kepe hym secreete: but cause hym to be slayne. Thyne hande shall be swift vpon hym to kylle him & then þe handes of all þe people. And þe shalt stonne hym with stones þe ope because he hath gone aboute to thynke the a waye from þe Lord thy God which brought þe out of the lande of Egypte, & from þe house of bondage. And all Israell shall heare & feare, & shal do no moare any such wyckednes as this is amouge you.

C If thou shalt heare saie in one of thy cyties whych þe Lord thy God hath geuen þe to dwell in that certen men beinge þe chyldren of Belpail, are gone out from amouge you and haue moued the inhabytters of their cytie, sayinge: let vs go and serue strange Goddes, which ye haue not knowen. Then thou muste seke, and make serche & enquire diligentli. And beholde, yf it be trewe, & the thyng of a suertye, þe soche abhomyccacyō is wroughte amouge you: then þe shalt smyte the dwellers of that cytie in the edge of þe swerde, and destroie it vnterly, and all that is therein, & euen the very catell therof wryth the edge of the swerde. And gather all the spoyle of it into the middes of the strete therof, and burne wryth fyre bothe the cytie and all the spoyle therof euerly whytte for þe Lord thy God. And it shalbe an heape for euer & shal not be buylte agayne. *And there shal cleare naught of þe damned thyng in thyne hand, that thy Lord maye tourne from the fearenesse of hye wrath, and shewe þe mer-cye, and haue compassion on the, and multi-
D *Therfore shalt thou herken vnto þe voyce of the Lord thy God to kepe all hye com-maundementes, whiche I comaunde þe this daye, that thou do it, whiche is ryghte in þe eyes of the Lord thy God.

*Deu. xxi. a

V are the chyldren of the Lord poure God. *Ye shall not cut you-re selues, nor make you any bald-nes betwene poure eyes for any deed man. *For thou arte an holy people vnto the Lord thy God, and þe Lord hath chosen the, to be a seuerall people vnto hym selfe, aboue all þe nacions that are vpon the earth.

Thou shalt *eate no maner of abhomyccacyō. These are þe bestes whiche ye shal eate of oxen, shepe, and goates, herde, and a bugle, wyld goate, vncorne, wyld ox, & Camelid. And all þe bestes þe cleane þe best, and lytte yt in the two clawes, & cheme the cud, them ye shal eate.

Nevertheless, these ye shall not eate of them that chewe cud and of them that be de and cleane the hofte: the camell, the hare, and the conye: whych chewe cud, but be de not the hofte: therfore are they vncleane vnto you: and also the swyne, though he be de the hofte, yet he cheweth not cud, therfore is he vncleane vnto you: ye shall not eate of the fleshe of such, nor touche þe dead carcase of them.

*These ye shall eate of al that are in waters: All that haue synnes & scales shal ye eate: And whatsoeuer hath not synnes & scales, of that ye maye not eate, but it is vncleane vnto you.

Of all cleane byrdes ye shall eate: but these are they of whych ye shall not eate: the Eagle, þe Goshauke, and þe Cormorant, þe Ion, the Alur, þe hyte after her hynd, and all kynde of Hauke, þe Scritch, þe nyght Crowe, the Kuckowe, and þe Sparowhaunce, after her kynde, þe lytle Dule, the great Dule, the Bache, þe Bitture, the Dye, the Swaiche, the Heron, the Jay in his kynde, þe Lapwige, the Swallow. And let all creppng foules be vncleane vnto you, & not be eaten of: but of all cleane foules ye maye eate. Ye shall eate of nothyng that dyeth alone: But thou shalt geue it vnto the straunger that is in thy cytie, that he eate it, or thou mayest sell yt to an alyante. For thou arte an holy people vnto the Lord thy God. Thou shalt not sethe a kyd in hye mothers mylke.

Thou shalt tithes all the increase of the seed, & the selde byrnyng furth yere by yere.

And thou shalt eate before the Lord thy God, (in the place whych he hath chosen, & where he hath put hye name) þe tithes of thy corne, of thy wyne, and of thyne oyle, & the fyfte gendered of thyne oren and of thy shepe þe thou mayest learne to feare þe Lord thy God allwaye.

* If the waye be to longe for the, so þe thou arte not able to cary it, & yf the place be farre from þe, whych þe Lord thy God hath chosen to set hye name there (þe the Lord thy God hath blessed þe) then shalt þe make it in monye, & take þe monye in thyne hande, & go vnto þe place whych þe Lord thy God hath chosen, & bestow the monye for whatsoeuer thy soule lusteth after: for oxe, & shepe, wyne & stronge byrnch, & for whatsoeuer thy soule desyryth.

And eat there before the Lord thy God and be merciful: both thou & thyne household, and the Levite that is within thy gates. Wilt thou not forsake, * for he hath neyther parte nor enderptauce wherof the.

* At the ende of thye yeare, & shalt bypunge forth all thy tithes of thyne increase the same yere, & laye yt by within thyne owne gates. And the Levite whych hath no parte nor enderptauce with the, shall come, & the stranger, & fatherlesse & the widowe, whiche are within thy gates, shall eat & be fylled: & the Lord thy God maye blesse the, in all the woorkes of thyne hande whych thou doest.

The .xv. Chapter.

The .xv. Chapter. Of the .xv. Chapter.

At the .vii. yeare thou shalt make a fredome. * And this is the maner of the fredome: Whosoever lenderth ought to his had vnto his neybour, maye not aske agayne (that whiche he hath lent) of his neyghboure or of his brother because yt is called the Lordes fre yeare: yet of a stranger (and of an aleuante) thou mayest call yt home agayne. But * be that is thy brother him shalt thine hande remit.ouertheless there shall be no beggar amonge you. For the Lord shall blesse the in the lande, whiche the Lord thy God geueth the, an heritaunce to possesse yt: so that thou herken vnto the voyce of the Lord thy God to obserue and do all the commandementes, whych I commaund the this daye. For the Lord thy God hath blessed the as he hath promised the, and thou shalt lide vnto many nacions, but the thy selfe shalt not bozowe: And thou shalt rayne ouer many nacions, & they shall not rayne ouer the.

¶ Of one of thy * brethren amonge you be poore wrythin any of thy gates in thy land whiche the Lord thy God geueth the, thou shalt not harden thine hert nor shut thine hande frome thy poore brother: But open thine hande vnto him, & lende him sufficient for his nede whiche he hath. Beware, & there be not a wyched poynte in thine herte, & thou woldest save.

The seuenth yeare, & yeare of fredome is at hand, & therfore it geueth the to loke on thy poore brother, & geuest hym naught & he then crye vnto the Lord thy God agaynst the, and it be synne vnto the: But geue him, & let it not greue thine herte to geue vnto hym. Because the Lord thy God shall blesse the in all thy woorkes, & in all the thy puttest the thyne hande to. * The lande shall neuer be about poore: And therfore I commaunde the sayinge: Thou shalt open thine hande vnto thy brother & is nedyre & poore in thy land.

¶ If thy brother an Hebrue leu him selfe to the, or an Hebrue, & serue the six yeare in the seuenth yere & shalt let hym go free from the, & when thou sendest hym out free from the, thou shalt not let hym go awaye empty but shalt geue hym of thy shepe, of thy corne, and of thy wyne, & geue hym of the, wherewith the Lord thy God hath blessed the. And remembre the thou wast a seruante in the lande of Egypte, & the Lord thy God deliuered the thence: and therfore I commaunde the this thyng to daye.

And if he save vnto the, * I wyll not go awaye from the, because he loueth the & thy house, & is well at ease wryth the: Then shalt thou take a nape, and nape hym heare to the doore therewith, & let hym be thy seruante for euer: And vnto thy mayde seruante thou shalt do lyke wyse. And let yt not greue thine eye, when thou lettest hym go oute free from the, for he hath bene worth a double byred seruante to the in his scrupce syx yeares. And the Lord thy God shall blesse the in all that thou doest.

* All the fyrste genzyed the come of thine oren, and of thy shepe the are males, thou shalt halowe vnto the Lord thy God. Thou shalt do no woorkes wryth the fyrst genzyed of thine oren, nor wryth the fyrst genzyed of thy shepe: Thou shalt eat it before the Lord thy God yere by yere, in the place whiche the Lord hath chosyn both the and thine household. If ther be any defozmite therein, as if it be lame or blind, or haue any other euell fauorednesse the shalt not offer it vnto the Lord thy God: But shalt eat it wrythin thine owne gates, & vncleane and the cleane indifferently, as the roo and the hert. Onely eat not the bloude therof, but powre it vpon the grounde as water.

The .xvi. Chapter.

Of the .xvi. Chapter. Of the .xvi. Chapter.

¶ Ouer the the moneth of new come the thou mayest offer the pasceouer vnto the Lord thy God. For in the moneth whan cozne begynneth to ryse, the Lord thy God brought the out of Egypte by nyght. Thou shalt therfore offer pasceouer vnto the Lord thy God (the shepe & oren) in the place whiche the Lord shall chuse to put his name there. Thou shalt eat no leuened breade with it: but seven dayes shalt the eat vncleuned breade therof: euen the breade of tribulacyn (for the cammest out of the land of Egypte in haste) the that mayest remembre the daye when the cammest out of the land of Egypte, all dayes of thy lyfe.

And there shall be no leuened breade sene in all thy coastes seven dayes longe, neither shall there remaine any thyng of the flesch whych the offeredst the fyrst daye at euen, vntill the morninge.

Thou

Thou mayest not offer passeouer wth any of thy gates, whiche the Lord thy God geueth the: but in the place which the Lord thy God shall chose, to let his name in, there thou shalt offer passeouer at euen aboute goinge downe of the sonne, euen in the season that thou camest out of Egypte. And thou shalt sette and eate it, in the place whiche the Lord thy God hath chosen, and departe on the morowe, and get the vnto thy tente.

Sixte dayes shalt thou eate swete bread, and the vii. daye is a gatheringe together before the Lord thy God: thou shalt do no worke therein. * Seuen weekes shalt thou nombze vnto the, and begynne to nombze the seuen weekes, when thou begynnest to put thy speckell to the corne, and kepe the fraste of weekes vnto the Lord thy God, with a frewill offering of thy hande, whiche thou shalt geue vnto the Lord thy God, accordinge as the Lord thy God hath blessed the. And reioyce before the Lord thy God, thou and thy sonne, thy daughter, thy seruante and thy mayde, and the Leuite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, the fatherlesse, and the wydowe, that are amonge you, in the place whiche the Lord thy God hath chosen to put his name there. And remember that thou wast a seruante in Egypte: and thou shalt obserue and do these ordinaunces.

Thou shalt also obserue the feast of tabernacles seuen dayes, after that thou hast gathered in thy corne and thy wyne. And thou shalt reioyce in the feast: thou and thy sonne, thy daughter, thy seruante, and thy mayde, the Leuite, the stranger, and the fatherlesse and the wydowe, that are within thy gates. * Seuen dayes shalt thou kepe holy daye vnto the Lord thy God, in the place whiche the Lord shall chose: for the Lord thy God shall blesse the in all thy frutes, and in all thy workes of thyne handes, therefore shalt thou be glad. * Three times in the yeare shalt all thy males appere before the Lord thy God in the place whiche he shall chose: In the feast of swete breade, in the feast of weekes, and in the feast of tabernacles. And they shall not appere before the Lord emptye but every man accordynge to the gyfte of his hande, and accordynge to the blessinge of the Lord thy God whiche he hath geuen the.

Judges and officers shalt thou make the in all thy cyties, whiche the Lord thy God geueth the throughout thy trybes: and they shall iudge the people righteously. * Alreede not thou the lawe, nor knowe any persone, neither take any rewarde: for gyftes blinde the wyse, and peruerthe the wordes of the righteous. That whiche is iuste and righte: shalt thou folowe, thou mayest lyue, and enioye the lande, whiche the Lord thy God geueth the.

Thou shalt plant the no groue of soeuer trees it be, nye vnto the altar of the Lord thy God, whiche thou shalt make. Thou shalt let the by no pyller, whiche the Lord thy God hateth.

The xlii. Chapter.

The punishment for Idolatry. The punishment for a rebell. The Institution of a King.

Thou shalt offer vnto the Lord thy God no ore nor shepe: whiche is blemyshe or any deformite: for that is an abhominacyon vnto the Lord thy God.

If there be founde amonge you within any of thy gates, whiche the Lord thy God geueth the, man or woman that hath wrought wychednesse in the syghte of the Lord thy God so that they haue gone beyonde bys appointement, and gone & serued strange Goddes, and worshipped them: the woman or moone or any of the hoost of heauen, whiche I haue not commaunded, it is tolde, and thou shalt hearde of it: then shalt thou enquire diligently. And yf it be trewe, and thyng of a suertie, soche abhominacyon is wrought in Israel, then shalt thou byng forth the man or the woman (whiche haue committed the wyched thyng) vnto the gates, and shalt stone them with stones, till they dye. * At the mouth of two or thre wytnesses shall he that is worthy of death, dye: and at the mouth of one wytnesse, let no man dye. The handes of the wytnesses shalt thou laye vpon hym, to kyll hym, and afterwarde the handes of all the people, and thou shalt put the wyched awaye from the.

If there rise a matter to harde for the iudgement betwene bloude and bloude, betwene ple & ple, betwene plage and plage, and the matters come to streyfe within thy gates, then shalt thou arise, and get the vnto the place whiche the Lord thy God hath chosen and come vnto the Priestes & Leuites, and vnto the iudge that shall be in those dayes, and aske: and they shall shewe the sentence of iudgemente, and thou shalt do accordynge to that, whiche they of the place (whiche the Lord hath chosen) shew thee, and thou shalt obserue to do, accordynge to all that they enforme the. Accordynge to the sentence of the lawes which they teache, and accordynge to the iudgement which they tell the shalt thou do, and howe not from which they shewe thee, neither to the right hand nor to the left.

And that man that wyl do presumptuously, and wyl not hearken vnto the Priestes that standeth there before the Lord thy God to mynyshe, or vnto the iudge, that man shalt thou and thou shalt put awaye euell from Israel. And all the people shall heare and are, and shall do no more presumptuously.

When

When thou art come vnto the lade whych the Lozde thy God geueth the, and enioyest it, and dwellest therein: and yf thou shalt say: * I wyll set a kynge ouer me: lyke as all the nacyns that are about me: The thou shalt make him kinge ouer the, whom the Lozde thy God shall chole: euen one from amonge thy bryethen: shalt thou make kynge ouer the, and thou mayst not set a straunger ouer the, whych is not of thy bryethen. * But he shall not multiplie hoyses to him selfe, nor bynge the people agayne to Egypte thowze the multitude of hoyses, for as moch as þ Lozde hath sayde vnto you: ye shall hence forth go no moze agayne that waye. Also he * ought not to multiplie wyues to him selfe, lest his hert turne awaye, nether shall he gether him syluer and golde to moch.

And when he is set vpon the seate of his kyngdome, he shall wyffe hym oute a coppe of this lawe in a booke, before the prestes þ Leuites. And it shall be with hym, & he ought to reade therein * all dayes of his lyfe, that he maye learne to feare the Lozde his God, & to kepe all þ wordes of thys lawe, and these ordinaunces, for to do the: and that his herte aryle not aboute his bryethen, & that he turne not from the commaundement: to the ryght hande or to the left, but þ he maye prolonge his dayes in his kyngdome: he, and his chyldren in Israel.

C The. xviii. Chapter.

The Leuites had no possesse. Idolatrye muste be fled. The prophet Christ is promysed. The false prophet must be slayne, & howe he maye be knowen.

The prestes, the Leuites, and all the tribe of Leui: must haue no part nor inheritaunce wyth Israel: but shall eate the offrynges of the Lozde, and his inheritaunce: Therfore shall they haue no inheritaunce amonge their bryethen: but the Lozde, he is their inheritaunce, as he hath sayd vnto them. And this is the prestes duty of the people, and of the that offer sacrifice, wheter it be ore or shepe: They muste geue vnto the prest, the shoulter and the two chekes, and the mawe, the fyfte frutes also of thy corne, wyne and oyle, and the fyfte of the wooll of thy shepe: shalt thou geue hym: * For the Lozde thy God hath chole hym out of all thy trybes, to stāde and to mynistre in the name of the Lozde: he and his sonnes for euer. If a Leuite come out of any of the cyties of al Israel, where he is a sojourner, and come with al the luste of his herte vnto the place which the Lozde hath chosen: he shall mynistre in the name of the Lozde thy God, as his other bryethen the Leuites do, which remaine there before the Lozde. And they shall haue lyke porcyons to eate, helpe that whiche cometh to hym of the patrimonye of his elders.

* When thou art come into the lande which the Lozde thy God geueth the, se that thou lerne not to do after the abhominacyons of those nacyns. Let ther not be founde amonge you any one, that maketh his sone or daughter to go thowze the fire, or þ wleth witchcraft, or a choler oute of dayes: * or that regardeth þ flyenge of foules, or a sozcerar, or a charmar, or that counceleth wyth spretes, or a sothslayer, or þ asketh the trust yat the þ be dead. For all that do such thynge, are abhominacyon vnto the Lozde, and because of these abhominacyons the Lozde thy God doeth caste them out before the. Thou shalt be perfecte therfore: (without blame) in the syghte of the Lozde thy God. For these nacyns which thou shalt conquere, herken vnto chosers out of dayes, and vnto sozcerars: But the Lozde thy God hath not suffred the so to do.

The Lozde thy God wyll * sterre vp vnto the a prophete amonge you: euen of thy bryethen, lyke vnto me: vnto hym ye shall herken, accordyng to all that thou desyrest of the Lozde thy God in hozeb, in the day of the gatheringe together, whā thou saydest: * Let me heare the voyce of my Lozde God nomoze, nor se this greate sye any moze, þ I dye not. And the Lozde sayde vnto me: they haue wel spokē, I wyll rayse them vp a prophet from amonge they: bryethen lyke vnto the, and wyll put my wordes in his mouth, and he shall speake vnto the all that I shall commaunde hym. And whosoever wyll not herke vnto the wordes which he shall speake in my name, I wyll requyre it of hym.

* But the prophete whiche shall presume to speke a worde in my name, whych I haue non commaunded him to speake, or that speaketh in the name of strange Goddes, þ same prophete shall dye. And yf thou saye in thynne hert: howe shall we knowe the worde which the Lozde hath not spoken? (Thy toden halt thou hear.) Enē when a prophete speaketh in þ name of the Lozde, yf the thynge folowe not, nor come to passe, þ is the thynge whiche the Lozde hath not spokē. But the prophete hath spoken it presumptuously: Thou shalt not therfore be afrayed of hym.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Thyngs for murder. Punishment for chylde that doth dye father and mother.

If one be foude slayne in the lande, whiche the Lorde thy God gyueth the to possesse it, and lyeth in the felde: and it is not knownen who hath slayne hym: Then thyne elders and thy iudges shal come forth, ad mete vnto the cyties that are rounde aboute the slayne. And let the elders of that cytie which is next vnto the slayne man, take out of the dyng, an heyser that is not laboured wyth, nor hath drawen in the yocke, ad let the elders of that cytie bzyng the heyser vnto a harde valeye, which is neyther eared nor sowed, ad styke of the heyfers neck ther in the valeye.

* And the prelates the sonnes of Leui (whom the Lorde thy God hath chosen to mynstre, and to blesse in the name of the Lorde) shall come forth, and at theyr mouth shall al styke and plage be tryed: And all the elders of þe cytie that come forth to the slayne man, shall washe theyr handes ouer the heyser þe is beheaded in the valeye, and shall answere and say: our hādes haue not shed this blood, neyther haue our eyes sene it. Be mercyfull Lorde vnto thy people Israel, whych thou hast deliuered, & lay no innocent blood vnto thy people of Israels charge: and the bloude shall be forgyuen them. And so shalt thou put innocent blood from the, whē thou shalt haue done that whych is ryght in the syght of the Lorde.

When thou goest to warre agaynst thyne enemyes, and the Lorde thy God hath deliuered them into thyne handes, and thou hast taken them captiue, and seest amonge the captiues a bewyful woman, and hast a de-syre vnto her, that thou woldest haue her to thy wyfe. Thou shalt bzyng her home to thyne house, and let her haue her heed, & let her nayles growe, and put her rayment that she was taken in, from her, and let her remaine in thyne house, and berewepe her father and her mother a moneth longe, and after that shalt thou go in vnto her, and marrye her, & she shall be thy wyfe. And if thou haue no fauoure vnto her, then let her goo whither she lusteth: and sell her not for money, nor make chauce of her, because þe hast humbled her. * If a man haue two wyues, one loued and an other hated, and they haue bozne hym chylidren, both the loued ad also the hated: If the first bozne be the sone of the hated: then when the tyme cometh that he dealeth hys goodes amonge hys chylidren, he maye not make þe sonne of the beloued firstbozne, before the sonne of the hated whiche is in dede the firstbozne: But he shal knowe the sonne of the hated for the first bozne, and gyue hym double porcion of all that he hath. For he is the first of his strenght and to hym belongeth the ryght of the first bozne.

* If any man haue a sonne that is stubborn & dysobedyente that he wyl not herken vnto the voyce of hys father, and voyce of his mother, and they haue chakened hym and he wolde not herken vnto them: Then shall his father and his mother take hym, & bzyng hym out vnto the elders of that cytie, and vnto the gate of that same place, & saye vnto the elders of the cytie: This our sonne is stubburne and dysobedient, and wyl not herken vnto our voyce. he is a rpotour, and a dyonkarde: And all the men of that cytie shal stone hym with stones vnto death. And thou shalt put euyl awaye from the, and all Israel shal heare and feare. * If a man haue committed a trespasse worthy of death, and is put to death for it, & thou hangest hym on tree: hys body shal not remayne all nyghte vpon the tree, but thou shalt burye hym the same daye. For the curse of God is on him that is hanged. Despyle not thou thy laude, whych the Lorde thy God gyueth the to inheryte.

* Thou shalt not se thy brothers asse or ore fal downe by the waye, and withdraue thy selfe from them: but shalt helpe hym to bene hym vp agayne.

The woman shall not weare that whych pertayneth vnto the man, neither shall a ma put on womans rayment. For all that do so, are abhominacion vnto the Lorde thy God.

If thou chance vpon a bydes nest by the waye, in whatsoeuer tree it be, or on the grounde, wher her they be younge or egges, and the damme syttinge vpon the younge, or vpon the egges: Thou shalt not take the damme wth the younge. But shalt in any wyse let the damme go, and take the yonge to the, that thou mayest prospere & prolonge thy dayes.

* Thou shalt make 3 gardenes (in the hem: or mee.) vpon the. iiii. quarters of thy vesture, wherwyt thou couerest thy selfe.

If a man take a wyfe, and when he hath lven with her, hate her, and lape shamefull thynges vnto her charge, and brynge vp an euill name vpon her, and sape: I toke this wyfe, and when I came to her, I foude her not a mayde: Then shall the father of the damsell and the mother brynge forth the tokens of the damseles virginite vnto the elders of the cytie in the gate. And the damseles father shall sape vnto the elders: I gaue my daughter vnto this man to wyfe, and he hateth her: and so, he layeth shamefull thynges vnto her charge, sayinge: I founde not thy daughter a mayde. And yet these are the tokens of my daughters virginite. And they shall spiede the vesture before the elders of the cytie. And the elders of the cytie shall take that man and chastyce hym, and meate hym in an hundred cycles of syluer, and geue them vnto the father of the dasell, because he hath broughte up an euill name vpon a mayde of Israel. And he shall be his wyfe, and he maye not put her awaye all his dayes. But and yf the thyng be of a sowe, that the damsel be not foude a virgin, she shall brynge the damsell to the doze of her fathers house, and the men of that cytie shall stone her wth stones to death, because she hath wroughte folpe in Israel, to playe the whoze i her fathers house. And so thou shalt put euell awaye from the.

* If a man be founde lpyng wyth a woman that had a wedded husbnde, they shall dye ether other of them: both the ma that lay wth the wyfe, and also the wyfe: ad so thou shalt put awaye euill from Israel.

If a mayde be handfasted vnto an husbande, and then a man fynde her in the towe and lye wth her, ye shall brynge them both out vnto the gates of the same cytie, ad shall stone them wth stones to death: The damsell, because she cryed not, beyng in the cipe. And the man, because he hath humbled his neyghbours wyfe, and thou shalt put awaye euill from the.

But yf a man fynde a betrouthed damsell in the felde, and force her, and lye wth her: Then the man that lape wth her shall dye alone, but vnto the damsell thou shalt do no harme: because there is in the dasell no cause of death. For as when a man ryleth agaynst his neyghboure and slapeth hym, euen so is this matter. For he founde her in the felde, and the betrouthed damsell cryed: and there was no man to succour her. * If a ma fynde a mayde that is not betrouthed, & take her, and lye wth her, and they be founde: Then the man that lape wth her, shall geue vnto the damseles father fyfteen cycles of syluer. And he shall be his wyfe, because he hath humbled her: and he maye not put her awaye all his dayes.

The. xxi. Chapter.

NOne * that is gelded or hath his preuy membez cut of, shall come into the congregation of the Lorde. And he that is borne of a common woman, shall not come into the congregation of the Lorde, no, in the tenth generation he shall not entre into the congregation of the Lorde. * The Ammonites and Moabites shall not come into the congregation of the Lorde, no, not in the tenth generation, no, they shall neuer come into the congregation of the Lorde: because they mette you not wth bread and water in the waye, when ye came oute of Egypt, and because they byred agaynst the. * I am the sonne of Beor, of Bethor, of Euphrates, to curse the. * Thou shalt not abhorre an Edompte, for he is thy brother: neither shalt thou abhorre an Egyptian, because thou wast a stranger in his lande. The chyldren that are begottē of them shall come into the congregacion of the Lorde, in the thyrde generacion.

¶ When thou goest out with the host against thyne enemyes, kepe þe from al wykednesse. If there be amonge you any mā þe is vncleane by the reason of vncleannesse that chaunceth hym by nyght, let him go out of the host, & not come in agayne into þe host, but at euen let him wash him selfe with water, and the when the sonne is downe, let hym come into the host agayne. Thou shalt haue a place al so without the host, whither thou shalt resort to, (for thy natural necessities) & thou shalt haue a sharpe poynte vpon thy wepon, and when thou wilt case thy selfe, dygge there with, and turne and couer that which is departed from the. For þe Lorde thy God walketh in the myddest to thyne host, to ryd þe, and to let thyne enemyes before the. Therefore shall þe place of thyne host be pure, that he se no vncleane thyng in the, and so turne hym selfe from the.

He shall dwell with the, euen amonge you, in what place he hym selfe lyketh best, in one of thy cyties where it is good for hym, and thou shalt not vere hym. There shall be no whoze of the daughters of Israel, nor whoze keeper of the sonnes of Israel. Thou shalt nether yet brynge the hye of an whoze, nor the pyce of a dogge into the house of the Lorde thy God, in any maner of vowe: for euen both of them are abhominacion vnto the Lorde thy God.

* Thou shalt not hurt thy brother by vsurye of money, or by vsurye of coine, nor by vsurye of any thyng that he maye be hurte withall. Vnto a straunger thou mayest lēde vpon vsurye, but not vnto thy brother that the Lorde thy God maye bleesse the in al that thou settest thyne hande to, in the lāde whither thou goest to conquire it.

* When thou hast bowed a vowe vnto the Lorde thy God, thou shalt not slacke to paye it. For the Lorde thy God will surely requyre it of the, and it shall be sinne in the. If thou shalt leue howlg, it shall be no synne in þe: but that which is once gone out of thy lippes, thou must kepe and do, accordyng as thou hast bowed vnto the Lorde thy God of a freewill: and as thou hast spoken with thy mouth.

And if the seconde husbāde hate her, let hym wyte her also a letter of deuozement, and put it in her hāde and sende her out of his house: or if the seconde man dpe whych toke her to wyfe, her fyrste man whych sent her awaye, maye not take her agayne to be his wyfe, after that she is defyled. For that is abhominacion in þe sight of the Lorde. And thou shalt not cause the lāde to synne, which the Lorde thy God shall gyue the to enheret.

Forthermore if it be a pore body, thou shalt not slepe with his pledge, but deliuer hym the pledge agayne whē the sonne goeth downe, þe may slepe in his owne rayment, and bleesse the.

And Moses with the elders of Israel commaunded the people: saying: kepe all the commaundementes, whych I commaunde you this daye. * And whē ye be come ouer Jordan vnto the lande whych the Lord thy God gyueth the, thou shalt set the vp greete stones, and plaster them with plaster, and wyte vpon the all the wordes of this lawe, when thou art come ouer: because thou arte come into the lāde whych the Lord thy God geueth the: a lande that floweth with milke and hony, as the Lord God of thy fathers hath promised the. Therfore whē ye become ouer Jordane, ye shall set vp these stones, whych I commaunde you this daye in mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster. * And there shalt thou buyde vnto the Lord thy God, an altare of stones, and lift vp no yron vpon them: Thou shalt make þ altare of the Lord thy God of whole stones, and offre burntofferings thereon vnto the Lord thy God. And thou shalt offre peaceofferings, and shalt eate there, and reioyce before the Lord thy God. And thou shalt wyte vpon the stones all the wordes of this lawe, manifestly and well.

And Moses and the preastes the Leuites spake vnto al Israel, saying: take hede and heare (O Israel) this daye thou art become the people of the Lord thy God. Thou shalt hearken therfore vnto the voyce of the Lord thy God, and do hys commaundementes, & hys ordinaunces whiche I commaunde the this daye. And Moses charged the people the same daye, sayinge: These shall stande vpon mount Gariim, to blesse the people, when ye are come ouer Jordane: Symeon, Levi, Iuda, Issachar, Joseph, and Ben Iamin. And these shall stāde vpon mount Ebal to curse: Ruben, Gad, Aser, Zabulon, Dan, and Asephail. And þ Leuites shall answer and saye vnto all the men of Israel with a loude voyce.

The promys of the blessynges vnto them that kepe the commandementes, and the curses to the contrarye.

- * Leu. xxvi. a If thou shalt hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lord thy God and obserue and do all his commaundementes, whiche I commaunde the this day, The Lord thy God will set thee on hygh above all nations of the earth.
- * Deut. xi. b * And all these blessynges shall come on thee, and ouertake thee, yf thou shalt hearken vnto the voyce of the Lord thy God. Blessed shalt thou be in the towne, and blessed in the felde: blessed shalt be the frute of thy body, and the frute of thy ground, and the frute of thy cattell, the increase of thyne oxe, and the flockes of thy shepe: blessed shalt be thy basket, & thy store: Blessed shalt thou be, when thou goest out, and blessed when thou comest in.
- * Deut. xx. a * The Lord shall gyue ouer thyne enemyes that rise agaynst the, that they maye fall before thy face. They shall come out agaynst the one waye, and flye before the seven wayes. The Lord shall put the blessyng vpon the in thy store houses, & in all that thou settest thyne hande to, & will blesse the in al the lande which the Lord thy God gyueth the.
- The Lord shall make the an holy people vnto hym selfe, as he hath swoyne vnto the: yf thou shalt kepe the commandementes of the Lord thy God, and walke in his wayes.

And all nations of the earth shall se, that the name of the Lord is called vpon thee, & they shall be afrayd of the. And the Lord shall make the plentiful in goodes, in the frute of thy body, in the frute of thy cattell, & in the frute of thy ground, in the lande whiche the Lord shall open vnto thy fathers, to gyue the.

vnto thy lande in due season, and to blissh the laboures of thy hande. And thou shalt sende vnto many nacions, but shalt not be rowe thy selfe. And the Lord shall set thee before and not behynde, & thou shalt be alone only, and not byneth: yf that thou hearken to the commaundementes of the Lord thy God, whiche I commaunde the this day, to hepe and to do the. And se that thou be not a spyde from any of these wordes, whiche I commaunde the this day, eyther to the right hande or to the left, that thou woldst go after straunge goddes to serue them.

* But and yf thou wilt not hearken vnto the voyce of the Lord thy God, to hepe to do all his commaundementes and his ordinaunces whiche I commaunde the this day: all these curses shall come vpon thee, and ouertake thee: Cursed shalt thou be in the towne, and cursed in the felde: cursed shall thy basket be, and thy store. Cursed shall be the frute of thy body, and the frute of thy lande, and the frute of thyne oxe, and the flockes of thy shepe. Cursed shalt thou be when thou goest in, and cursed whē thou goest out. The Lord shall sende vpon thee cursyng, destruction, & rebuke, in all that thou settest thy hande to, and that thou doest: vntyll he destroye the, and byngne the to nought quickly: because of the wyckednesse of thyne inuentions, and because thou hast forsaken me. The Lord shall make the pestylence cleane vnto thee, vntyll he haue consumed the from of the lande, whither thou goest to enioye it. The Lord shall smyte the with swelling, with scur, beet, burnynge, and with the swerde, with wetherynge, and with blasynge. And the Lord shall folowe the vntyll thou perishe.

* And the heauen that is ouer thee shall be brasse, and the erth that is vnder thee, yron. The Lord shall turne the rayne of the lande vnto powder and dust: euen from heauen shall they come downe vpon the, & thou shalt be brought to nought. And the Lord shall plage the before thyne enemyes: they shall come out one waye agaynst them, and flye seven wayes before them, and shalt be scattered amonge all the kyngdomes of the earth. And thy carhaile shall be meate vnto all maner foules of the ayre, and vnto the bestes of the earth, and no man shall fraye them awaye.

* The Lord will smyte thee with blindness of Egypt, and the emarodes, scalle, & gynelle, & thou mayest not be healed thereof. And the Lord shall smyte the with madness, and blindness, and blasynge of heart. Thou shalt grope at noone dayes, as a blind man gropeth in darkness, and shalt not profyte by thy wayes. Thou shalt be oppressed with wronge, and be polled euermore, and no man shall succer the. Thou shalt be betrayed unto a wyfe, & another man shall lye wpyth her. * Thou shalt buyde an house, and not dwell therein. Thou shalt also plante a vyneparde, and shalt not gather the grapes.

Thyne ore shalt layne before thyne eyes, and thou shalt not eate therof. Thyne asse shalt violently taken awaye even before thy face, and shalt not be restozed to payne. Thy shepe shalt geuen unto thyne ene-myes, and noman shall rescue them. Thy sonnes & thy daughters shalt geuen unto another nacion, & thyne eyes shall se it, and dase vpon them all the daye long, and there shalt be no myghte in thyne hāde. The frute of thy lande and all thy laboures shall a na-cion whiche thou knowest not, eate, & thou shalt continually suffre violence onely, and be oppressed alwaye: so þ thou shalt be cleane despyde thy selfe, for the syghte of thyne eyes whiche thou shalt se.

The Lorde shall smyte þ in the knees & legges, with a myscheuous botche that can not be healed: even from the sole of thy fote unto the toppe of thy head.

* The Lorde shall brynge the & thy kin-ge (whiche thou shalt set ouer the) unto a nacion, whiche nether thou nor thy fathers haue knowne, & there þ mayeste serue straūge Goddes: euen wood and stone. And thou shalt be wōdzed at, spoken of, and iested at amonge all nacjons, whether þ Lorde shall carpe the. Thou shalt carpe moche seed out into the felde, and shalt gether but lytle in:
for the greshopers shall destroye it. Thou shalt plante a vyneparde and dyelle it, but shalt nether dynche of þ wyne, nether gether the grapes, for the wormes shall eate yt. Thou shalt haue olyue trees thozowout all thy coastes, but shalt not annoynte thy selfe wpyth þ oyle, for thyne olyue trees shall be roted out. Then shalt beget sonnes, and daughters, but shalt not haue them: for they shalt be carped awaye captiue. All thy trees and frute of thy lande shalt be marred wpyth blastynge.

The straunger þ is amonge you, shall cyme aboute the vpon hye, and thou shalt come downe beneth alowe. he shall lende, þ and thou shalt not lende hym: he shalt befow, and thou behynde.

Moreover, all these curses shall come vpon the, and shall folowe þ and ouer take þ, tyll thou be destroyed: because thou herke-nest not vnto the voyce of the Lorde thy God, to kepe hys commaundementes, and hys ordinaunces, whych he commaunded þ, and they shalt be vpon the as myracles and wonders, and vpon the seed for euer, because thou seruedest not the Lorde thy God with all herte and wpyth a good herte, whan þ haddest a boundance of all thynges, therfore thou shalt serue thyne enemye, whiche the Lorde shall sende vpon the: in hunger and thyrste, in nakednesse, & in nede of all thyng & he shall put a poche of pyon vpon thy necke vntyll he haue bzoughte the to naughte.

And þ Lorde shall brynge a nacion vpo the from farre, and from the ende of þ world as swifte as an Egyle flyeth: a nacion whose tonge thou shalt not vnderstande: a harde fanozed nacion, whych shall not regarde the parsons of the olde, nor haue compassyon of the younge. The same shall eate the frute of thy catell, and the frute of thy lande vntyll he haue destroyed the: and shall leaue the: nether cozne, wyne, nor oyle, nether the encrease of thyne oxen, nor the flockes of thy shepe: vntyll he haue bzoughte the to noughte. And he shall kepe the in, in all thy ctyes, vntyll he haue caste downe thy hye walles and stronge holdes, wherein thou trustedest, thozowout all the land. And he shall besege the in all thy ctyes thozowout all thy lande, whiche þ Lorde thy God hath geuen the.

* And þ shalt eate the frute of thyne owne bodye: the fleshe of thy sonnes, and of thy daughters, whiche the Lorde thy God hath geuen the, in that straytnesse and lege wherwpyth thyne enemye shall besege the: so that yt shall greue the man (that is tender & exceedynge delcate amonge you,) to loke on hys bzother and vpo hys wyfe that lyeth in hys bosome, and on the remnaunte of hys chyliden, which he hath yet lefte, for feare of geynge (vnto any of them) of the fleshe of hys chyliden, whom he shall eate, because he hath nothyng, lefte hym in that straytnesse & lege, wherwpyth thyne enemye shall besege the in all thy ctyes.

Per, and þ woman that is so tender and delcate, that she dare not aduenture to set the sole of hys fote vpon the grounde, (for softenesse and tenderesse) shall be greued to loke on her husbāde that lyeth in her bos-ome, & on her sonne and on her daughter: and on hys after byrth (that is to come out from betwene her legges,) & her chyliden whiche she shall beare: for whan al thynges lacke, she shall eate them secretly, in the lege and straytnesse, wherwpyth thyne enemye shall besege the in thy ctyes.

* If thou wylte not kepe and do all the wordes of thys lawe (that are wyrtten in thys booke,) and feare thys glozious and fearfull name of the Lorde thy God: þ Lorde wyl lende vnto the and thy seed, great plages and of alonge continuāce, euell speenelles and of longe duraunce. Moreover, he wyl brynge vpon the all the dyseases of Egypte, and those whiche þ wastest as trayed of shall cleane vnto the. And all maner synnelles, and all maner plagis whych are not wyrtten in the boke of thys lawe, wyl the Lorde

 Deut. 5. 1.* Lorde bynne upon þe, vntill þe bynne the to naughte. And þe ſhal be leſte ſerue in nom þe, whete befoze þe were as the * ſtarres of heauen in multitude: becauſe thou woldeſt not herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde thy God.

And þe ſhal be waſted from of þe lande, whete thou goeſte to enioye it. And the Lorde ſhall ſcatter the amonge all nacjons, from the one ende of the worlde vnto the other, & there þe ſhalte ſerue ſtraunge goddes whych þe nor thy fathers haue knowne: euen wood and ſtone.

And amonge theſe nacjons thou ſhalte ſyn de no eaſe, neyther ſhall the ſole of thy foote haue reſte. But the Lorde ſhall gyue þe there an vnquyet herte, & dalyng eyes, & ſorowe of mynde. And thy lyfe ſhall hange befoze þe and thou ſhalte feare bothe daye, and nyght & thou ſhalte haue no truſte in thy lyfe. In þe moynynge þe ſhalte ſaye wolde God yt were nyghte. The xxix. Chapter.

 Ex. 33. 1.* The people are exhorted to obſerue the commandmentes, which yf they dyce he they are threatened to be plagued.

 Ex. 33. 1.* Theſe are the wordes of the * appoyntement, which þe Lorde commanded Moſes, to make wyth the chyldren of Iſraell in the lande of Moab, beſyde the appoyntment whych he made w them in Horeb and Moſes called all Iſraell, and ſayde vnto them: Ye haue ſene all þe Lorde dyd befoze poure eyes in þe lande of Egypt: vnto Pharaon and vnto all hys ſeruauntes, & vnto all hys land þe great temptacones whych thyne eyes haue ſene, thoſe greates myracles & wonders: & yet þe Lorde hath not geuen you an herte to perceaue, & eyes to ſe, & eares to heare, vnto theſe daye.

 Deu. 28. 1.* And I haue led you .xl. yere in the wylderneſſe: and poure * clothes are not waxed olde vpon you, and thy ſhoe is not waxed olde vpon thy foote. Ye haue eaten no bread nor droncke wyne or ſtronger bynne, that ye myght knowe, howe that I am þe Lorde poure God.

 And ye came vnto this place & the kynge of Heſbon, & Og kynge of Baſan came out agaynſte vs vnto battell, and we ſmote them: and toke theyr lande, & geue it for an inheritaunce vnto the Rubenites and Gadites, & to the halfe trybe of Maſſe. * hepe therfore the wordes of theſe appoyntementes & do them, þe ye maye ſtande all þe ye oughte to do. Ye ſtande the daye euery one of you befoze þe Lorde poure God: poure captaynes, poure trybes, poure elders, poure officers, and all the men of Iſraell: poure chyldren alſo, poure wyues, and the ſtraunger þe is in thyne houſe: from the hewer of thy wood, vnto the drawer of thy water: þe thou ſholdeſt go into the appoyntment of the Lorde thy God, and into the othe whiche the Lorde thy God, made wyth the theſe daye. For to make the a people vnto hym ſelfe, and þe he maye be called a God, as he hath ſayde vnto the, and as he hath ſwozne vnto thy fathers Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob.*

I make not theſe bonde and theſe othe w you onely but bothe wyth hym þe ſtande here wyth vs this daye befoze þe Lorde our God, and alſo wyth hym þe is not here wyth vs theſe daye. For ye knowe, howe we came dwelte in the lande of Egypte, and howe we came thozowe the myddes of the nacjons whiche ye paſſed by. And ye haue ſene theſe abhomyne nacjons and theſe ſhakes: (wood and ſtone, ſiluer & golde) which were amonge them.

Leſt there be amonge you man or woman kynred or trybe, whoſe herte turneth away theſe daye from the Lorde poure God, to ſerue the Goddes of theſe nacjons: and leſt there be amonge you ſomme roots þe areth gall and wormewood, ſo þe when he heareth the wordes of theſe othe, he blyde hym ſelfe in hys herte ſayinge. * I ſhall haue peace. I wyll walke in the meanynge of my owne herte, (To put the dronken to the ſtie). And ſo the Lorde wyll not conſent to be mercyfull vnto hym, but then the wythe of the Lorde and hys gelouſy ſhall be agaynſte that man, and all ſcuries that are wyrtten in theſe boke, ſhall lyght vpon hym, and the Lorde ſhall do out hym me from vnder heauen, and the Lorde ſhall ſeparate hym vnto euell oute of all the tribes of Iſraell, accordynge vnto all the curſes of the appoyntment, that are wyrtten in the boke of theſe lawe.

So that þe generacyon to come of poure chyldren, that ſhall ryſe vp after you, & the ſtraunger that ſhall come from afayre ſhall ſaye, when they ſe the plagis of the lande, and the diſeaſes wherwyth the Lorde hath ſmytten it, howe all þe landes is bound vnto bymſtone & ſalt, and that it is neyther lowen nor beareth, nor any grasse groweth therin, lyke as in þe place of þe ouerthrowne-ge of * Sodome, Gomor, Adama, and zebaim: whiche the Lorde ouerthrowe in hys wyath and angre, Euen then shall all nac-yons saye: * wherfore hath þe Lorde done of thys facyon vnto thys lande: & howe fear-le is thys great wyath: And men shall saye:

because they leste þe Testament of the Lorde God of theyr fathers, whiche he made with them, when he broughte them out of þe land of Egypte. For they wente & serued straun-ge goddes and worshypped them: Goddes whych they knowe not, and whiche had geuen them naughte. And þe wyathe of þe Lorde warded whote agaynste thys lande, to bynge vpon yt all þe curses þe are wyrtten in this boke. And the Lorde cast them out of theyr land in angre, wyath, & great indignacyō, & cast them into a straunge lade as thys daye beareth wytnesse. The secrettes of the Lorde oure God * are opened vnto vs, & to oure chylidren for euer, & we maye do all the wo-rdes of thys lawe.

The .xxx. Chapter.
The worde of God is at hande.

When all these wordes are come vnto the, the blessinge & the curse which I haue set before the, thou shalt turne vnto thynne herte, amonge all the nacys whether þe Lorde thy God hath thurst the,
and come agayne vnto the Lorde thy God, and herken vnto hys voyce in all these thyn-ges that I commaunde the thys daye: thou and thy chylidren wyth all thynne herte & all thy soule. And þe Lorde thy God wyll turne the captiuyte, and haue compassyon vpon þe and wyll turne, and set the agayne from all þe nacys, amonge whych þe Lorde thy God shall haue scatared the. Though thou wast cast vnto þe extreme partes of heauen: euen from thence wyll the Lorde thy God gather the, & from thence wyll he set the, & the Lorde thy God wyll bynne the into the lande whych thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt enioy it. And he wyll shewe the kyndenesse, and multiplie the aboue thy fathers. * And the Lorde thy God wyll cōsumpe thynne herte, & the herte of thy seed, that thou mayeste loue the Lorde thy God wyth all thynne hert, & all thy soule & thou mayest lue. And the Lorde thy God wyll put all these curses vpon thynne enemyes, and on them that hate the, and that persecute the.

But thou shalt turne, & herken vnto þe voyce of þe Lorde, and do all hys commaundementes, whiche I commaunde þe this day And the Lorde thy God wyll make the plenteous in all the woiches of thynne harte, in þe frute of thy bodye, and in the frute of thy ca-rell, & in þe frute of thy lade for thy welthe. *
For the Lorde wyll turne agayne & reioyce ouer the to do the good, as he reioysed ouer thy fathers. If thou herken onely vnto the voyce of the Lorde thy God, to kepe hys comaundementes and his ordinaunces which are wyrtten in the boke of thys lawe, and þe thou turne vnto þe Lorde thy God wyth all thynne herte & all thy soule.

* For þe commaundement whiche I commaunde þe thys daye, is not seperated fro þe, netter farre of þe. It is not in heauen, þe thou nedest to * (complayne and) saye: who shall go vpon vs to heauen, & set yt vs, that we maye heare yt, and do it: Netter is it beyon-de the see: that thou shuldest saye: who shall go ouer the see for vs, and set yt vs, that we maye heare yt, and do yt: But the worde is very nye vnto the: euen in thy mouth and in thynne herte, that thou do yt.

* Beholde I haue set before þe this daye lyfe and good, deathe and euell: For where as I commaunde the thys daye, to loue the Lorde thy God, to walke in hys wayes, and to kepe hys commaundementes, hys ordinaunces, and hys lawes (þe thou so do) thou shalt lue and multiplie, & the Lorde thy God shall blesse the in þe lande, whether thou goeste to possesse yt.

But & þe thynne herte turne awaye, so þe thou wylte not heare: but shalt go astray and worshyppye straunge goddes, and serue them, I pronounce vnto you also thys daye that ye shall surely perishe, & that ye shall not prolonge youre dayes vpon the lande whether thou passest ouer Iordan, to go and possesse yt.

* I call heauen and erth to recorde this daye agaynste you, & I haue set before you lyfe & deathe, blessinge & cursyng. Therfore chose lyfe, & both thou & thy seed maye lue, that thou mayest loue the Lorde thy God, and be obedyent to hys voyce, & cleaue vnto hym. For he is thy lyfe, and þe length of thy dayes, & thou mayest dwell vpon the earthe whych the Lorde swaie vnto thy fathers: Abraham, Isahac and Jacob, to geue them.

The .xxxi. Chapter.

Moyses began to speake vnto the people in his heare. This boke Deuteronomie is wyrtten and layde, in the tabernacle betwene the heche. The Levites are charged to reade it to the people.

And Moyses wylt & spake these wordes vnto all Israhell, & sayde vnto them: I am an hundred & twente yere olde thys daye, and can nomore go oute and in.
Also the Lorde hath sayde vnto me: thou shalt not go ouer thys Iordan. The Lorde thy God he wyll go ouer before the, and he wyll destroye these nacys before the, and thou shalt conquere them. * And Iosua, he shall go before the, as the Lorde hath sayde. And the Lorde shall do vnto them, as he bys to: * Beyon and Og hynges of þe Amorites

Josua is chosen Deuteronomium in Moses reptes, and vnto the lande of them: whom he destroyed. And the Lorde shall geue them ouer before your face, that ye maye do vnto them accordyng vnto all the commaundementes whych I haue commaunded you. Plucke vp your hertes therfore & be stronge, drede not, nor be asfede of them: for the Lorde thy God hym selfe doth go wyth the. He shal not fayle the, nor for sake the.

B And Moses called vnto Josua, & sayde vnto hym in the sygher of all Israel: * Be stronge & bolde, for thou must go wyth this people vnto the lande, whych the Lord hath sworne vnto theyr fathers, to geue them, & thou shalt geue yt them to inheret. And the Lord he doth go before the: he shal not fayle the, neyther forsake the: feare not therfore, nor be discomfited: And Moses wrote this lawe, and deliuered it vnto the Levites the sonnes of Levi (whych bare the Arche of the testamente of the Lorde) and vnto all the elders of Israel, & Moses commaunded them sayenge: * At the point of seven peares in the sollemnite of the free peare, euen in the feast of Tabernacles, when all Israel is come to appeare before the Lorde thy God, in the place, whych he hath chosen: thou shalt reade this lawe before all Israel in theyr eares. Gather the people together: men, women, & chyldren, and the straunger that is wythin thy gates, that they maye heare, & learne & feare the Lorde your God, and kepe, & obserue all the wordes of this lawe, & that theyr chyldren whych knowe nothyng, maye heare, & learne to feare the Lorde your God, as longe as ye lyue in this lande, whether ye go oure Jordan to possesse it.

D And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: Beholde thy dayes are come, & thou must dye. Call Josua therfore, and stande ye in the tabernacle of wytnesse, that I maye geue him a charge. And Moses and Josua wente, & stode in the tabernacle of wytnesse. And the Lorde appeared in the tabernacle, euen in the pylle of the cloude. And the pylle of the cloude stode ouer the doore of the tabernacle. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: beholde thou shalt slepe wyth thy fathers, and this people wyl rylse vp, and go a whozzyng after straunge Goddes of the lande (whether they go) and wyl forsake me, & breake the appoyntmente, whych I haue made wyth them. And then my wrath wyl ware whote agaynst them, & I wyl forsake them, and wyl hyde my face from them, & they shal be consumed. And moche aduersyte and trybulacions shal come vpon them, so that they wyl saye: Are not these troubles come vpon me, because God is not wyth me? And I also wyl surely hyde awaye my face in that daye, for all the euyles sake whych they shal haue wroughte, in that they are tourned vnto straunge goddes. Nowe therfore write this songe for you & teache it the chyldren of Israel, & put it in theyr mouthes, & this songe maye be my wytnesse agaynst the chyldren of Israel. For I wyl byngnet them into the lande (whych I swore vnto theyr fathers) & I will geue it to my people & to myne, & they shal eate, & they shal selues, and ware fat, and tourne vnto straunge Goddes, and serue them, and blasphemme me, and breake my couenaunte. And then when moche myschefe & trybulacions shal come vpon them, this songe shal answere them as a wytnesse. For it shal not be forgotten out of the mouthes of theyr seed: for I knowe theyr imagynacyon, whych they go aboute euen now, before I haue broughte them into the lande whych I swore. And Moses therfore wrote this songe & same teales & taughte it the chyldren of Israel. And he gaue Josua the sonne of Nun a charge, & sayde: * be bolde, & stronge, for I wylte byngnet the chyldren of Israel into the lande, whych I swore vnto them, & I wyl be wyth the.

And when Moses had made an ende of wytyng oute of the wordes of this lawe in a booke vnto the ende of them, Moses commaunde the Levites, which bare the Arche of the testamente of the Lorde, sayenge: take ye this booke of this lawe, & put it in the syde of the Arche of the testamente of the Lorde your God: & it maye be there for a wytnesse agaynst you. For I knowe thy skobourne: & thy necke: wyle I am yet a lyue wyth you this daye, ye haue bene dysobedyent vnto the Lorde: & howe moche moare after my deathe.

Gather vnto me all the elders of your trybes & your offycers, that I maye speake these wordes in theyr eares, & call heauen & earth to recorde agaynst them. For I am here after my deathe, ye wyl vterly be corrupte, & turne from the waye whych I haue commaunded you: & trybulacyon wyl come vpon you in the latter dayes, because ye shal haue wrought wyckednesse in the sygher of the Lorde, to prouoke hym thowow the wyckes of your hādes. And Moses spake in the eares of all the congregacyon of Israel the wordes of this songe, vntill he had ended them.

The xxxii. Chapter The songe of Moses.

Hear O ye heauens, and I shall speake, & let the earth heare the wordes of my mouth. * My doctrine shall droppe as doth the raine, & my speache shall flowe as doth the dewe, as I shal er vpon the herbes, & as I shal droppe vpon the grasse. For I wyl call vnto the name of the Lorde: Ascrib ye honoure vnto oure God.

* Perfecte is the woiche of þ most myghtye God: for all hys wayes are iudgemente.
He is a God of truth, wythout wychednesse:
ryghteous, and iust is he.

Frowardly haue they done against him thow they formittes: not his owne chyldren, but a wyched & frowarde generacyon.
Woe so rewarde the Lozde, O foolys the na-cion & vnwyse: * Is not he thy father, & they ne owner: hath he not made the, and ordeyned the? Remembre the dayes of the wolde that is past: consyde the yeres fro tyme to tyme. * Aske thy father, and he wyll shewe the: thy elders, & they wyll tell the. Wylle the most myghthe druyded the naciõs, and whan he separated the sonnes of Adam, he put the borders of the naciõs, fast by the multitude of the chyldren of Israel.

¶ For the Lozdes parte is hys folke, & Jacob is the porcion of hys enderytaunce.

He founde him in a deserte lade, in a voyde grounde, and in a rorynge wylbernesse. He led hym aboute, he gaue hym vnderstandyng, & kept hym as the apple of hys eye.

As an egle that stretcheth vp her nest & flo-teth ouer her pouge, & stretcheth out her win-ges, so doth he take them vp, & beareth them on his shoulers. The Lozde alone was hys gurdy, & there was no straunge God to him.

He caried hym vp to an hye lande, that he myght eate the increase of the felde. * And he fed hym wyth honye out of the rocke, and with oyle out of the most harde stone. Wylth butter of kyne, & mylke of the shepe, wyth fat of the lambes and of fat rammes and he goates, with þ fat, of most plectous wheate & that thou myghtest dypne the moost pure blonde of the grape.

But he that shulde haue bene vpryghte, whan he waxed fat, spurned wyth his heile.

Thou art wel fed, thou art growen thich:
thou art euen laden wyth fatnesse.

And he forsoke God hys maker, & regarded not the God of his saluacion. They prouoked hym to angre wyth straunge goddes:
eue to abhominacions prouoked they hym.

* They offred vnto deuils, and not to God, eue to goddes whõ they knewe not: to newe goddes that came newly vp, whõ they fathers feared not. Of God that begate the thou arte vnmynful, & hast forgotten God that made the. The Lozde therfore sawe it, and was angry, because of the prouokynge of hys sonnes and of hys daughters.

And he sayde: I wyll hyde my face from them, & wyll se what their ende shalbe. For they are a very frowarde generaciõ, chyldre in whom is no fayth. They haue angered me wyth that wyche is no God, and prouoked me wyth their vanities. * And I also wyll prouoke them with those wyche are no people, I wyll anger them wyth a foolyshe na-cion. * For fyre is kyndled in my wyath, & burneth vnto the botome of hell. And hath consumed the earth with her increase, and set a fyre the botoms of the mountaynes. I wyll heape mischeues vpon them, & wyll destruye them wyth myne arrowes.

They shalbe burnt wyth hunger, and consumed w heate, and wyth bitter destruccyon
* I wyll also sende the teeth of beastes vpon them, with the furiousnes of serpentes in the dust. Withouth forth, shal þ swerde robbe the of their chyldren: and wythin in the chamber, fear both younge men and younge women, and the luckelynges wyth the men of grape heades. I haue said: I wil skater the abyde and make the remembraunce of the to cease from amonge men. Wlere it not that I feared the wyath of the enemye, lest their aduer-saries shulde vterly wythdrawe the selues and lest they shulde saye: our hye hande hath done all thys, and not the Lozde.

For it is a naciõ without fozecast, nether is there any vnderstandyng in them: & that they were wyse, and vnderstode thys, that they wolde consyde they later ende.

Howe shulde one chace a thousande, and two put ten thousande to flyghte: excepte they maker had solde them, and excepte the Lozde had put them vp.

For they God is not as oure God: oure enemys also them selues are iudges.

For their vyne is of the vyneyard of So-dome, and of the felde of Gomorra: They grapes are grapes of gall, and their clusters be bytter.

Their wyne is the popson of draggons, & the cruell Gall of aspres. Is not thys layde in stowe with me, & sealed vp amonge my treasures? * Vengeaunce is myne, and I wyll re-warde: their fete shal lyde in due tyme. For the daye of they destruccyon is at hande, and the thynges that shal come vpon the, make haste.

* For the Lozde shal iudge hys people, and haue compassyon on his seruantes: whã he seyth that their power is gone, and that they be in a maner put vp, or broughte to naught and forsaken.

And he shal saye: where are they god-des they? God in whom they trusted.

The fat of whose sacrifices they byd eate and dracke the wyne of they: dancke offringes let them eyle vp and healte you, and be your protection.

Se nowe howe that I, * I am God, and there is none but I: I hyll, and wyll make alyne: I wounde, and I wyll heale: * neither is there any that can deliuer out of my hãde.

For I wyll lyft vp myne hand to heauen, and wyll saye: I lyue euer.

If I whet the edge of my swerde, & myne hande take holde to do iustice, I wyll re-

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses the selfe same daye, saying: get the vp into this mountayne Ibarim. (That is to say a passage) vnto the mounte Abarim, whiche is in the lande of Moab ouer agaynst Jericho. And beholde the Lande of Canaan, which I geue vnto the chyliden of Israel to possesse: And bye in the mount whych thou goest vp vnto, and thou shalt be gathered vnto thy people. * As Aaron thy brother dyed in mount Hor, & was gathered vnto his people, because he trespassed agaynst me amonge the chyliden of Israel. * at the waters of styfe, at Cadis in the wilderness of zin: for ye sacrificed me not amonge the chyliden of Israel. The xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ Moses bringeth all the trybes of Israel.

2 This is the blessing wherewith Moses the man of God blessed the chyliden of Israel before his death, and sayde: * The Lord came fro Sinai and shewed his beames from Seir vnto them, and appeared from mounte Ibaran, and he came wpth thousandes of sayntes, and in his ryght hande a lawe of fyre for the. And he loued the people. * All his sayntes also are in thy handes. They were synnten to go after thy fete, and to receaue of thy wordes. Moses gaue vs a lawe to be an herptaunce of the congregacyon of Jacob. And he was in Israel kynge whē the heades of the people, and the trybes of Israel were gathered together.

Let Ruben lyue, and not dye: and be fewe in nombze. This same also happen to dauid. And he sayde: heare Lorde the voyce of dauid, and bynge him vnto his people: his handes shall be good enough for him, & he helpe hym agaynst his enemyes.

And vnto Levi he sayde: Thou shalt be a Trim shall be wpth the, & wpth curie in is godly in the. Thou dydest prone hym in the tentacyon & strinedest with him at the waters of styfe. He that hath sayde wpth his father & to his mother: I haue not hym, And he that knowe not his brethren, nor knewe his owne chyliden, those are they that haue obserued thy worde, and shall kepe thy couenaunt. They shall teache Jacob the iudgementes, and Israel thy lawe. They shall put cens before thy nose, and the sacrifice vpon thyne altare. Bless the frutes, and accept the worke of his handes, smyte the lopnes of the that ryle agaynst him, and of the that hate hym, that they not agayne.

And of Ben Jamin he sayde. The Lord derlynge shall dwell in safete vpon hym, the Lorde shall couer hym al the daye long, and he shall dwell betwene his shoulde.

And of Joseph he sayde: blessed of is his lande for the frutes of beane, thow the dewe and sprynges that lye beneath, and for the swete frutes of the encrease of the vine and rype frutes of the moone: for the frutes of the princypall mountaynes, and for the frutes of the bylles bynge fute for me, and for the frutes of the earth, and fulmeth therof: & for the good wyll of him that dwelleth in the: * bulke, shall the blessing come vnto the heade of Joseph, & vpon the toppe of the heade of him that was separated fro amonge his brethren bys fyrst borne oxe hath betwixt, & his hornes are as the hornes of an vncome. And wpth them he shall trouble the nation together, euen vnto the endes of the world. These are also many thousandes of Ephraim, and the thousandes of Manasse.

And vnto Zabulon he sayde: Reioyce in bulon in thy goynge oute, and thou shalt in thy tentes. They shall call the people vnto the byll and there they shall offer offerynges of ryghteousnes. For they shall seeke of the abundaunce of the see, and of treasure in the lande.

And vnto Gad he sayde: blessed be the maker Gad: he dwelleth as a Lyon, he catcheth the arme wpth the heade. And vnto Dan he sayde: Dan is a Lyon whelp, he shall flowe from Balan.

And vnto Asephthal he sayde: Asephthal hath abundaunce of Gods good pleasure, & is fylled with the blessinge of the Lorde, & shall haue his possession toward the south west.

And to Aler he sayde: Aler shall be blessed with childre: he shall be acceptable vnto his brethren, & shall dwylpe his sote in oyle. Thy dwellinge be yron and byasse, and thyne age be as thy youth.

There is none like vnto the God of Israel: which though he syt vpon the heauyn as vpon a horse, yet is he thy helper, whose glozpe is in the celestiall places. The eternal God is thy refuge, & vnder the armes of the Everlasting God shalt thou lyue. He shall cast out the enemye before the, and saye: destroye. Israel then shall dwell in safetye, & alone. And the eye of Jacob shall be vpon a land of corne and wyne, and his heauens shall droppe the dewe. happy art thou o Israel, who is lyke vnto the O people that are saued in the Lorde, whiche is the spyde of thy helpe, & swerde of thy glozpe. Thyne enemyes haue lost their strength to the warde, and thou shalt tread vpon the hegyth of them.

The xxxiiii. Chapter.

Moses dyeth. Israel weepeth. Josua succeedeth in Moses toleme.

And Moses went from the playne of Moab vnto mount Sebo and vnto the toppe of the hyll that is ouer agaynst Jericho. And the Lorde shewed hym all the lande of Gilead, euen vnto Dan, and all Sephtaly and the lande of Ephraim and Manasse, and all the lande of

Juda: euen vnto the vntmost see, & the south, and the regyon of the playne of Jericho the cytie of panymetrees, euen vnto zoar. And the Lorde sayde vnto hym. * This is the lade whych I swaie vnto Abraham, Isahac and Jacob sayinge: I wyll gyue it vnto thy seed. I haue caused the also to se it with thyne eyes, * but thou shalt not go thert, * Gen. xlii. 5 and 28, 9

So Moses the seruauit of the Lorde dyed there in the lande of Moab accordyng to the worde of the Lorde. And he buryed hym in a vale in the lade of Moab ouer agaynst the house of Beor, but no man knoweth of his sepulchre vnto this daye. Moses was an hundred and twetye yere olde when he dyed: his eye was not dimme, nor his naturall colour abated. And the chyldren of Israel wepte for Moses in the playne of Moab thert dayes. And the dayes of wepyng and mourninge for Moses were ended. * Deut. xxxiij. 2

And Josua the sonne of Nun was full of the sperte of wysdome: * for Moses had put his handes vpon hym. And the chyldren of Israel were obedient vnto hym, and dyd as the Lorde commaunded Moses. And there arose not a prophete sence in Israel lyke vnto Moses, whom the Lorde knewe face to face, accordyng to all the myracles and wonderys whych the Lorde sent hym to do in the lande of Egypte, vnto Pharaos and all his seruantes and before all his lande: and accordyng to all that myghte hande, and all the greute visions, whych Moses shewed in the syght of all Israel. * Num. xxiij. 9 whom the hebreues call Iehosua.

The booke of Josua

The fyrst Chapter.

The Lozde courageth Josua to invade the lande of promysse, and commaundeth hym continually to reade Deuteronomie.

After the death of Moses the servaunt of the Lozde, it happened also that the Lozde spake vnto Josua the sonne of Nun, Moses minister sayinge: Moses my servaunt is dead.

Now therfore vp and go ouer Jordan thou and all this people, vnto the lande the which I geue vnto the chyldren of Israel. * All the places that the sooles of your fete shal treade vpon haue I geue you as I sayd vnto Moses from the wyldernes and this Libanon vnto y greater ryuer Euphrates: all the lande of the hebreues, euen vnto the great see towardes y goyng downe of the sonne, shalbe your coaste. There shall not a man be able to wythstande the all the dayes of thy lyfe. * For as I was with Moses so wyl I be with the, and wyl not fayle the, nor forsake the. * Be stronge therfore & bolde: for vnto this people shalt thou deuise the lande which I swaie vnto they fathers to geue them. Onely be thou stronge and as bold as thou canst, that thou mayst obserue and do accordyng to al y laue, which Moses my servaunt commaunded the. * Tourne therfrom nether to the ryght hande, nor to the left: that thou mayest do wylfully in al y thou takest in hande: * let not the booke of this laue departe out of thy mouth: But recorde therein daye and nyght, y thou mayst obserue, & do accordyng to all that is wyrtten therein. For then shalt thou make thy waye prosperouse, & then thou shalt do wylfully. Haue not I commaunded the, that thou shouldest be stronge & hardy and not feare ner be saynt harted? For I the Lozde thy God am with the, whether soeuer thou goest.

Then Josua commaunded the officers of the people, sayinge: So thowowe the myddes of the dooste, & commaunde the people, sayinge prepare you vntayles: for after thre dayes ye shall passe ouer this Jordan, to go in and enioye the lande, which the Lozde your God geueth you to possesse it.

And vnto y Rubenites, Gadites, & halfe the trybe of Manasses spake Josua sayinge:

* Remember the worde, wherby Moses the seruaunt of the Lozde comaunded you, sayinge: the Lozde your God hath geuen you rest, and hath geuen you this lande: Your wyues, your chyldren, and your catell shall remayne in the lade which Moses gaue you on this syde Jordan: but ye shall go before your brethren, armed all y be men of warre, and helpe them vntyll the Lozde haue geue your brethren rest, as he hath you, and vntyll they also haue obtayned the lande, which the Lozde your God geueth them. And then shall ye returne vnto the lande of your possession and enioye it, whych land Moses the Lozdes seruaunt gaue you on this syde Jordan towardes the sonne rysyng. And they answered Josua sayinge: * All y thou hast commaunded vs, we wyl do, and whether soeuer thou sendest vs, we wyl go. Accordyng as we obeyed Moses in al thynges so wyl we obey the, only the Lozde thy God be wyth the as he was w Moses. And whosoener he be that doth dysobeye thy mouth & wyl not hearken vnto thy wordes in al that thou commaundest him, let him dye: Only be stronge and of good courage.

The ii. Chapter.

Josua sendeth spyes to Jericho, whych were hyd of Rahab.

And Josua the sonne of Nun sent oute of Settim two men to spye secretly sayinge: go and vewe the lande and also Jericho. And they went, and came into a harlotes house, named Rahab, and lodged there. And it was tolde the kinge of Jericho and said: Beholde, ther came men in hyther to nyght, of the chyldren of Israel, to spye out the countreie.

And y kynge of Jericho sent vnto Rahab sayinge: byyng forth y men that are come to the, & whych are entred into thyne house for they be come to searche out all the lande.

And the woman toke the two men * and hyd them. And sayd thus in dede there came men vnto me, but I wyl not whence they were. And about the tyme of the quyttinge of the gate wher it was darcke, the men went oute, whether the men went I wote not followe ye after them quychly, for ye shall ouer take them. But she brought them vp to the rooffe of the house, and * hyd them wyth the stalches of flaxe, which she had layng abroade vpon the rooffe. And the men of the ctye pursued after the, the waye to Jordan, euen vnto the ferre, and as sone as they wherby pursued after them were gone out, they shut the gate.

And oꝛ euer they were a slepe, he came vnto them vpon the rooffe, and sayde vnto þ men: I knowe that the Lorde hath geuen you the lande, * foꝛ the feare of you is fallen vpon vs, & the inhabyters of the land saynt at the pꛛesence of you. Foꝛ we haue hearde, howe the Lord * dyed vpon the water of pꛛeed see befoꝛe you, when you came out of Egypt and what you dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amozytes, that were on the other syde Jordan * Sehon, & Og, whom ye vtterly destroyed. And as sone as we had heard these thynges, we were sore afraide, & oure hartes dyd saynte. And there remayned no moare courage in any man at the pꛛesence of you. Foꝛ the Lorde poure God, he is the God in heauen aboue, and in earth beneth.

Now therfoꝛe (I pray you) sweate vnto me * by þ Lorde, that as I haue shewed you mercye, ye shall also shewe mercye vnto my fathers house, & geue me a true token. And that ye shall saue alþue, both my father, and my mother, my bꛛethꛛen, and my systers, & all that they haue. And that ye shall deliuer our soules from death.

And the men answered her: oure lꛛues foꝛ you to dye, yf ye vtter not thys oure busyness. And when the Lorde hath geuen vs the lād * we wyll deale mercifully & truly with the. And then she let the downe by a coarde, * thowowe a wyndowe: Foꝛ her house was by the towne wall. And she dwelte by the towne wall. And she sayd vnto them, gette you into þ moūtayne, lest the pursuers mete you, and hyde poure selues there thꛛe dayes vntill the pursuers be returned, and then shall ye go your owne waye.

And the men sayde vnto her: we wyll be blamelesse of this thy othe, whych thou hast made vs sweare. Behold, when we come into the lande, thou shalt hynde thys purple coarde in the wyndowe, whiche thou lattest vs downe by. And thou shalt hyngge thy father and thy mother, thy bꛛethꛛen, and all thy fathers housholde, euen into thy house.

And then whosoener dothe go out at the doꝛes of thy house, into the street, his bloud shall be vpon his owne heade, and we wyll be gyltlesse. And whosoener shall be with the in the house, hys bloud shall be on oure heade, yf any mannes hande touche hym: And yf thou vtter these oure wordes, we wyll be quite of thy oth whych thou hast made vs sweare. And she sayde: accordyng vnto poure wordes, so be it: and she sent them awaye to departe. And she bounde the purple coarde in the wyndowe.

And they departed, & came into þ mountayne, and there abode thꛛe dayes, vntill the pursuers were returned. And the pursuers sought them thowowout all the waye but founde them not. And the two men returned, and descended from the mountayne and passed ouer, and came to Josua the son of Nun, and tolde hym all that had chaunced them. And they sayde vnto Josua: the Lorde truly hath deliuered vnto oure handes all the lande, and all the inhabyters of the cōtrey saynte at the pꛛesence of vs.

¶ The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ Josua with the people passe ouer Jordan.

And Josua rose early: and they came iued from Seftim, and came to Jordan, he and all the chyldꛛen of Israel, and lodged there, befoꝛe they went ouer.

And after thꛛe dayes it fortuned, that the officers went thowow out the hooste, & commaunded the people sayinge: when ye se the arche of the testamēt of the Lorde your God and the pꛛiestes that are Leuites bearing it, ye shall departe from your place, & go after it. So yet that ther shall be a space between you and it, aboute a two thousande cubytes by measure. And ye shall not come nye vnto it, that ye maye knowe the waye, by whych ye must go: foꝛ ye haue not gone thys waye in tymes past. (and beware, that ye appoche not nye vnto the arche.) And Josua sayde vnto the people: * Sanctifie your selues, foꝛ tomorrow the Lorde shall do wonders amonge you.

And Josua spake vnto the pꛛiestes, sayinge: Take vp the arche of the cōuenant and go befoꝛe the people. And they toke vp the arche of the Testament and went befoꝛe the people.

And the Lorde sayd vnto Josua: this daye wyll I begynne to magnifye the in the sight of all Israel, that they maye knowe howe * as I was wꝛth Moses so wyll I be wꝛth the. And thou shalt commaunde the pꛛiestes that beare the arche of the cōuenant sayinge: When ye are come to the edge of the waters of Jordan, ye shall stande styll in it.

And Josua sayd vnto the chyldꛛen of Israel: come hyther, and heare the wordes of the Lorde your God. And Josua sayde: herbye ye shall knowe that the lꛛyngge God is amonge you, and that he wyll without faile cast out befoꝛe you, the Cananites, and the Hethites, the Hemytes, the Pherezites, the Gergesites, the Amozites, and the Jebusites: Beholde, the arche of the apoyntment of the Lorde of all the world goeth befoꝛe you into Jordā. Nowe therfoꝛe take fꛛe amonge you twelue men out of the trybes of Israel, out of euery trybe a man.

And as sone as the sooles of the fete of the pꛛiestes (that beare the arche of the Lorde / Gouernoure of all the world) treade in the waters of Jordane, the waters of Jordane (that are beneth, shall ronne hōme, and) shall be dryed: and þ waters that come from aboue, shall stande shall stande still vpon an heape. And it fortuned, that when the people were departed fro they tentes to go ouer Jordan, the preastes bearyng the arke of the appoyntment went before the people. And as sone as they that bare the arke came vnto Jordan, & the fete of the preastes that bare the arke were dopped in the bym of the water. * (For Jordan vsyth to fyll all hys banches all the tyme of harueste) the waters also that came downe fro above, dyd rple vp vpon an heape and appeared as great as a mountayne, & departed farre fro the cytie of Adā, & was besyde zartchan. And the waters & were beneath towarde the see of the wylbernes, fell a waye & departed into the salt see, and the people wente ryght ouer agaynste Jericho. And the preastes that bare the arke of the appoyntment of the Lorde, stode drye within Jordane ready prepared, & all the Israelites wente ouer thowhe the dnye, vntyll all the people were gone cleane ouer thowhe Jordan.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Josua testeth by twelue stones in Jordan.

And it fortuned, that when the people were all gone ouer Jordan, the Lorde spake vnto Josua, sayinge: Take you twelue men out of the people out of euery trybe a man. And commaunde you them sayinge: take you hence oute of the myddes of Jordane (euen out of the place where the preastes stode in a redynes) twelue stones, which ye shall take away wyth you, and leaue them in the place, wher you shall lodge this nyght.

And Josua called the twelue mē, whyche he had prepared of the chyldren of Israel, oute of euery trybe a man, and Josua sayde vnto them: get you before the arke of the Lorde your God, euen thowhe the myddes of Jordan, and take vp euery man of you a stone vpon his shulder accordynge vnto the nombre of the trybes of the chyldren of Israel, that this maye be a spgne amōge you. That whē your chyldren aske the fathers in tyme to come, sayinge: what meane these stones wyth you? ye maye answer them how that the waters of Jordane deuyded at the presence of the arke of the appoyntment of the Lorde. For when it wente ouer Jordan, the waters of Jordā deuyded. And these stones are become a memorie vnto the chyldren of Israel for ever.

And the chyldren of Israel dyd euen so as Josua commaunded, and toke vp twelue stones oute of the myddes of Jordan, as the Lorde sayde vnto Josua, accordynge to the wyse of the trybes of the chyldren of Israel and caried them a waye wyth them vnto the place where they lodged, & layed the downe there. And Josua set vp twelue stones also in the myddes of Jordan, in the place where the fete of the preastes which bare the arke of the testament, stode.

And there haue they continued vnto this daye. For the preastes whiche bare the arke stode in the myddes of Jordan, vntyll all was synghed that the Lorde commaunded Josua to saye vnto the people, accordynge to al that Moyses charged Josua. And the people hastid and went ouer. It fortuned also, that when all the people were cleane ouer, the arke of the Lorde wente ouer also, and the preastes before the people. * And the chyldren of Ruben, & the chyldren of Gad, & halfe the trybe of Manasse went before the chyldren of Israel armed, as Moyses charged them. Euen fourty thousande prepared for warre, wente before the Lorde vnto battell, thowhe the playne of Jericho, that daye the Lorde magnified Josua in the syght of all Israel, and they feared hym, as they feared Moyses all dayes of his lyfe.

And the Lorde spake vnto Josua, sayinge: commaunde the preastes that beare the arke of wytnesse, to come vp oute of Jordan. Josua therfore commaunded the preastes, sayinge: Come ye vp out of Jordan. And when the preastes that bare the arke of the appoyntment of the Lorde were come vp oute of the myddes of Jordan, & as sone as the sooles of the preastes fete were set on the drye land, the waters of Jordane retourned agayne vnto they place, and went ouer al they banches as they dyd before. And the people came vp out of Jordan the tenth daye of the first moneth, and pytched in Gilgal, euen in the east border of the cytie Jericho.

And the twelue stones whych they toke out of Jordan, dyd Josua pytche in Gilgal. And he spake vnto the chyldren of Israel, sayinge: * Vt your chyldre aske the fathers in tyme to come and saye: what meane these stones? ye shall thewe your chyldren, & saye, Israel came ouer this Jordan on drye land. For the Lorde your God dyed vp the water of Jordane before you, vntyll ye were gone ouer, as the Lorde your God dyd the red see whych he dyed vp before vs, tpyl we were gone ouer: that all the people of the worlde maye knowe the hande of the Lorde, howe myghtye it is, and that ye myght feare the Lorde your God for ever.

The. v. Chapter.

The Canaanites are hardy.

And it fortuned that whē all the kynges of the Amorites whych are beyonde Jordan westwarde, & all the kynges of the Canaanites whych were by the see, heard howe the Lorde had dyed vp the waters of Jordan before the chyldren of Israel vntyll they were gone ouer, they berkes saynted for feare. And ther was no lyette in the any moare for the presence of the chyldre of Israel.

 Jerob. xiii. f*
That same tyme the Lorde sayde vnto Josua: * Make the sharpe knyues (of stone) & go to agayne and circumsyle the chyldren of Israel the seconde tyme.

B And Josua made him sharpe knyues (of stone) & circumsyled the chyldren of Israel in the coppe of the foreskinnes. And this is the cause why Josua circumsyled all the people that came out of Egypte: Namely, such as were males because that al the men of warre, dyed in the wyldernes by the waye, after they came out of Egypte. For all the people that came out were circumsyled. But al the people that were borne in the wyldernes by the waye after they came out of Egypte, were not circumsyled. For the chyldren of Israel walked forty yeres in the wyldernes, tyll all the people of the men of warre that came out of Egypt were consumed because they hardened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

And they chyldren whom he set vp in theyr steade: them Josua circumsyled: for they were vncircumsyled, because they circumsyled them not by the waye.

 Num. xiii. b*
C And when they had circumsyled al the people they abode still together in the host tyll they were whole. And the Lorde sayde vnto Josua: this daye I haue taken a waye from the name of Egypte from you: wherfore the name of the same place is called Gilgal vnto this daye. And the chyldren of Israel abode in Gilgal: and held the feast of passeouer the fourtene daye of the moneth at euen in the playne of Jericho. And they dyd eate of the corne of the lande on the morowe after passeouer: sweet cakes & parched corne in the selfe same daye.  Jer. xi. a* D For the * Manna ceased on the morowe after they had begonne to eate of the corne of the lande, nether had the chyldren of Israel Manna any more, but dyd eate of the corne of the lande of Canaan that yere.

And it fortuned that whē Josua was nye to Jericho, he lyft vp his eyes and loked: and beholde, there stode a man agaynst hym, having a swerde drawn in his hande. And Josua went vnto him, and sayde vnto hym: art thou on our syde or on our aduersaries.

And he sayde: Naye, but as a captayne of the host of the Lord am I nowe come. And Josua fell on his face to the earth, & dyd reverence, and sayd vnto him, what sayth my Lord vnto thy seruant. And the captayne of the Lordes host sayde vnto Josua, * Do thy wo of thy fote, for the place wheron thou standest, is holy. And Josua dyd so.

C The. vi. Chapter.

The walles of Jericho fall, and it is destroyed.

A And Jericho was shut vp, & locked because of the chyldren of Israel: nether myght any man go out or in. And the Lorde sayde vnto Josua: behold, I haue geuen into thyne hand Jericho and her kyng and the stronge men of warre.

And ye shall compass the cytie, al ye that be men of warre, & go rounde aboute it once and so shall you do fyve dayes. And seven preastes shall beare before the Arke, seven trompettes of rammes hoznes: (that be made of the Zuberre.) And the seventh daye, ye shall compass the cytie seven tymes, and the preastes shall blowe with the trompettes.

And when they make a longe blaste with the rammes hozne, & ye heare the sounde of the hozne, all the people shall howte with a great howte. And then shall the wal of the cytiefal downe, and the people shall ascend vp, euery man streyght before him. And Josua the sonne of Nun, called the preastes & sayd vnto them: take vp the arke of the appoyntement, and let seven preastes beare vpon trompettes of rammes hoznes before the arke of the Lorde. And he sayde vnto the people, go and compass the cytie: and let hym that is barnessed, go before the arke of the Lorde. And when Josua had spoken vnto the people, the seven preastes bare the seven trompettes of rammes hoznes, and went forth before the arke of the Lorde and blew with the trompettes, and the arke of the couraunt of the Lorde followed them.

And all the men of armes went before the preastes, that blew wyth the trompettes, and the comen people came after the arke: and the preastes that went blew with the trompettes. And Josua commaunded the people sayinge: Ye shall not howte, ner make any noyse wyth youre voyce, nether shall any worde procede out of youre mouth, vntill the daye I byd you howte, then shall ye howte. And so the arke of the Lord compassed the cytie, and wente aboute it once: and they retourned into the host, and lodged there.

And Josua rose early in the morning, and the preastes toke vp the arke of the Lorde, and seven preastes bare seven trompettes of rammes hoznes, and went before the arke of the Lorde, and blew wyth the trompettes. And all the men of armes went before them, but the comen people came after the arke of the Lorde, whych went before wyth the blowing of the trompettes. And the seconde daye they compassed the cytie once, and retourned agayne into the host, and so they dyd fyve dayes.

And whē the seventh daye came, they rose early: eue wyth the dawnyng of the day, and compassed the cytie after the same maner seven tymes: only that daye they compassed the cytie seven tymes.

And at the seventh tyme, when p pzealles blewe of the troppettes. Josua sayd vnto the people, shoue, for the Lorde hath geuen you the cytie. And the cytie shalbe damned both it and all that are therein, vnto the Lorde: on-lye Rahab the harlot shall lyue, and al that are with her in the house, because she *hyd p messengers that we set. And in any wyse be ye ware of the excommunicate thynge, lest ye make your selues excommunicate, & take of the excommunicate thynge, and make p hoof of Israel excommunicate and trouble it. But all the syluer, golde, vessels of brasle and yron shalbe consecrate vnto the Lorde, and all shall come into hys treasure.

And the people shouted, and blew with trompettes. And when the people heard the sounde of the trope, they shouted w a great shoute: & the * wall fell downe, so that p prople went vp into p cite, every man strepght before hym, & toke the cytie. And they utterly destroyed all that was in the cytie, bothe man and womā, younge and olde, ore shepe and alle, wyth the edge of the swerde.

Then Josua sayde vnto the two me that had spyed out the contrepe: * go into the har-lots house, and brynge out thence the woman, and all that she hath, * as ye sware to her. And the younge men that were spyes, wente in, and brough oute Rahab, and her father and mother and her bzyethzen, and all p she had. And they brough out all her kynred, and put the without the hoste of Israel.

And they burnte the cytie wyth fyre, and all that was therein. Only the syluer and the golde, the vessels of brasle and yron they put vnto the treasure of the house of the Lorde.
* And Josua saued Rahab the harlot, & her fathers householde, and all that she had, and she dwelt in Israel, euen vnto this dape because she hyd the messengers, whych Josua sent to spy out Jericho.

And Josua sware at that tyme, sayinge:
cursed be the man before the Lorde, that ry-seth vp, & byldeth thys cytie Jericho: he shal laye the foundation * in his eldest sonne, and in his yodgest sonne shal he set vp the gates of it. And so the Lorde was with Josua, and his fame was noyed thowtwe out al lādes.

C The. vii. Chapter.

C Hal is spred out. A Can is stoned.

But yet the chyld of Israel trespassed in the * excommunicate thyn-ges: And * Acan the sonne of Car-my, the sonne of Zabai, the sonne lden of Israel.

And Josua sent men fro Jericho to Hai, whych is besyde Bethauen, on the east syde of Bethel, and spake vnto them, sayng: get you vp, & betwe the countrepe. And the men went vp, & spyed out Hai. And retourned to Josua, and sayde vnto hym, let not all the people go vp, but let as it were two or thye thousande men goo vp, and smyte Hai, and make not all the people to labour thytter, for they are but fewe.

And so there went vp thether of the prople, about a thye thousande me, and they fled before the men of Hai. And the men of Hai smote of them vpon a thytte and syre men:
for they chased them fro before the gate eue vnto Sebarim, and smote the in the goyng

And Josua sayde: * Alas, O Lorde God wherfore hast thou brought this people ouer Jordan, to deliuer vs into the hande of the Amozites, and to destroye vs: wold to God we had bene content, and dwelt on the other syde Jordane. Oh Lorde what shall I saye, when Israel turneth theyr backes before theyr enemyes: Surely the Cananites, and all the enhabiters of the lande shall heare of it, & shal conspyre agaynst vs, & destroye the name of vs out of p worlde: And what wile thou do vnto thy myghtye name?

And the Lorde sayde vnto Josua, get the vp, wherfore lyest thou thus vpon thy face?
Israel hath synned, and they haue trasgresed myne appoyntment, whych I commaunded them, for they haue taken of the excommunicate thynge, and haue stolen, and dys-sembled, & put them vnto theyr owne stuffe.
And therfore is it that the chylden of Israel cannot stande before their enemyes, but shal turne theyr backes before theyr enemyes because they be excommunicate. Nether wyll I be with you any moare, except ye rote out the excommunicate from amonge you.

and saye: sanctifye your selues agaynst to

There is a damned thynge amonge you (O Israel) & therfore ye cannot stande agaynst your enemyes, vntyll ye haue put the damned thynge from amonge you. To morowe mornynge therfore ye shalbe broughte accordinge to your tribes. And the trybe which p Lorde taketh, shal come accorde to p kin-reds therof. And the kynred which the Lorde shall synde gylty, shal come by householde.
And the householde which p Lorde shal finde de and wrought folpe in Israel.

And so Josua rose vp early in f moynng and brought Israel by theyr trybes: and the trybe of Juda was caught. And he brought the kynredes of Juda, and toke the kinned of the zarahites. And he brought the kynred of the zarahites, man by man, and zabdi was caught. And he brought hys household man by man, and Acan the sonne of Earmy, the sonne of zabdi, the sonne of zareth in f trybe of Juda was caught.

D And Josua sayde vnto Acan: my sonne, I beseeche the, geue glozpe to the Lozde God of Israel, and geue hym prayse, and shewe me what thou hast done, hyde it not from me.

And Acan answered Josua, & sayde: of a truthe I haue synned agaynst f Lozde God of Israel, & thus & thus haue I done. I sawe amonge the spoule a goodly Babylonyshe garment, & two hundred sicles of siluer, and a tonge of golde of fyfte species weyghte, and I coueted them, and toke them. And beholde they lye hyd in the earth in my tente and the syluer is ther vnder.

And so Josua sent messengers: which toke they ranne vnto his tent, beholde, they were hyd in his tent, and the syluer ther vnder.

Therefore, they toke them out of the myd-dest of his tent and brought them vnto Josua, and vnto all the chyldren of Israel, and laid them out before the Lozde.

And Josua toke Acan the sonne of zareth and the syluer, & the garment, and the tonge of golde, and hys sonnes and his daughters, hys oxen, & hys asses, hys shepe, & his tent, & all f he had: & all Israel with him broughte them vnto the valeye of Acor.

And Josua sayde: In as moche as thou hast troubled vs, the Lozde shal trouble the thys daye. And all Israel stoned hym wth stones, and burned the wth fyre, and ouerwhelmed them wth stones. And they caste vpon hym a great heape of stones vnto this daye. And so the Lozde turned fro the wrath of his indignaciō. And the name of the place is called the valeye of Acor vnto thys daye.

thou dydest vnto *Jericho and her kynge.
Rememberelle, the spoule and *castell therof, watch vnto the towne, on f backside thereof.

And so Josua arose, & all the me of warre to go vp agaynst Hai. And Josua chose out thyspe thousande stronge men of warre, & sent the awaye by nyght. And he commaunded them, sayinge: beholde, ye shall laye a wayte vnto the towne on the backside thereof.
Go not very farre from the cytie but be all readye.

And I and all the people that are with me wyl appoche vnto the cytie. And when they come out agaynst vs, as they dyd at the first tyme, then wil we flee before them. For they wyl come out after vs and we wyl bynne them out of the cytie. For they wyl say: they flee before vs, as at the first tyme & we wyl flee before them. In the meane tyme shall we rysle vp from lynginge a wayte, & destruye the cytie: For the Lozde your God wyl deliuer it into your hande. And whan ye haue taken Accordynge to the commaundement of Lozde shall ye do: beholde, I haue charged you. Josua therefore sent them forth, & they went to lye a wayte, and abode betwene Bethell and Hai, on the westsyde of the cytie of Hai. But Josua lodged that nyght amonge the people.

And Josua rose vp earlye in f moynng and nombred the people and went vp, he & the elders of Israel before the people agayn-st Hai. And all the me of warre that were wth hym, went vp and dyue nye, and came agaynst the cytie, and pyched on the northsyde of Hai, and ther was a valeye betwene the and Hai. And he toke vpon a true thousande men, and put them to lye a wayte, be-twene Bethell and Hai, on the westsyde of the cytie. And they put the people (euen of hooste that were on the northsyde) agaynst the cytie, and the lyers a wayte on the westsyde. And Josua walked the same nyght in the myddes of the valeye. And it fortuned, that when the kynge of Hai sawe it, they arose and rose vp earlye, and the men of the cytie wente out agaynst Israel to battell, he & all his people at a tyme apointed, and before the playne, and wyl not that they were lyers a wayte on the backside of the cytie.

And Josua and all Israel sayned them thys to be put to the woyle before them & to warde the wyldernesse. And all the people of the towne were called together, to fight after them. And they folowed after Josua were dyaen a waye fro the cytie: And there was not a man left in Hai and in Bethell.
They went not out after Israel. And they left the cytie open, and folowed after Israel.

And the Lozde sayde vnto Josua: draw out the spere f is in thine hand towarde Hai.
For I wyl geue it into thy hand. And Josua stretched out the spere þe had in his hand, towarde þe cytie. And þe lyers awayte arose quykely out of thei place, and ran allone as Josua had stretched out his hande, and they entred into the cytie and toke it, & habited, & set the cytie on fyre. And when þe men of Hai looked backe after the, they sawe the smoke of the cytie ascende vnto heauē. And they had no leysure to spe. rather this way or that, & the people that fled to the wyldernes, turned backe agayn vnto the folowers.

¶ And when Josua and al Israel sawe that the lyers awayte had taken the citie, & that the smoke of it ascended, they turned agayn and layde on the men of Hai. And the other yssued out of the citie agaynst them. And so were they in þe myddell of Israel: for these were on the one syde of them, and the rest on the other syde. * And they layde vpon them so that they let none of them escape, nor remayne. And the kynge of Hai they toke alive, and brought hym to Josua. And when Israel had made and ende of slepyng, al the inhabitants of Hai in the felde of the wyldernes, where they chased the, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword, vntill they were wasted, all the Israelites returned vnto Hai, and smote it in the edge of the sword. And al that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelue thousand, even all the men of Hai.

¶ For Josua plucked not his hande backe agayn, which he stretched out vpon þe spear vntill he had utterly destroyed al the inhabitants of Hai. * Onely the cattell and the spoyle of the cytie, Israel toke vnto the selues, accordyng vnto the word of the Lord, whiche he commaunded Josua. And Josua set Hai on fyre, & made it an heape for ever, and a wyldernysse, even vnto this day. And the kynge of Hai he hanged on a tree, vntill even. And as sone as the sunne was downe, Josua commaunded * that they shulde take the carthasse downe of the tree, and cast it at the entryng of the gate of the cytie, & * laye thereon a greate heape of stones, that remaineth vnto this day.

¶ Then Josua * builde an altare vnto the Lord God of Israel, in mounte Ebal, as Moyses the seruaunt of the Lord commaunded the chyldren of Israel, and as it is wynten in the * boke of the lawe of Moyses: an altare of whole stones, ouer which no man hath lyft any tole of yron. And they sacrificed thereon burnt sacrifices vnto the Lord, and offered peaceofferings. And he wrote there vpon the stones, a rehersall of þe lawe of Moyses, and wrote it in the presence of the chyldren of Israel.

¶ And all Israel and the elders therof, and thei officers & Judges stode, parte on this syde the arke, and parte on that syde, before the prestes that were Leuytes, whiche bare the arke of the appoyntment of the Lord: as well the straunger, as they þe were borne among them: halfe of them on the forefront of the mount Garizim: and halfe of them on the forefront of mount Ebal: as Moyses the seruaunt of the Lord had commaunded before, that they shulde blesse the people Israel. Afterwarde, he red all the wordes of the lawe, the blessinges and cursynges, accordyng to all that is wynten in the boke of the lawe: And there was not one word of all that Moyses commaunded, whiche Josua red not before all the congregacyon of Israel: The women and chyldren, (and the straungers that were come) standynge amonge them.

The ix. Chapter.

The Gibeonites obtayne peace of Josua.

And it fortuneth that when all the kynghes that dwell on this syde Jordan in the hylles and valeys and alonge by all the coastes of the grete see ouer agaynst Libanon. (Namely the Hethites, & Amorites, the Canaanites, the Pherezites, the Heuites and the Jebusites) harde therof, they gathered thei selues togyther, to fyght agaynst Josua, and agaynst Israel with one accorde:

* And the embaystours of Gibeon harde what Josua had done vnto Jericho, and to Hai: And they dyd worke wylly, and went and made them selues embassadors, and toke with them vitayles, and olde sackes vnto their Asses, and wyne bottelles old, and rent and woyn, & olde clouted shos vpon theyi fete and theyi rayment was olde, and all theyi prouision of breade was dyed by, & holed. And they came vnto Josua into the host, to Gilgal, and sayd vnto him and vnto al the men of Israel: we be come fro a far countrey and nowe make ye agreement with vs. And the men of Israel sayde vnto the Heute: peradventure thou dwellest among vs: and then howe can I make peace with the?

And they sayde vnto Josua: we are thy seruantes. And Josua sayde vnto them agayne: what are ye? and whence come ye? They answered him: Fro a very farre countrey thy seruantes are come, for the name of the Lord thy God: for we haue harde the fame (of the power) of him, and al that he dyd in Egypte, and all that he dyd to the two kynghes of the Amorites þe were beyonde Jordan, Hethon kynge of Hethon, and Og kynge of Basan, which was at Ashtaroth. Wherefore, oure elders and all the embaystours of our countrey spake to vs, sayeng: take vitayles to you to serue by the way, & groomete them, and saye vnto them: we are your seruantes. And now make ye a cove-naunt of peace with vs. Thys our foode of breadye, we toke with vs out of our houses whot, the daye we departed to come vnto you. But now beholde, it is dreyed vp and boied. And these bottelles of wyne whiche we fylled, were newe: and se they be rent.

And these our garmentes and shoes, are woyne for oldenelle, by the reason of the exceedyng long iourney.

C And the men toke of theyr vitayles, and counceiled not with the mouth of the Lord.
iii. Reg. xxi. a And Josua made peace wth them, and made a couenaunt with them, that they shoulde be suffered to lyue: and the Lordes of the congregacyon sware vnto them: And it fortun-ed, ¶ .iii. dayes after they had made peace with them, they harde that they were theyr neighbour, and that they dwelte amonge them. And the chyldre of Israel toke theyr iourney, & came vnto theyr cyties ¶ theyr de-day: and theyr cyties were Gibeon, & Ca-phira, Beroth and Kariat Jarim. And the chyldren of Israel slewe the not, because the Lordes of the congregacyon had sware vnto them by the Lord God of Israel. And all the multitude murmured agaynst ¶ Lordes.
But all the Lordes sayde vnto all the congregacyon: we haue sware vnto the by the Lord God of Israel, & therfore we may not hurte them. But this we wyl do to the.
D We wyl let the lyue, least wrath be vpon vs, because of the othe which we sware vnto them. And the Lordes sayd vnto them a gayne: Let them lyue, *and helpe wth wth, and drawe water vnto al the congregacyon, and they dyd as the Lordes sayde vnto them.

And Josua sent for the, and talked with them, and sayde: wherfore haue ye begyled vs sayeng: We dwel farre from you, whan ye dwell amonge vs: and now are ye cursed, & there shal not cease to be of you, boude men and bewers of woode and drawers of water for the house of my God.

And they answered Josua and sayd: it was tolde thy seruantes, howe ¶ the Lord thy God had comaunded his seruant Moses to gene you al the lande, and to destroye al the inhabitours therof out of your sight and therfore we were exceedyng sore afraid ¶ (and d^yd p^rouide) for our lyues at ¶ presence of you, and haue done this thyng: & behold we are in thyne hand, as it seemeth good and ryght in thyne eyes to do vnto vs, so do.

And euen so dyd he vnto them, and ryd them out of the hande of the chyldren of Israel, and they slewe them not. And Josua made them that same daye bewers of wth, and drawers of water for the congregacyon and for the aulter of God vnto this day, in the place which God shoulde chose.

C The .x. Chapter.

¶ The Amozites are ouercome of Josua. ¶ The new stones. The sunne standeth still.
The .v. kynges are hangyd.

And it fortuneth, that when Amonizedec kyng of Jerusalem had howe Josua had take and had destroyed it, and that *as he had done to Jericho and her kyng, *uen so he had done to her kyng, and howe the inhabitours of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and amonge them, they feared exceedingly, for Gibeon was a great cytie, as any cytie of the kyngdome, and was greater then Jericho, and all the men therof were very myghty.

Wherfore Amonizedec kyng of Jerusalem sent vnto Hoham kyng of Hebron, and to Piria kyng of Jarmuth, & vnto Taphis kyng of Lachis, and vnto Dabie kyng of Eglon, sayeng: Come vp vnto me, & helpe me, ¶ we may smyte Gibeon: for they haue made peace with Josua and with Israel of Israel. Therfore the fyue kynges of the Amozites, the kyng of Jerusalem, the kyng of Hebron, the kyng of Jarmuth, the kyng of Lachis, and the kyng of Eglon gathered the selues together: they wth al their power besieged Gibeon, and made war agaynst it.

And the m^{ch} of Gibeon sent vnto Josua to the hooste of Gilgal, sayeng: Withstande not thy hande from thy seruantes, come to vs, to saue vs: and to helpe vs. For al the kynges of ¶ Amozites which dwell in the lande, are gathered toggyther agaynst us.

And so Josua ascended from Gilgal, he and all the people of warre with hym, & al the men of myght, and the Lord sayde vnto Josua: feare them not, for I haue deliuered them into thyne hande. Neither shal any of the stand agaynst the. Josua therfore came vnto the sodenly, and went vp from Gilgal al nyght. And the Lord troubled them before Israel, and slewe them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased the along the waye that goeth vnto Bethoron, and smote them to Elaka and Baka. And it fortuneth, that as they fled from Israel, and were in the goyng downe to Bethoron, the Lord cast downe great stones from heuen vpon them, vntyll Elaka. And there were mo dead with hable stones, than they wh^{ch} ¶ chyldre of Israel slewe wth the sword.

Then spake Josua before the Lord, the day wh^{ch} the Lord deliuered the Amozites before the chyldren of Israel, and sayde in the syght of Israel. *Sunne stande thou styl vpon Gibeon, and thou moone stande thou styl vpon Alalon. And the sunne abode, & the moone styl, vntyll the people aduenged the selues vpo theyr enemies. Is not this written in the booke of the ryghte ouer. The (A say) abode in the myddest of heauyn.

passed not to go downe by þ space of an hole daye. And there was no day lyke that, before it, or after it, that the Lorde hearde the voyce of a man. For the Lorde fought for Israel.

¶ And Josua returned, and al Israel with hym vnto the hoste of Gilgal: but the fyue kynges fled, and were byd in a caue at Ma-kedra. And it was told Josua of one, sayeng: the fyue kynges are founde byd in a Caue whiche is at Makreda. And Josua sayde roule grete stones vpon the mouthe of the caue, and set men by it, for to kepe them.

And stande ye not styll, but folowe after your enemies, and smyte al the byndemost:
And suffer them not to entre into the cy-ties for the Lorde your God hath deliuered them into your hand. And it fortuned when Josua and the children of Israel had made an ende of slepyng them with an exceedyng grete slaughter tyl they were wasted, the rest that remayned of the, entred into walled cyties.

And all the people returned to the hoste, to Josua at Makreda in peace, neyther byd any man moue his tonge agaynst the chyldren of Israel. Then sayde Josua: open the mouth of the caue, and byyng out these fyue kynges vnto me out of the caue. And they byd so, and brought those fyue kynges vnto him out of the caue, euen the kyng of Jerusalem, the kyng of Hebron, the kyng of Jarmuth, the kyng of Lachys, and þ kyng of Eglon.

¶ And it fortuned, that when they brought out those kynges vnto Josua: Josua called for all the men of Israel, and sayd vnto the cheif of the men of warre, which went with hym: come nere, and put your fete vpon the neckes of these kynges. And they came nere and put they fete vpo the neckes of them.
And Josua sayd vnto the. Ye shal not feare nor be saynt peried: But be strong & plucke vpon your hertes, for thus shall the Lorde do to al your enemies agaynst whom ye fight.

And then Josua smote them, and slewe them, and hanged them on fyue trees. And they hanged styll vpon the trees vntill the eneyng. And at the goyng downe of the sunne, it fortuned that Josua gaue commandement, and they toke them downe of the trees, and cast them into the caue, (where in they had bene byd) and layed stones in the caues mouth, which remaine vntill this daye.

And that same day Josua toke Makreda and smote it with the edge of the swearde, and the kyng therof also * destroyed he veterly, with all the soules that were therein, and let nought remayne. And he byd to the kyng of Makreda * as he byd vnto the kyng of Jericho.

Then Josua went from Makreda, and al Israel with him vnto Libna, and fought a gaynst Libna. And the Lorde deliuered it and the kyng therof into the hande of Israel: and he smote it with the edge of the swearde, and all the soules that were therin. he let nought remayne in it, but byd vnto the kyng therof as he byd vnto the kyng of Jericho.

¶ And Josua departed from Libna, and al Israel with hym vnto Lachys, & besieged it, and assaulted it. And the Lorde deliuered Lachys into the hand of Israel, which toke it the seconde daye, and smote it with the edge of the swearde, and all the soules that were therein, doyng accordyng to all, as he had done to the cytie of Libna.

Then hozam kyng of Gesser came vnto helpe Lachys: And Josua smote hym and his people, vntill nought remayned of him.

And from Lachys Josua departed, vnto Eglon, and all Israel with hym, and they besieged it, and assaulted it, and toke it the same day, and smote it with the edge of the swearde, and al the soules that were therein he utterly destroyed þ same day, accordyng to all that he had done to Lachys.

And Josua departed vpon from Eglon and al Israel with him, vnto Hebron. And they fought agaynst it, and when they had take it, they smote it with þ edge of the swearde, and the kyng therof, and al the townes that perteyned to it, and all the soules that were therin, and he lefte nought remaynyng: but byd accordyng to all as he had done to Eglon, and destroyed it utterly, and all the soules that were therein.

¶ And Josua returned, and al Israel with him to Dabir, and fought agaynst it. And when he had taken it, and the kyng therof, and all the townes that perteyned thereto, they smote the with the edge of the sweard, and utterly destroyed all the soules þ were therin, neyther let he ought remayne. Euen as he byd to Hebron, so he did to Dabir and the kyng therof, as he had done also to Libna and her kyng.

Josua therfore smote all the hyll coun-treys, and the southe countreys, and the valleyes, and the hyll sydes, and all they kynges, and let nought remayne of them, but utterly destroyed al that breathed, as * went. 17. 18 the Lorde God of Israel commaunded. And Josua smote them from Cades barne vnto Asah, and all the countrey of Golan, euen vnto Gibeon. And those kynges and they lande byd Josua take at one tyme: because the Lord God of Israel fought for Israel.
And Josua and all Israel returned vnto the hoste that was in Gilgal.

¶ The xi. Chapter.

¶ The battyle of Josua with agure kynges.

And

And it fortuned, that when Jabin kyng of Hazor had harde those thynges: he sent to Jobab kyng of Hadon, & to the kyng of Sunron, and to the kyng of Achlaph, and unto the kynges that are by the north in the mountaynes, and playnes toward the southsyde of Ceneroth, and in the lowe countreys: and in the borders of Dor westwarde, and unto the Cananites both by east and west, and unto the Amorites, Hethites, Pheresites, and Jebusites in the mountaynes: and unto the Kenites that were under Hermon in the lande of Mizpa: And they came out and al theyr hostes with them, a multitude of folke, eue as the sande that is on the see thow in a greate nombre with horses & charettes exceeding many. And all these kynges met togyther, and came and pytched togyther at the waters of Merö, for to fyght agaynst Israel.

And the Lorde sayde vnto Josua: be not afrayde at the presence of the: for to morow aboute thys tyme wyll I deliuer them all slepne before Israel: thou shalt bough theyr horses, and burne theyr charettes with fyre. And so Josua came, and all the men of war with hym agaynst them by the waters of Merom, and sodenly fell vpon them. And the Lorde deliuered them into the hande of Israel: and they smote them, and chased the vnto great Sidon, and vnto the whot waters, and vnto the valey of Mizpa which is eastward: and smote them vntyl they had none remainyng of them. And Josua dyd vnto the, as the Lorde bad him: he boughed theyr horses, & burnt theyr charettes with fyre.

And Josua at that tyme turned backe, & toke Hazor, and smote þ kyng therof with the swearde. And Hazor before tyme was the head of all those kyngdomes. And they smote all the soules that were therein with the edge of the swearde, vterly destroyng al: and nothyng that breathed, was let remain. And he burnt Hazor with fyre. And all the cyties of those kynges, and all the kynges of them dyd Josua take, and smote them with the edge of the swearde, and vterly destroyed the: as Moses the seruaunt of the Lorde commaunded.

* Ezo. xlii. b.

Deute. xli. a.

But Israel burnt none of the cyties that stode byll in theyr strenght, save Hazor only that Josua burnt. And al the spoyle of the sayde cyties & the cattel, the chyldren of Israel caught vnto them selues. But the men onely they smote with þ edge of the sweard vntyl they had destroyed them, neither left they ought that had breath. As the Lorde commaunded Moses his seruaunt, so dyd Moses commaunde Josua, and euen so dyd Josua: so that he mynysed no worde, of all that the Lorde commaunded Moses. And so Josua toke all the lande, the hills and all the south countrey, and all the land of Golan, and the lowe countrey, and the playne, and the mountayne of Hermon, and the lowe countrey of the same, euen to the mount of parting. & goeth vp to the vnto the playne of Gad in the valey of Libanon, vnder mount Hermon. And all the kynges of the same he toke, and smote the. And slewe them.

Josua made war longe tyme with those kynges: neyther was there any cytle that made peace with the chyldre of Israel. And those Hethites that inhabited Gibeon, and therfore all other they toke with battayle, for it came of the Lorde, whiche dyd harden theyr hartes that they shulde come agaynst Israel in battayle and that they shulde destroy them vterly, & slewe them no meny, but to byng them to nought. As the Lorde commaunded Moses.

And that same season came Josua, and destroyed the Enakites out of the mountaynes: Namely out of Hebron, Dabir, Anab, and out of all the mountaynes of Israel. And Josua destroyed them vterly, with theyr cyties. There was not one Enakite left in the lande of the chyldren of Israel, only in Asab, * Geth, and Adod, there remainyd of them.

And Josua toke the hole land, according to al that the Lorde sayde vnto Moses, and Josua gaue it for a possession vnto Israel: * according to theyr partes and tribes: and the lande rested from warre.

The xxi. Chapter.

Josua is charged to deuyde þe land to þe chylde of Israel and the Lord sayde vnto hym thou art old & stycken in peres, and there remayneth yet exceeding muche lande to be possessed. This is the lande that yet remaineth: al the regions of the Philistynes: and all Gessuri: from Asilus whiche is on the out-warde parte of Egypt: vnto the borders of Achiron northwarde, whiche lande is counted vnto Cananie, euen syue lordshippes of the Philistines, the Asathites, Aidothites, Ascalonites, Gethites, Akaronites, & the Eupites. And from þe south: al the lande of the Canaanites, and the cane that is besyde the Sydonianes, euen vnto Aphek & to the borders of the Amozites. And the lande of the Gilytes, and all Libanon, to-warde the sumer spring, from the playne of Gad vnder mounte Hermon, vntill a man come to Hemath: all the enhabitours of the hyl countrey from Libanon vnto the whot waters: and al the Sydonianes, wyl I cast out from before the chylde of Israel: only se that thou in any wyse deuide it by lot vnto the Israelites, to enherite, as I haue comaunded the. Nowe therfore deuyde thys lande to enherite, vnto þe nyne trybes & the halfe trybe of Manasses. For with þe other halfe the Rubenites and þe Gadidites haue receyued theyr inheritaunce, * which Moses gaue them beyonde Jordan eastwarde: euen as Moses the seruaunt of þe Lord gaue them: from Aroer that lyeth on the bym of the ryuer Arnon, and from the cytie þe is in the myddest of the ryuer. And all the playn of Hebeba vnto Dibon, & all the cyties of Seho kyng of the Amozites, which rayg-ned in Hel bon, euen vnto the bozde of the chylde of Ammon: and Gilead, & the bozder of Gessuri and Machati, and al mounte Hermō, with all Basan vnto Salekah: enē all the kyngdome of Og in Basan, which reigned in Astharoth & Edrai: whiche same remayned yet of the rest of the Gyautes.

These dyd Moses smyte, and caste the out.

Neuerthelesse, the chylde of Israel expelled not þe Gessurites and the Machathites: But the Gessurites and the Machathites dwell among the Israelites euen vntill this day. Onely vnto the trybe of Levi, he gaue none inheritaunce: * But the offering of the Lord God of Israel is theyr inheritaunce, as he sayde vnto them.

Moses gaue vnto the trybe of the chylde of Ruben inheritaunce, accordyng to theyr kynredes. And theyr coast was from Aroer that lyeth on the banche of the ryuer Arnon, & fro the cytie þe is in the myddest of the ryuer, and all the playne whiche is by Hebeba, Helbon, with all theyr towne that lye in the playne: Dibon and the hylly places of Baal, and þe house of Baalmeon: and Jahaz, and Kedemoth & Nephtah Kiriatpaim, Dabamath, and Zarahabab in the mount of þe valley, the house of Deoz, and the springes of the hylles: and Beth-pheet, and the springes of Phasgab: and Bethelsumoth: & al the cyties of the plaine.
And all the kyngdome of Sehon kyng of the Amozites, whiche reigned in Helbon, whiche Moses smote * with the Lordes of Hadian, Eui, Rehem, Zur and Hur and Reba, the whiche were dukes of Sehon, dwelling in the countrey. And Balaam also the sone of Beoz the soothsayer, dyd the chylde of Israel slaye w the swerde, among other of them that were slayne. And the bozder of the chylde of Ruben was Jordane with the countrey þe lyeth thereon. This was the inheritaunce of the chylde of Ruben after

after they: kynredes, cyties and byllages perterpnyng therto.

D And Moyses gaue enheritaunce vnto the trybe of Gad, euen vnto þ childzen of Gad he gaue by they: kynredes. And they: coastes were Jazer: and al the cyties of Gilead and halfe the lade of the chyldre of Ammon vnto Aroer þ lypeth before Rabba. And fro Helbon vnto Ramoth, Bazphad, & Betonim: & fro Mahanaim vnto þ bordres of Libir. And in þ valey they had Betharam, Bethnumra, Horoth, and zaphon, þ rest of the kyngdome of Sehon kyng of Helbon, vnto Jorda and the coastes that lye thereon euen vnto the edge of þ see of Ceneroth, on the other syde Jordan easterwarde. This is the enheritaunce of þ childzen of Gad, after they: kynredes, they: cyties and vyllages.

And Moyses gaue enheritaunce vnto the halfe trybe of Manasses. And this was the possession of þ halfe trybe of Manasses by they: kynredes. They: coast was fro Mahanaim, eue al Balan, & all þ kyngdome of Og kyng of Balan, and all the townes of Jair which lye in Balan, euen thre scope cyties, & halfe Gilead, Astaroth, & Edrai, cyties of þ kyngdome of Og in Balan. * which perterpne vnto the chyldzen of Machir the sonne of Manasses, euen þ halfe porcion of the chyldzen of Machir by they: kynredes.

These are the thynges which Moyses did distribute in the felde of Moab on þ other syde Jorda ouer against Jericho easterwarde.

* But vnto the trybe of Leui, Moyses gaue none enheritaunce, for the Lord God of Israel is they: enheritaunce, * as he sayde vn to them.

¶ The. xliii. Chapter.

Caleb requyred the heritage that was promysed hym, and Hebron was gyven hym.

A Re these are the countreys which the chyldzen of Israel euerit in the lande of Canaan, * whiche Eleazer the prest, and Josua the sonne of Nun and the auncient breddes of the trybes of þ childzen of Israel, distributed to them.

* By lot they receyued they: possessiones, as the Lord commaunded, by the hande of Moyses, to gyue vnto the nyne trybes, and vnto the halfe trybe. For Moyses had gyue enheritaunce vnto two trybes and an halfe, on þ other syde Jorda. But vnto þ Leuites he gaue none enheritaunce among the. * For the chyldre of Joseph were two tribes, Manasses & Ephraim. And out of the trybe of Issachar, Rusion with her suburbs: and Daberah with her suburbs: and Jarimoth with her suburbs: En ganim with her suburbs: foure ctyes.

And out of the trybe of Aser, Misael wyth her Suburbes: Abdon wyth her Suburbes: Halakath wyth her Suburbes: and Rohob wyth her Suburbes: foure cyties. And out of the trybe of Nephtali, the cytie for the slear to flee vnto: Kedesh in Galile wyth her Suburbes: and Hamothdoz wyth her Suburbes: * Cartha wyth her Suburbes: thye cyties. All the cyties of the Gersonites thowrowe out they: kynredes, were thye cyties wyth they: Suburbes.

D And vnto the other kynredes of the chyldren of Merari, the rest of the Leuites, they gaue out of the trybe of Zabulon: Iecnam wyth her Suburbes: and Carthah wyth her Suburbes: Damna wyth her Suburbes, and Nahalal wyth her Suburbes: foure cyties. And out of the trybe of Ruben, Bozoz wyth her Suburbes: and Jabelah wyth her Suburbes: Kedmoth wyth her Suburbes, and Aaphaath wyth her Suburbes: foure cyties. And out of the trybe of Gad, they gaue the cytie for the slear to flee vnto: Ramoth in Gilead wyth her Suburbes, and Mahanaim wyth her Suburbes, Hesbon wyth her Suburbes: and Jaser wyth her Suburbes, foure cyties in all, so that al the cyties of the chyldren of Merari thowrowe out their kynredes, whiche were the rest of the kynredes of the Leuites) were by their lot, twelue cyties. And all the cyties that the Leuites had amonge the possession of þe chyldren of Israel were. xlviii. wyth their Suburbes. And these cyties laye euery one seuerallye, haupnge they: Suburbes rounde aboute them thowrowe out all the sayd cyties. And the Lorde gaue vnto Israel all the lande which * he swaue to geue vnto they: fathers. And they conquered it, and dwelt therein. And the Lorde gaue them rest rounde aboute, accordynge to all þe swaue vnto they: fathers: and there stode not a man of all they: enemyes before them. The Lorde also deliuered all they: enemyes into they: handes. * There shapen nothyng of all the good thynges, whych the Lorde had sayd vnto the house of Israel. But all came to passe.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Et Ruben, Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasses are sent agayne to they: possessions. They buylde an altare for a memoriall.

Ihen Josua called vnto the Rubenites, the Gaddites: & to the halfe trybe of Manasses, and sayde vnto them: * ye haue kepte al that Moyses the seruaunt of the Lorde commaunded you, and haue obeyed my voyce in all that I commaunded you: ye haue not lefte youre brethzen of a longe reason vnto this daye, but haue kepte the commaundemente of the Lorde youre God.

* Jos. xxi. a

And now that the Lorde hath geuen rest

vnto youre brethzen as he promysed them, therfore retourne ye, and go vnto youre tentes, and vnto the lande of youre possession, which Moyses the seruaunt of the Lorde gaue you on the othersyde Jordan.

But in any wyse take diligent hede, and do the commaundement and lawe, whiche Moyses the seruaunt of the Lorde charged you: * that ye loue the Lorde your God, and walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, and cleaue vnto hym, and serue hym wyth all youre heartes, and all your soules. And so Josua blessed them and sent them awaye. And they went vnto their tentes.

Vnto the one halfe of the trybe of Manasses Moyses gaue possession in Basan: and vnto the other halfe thereof gaue Josua amonge they: brethzen on this syde Jordan westwarde. And Josua sent them awaye al so vnto they: tentes, and blessed them, and sayde vnto them: retourne wyth much riches vnto youre tentes, and wyth a great myltitude of catell, wyth syluer and golde wyth balle, and piron, and wyth much revenue, and * deuyde the spoyle of youre enemyes wyth your brethzen.

And the chyldren of Ruben, the chyldren of Gad, and halfe the trybe of Manasses, returned, and departed from the chyldren of Israel out of Silo (whiche is in the lande of Canaan) to go vnto the contrey of Gilad to the lande of they: possession, whiche they had optayned, accordynge to the word of the Lorde by the hand of Moyses. And when they came vnto the place of Selioth besyde Jordan (that is in the lande of Canaan) there the chyldren of Ruben, the chyldren of Gad, and the halfe tribe of Manasses, buylt an altare faste by Jordane, and that a great altare to se to. Whiche when the chyldren of Israel hearde of, they sayde: beholde, the chyldren of Ruben, the chyldren of Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasses haue buylt an altare in the forefront of the lande of Canaan, in Selioth besyde Jordan on the syde of the chyldren of Israel. And when the chyldren of Israel hearde of it, the whole congregacion of the chyldren of Israel gathered them together to Silo, to make battell agaynst them. And the chyldren of Israel sente vnto the chyldren of Ruben, and to the chyldren of Gad, and to the halfe trybe of Manasses in the lande of Gilad, whiche the sonne of Eleazar the pzeaste, and wyth hym the Lozdes, of euerye chiefe house a Lorde, thowrowe out all the trybes of Israel, which were heades of they: fathers householdes amonge the thousandes of Israel. And they sent vnto the chyldren of Ruben, and to the chyldren of Gad, & to the chyldren of the halfe trybe of Manasses, vnto the lande of Gilad, and Thus saie the hole congregacion of the Lozde * what transgressyon is thys that ye haue transgressed agaynst the God of Israel, to turne awaye this daye from the Lozde in that ye haue bylded you an altare for to rebelle this daye agaynst the Lozde: Is the * wyched dede of Ideo: to lyttel for vs, wher of we are not yet cleansed vnto thys daye, and for the which there was in the congregacion of the people a plague of the Lozde: Ye also are turned awaye thys daye from the Lozde. And seynge ye rebelle to daye agaynst the Lozde, it wyl come to passe, that to morowe he shall be wroth wth all the congregacion of Israel. Notwithstandynge yf ye thynke, that the lande of your possessyon is vncleane, then come ouer vnto the lande of the possessyon of the Lozde, where in the Lozdes tabernacle dwelleth, and take possessyon amonge vs. But transgresse not agaynst the Lozde, nor prouoke vs, to buyld you any other altare, saue the altare of the Lozde our God. * Wyl not Acan the sonne of Zareh trespasse in the excommunicate thynge and wroth fell on all the congregacion of Israel, which not wylthstandynge that he was but one mā, yet he alone perished not for his wychednesse?

Then the chyldren of Ruben and the chyldren of Gad, and halfe the trybe of Manasses answered, and sayde vnto the heades ouer the thousandes of Israel: The God of goddes, the Lozde God of goddes, euen ꝑ Lozde he knoweth, and also shall Israel knowe. Yf it be to rebelle, or to transgresse agaynst the Lozde, the thou Lozde saue vs not this day. Or elles yf we haue bylte vs an altare to turne from folowynge the Lozde, or to offer thereon burnt-offryng or meat-offryng, or to offer peace-offrynges thereon: let the Lozde requyre it. (and iudge.) And yf we haue not rather done it of a carefules and of a sure occasion, sayenge: In tyme to come your chyldren myghte saie vnto oures: what haue ye to do with the Lozde God of Israel? ꝑ Lozde hath made Jordan a bozder betwene vs and you (ye chyldren of Ruben and of Gad) ye haue no parte therfore in the Lozde: and so that your chyldren make our chyldren cease from fearynge the Lozde.

Therfore we (to be better aduysment) sayd: We wyl make vs an altare, not for burnt-offryng, nor for sacrifice, but for a * wytnesse betwene vs and you, and oure generacions after vs, that we shulde serue the Lozde, wth oure offrynges, sacrifices and peace-offrynges before hym: and that poure chyldren shulde not saie to oures in tyme to come: ye haue no parte in the Lozde.

Therfore sayde we, that yf they shulde so saie to vs or to our generacions in tyme to come, that we wolde saie agayne: Beholde the fallyon of the altare of the Lozde, whych oure fathers made, nether for burnt-offrynges nor sacrifices, but for a wytnesse betwene vs and you. God forbyd, that we shulde rebelle agaynst the Lozde, and turne thys daye fro after hym, & buyld any other altare for burnt-offrynges, oblations, or sacrifices, saue the altare of the Lozde oure God, that is before his tabernacle.

And when Phinehes the preaste, and the Lozdes of the congregacyon and heades ouer the thousandes of Israel whych were with hym, hearde these wordes that the chyldren of Ruben, and the chyldren of Gad and the chyldren of Manasses spake, they were well content. And Phinehes the sonne of Eleazar the preast sayd vnto the chyldren of Ruben and to the chyldren of Gad, and to the chyldren of Manasses: this daye we perceaue, ꝑ the Lozde is amonge vs, because ye haue not done this trespasse agaynst the Lozde: Now ye haue rydde the chyldren of Israel out of the hande of the Lozde.

And Phinehes the sonne of Eleazar the preast with the Lozdes, returned from the chyldren of Ruben, and from the chyldren of Gad out of the lande of Gilead vnto ꝑ lande of Canaan, to the chyldren of Israel, and brought them thys worde agayne. And the sayenge pleased the chyldren of Israel, and they blessed God, and dyd not entende to go agaynst them in batell, and to destroye the lande which the chyldren of Ruben and Gad dwelt in. And the chyldren of Ruben and the chyldren of Gad called the altare: Our wytnesse, that the Lozde is God.

The xliii. Chapter.

¶ Josua exhorted the people, that they shoulde not them selues to the Gentiles.

¶ And it came to passe a longe season after that the Lozde had geuen rest vnto Israel fro al theyr enemyes rounde about, that Josua wared olde, and was stricken in age. And Josua called for all Israel, and for theyr elders, theyr heades theyr iudges and officers, and sayd vnto them: I am olde and stricken in age.

And ye haue sene all that the Lozde your God hath done vnto al these nacions before you, how the Lozde your God hath fought for you. Beholde, I haue subdued vnto you these nacions ꝑ remayne, to be an inheritaunce for your tribes: euen from Jordan, and (fro the lande) of all the nacions that I haue destroyed, euen vnto the great see westwarde. (And there remaine yet many nacions.) And ꝑ Lozde your God shal expel them before you, and cast the from out of poure syght, and ye shal conquere theyr lāde, as the Lozde your God hath sayde vnto you.

Go to therfore: as strongly as ye maye, that ye that ye take hede and do all that is wyrtten in the booke of the lawe of Moyses, * that ye bowe not asyde therfro, to the ryghte hande or to the lefte: and lest that whan ye come amonge these nacjons, (even amonge these that are left with you) ye make mencjon of swears by the names of theyr goddes: and ye neyther serue them nor bowe youre selues vnto them. But that ye stycke fast vnto the Lorde your God, as ye haue done vnto this daye. So shal the Lorde cast out befoze you great nacjons and mighte, as no man hath bene able to stande befoze you hitherto.

Deut. xxxii. b.

* One man of you shal chase a thousand: for the Lorde your God he sygheteth for you, as he hath promysed you. Take good hede therfore vnto your selues, that ye loue the Lorde your God.

Elis, ye go backe and cleaue vnto the rest of these nacjons that remaine with you and shall make marpages with the, and go in vnto the, and they to you: be ye sure: that the Lorde your God wyll nomore cast oute all these nacjons fro befoze you. * But they shalbe snares and trappes vnto you & scourges in your sydes, and thornes in your eyes, vntyl ye perspe fro of this good lande, whiche the Lorde your God hath geuen you.

Deut. xxxii. b.

And behold, this daye, do I entre into the waye of all the worlde, and ye knowe in all your hertes & in all youre soules, that * nothyng hath sayled of all the good thynges which the Lorde your God promysed you: But all are come to passe, & nothyng hath sayled therof. Therefore, as al good thynges are come vpon you, whiche the Lorde your God promysed you, so shall the Lorde bringe vpon you all euill, vntyl he haue destroyed you fro of this good lande, whiche the Lorde your God hath geuen you, when ye haue transgressed the appoyntment of the Lorde your God, whiche he commaunded you: and haue gone and serued straunge goddes, and bowed youre selues to them. Then shall the wrath of the Lorde waxe whote vpon you, and ye shall perspe quickely fro of the good lande, whiche he hath geuen you.

* Jos. xxi. b.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Josua exhorteth the people to the keepinge of the lawe. He dyeth. The bones of Joseph are buried. Eleazar dyeth.

And Josua gathered all the trybes of Israel to Sichem, and called for the elders of Israel, and for theyr heades Judges and officers, and they presented the selues befoze God. And Josua sayd vnto all the people: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: * youre fathers dwelt on the other syde of the floude in olde tyme: euen Thareh the father of Abraham and of Nachor, and serued straunge goddes.

* Gen. xi. b.

And I toke youre father Abraham from the other syde of the floude, & brought him thowre out al the lande of Canaan, & multiplied his seed, and * gaue hym Isaac.

And I gaue vnto Isaac, Jacob & Esau. * And I gaue vnto Esau mounte Seir, to possesse it. But Jacob and his chyldren went downe into Egypte.

I sent Moyses also & Aaron. And I plagued Egypte: & when I had so done amonge them, I broughte you oute, and I broughte youre fathers oute of Egypte. And as they came vnto the see, the Egypciens folowed after youre fathers wth charrettes & bowes vnto the reddy see. * And whan they cryed vnto the Lorde, the Lorde putte darcknes betwene you and the Egypciens, and broughte the see vpon them, and couered them. And youre eyes haue sene what I haue done to the Egypciens. And ye dwelt in the wyldernes a longe season.

And * I broughte you into the land of the Amozites, whiche dwelte on the other syde of the Jordan. And they fought wth you: and I gaue them into youre hande, that ye myght conquere theyr contrie. And I destroyed them from out of your syght.

* Then Balak the sonne of Ziphor, kynge of Moab aroose and warred agaynst Israel, and sent & called Balaam the sonne of Beor for to curse you. But I wolde not hearken vnto Balaam, and therfore he rather blessed you: And so I deliuered you out of his hande. And ye went ouer the Jordan, and came vnto Jericho, and the men of Jericho fought agaynst you: the Amozites, Hethites, Canaanites, Hethites, Girgositers, Hethites, Jebusites, and I deliuered them into your hande.

And I sent * hoznettes befoze you, whiche caste them out of youre syght: euen the kynnges of the Amozites: but not wth youre owne swerde, or wth youre owne bowe. And I haue geuen you a lande, in whiche ye dyd no labour, and cyties whiche ye bylded not, and whiche ye dwell in: vineyardes also and olyue trees whiche ye planted not, and wherof ye do eate.

* Nowe therfore feare the Lorde, & serue hym in perfectnesse and trueth: And put awaye the goddes, whiche youre fathers serued on the other syde of the floude, and in Egypte, and serue ye the Lorde. And if ye seme euill vnto you to serue the Lorde, then chole you this daye whom you wyll serue: whether the goddes whiche youre fathers serued (ye were on the other syde of the floude) ether the goddes of the Amozites, in whose lande ye dwell. As for me and my house, we wyll serue the Lorde.

The people answered and sayde: God hath sayd, that we shulde forsake the Lorde, and serue straunge goddes. For the Lorde oure God, he it is that brought vs & oure fathers out of the land of Egypte, and fro the house of bondage, and which dyd those great myracles in oure syght, and preserued vs in all the waye that we went, and amonge all the nations whych we came thowow. And þ Lord dyd cast out befoze vs all the nations, specially the Amorites whych dwelt in the land. And therfoze wyll we also serue the Lorde, for he is oure God.

And Joshua sayde vnto the people. Ye can not serue the Lorde: for he is an holpe God, and a gelous God, and cannot beare poure inquite and synne. Ye ye forsahe the Lorde and serue straunge goddes, * he wyl turne & do you euell, and consume you, after that he hath done you good. And þ people sayde vnto Joshua: naye, but we wyl serue the Lorde.

And Joshua sayde vnto the people: ye are wytnesses poure selues, that ye haue chosen you the Lorde, to serue hym: and they sayde: we are wytnesses. The put a waye (sayd he) the straunge goddes whiche are amonge you, and howe your hertes vnto the Lorde God of Israel. The people sayd vn: o Joshua: the Lorde our God wyl we serue, and hys voyce wyl we obeie. And so Joshua made a cove- nant wth the people the same daye, and set an ordynance and lawe befoze them in Si- chem.

And Joshua wrote these wordes in þ boke of the lawe of God, and * toke a great stone, and pitched it on ende in the sayd place, euen vnder an oke that was in the sanctuarie of the Lorde. And Joshua sayde vnto all þ people: beholde, * this stone shalbe a wytnesse vnto vs, for it hath hearde all the wordes of the Lorde whiche he spake wth vs. It shalbe therfoze a wytnesse vnto you, lest ye deny our God. And so Joshua let the people departe, every man vnto hys inheritaunce.

And after these thynges it came to passe, that Joshua the sonne of Nun, the seruaunte of the Lorde dyed, beinge an hundred and ten yeaeres old. And they buried hym in the contrey of hys inheritaunce, euen in Thā- nath Sareth, which is in mount Ephraim, on the nozthyde of the hyll of Gaas.

And Israel serued the Lorde * al the dayes of Joshua, and all the dayes of the elders that ouer lyued Joshua, and whych had knowne all þ workes of the Lorde that he had done for Israel. And the bones of Joseph, which the chyldre of Israel brought out of Egypte buried they in Sichem in a parcell of grounde whych Jacob bought of the sones of Hemor the father of Sichem, for an hundred pecters of syluer, and it became the inheritaunce of the chyldren of Joseph. And Eleazar the sonne of Aaron dyed, whom they buried in a hyll that pertayned to Whinches his sonne, whiche (hyll) was graue hym in mount Ephraim.

ges, called in the hebrue Dophetim and in Latin Judicum.

The first Chapter.

After Josua was dead, Juda was constitute Lorde ouer the arme.

3

After the death of Josua it came to passe, that the chylid of Israel asked of the Lorde saying: who shall go vp for vs agaynst the Cananites, ad who shall fyrste fyght agaynst the.

*Jud. xlii. a Shall go vp, * beholde I haue deliuered the lande into his handes. And Juda sayd vnto Simeon his brother: come vp with me in my lotte, that we maye fyght agaynst the Ca-nanites: And I likewise wil go with y into thy lotte. And so Simeon went with hym.

And Juda went vp, and the Lorde deli-uered y Cananites y Phereisites into they handes. And they slew of the in Bezek ten thousand men. And they found Adonibezek in Bezek. And they fought agaynst hym, and slew the Cananites and Phereisites.

But Adonibezek fled, y they folowed after hym, and caught hym, and cut of his thobes and his great toes. And Adonibezek sayde:

the thobe and ten kynges hauing their thobes meate vnder my table: * as I haue done, so God hath done to me agayne. And they brought him to Ierusalem, and there he dyed.

The chyliden of Juda fought agaynst Jerusalem, and toke it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and let the ctyie on fyre.
After wards the chyliden of Juda wente to fyght agaynst the Cananites, that dwelt in the mountayne, and towarde the south, y in the lowe contreye. And Juda went agaynst the Cananites that dwelt in Hebron, which before tyme was called Mariath Arbe. And slew Hefai, Thiman y Chalmat. And fro thence they went to the inhabitants of Dabir, whose name in olde tyme was called Mariathlepher, * (that is a ctyie of letters.)

And Caleb sayd: * he that smyteth athlepher, and taketh it, to him wyll I geue Asah my daughter to wyfe. And Deniel the sonne of Kenes Calebys younger brother toke it: to whome he gaue Asah his daughter to wyfe, y as they went, he counseled hym to aske of her father a felde. And then she lychted of her asse: and Caleb sayd vnto her: What ayleth the? She answered vnto him geue me a blessing: for thou hast geuen me a Southward (or drye) land, geue me also springes of water. And Caleb gaue her springes both aboue and beneth. And chyliden of the Kenite, Moses father in law wente vp * oute of the ctyie of palme with the chyliden of Juda into the wyld-nesse of Iuda, that lyeth in the South of Arad, and they went and dwelt amonge the people.

And Juda went with Simeon his brother, and they slew the Cananites that inhabited zephath, and vterlye destroyed it.
* and called the name of the ctyie Hebron.
And at the laste Juda toke Arad with the coastes therof, and Ashalon with the coas-tes therof, and Aharon with the coas-tes therof. And the Lorde was with Juda, and he conquered the mountaynes, but coulde not dryue out the inhabitants of the valeys, because they had charrettes of yron. And they gaue Hebron vnto Caleb, as Moses sayd.
And he expelled thence the thre sonnes of Enak.

* And the chyliden of Benjamin dyd not cast out the Jebusites, that inhabited Jerusalem, but the Jebusites dwel with the chyliden of Ben Jamin in Ierusalem vnto this daye.

* And in lyke maner they that were of the house of Joseph went vp to Bethel, and the Lorde was with the, y the house of Joseph serched out Bethel, which before tyme was called Lus. And the spyes saw a man come out of the ctyie, y they sayd vnto him: geue vs the waye into the ctyie, * and we will shewe the mercy. And whan he had shewed them the waye into the ctyie, they smote with the edge of the sword, but let the man and all his housholde go free. And the man went into the land of the Hethites, and built a ctyie, and called y name therof Lus which is the name therof vnto this daye.

* Neither dyd Manasses expelle Beth-lul with her townes, Thaanach with her town-es, the inhabitants of Doi with her town-es, the inhabitants of Jebelaam with her townes, neither y inhabitants of Gabaon with her townes, but the Cananites dwelt bolde to dwell in the lande. But it came to passe y as sone as Israel was wared, mighte they put the Cananites to trybute, and expelled them not.

* In like maner Ephraim expelled not the Cananytes that dwelte in Gazer, but the Cananytes dwelt styll in Gazer among them.

Neither dyd Zabulon expell the enhabytours of Betron, neither the enhabitoures of Ashalol: But the Cananytes dwelte amonge them, and became tributaries.

Neither dyd Aser cast out the enhabitoures of Acho, neither the enhabitoures of Zidon, & of Halab, Aczib, & Halbah, Aphek, nor of Roboh, but y^e Aserites dwelt amonge the Cananytes the enhabytours of y^e land, so they myghte not dyspue them out.

Neither dyd Asephthalim dyspue out the enhabytours of Bethlames, nor the enhabytours of Bethanath, but dwelt amonge the Cananytes the enhabitours of the land. Neuerthelesse the enhabytours of Bethlames and of Bethanath became tributaries vnto them.

And the Amozites troubled the chyldren of Man in the moystayne, and suffered them not to come downe to the valeye. And the Amozites were content to dwell in mounte ^{heres: a word the is by interpretation: a wynterling} Hailon and in Halabim. And the hande of Joseph preuailed, so that they became tributaries: and the coaste of the Amozites was from the goyng vp to Acrabim, and from the rocke bpwarde.

¶ The .ii. Chapter.

The angell rebuketh the people, because they had made peace with the Cananytes. Idolaters are punished.

And the angell of the Lorde came up from Gilgal to Bochim, and sayde: I made you to goo out of Egypte, & haue brought you vnto the lande whiche I sware vnto your fathers. * And I sayd: I wyl not breake myne appoyntment that I made with you. And ye also shal make no couenaunt with the enhabytours of this lande, but shal breake downe theyr altars: Neuertheles ye haue not hearkened vnto my voyce, why haue ye this done? Wherfoze, I haue lyke wyle determined, that I wyl not cast them out before you: but they shal be thornes vnto you, and theyr goddes shal be a snare vnto you. And whē the angel of the Lorde spake these wordes vnto all the chyldren of Israel, the people cryed out and wepte: And called the name of the place. * Bochim, and offered sacrifices vnto the Lorde.

¶ And when Iosua had sente the people away, the chyldren of Israel went euery man into his inheritaunce to possesse the lande. * And the people serued the Lorde all the dayes of Iosua, and all the dayes of the elders that out lyued Iosua, and had sene all the greater woorkes of the Lorde that he dyd for Israel: and Iosua the sonne of Nun the seruaunt of the Lorde * dyed, when he was an hundred & ten yeres olde: whom they buryed in the coastes of his inheritaunce: euen in Chamnath hares in mounte Ephraim on the northside of the hyl Gaas. And euen so all that generacyon were put vnto theyr fathers, and there arose another generacyon after them which neither knewe the Lorde, nor yet the woorkes whiche he had done for Israel.

And then the chyldren of Israel * dyd ^{* Jud. iii. a.} wyckedly in the syght of the Lorde, and serued Baalim, and forsoke the Lorde God of theyr fathers, whiche brought them out of the lande of Egypte, and folowed straunge goddes, euen of the goddes of the nacyns that were rounde aboute them, and bowed them selues vnto the, and angred the Lorde. They forsoke the Lorde, and serued Baal and Astaroth, and the wyath of the Lorde waxed hote agaynst Israel, and he deliuered them into the handes of raueners, that spoyled them, and solde the into the handes of theyr enemyes rounde aboute the, so that they had no powter any longer to stande before theyr enemyes. But whether soeuer they went out, the hande of the Lorde was agaynst them with euell lucke, euen as the Lorde promised them, and as he sware vnto them. And he punished them soze.

¶ Neuerthelesse the Lorde rapted vp Judges, which deliuered them out of the handes of theyr oppellers, and yet for all that they wolde not harken vnto theyr Judges: But rather went a whozyng after straunge goddes, and bowed them selues vnto them, and turned quickly out of the way, which their fathers walked in, obeyng the commaundementes of the Lorde: But they dyd not so.

And when the Lorde rapted them vp Judges, he was with the Judge, and deliuered them out of the handes of theyr enemyes all the dayes of the Judge * for the Lorde had ^{* 2. rob. ii. b.} compassion ouer theyr sorowynge, which they had, by the reason of them that oppressed them and vexed the: yet for all that * as ^{* 2. rob. iii. b.} sone as the iudge was dead, they turned and dyd worse then theyr fathers, in folowynge straunge goddes, and in seruyng them, and ceased not from theyr owne inuencions, nor from theyr malyciouse way.

And the wyath of the Lorde was moued agaynst Israel, & he sayde: because this people hath transgressed myne appoyntment which I commaunded theyr fathers, & haue not hearkened vnto my voyce, I wyl hence forth not cast out before the one man of the nacyns, which Iosua left when he dyed, & throught them I maye * proue Israel, whe- ^{* 2. rob. xiii. a.} ther they wyl kepe the waye of the Lorde, & walke therein, as theyr fathers dyd or not

And so the Lorde leaſte thoſe nacjons, and droue them not out ymmediatly, neyther deliuered them into the hande of Joſua.

The .iii. Chapter.

Othoniel deliuereth Iſrael. Ahud ſpilleth kynge Eglon. Samgar ſpilleth the Philiftines.

Theſe are the nacjons whiche the

And the ſpyte of the Lorde came vpon him.
And he iudged Iſrael, and went out to war.
And the Lorde deliuered Chuſa Riſathaim

the chyldren of Iſrael went to agayne, and comitted wickednes in the ſyght of þe Lorde.
And the Lorde ſtrengthed Eglon the kynge of the Moabites, agaynſt the chyldre of Iſ-rael, becauſe they had comitted wickednes before þe Lorde. And this (Eglon) gathered vnto hym the chyldren of Ammon, and the Amalekites, and wente and ſmote Iſrael, and conquered the cytie of Paulme trees.
And ſo the chyldren of Iſrael ſerued Eglon they cryed vnto the Lorde, the Lorde ſpyed them vp a ſaue, Ahud the ſone of Gera the ſonne of Gemin, a man that coulde do no-

And by him the chyldren of Iſrael

Ahud made hym a dagger with the edge of a cubyte length, and he dyd grynne

And he preſent vnto Eglon the kynge of

And all that ſtoode before hym, went out the parler about him, and locked them.

When he was gone out, hys ſeruaunt the parler were locked, they ſayde: pre-

Iſrael went downe with him from the hill

The .iiii. Chapter.

Deboja and Barak deliuer Iſrael: Gilead is ſpilleth of Iſrael.

And the chyldre of Israel began a gayne to do wickedly in the sight of the Lord, whē Ahud was dead. And the Lord sold them into the hande of Jabin kyng of Canaan, that reigned in Hazor, whose captayne of war was called Sisara, which dwelte in Harosheth of the gentyles. And þe chyldren of Israel cryed vnto the Lord: for he had nyne hundred charrettes of yron, and twety yeres he troubled the chyldren of Israel very sore.

And Deboza a wyf of the prophetesse, the wyfe of Lapidoth Judged Israel the same tyme, and þe same Deboza dwelte vnder a paulme tree betwene Ramath & Bethel, in mounte Ephraim.

And the chyldren of Israel came vp to her for iudgement. And she sent & called Barak þe sonne of Abinoā, out of Kedesh Nephtalim, and sayde vnto him. Hath not the Lord God of Israel comaunded the, to leade with sayre woordes men to mount Thabor, and take with the ten thousand men, of the chyldre of Nephtalim and of þe chyldren of Zabulon: And I wyll byng vnto the to the ryuer kys, Sisara, þe captayne of warre vnto Jabin, wth þys charrettes, & þys people, and wyl deliuer him into thyne hādes. And Barak sayd vnto her: if thou wylt go with me, I wyl go: But if thou wylt not come with me, I wyll not go: She sayde: I wyl surely go with the, but thys iourney þe thou takest, shal not be for thyne honour, for the Lord shall sell Sisara into the hande of a woman. Deboza went with Barak to Kedesh. And Barak called Zabulon and Nephtalim to Kedesh, & led after hym ten thousande men: and Deboza went vp with him.

But Haber the Kenite (which was of the chyldren of Hobab the father in lawe of Moyses) remoued from the other Kenytes, and pitched hys tente vntyll the playne of Zaanaiim, whiche is by Kedesh.

And they thewed Sisara, þe Barak the sonne of Abinoam was gone vp to mount Thabor. And Sisara gathered together all his charrettes, euen ix. hundred charrettes of yron, and all the people þe were wth hym from Harosheth of the gentyles, vnto the ryuer of Kison. And Deboza sayde vnto Barak: vp, for thys is the day in whiche the Lord hath deliuered Sisara into thyne hand: Is not the Lord gone out before the? And so Barak went downe from mount Thabor, and ten thousande men after him.

But the Lord destroyed Sisara and all his charrettes, & all hys hoste with the edge of the swerde, before Barak: so þe Sisara lygged downe of his charet, and fled away on his fete. But Barak folowed after the charrettes and after the host, euen vnto Harosheth of the gentyles. And all the hoste of Sisara fell vpon the edge of the swerde, and there was not a man leaste. Howbeit Sisara fled away on his fete to the tente of Jael the wyfe of Haber the Kenite: for there was peace betwene Jabin the kyng of Hazor, and the household of Haber the Kenite.

And Jael went out to mete Sisara, and sayde vnto him: turne in my lord, turne into me, feare not. And whan he had turned in vnto her into her tente, she couered him with a mantell. And he sayde vnto her, geue me a lytle water to dryncke, for I am thyrsty. And she opened a bottle of mylke, & gaue hym dryncke, and couered hym. And agayne she sayde vnto her: stande in the doore of the tente, and whan any man doth come and enquire of the, whether ther be any man here, thou shalt say: naye.

Then Jael Habers wyfe toke a nāple of the tente, and an hammer in her hande, and wente softly vnto him, and smote the nāple into the temples of hys heade, and fastened it into the ground, for he slombred sore, and was wery: And so he dyed.

And beholde, as Barak folowed after Sisara, Jael came out to mete him, & sayde vnto him: come, & I wyl shewe the the man, whom þe seekst. And whan he came into her tente: Behold, Sisara lay dead, & the nāple was in his temples. And so God brought Jabin the kyng of Canaan into subiection that day before the chyldren of Israel. And the hande of the chyldren of Israel prospered, & preyed agaynst Jabin the kyng of Canaan, vntill they had brought him to nought.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ The songe and thankes gysping of Deboza and Barak after the victorie.

Then Deboza & Barak þe sonne of Abinoam sang the same day, sayeng: Praise ye the Lord, for the auygng of Israel, and for the people that became so wyllng. Heare O ye kynges, herken O ye prynces: I euen I, wil syng vnto the Lord, I wyl praise the Lord God of Israel.

Lord, whan thou wentest out of Seir, whan þe departedst out of þe felde of Edom, the earth trembled, & the heauens rained: the cloudes also dropped water. The mountaynes melted before the Lord, euen as dyd Sinal, before the Lord God of Israel.

In the dayes of Hamgar the sonne of Anath, in the dayes of Jael the hye wyfe, were vnoccupied: And the romners of the pethes walked thowde by wayes.

The inhabytors of þe towncs were gone, they were gone in Israel, vntyll Deboza came vp, whiche came vp a mother in Israel.

They chose newe Goddes, and then had they (the enemy) in the gates, though there were wyde and spere. There was not a wyde or spere sent amonge forty thousande lande of Israel.

Wher hart loueth the gouerners of Israel, and them that are wylling among the people. O prayse ye the Lorde.

Then shall they that remayne, haue dominion of the proudest of the people (of Iabin) The Lorde shall for my sake haue dominion ouer the myghtie. Out of * Ephraim was there a rote of them agaynst Iamelech, and after the Benjamin among thy people. Out of Machir came rulers, and out of Zabulon they that gouerne the penne of the wypter.

And of Issachar, there were pynces with Deboza, Issachar also and Barac were sent on theyr fete into the valley, whan in the departyng away of Ruben there were great men, and wyse of herte.

C Why abodest thou among the shepe foldes, to heare the bleatynge of the flockes, and to separate thy selfe away with greaue men and wyse of herte.

Gilead also abode beyonde Iordane: and why doth Dan remayne in hyppes?

After continued on the see hoze, and tarried in his decayed places.

But the people of Zabulon haue leoperde their lyues cut vnto the death, lyke as dyd Reuben in the hye places of the felde.

The kynges came & fought, then fought the kynges of Canaan in Channah, by the waters of Megiddo, and wanne no money.

They fought fro heauen, euen the starres in theyr courtes fought agaynst Sisera.

The ryuer of Euphrat remoued them, that auncient ryuer, the ryuer Euphrat: My soule shall treade (him) dōwne myghtely.

D Then were the hoise holtes smytten a sunder by the meanes of the prausynge that theyr myghty men made.

Curse ye the cytie of Meros (sayde the angell of the Lorde) curse the inhabitours therof, because they came not to helpe the Lorde, to helpe the Lorde with the myghty Iael the wyfe of Haber the kenyte shall be blessed aboue other women, blessed shall we be aboue other women in the tente.

He bowed hym dōwne at hir fete, he lay dōwne & lay still: At hir fete he bowed hym dōwne, and fell. And when he had layed dōwne, he lay still desolate.

The mother of Sisera looked out at a wyndowe, and cryed thowowe the lateste: Why is hys charret so longe a commyng? Why tary the wheles of his cartes?

All the wyse lades answered her, ye and her owne woordes answered her selfe.

Surely they haue found, they denye the spoyles: eueri mā hath a dāsell or two: Sisera hath a pray of dyuerse couloured garments, eue a pray of raymēt dyed wth many coloures, & yf are made of nedle wothe: rayment of dyuerse coloures & of nedle wothe which is mete for him yf is chere in distributynge of yf spoyles. So perye the all thynge mypes: O Lorde: but they yf loue hym, let it be as the sōne whan he ryseth in his myght. And the lande had rest forty peres.

The. vi. Chapter.

Israel is oppressed of the Gadianites: Schena is sent of God to be theyr deiuere.

And the chyldren of Israel & schena wyckednes in the syght of the Lorde.

And the Lorde deliuered the into the hādes of Gadiā seuen peres. And the land of Gadian preyed agaynst Israel, and because of yf Gadianites, the chyldren of Israel made them denmes in the mountaynes & canes and strong holdes. And when Israel had sowē, the Gadianites, yf Amalechites & they of the east countrey came vptogrythe agaynst the: & pytched theyr tentes agaynst the, and destroyed the increafe of the earth, euen tyl thou come vnto Azab: & leste no skynace for Israel, nethe shepe, ore or alle: for they went vp, they and theyr cattel, and came wth theyr tentes as a multitude of goshoppers: so yf both they & also theyr camels were wout nōbze. And they entred into the land to destroy it. And so was Israel exceedingly impouered in yf sight of yf Gadianites, & cryed vnto yf Lorde. And when the chyldren of Israel cried vnto yf Lorde because of the Gadianites, yf Lorde sent vnto the prophet, which sayd vnto the: Thus sayeth yf Lorde god of Israel: I fet you fro Egypt & brought you out of the house of bondage, and I ryd you out of the hande of the Egyptians, & out of the hand of al that oppresse you & cast the out befoze you, and gane you theyr land. And I sayd vnto you: I am the Lorde your God, & feare not the goddes of the Amozytes in whose lande you dwell. But you haue not obeyed my voyce. And the Angel of the Lorde came, & late vnto an Oke which was in Ephraim, that perteyned vnto Joas yf father of yf Elerites.

his sone Gedeon pressed out wheat out of the eares in a presse, to hyde it from the Madia-nites: & the angel of the Lord appeared vnto C hym, and sayde: the Lord is with the, thou mightie man of warre. And Gedeon answered hym: Oh my Lord, if the Lord be with vs, why is all this come vpon vs: & where be all his myracles which our fathers tolde vs of, and sayde: Wpd not the Lord bypnyng vs out of Egypt? But now the Lord hath forsaken vs, & deliuered vs into the hādes of the Madianites. And the Lord looked vpon him, & sayd: So here in this thy myght, and thou shalt deliuer Israel out of the hādes of the Madianites: haue not I sent thee? And he answered him: Oh Lord, wherewith shall I saue Israel? Beholde, my kindred is pooze in Manasses, and I am lytle in my fathers house. The Lord sayde vnto him: I will be with the: and thou shalt smyte the Madia-nites, as they were but one man. And he answered him: Oh if I haue fōside grace i thy syght, that thou woe me a sygne, that it is thou that talkest w me. Departe thee hence, vntill I come agayne vnto the, & tply I bypnyng myne offeryng, and haue set it before the.

And he sayde: I wpll tary vntyll thou come agayne. And Gedeon went in, & made redy a kyd, and swete hakes of an Epha of floure, & put it with the fleshe in a bakket, & put the bzorh in a pot, & brought it out vnto him vnder the Dke, & presented it. And the angell of God sayd vnto him: take the flesch & the swete hakes, & lay the vpon this rocke, & poure out the bzorh. And he dyd so. Thā the angel of the Lord put forth the ende of the staffe he helde in hys hande, & touched the fleshe and the swete hakes. And there arose vpon the out of the rocke, & consumed the flesch & the swete hakes. But the angell of the Lord vanished out of hys syght. And when Gedeon perceyued that it was an angell of the Lord, he sayd: Alas, O Lord god, haue I therfore sene an angell of the Lord face to face, that I shoulde dye? And the Lord sayde vnto him: peace be vnto the, feare not, thou shalt not dye. Thā Gedeon made an aultare there vnto the Lord, & called it: The Lord of peace. And vnto this daye it is yet in Ephraim, that perceyue the vnto the father of the Cleriges. And it fozenne that the same nyght the Lord sayde vnto hym: take a pong bullock out of thy fathers dzoue, & another of vii. yeres olde, & destroye the aultare of Baal & thy father hath, & cutte downe the groue that is by it, & make an aultare vnto the Lord thy God vpon the top of this rocke in a conuenient place. And take the seconde bullocke, & offer burnt sacrifice vpon the wood of the groue, which thou shalt cut downe. Thā Gedeon toke ten me of his seruantes, & dyd as the Lord bad him. But because he durst not do it by day for feare of hys fathers hōsholde and of the men of the cytie, he did it by nyght.

And when the me of the cytie were vpon the in the moynyng: Behold, the aultare of Baal was broken, and the groue cut downe that was by it, & the seconde bullock offered vpon the aultare that was made. And they sayde one to another: who hath done this thing? & whā they enquired & asked, they sayde: Gedeon the sōne of Joas hath done this thyng.
Then the men of the cytie sayd vnto Joas: bypnyng out thy sōne, that he maye dye: because he hath destroyed the aultare of Baal, & cut downe the groue that was by it. And Joas sayde vnto al that stode by him: wyl ye pleade Baals cause? or wyl ye be hys defenders: he that hath medled agaynst hym, let him dye of the moynyng. If he be a God let him be auenged of him that caste downe his aultare. And from that day was Gedeon called: Jerobaal, because his father had sayde: Let Baal be auenged of him, that hath bzō ken downe his aultare.

All the Madianites therfore, and the A-malekites and they of the east, were gathered to gether, and wente, and pytched in the vale of Jesrael: but the spere of the Lord came vpon Gedeon. * And he blewe a trom- * Num. x. a pet, & called: Abiezzer to folowe hym, & sent * Jud. vii. a messengers thozowe out al Manasses, and called the, which also dyd folowe him. And he sent messengers vnto Aser, zabulon and Nephtalim, and they came to mete him.

And Gedeon sayd vnto God: wilt thou saue Israel in my hand, as thou hast sayd: Behold, I wyl put a fleece of wolfe in the threashing place. And if the dewe come on the fleece onely, and it be drye vpon all the earth besyde, then shall I be sure, that thou wylt saue Israel by my hand, as thou hast sayd. And it came so to passe for he rose vpon early on the morowe, and thruste the fleece together, and wronge the dewe therout, & fylled a bowle of water: & Gedeon sayd agayne vnto God: be not angry w me, that I speake once moar. For I wyl proue once agayne by the fleece. Let it be drye onely vpon the fleece, and dewe vpon all the grounde. And God dyd so that same nyght: for it was drye vpon the fleece onely, and there was dewe on all the grounde.

The vii. Chapter.

Gedeon with iii. hundred men ouercometh the Madianites. Deth and yeh are slayne.

Then Jerobaal (otherwys called Gedeon) and al the people that were wth hym, rose vpon early, and pytched besyde the wel of Ha-rad, so that the hoste of the Madianites were on the Northsyde of the Roche that boweth towards the valley. And the Lord sayde vnto Gedeon: the people that are with the, are to many for me to geue the Madianites into theyr handes, lest Israel make theyr vaunte agaynste me and saye: myne owne hande hath saued me. Nowe therfore make a proclamacion in feares of the people, & saye: * if any man dreade or be aferde, let hym retorne. And þ people arose early. And there departed & returned of the people whiche were at mount Gilead. xxi. thousande, and there abode ten thousande.

B And the Lorde sayde vnto Gedeon: the people are yet to many, byrnyng them downe vnto the water, and I wyll trye them vnto the there. And of whom I saye vnto the, this shal go with the, the same shal go with the. And of whom soeuer I saye vnto the, this shal not go with the, the same shal not go. So he brought downe the people vnto the water, and the Lorde sayde vnto Gedeon: as many as lapped þ water with theyr tonges, as a dogge doth, them put by them selues, and so do the that knele downe vpon theyr knees to dryncke. And the nombze of them that put theyr handes to theyr mouthes & lapped, were. iii. hundred men. But all the remnaunt of the people kneled downe vpon theyr knees to dryncke water. And the Lorde sayd vnto Gedeon: By these thre hundred men that lapped water, wyll I saue þon: and deliuer þe Madianites into thyne hande. And let all the other people go euery man vnto his place.

They therfore of the people toke vitayles with them, and theyr trompettes. And he sent all the reste of Israel, euery man vnto his tentre, and comforted those thre hundred with hym. And the host of Madian was beneth hym in a valey. And it fortuned that the same nyght the Lorde sayde vnto hym: Arise, get þe downe vnto þe hoste, for I haue deliuered it into thyne hand. But & if thou feare to go downe, the go þe and Pharah thy ladde downe to the hoste, and thou shalt herken what they say, and so shall thyne handes be strong, to go downe vnto the hoste.

D Then wente he downe and Pharah his ladde, euen harde vnto þe men of armes that were in the hoste. And the Madianites, the Amalekites, and all they of the East, lay a long in the valey, lyke a multitude of grasshoppers, and theyr camelles were without nombze, euen as the sande by the see syde in multitude. And when Gedeon was come: Behold, there was a man þe tolde a dreame vnto his neyghbour, and sayde: Beholde, I dreamed a dreame, and me thought that a lofe of barley breade, tumbled into the host of Madian, & came vnto a tente, and smote it that it felle, and ouertourned it, that the tente laye a longe. And his felowe answered and sayde: this is nothing ellys saue the swerde of Gedeon the sone of Joas a man of Israel: for into his hande hath God deli-uered Madian, and all the hoste.

When Gedeon harde the tellyng of the dreame, and the interpretation of the same, he wrothwypped, and returned vnto the host of Israel: and sayde: vp, for the Lorde hath deliuered into your hande the hoste of Madian. And he deuyned the thre hundred into thre companies, and gaue euery man a trompet in his hande, w an empty pyche, and lampes therein, and sayde vnto the hoste on me, and do lyke wyse: that when I come to the syde of þe hoste, euen as I do, so do ye. When I blowe with a trompet and al the are with me, blowe ye with trompettes also on euery syde of the hoste, and say: þe swerde of the Lorde and of Gedeon.

And so Gedeon and the thre hundred that were with hym, came vnto the syde of the hoste in the begynnynge of the myghte watche, and reised vp the watchmen. And they blew with theyr trompettes, & the pytchers that were in theyr handes. And al the thre companies blew with trompettes and brake the pytchers, and helde the lampes in theyr leftre handes, and the trompettes in theyr right, to blowe withal. And they cryed: the swerde of the Lorde and of Gedeon. And they rode styll, euery man in his place rounde about the hoste. And they wiche in the hoste, ranne, and cryed and so. And the thre hundred blew with trompettes, and the Lord set * euery manes sword vpon his neyghbour, & thorowe out all the hoste. And the hoste fled to Bethsitah, to the edge of the playne of Molah vnto Tabath. And the men of Ephraim gathered together out of the city of Beethphalim, of Aser, and of all Manasses folowed after the Madianites. And Gedeon sente messengers vnto all mount Ephraim, sayeng: come downe agaynste the Madianites, and take befoze them the waters vnto Bethbarath & to Jordan. And all the men of Ephraim gathered together and toke the waters vnto Bethbarath, and to Jordan. And they toke two captaynes of the Madianites, Oreb and Zeb, and smote Oreb vpon the rocke Oreb, and zeb vpon the rocke zeb, and folowed after Madian, and brought the heades of Oreb and zeb, to Gedeon on the other syde Jordan.

The. viii. Chapter.

Ephraim maketh insurrection agaynste Gedeon, but is sone pacified.

And the men of Ephraim came vnto hym: why hast thou thus, that thou calledst us not, when thou wentest to fight with þe Madianites: and thou chode with hym a good. (and had all the blame vpon him.) And he sayde vnto them: I dede haue I done lyke vnto you: for I called not a cluster of Ephraim better, then the wyne harvest of Abiezer: God hath deliuered into your handes the Lordes of Madia, Oreb and zeb. And what was I able to do lyke as you haue done? And then they spi- rited abated from of him, when he had sayd that. And Gedeon came to Jordan to passe over, he and the thye hydzed men that were with him, very saynte, and yet folowed the chace. And he layd vnto the men of Socoth geue I praye you kakes of bzeade vnto the people that folowe me: for they be sayntie, that I maye folowe after zebath, and zalmona hynges of Madian. And the Lordes of Socoth sayde: are the handes of zebath and zalmona now in thyne handes, that we shulde geue bzeade vnto thyne armye? Gedeon sayde, therefore whē the Lord hath deliuered zebath and zalmona into myne hande, I will teare the fleshe of you with the thornes of the wyldernes and w briers. And he went vp thēce to Bhanuel, & spake vnto them lyke to wyle. And the men of Bha- mel answered hym, as byd the men of So- cuth. And he sayde also vnto p men of Bha- mel: when I come agayne in peace, I will bzeake downe thys towre. zebath and zal- mona were in Carhar, & they hostes with them, vpon a. xv. thousande men, whiche were all that were left of all the hostes of them of the Eastre: For there was slayne a hundred and twenty thousande men, that were swardest.

And Gedeon wente thozowt them that dwelt in tabernacles on the Eastre syde of Robah and Jebah, and smote the hoste: for the hoste byd cast no perples. And whā zebath and zalmona fledde, he folowed after them, and toke the two hynges of Madia, zebath and zalmona, and discomforted all the hoste.

And Gedeon the sonne of Joas returned from batrell, afoze the sunne was downe, and caught a ladde of the men of Socoth, and enquired of hym. And he wote hym of the lordes and elders of Socoth. lxxvii. mē And he came vnto the men of Socoth, and sayde: Beholde, here I haue zebath and zalmona, in which ye byd caste me in the tethe, sayng: are the handes of zebath & zalmona already in thyne hande, that we shulde geue bzeade vnto thy sayntie men? And he toke the elders of the cytie, & thornes of the wyl- dernesse & briers, & made the mē of Socoth to fele them. And he bzeake downe the towre of Bhanuel, and slewe the men of the cytie.

And the sayd he vnto zebath & zalmona, what maner of mē were they whom ye slew at Chaboz, and they answered: the lyke- nesse of the and them is all our. euf after the fallowon of the chyldzen of a kyng. And he sayde: they were my byethien, enen my mothers chyldzen. As truly as the Lord lyueth if ye had saued they lyues, I wold not slep you. And he sayde vnto Jether hys eldest sonne: vp and slep them: But the lad dyne not hys swearde, for he feared, because he was yet yonge. Then zebath and zalmona sayde: Kysse thou, and falle vpon vs: for as the man is, so is his strength. And Gedeon arose and slewe zebath and zalmona, and toke away the oymantes, that were on they camels neckes.

Then the men of Israel sayde vnto Ge- deon: Repgne thou ouer vs, bothe thou, thy sonne & thy sonnes sonne, for thou hast de- liuered vs out of the hand of Madia. And Gedeon sayd vnto them: I will not repgne ouer you, nether shal my chyld repgne ouer you, but the Lord shall repgne ouer you.

And agayne Gedeon sayde vnto them: I wold delyre a certayne request of you, enen p you wold geue me euery man p earinges of his pray. For they had golden earnges, because they were Ismaelites: and they an- swered: We will geue the. And they spied a mantell, and byd cast there in euery man the earnges of his praye: and the weyght of the golden earnges p he required, was a thousand & seven hundred spyles of golde, besyde cheynes, pominaunders and purple rayment that was on the kynges of Ma- dian, & besyde the cheynes, that were about their camels neckes. And Gedeon made an Ephod therof, & put it in hys cytie Ephrah. And all Israel wente a whozpyng after it, in the same place, whiche thyng became a ruyne vnto Gedeon and to his house. Thus was Madian brought lowe before p chyld- zen of Israel, so that they lyfte vp they heades no moare. And the countrey was in quietnes forty yeres in the dayes of Gedeon.

And Jerobaal the sonne of Joas went, & dwelte in his a wne house. And Gedeon had .lxx. sonnes of hys body begotten, for he had many wyues. And his concubine that was in Sichē, bare him a sonne also, whose name he called Abimelech. And Gedeon the sonne of Joas dyed, in a good age, and was buryed in the sepulchre of Joas hys father, enen in Ephrah, that pertained vnto the fa- ther of the Ezytes.

But it fortuneth, that as sone as Gedeon was dead, p chyldzen of Israel turned away & went a whozpyng after Baalim, & made a couenaūt w Baal to be they god, & p chyld- zen of Israel thought not on p Lord they god, which had deliuered the out of p handes of al they enemyes on euery syde. Neether shewed they mercy on p house of Jerobaal, otherwyle called Gedeon, accozdyng to all p goodnes which he had shewed vnto Israel.

The ix. Chapter.

Abimelech is made kyng.

Abime.

A Bimelech the sonne of Jerobaal went to Sichem, vnto hys mothers brethren, and comuned with them and with all his mothers fathers hired, sayeng saye I praye you, in the eares of all the en-dabptoures of Sychem: whether is better for you, & all the sonnes of Jerobaal (which are lxx. personnes) reygne ouer you, eyther that one reigne ouer you? Remembze, that I am of your bone, and of your fleshe. And his mothers brethren spake of him in the audience of the men of Sichem all these wordes, and they hartes were moued to folow Abimelech. For they sayde: he is our brother. And they gaue hym lxx. peces of silver out of the temple of Baal Berith, wher with Abimelech byzed dayne and light persons whiche went with hym. And he wente vnto hys fathers house at Ephrah * and strowe all hys brethren, the sonnes of Jerobaal, euen lxx. persons with one stone. Not withstandinge, yet Joatham the pongeste sonne of Jerobaal escaped, for he byd hym selfe. And all the men of Sichem gathered together, and all the house of Mello, and came and made Abimelech kyng in the playne, wher the greete stone was by Sichem.

And when they tolde it to Joatham, he went and stode in the toppe of mount Garizim, and yfste vp hys voyce, and cryed, and sayde vnto them: Herken vnto me you men of Sichem, that God may berke vnto you.

B Of Sichem, that God may berke vnto you. * The trees went forth to anoynt a kyng ouer them, and sayde vnto the Olive tree: reygne thou ouer vs. But the olive tree said vnto the: Guld I leaue my fattenes, which bothe goddes and men praye in me, and go to be promoted ouer the trees? And the trees sayde to the figge tree: come thou, and be kyng ouer vs. The figge tree answered the: Guld I forsake my sweetnes, and my good fruite, & go to be promoted ouer the trees? Then sayde the trees vnto the vyne: come thou and be kyng ouer vs. The vyne sayde vnto them: Guld I leaue my wyne wherby I cheare both goddes and men, and go to be promoted ouer the trees? Then sayde al the trees vnto the fyxe bushe: come thou and reygne ouer vs. And the fyxe bushe sayde vnto the trees: if it be true that ye wyll anoynt me kyng ouer you, then come, & put your trust vnder my shadow. If no, the fyxe come out of the fyxe bushe, and waste the Cedze trees of Libanon.

C Nowe therfore, if ye do truly and vncorruptly, to make Abimelech kyng: and yf ye haue dealte well with Jerobaal and hys house, & haue done vnto hym accordyng to the deservyng of hys handes, iudge ye. For euen he my father, sought for you, and aduentured hys lyfe, and rydde you out of the hande of Gadian. And ye are ryse agaynst my fathers house this day, and sleyne his children, euen lxx. personnes with one stone, and haue made Abimelech the sonne of hys mayde seruaunt, kyng ouer the men of Sichem, because he is your brother, if ye then haue dealte truly and well with Jerobaal and with his house: then the reioyce ye with Abimelech, and let the reioyce with you. But if you haue not dealte truly, then I praye God a fyxe man come out of Abimelech, and consume the men of Sichem & the house of Mello. And that there may come a fyxe man among the men of Sichem, & out of the house of Mello, and consume Abimelech. And Joatham ranne awaye, and fledde, and went to Beer and dwelte there, for fear of Abimelech his brother. Wher Abimelech had reygned the yere, God sent a fyxe of hate betwene Abimelech, and the men of Sichem. And the cytezens of Sichem rayled vpon Abimelech, and wished that the wickednes done to the lxx. sonnes of Jerobaal myght come on him, and that God wolde lay the bloud of them vnto Abimelech they brother which hee them, and vpon the other men of Sichem which ayded him in the kylling of his brethren. And the cytezens of Sichem let me to be awayte for him in the toppe of the mannes, which men (whyle they caried for him) had robbed all that came a longe the waye to them. And it was tolde Abimelech.

And Gaal the sonne of Abed came with hys brethren, and they gat the to Sichem. And the men of Sichem put theyr chieftie in him. And they went out into the felde gathered in theyr grapes, and trode them, and made mery: and went into the house of theyr goddes, and dyd eate & dremke, and cursed Abimelech. And Gaal the sonne of Abed sayde: what is Abimelech, and what is Sichem: that we shulde serue him? he is not the sonne of Jerobaal: and zebul is his officer: serue such as come of * hemas the father of Sichem, for what reason is it that we shulde serue him? wold God this were vnder my hand, tha wold I take Abimelech out of the way. And he spake agaynst Abimelech: make thyne hoste greater, & go out. And when zebul the ruler of the cyte hadde the wordes of Gaal the sonne of Abed, he was wrothe, and sent messengers vnto Abimelech pryncely, sayeng: Behold, Gaal the sonne of Abed and hys brethren be come to Sichem: and beholde, they set theyr camp agaynst the. Nowe therfore vp by nyght, thou and al the people that is with the, and lay wayte in the felde. And ryse early in the mornynge as soone as the sunne is vp, and smyte vpon the cytie. And if he and the people that is with him, come out agaynst the, do to them

What thine handes shalbe able. And Abimelech roase vp, & all the people þ were w hym by night. And they layd awayt against Sichem in foure cōpanyes. And Gaal þ sonne of Abed wet out, & stode in þ entringe of þ gate of the cytie. And Abimelech rose vp, and the folke þ were w him, fro laying a wayt. And whē Gaal sawe the people, he layde to zebul beholde, ther come people downe from þ top of þ mountaynes. And zebul said vnto him: the shadow of the hylls seme men vnto the

ch. (by þ errorre art thou diseaued.) & Gaal answered agayn, & said: se, ther come folke downe by the myddel of the land, & another cōpany come a lōge by þ playne of þ charmaris. The sayde zebul vnto hym: where is nowe thy mouth þ sayd: what felowe is Abimelech, þ we shuld serue him? Is not this þ people þ þ hast despyled? So out now & fyght w them.

And Gaal went oute befoze the cytezens of Sichem, & fought w Abimelech. And Abimelech chased hym, that he fled befoze hym ch. (þ he drove him into the cytie) & many were ouer throwen & wounded, euē vnto þ entringe of þ gate. And Abimelech dwelt at Arumah.

And zebul thruste oute Gaal & hys brethren that they shulde not dwell in Sichem ch. (þ he thruste the not to carpe therein.) And on the mo-row, it happened þ the peple went out into þ felde. And they told Abimelech. And he toke the people, & deuyded the into thre cōpanies and layd awayt in the feldes, and looked, ad beholde, the people were come out of the cytie, and he ranne vpon them, and smote the.

And Abimelech, & the cōpanies þ were w hym, reached further, & stode in the entrynge of the gate of the cytie. And þ two other cōpanies ranne vpo all the people þ were in þ feldes, & slewe them. And when Abimelech had fought agaynst the cytie al that daye, he toke it, & slewe the people þ was therein, & destroyed þ cytie & sowed salt thozow it. And when all the men of the towze of Sichem heard that, they entred into a stronge holde of the house of they? God Baal Berith, ch. (where they made a boude with him: & therof dyd þ place take the name, which place was eyerchenge stronge.) And it was told Abimelech, that all the men of þ towze of Sichem were gathered together, and Abimelech gat hym to mounte zelmon, both he & al the people that were with hym, & toke axes with him & cut downe bowes of trees, & toke the and bare them on his shulder, & sayde vnto the folke that were wyth hym: what ye haue sene me do, spede poure selues, and do lyke wise as I haue done. And al the men that were amonge the people, cut downe bowes, & folowed Abimelech, & put them into the holde, and set the holde a fyre by the: so that ch. (with smoke and fyre) all the mē of the tower of Sichem were slayne, vpon a thousande men and women.

Then went Abimelech to Thebez, and beleged it, and toke it. But there was a strōge towze wythin the cytie, & thyt her ranne all the men and wemen, and all the chefe that were in the cytie, and shut it to them, & got them vp ch. (by the bulwarkes) to the toppe of the towze. And Abimelech cam vnto the towze and fought agaynst it, and went harde vnto the doze of the towze to set it on fyre. And a certayne woman caste a pece of a mylstone ch. (it. i. r. b) vpon his head, and all to brake hys bryayne panne.

Then Abimelech called hastelye vnto the young man that bare his harnesse, and sayd vnto hym: drawe thy swearde and sle me, ch. (it. i. r. b) þ mē sape not of me: a womā slew him. And hys lad thrust him thozowe and he dyed. ch. (it. i. r. a)

And when the men of Israel saw þ Abimelech was dead, they departed euery man vnto hys owne house. And thus ch. (it. i. r. c) the wyckednesse of Abimelech whiche he dyd vnto his father, in slepyng hys seuentye brethren and therto all the wyckednesse of the men of Sichem, dyd God byngne vpo they? heades. And vpon them came the curse of Joathan the sonne of Jerobaal.

Ch. x. Chapter.

Chola and Jair are Judges of Israel.

After Abimelech there arose, to deffend Israel, one Chola (þ sonne of Jhuah) hys vncler sonne, a man of Ilakar which dwelt in Samir in mount Ephraim. And he iudged Israel. xxiij. yeare and dyed, and was buryed in Samir. And after hym arose Jair a Gileadite, and iudged Israel. xxi. yeare. And he had thytte sonnes that rode on thytte Asse coltes, and they had thytte cyties, whych are called the townes of Jair vnto this daye, and are in the lande of Gilead. And Jair dyed and was buried in Ramon.

And þ chyldzen of Israel wrought wyckednesse yet agayne, in the sight of the Lord, & serued Baalim and Ashtaroth, and the goddes of Siria, the goddes of Sidon, and the goddes of Moab, the goddes of the chyldzen of Ammon, and the goddes of the Philistynes, and forsoke the Lorde & serued not him. And the Lord was wroth wyth Israel, and solde the into the handes of the Philistines, & into the handes of the chyldzen of Ammon: which fro that yere forth, ppyde & oppressed the chyldzen of Israel. xviij. yere. all þ were on the other syde Jordan: in the lande of the Amozites whiche is in Gilead. Mozeouer, þ chyldze of Ammon wet ouer Jordan to fyght agaynst Juda, Ben Jamin, and the house of Ephraim: so þ Israel was sore cōbryd. And the chyldzen of Israel cryed vnto the Lorde, sayinge: we haue spyned agaynst the: for we haue forsaken oure owne God, and haue serued Baalim. And the Lorde sayde vnto the to þ childzen of Israel: dyd not þ Egypciās the Amozites, þ childz of Ammō, þ Philistines, þ Sidonites, the Amalekites, and þ Moabites, oppresse you: And ye cried to me and I deliuered you out of their hādes. And for all that ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge goddes, wherfoze I wyl helpe you nomore. So and crye vnto the goddes whyche ye haue chosen and * let them saue you in the tyme of your tribulacion. And þ childz of Israel sayd vnto þ Lord: We haue sinned do þ vnto vs whatsoeuer please the, deliuer vs onely this daye. And they put away the straunge goddes fro the & serued þ Lord. And his soule had pytie on the miserie of Israel.

Then the childz of Ammon gathered to gether, & pytched in Gilead. And þ childzen of Israel gathered them together, & pytched in Mizpa. And the Lordes of Gilead sayde eche to other: whosoeruer will beginne þ batell against the childzen of Ammō, the same shalbe head ouer al þ enhabiters of Gilead.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

¶ Jephthah deliuereth Israel from the Ammonites.

And ther was one Jephthah a Gileadite, a strong mā, þ sonne of an harlott: and Gilead begat Jephthah. And Gileads wife bare him sonnes, whiche when they were come to age thrust out Jephthah, and sayde vnto him, þ shalt not enheret in oure fathers house, for þ arte the sonne of a straunge woman. Then Jephthah fled from his brethren, & dwelt in the lande of Tob. And there gathered ydle ¶ (a thurpke) me to Jephthah, and went out with him. And it chauced in processe of time that the childzen of Ammon made warre agaynst Israel. And whan þ childzen of Ammon fought thus agaynst Israel, the elders of Gilead wēt to fet Jephthah out of þ lāde of Tob: (to helpe them) & sayd vnto him: come and be our capytayne, þ we maye fyght with the childzen of Ammon. Jephthah answered þ elders of Gilead: dyd not ye hate me & expel me out of my fathers house: howe happeneth it then, þ you come vnto me now in tyme of your tribulaciō. And the elders of Gilead sayd vnto Jephthah: Therfoze we turne agayne to the nowe, that thou mayest go with vs, & fyght agaynst the childz of Ammon: & be our head ouer al the inhabiteurs of Gilead. And Jephthah sayd vnto the elders of Gilead: If ye bypunge me home agayne to fight with the childzen of Ammon, then yf the Lord deliuer them befoze me, shall I be your head. And the elders of Gilead sayd to Jephthah: þ Lord be wytnesse betwene vs yf we do not accordyng to thy wordes. The Jephthah went wyth the elders of Gilead.

And the people made hym head and ruler over them. And Jephthah reherched all hys wordes befoze the Lord in Mizpa.

And Jephthah sēt messengers vnto þ king of the childz of Ammō saying: what hast thou to do w me, þ thou art come agaynst me, to fyght in my land. The king of þ childzen of Ammon answered vnto the messengers of Jephthah: Because Israel toke a wape lād, when they came out of Egypt: euen the Arnon vnto Iabok, and vnto Jordā. And therfoze restore those lādes agayne w lāde meanes. And Jephthah sent messengers agayne vnto þ king of þ childz of Ammō: sayd vnto him: thus sayth Jephthah: * Daniel toke not a wape þ land of Moab, nor þ lād of þ childz of Ammō. But whē Israel came out of Egypt, & walked thozow the wilderness, eue vnto þ redde see they came to Cadē * and sēt messengers vnto þ kyng of Edom, saying: let me (I praye þ) go thozow thy lād. But þ kyng of Edom wolde not agre them. And in lyke maner they sent vnto þ kyng of Moab, but he wold not consent. And so Israel abode stil in Cadē. And the they went a lōg thozow the wilderness, & cōpassed the lād of Edō, & the land of Moab, & cam a lōg by the east syde of þ land of Moab, & pitch on þ other syde of Arnon, & wolde not cam with in þ coast of Moab: * for Arnon was vtmoost border of Moab. And then Ammon sent messengers vnto Seho, king of þ Amozites, a kyng of Helbon, & sayd vnto him: Let vs passe thozow thy lād vnto oure owne cōtre. But Sehon cōsented not to Israel, þ he shulde go thozow his coast: but gathered all hys people together, & pytched in Jazā & fought with Israel. And the Lord God of Israel deliuered Seho & all his folke into handes of Israel. And so Israel smote the cōquered all the lād of the Amozites, the inhabiteurs of the lād contrey. And they cōquered al the coastes of the Amozites, from Arnon vnto Iabok, & fro the wyldernesse vnto Jordā. So nowe, seying the Lord God of Israel hath cast out þ Amozites befoze þ people Israel, shuldest thou possesse the lād. Naye, but what people Camos the God dypueth out, that land possesse thou. Enli whatsoeuer nation the Lord oure God repelleth, that lande ought we to enioye.

* And art thou better then Balac the son of zephor kyng of Moab: dyd he stirre Israel oz fyght agaynst them, all the while Israel dwelt in Helbon and her townes, in Aroer & her townes, & in all the cyties þe a lōge by the coastes of Arnon, the hundred yerres: why diddest thou not recouer them in all that space: Wherefore, I haue not sinned agaynst the. But thou doest me wrong to warre agaynst me. The Lord the foze whiche is a Judge, be Judge this daye betwene the childzen of Israel, and the childzen of Ammon. Howbeit, the kyng of

of the chyldre of Ammō, harkened not vnto the wordes of Jephthah, which he sent him.

Then the spere of the Lozde came vpon Jephthah. And he passed ouer to Gilead and to Manasse, and cam to Mazyphah & lyeth in Gilead, and from thence vnto & chyldren of Ammon. And Jephthah vowed a vowe vnto the Lozde, and sayd: * If thou shalt deliuer the chyldren of Ammon into my handes, then that thyng that cometh out of the doores of my house against me, when I come home in peace, from the chyldren of Ammon, shalbe the Lozdes, and I wyll offer it vp for a burnt offering: And so Jephthah went vnto the chyldre of Ammon to fyghe wyth the. And the Lozde deliuered them into his handes. And he smote the from Aroer tyll thou come to Menith, euen .xx. cities: and so forth to the playne of the vyneyardes, with an exceeding great slaughter. And thus the chyldren of Ammon were brought vnder befoze the chyldren of Israel.

When Jephthah came to Mazyphah vnto his house, se, his daughter came out against him, with tymberelles & daūses, which was his onely chyld: so that belyde her, he had nether sonne, nor daughter. And when he sawe her, he rent his clothes, and sayde: Alas my daughter, thou hast brought me low, ad art one of them that troubleth me. For I haue opened my mouth vnto & Lozde & cannot go backe. And she sayd vnto him: my father if thou haue opened thy mouth vnto the Lozde then do w me accordyng to it that proceded out of thy mouth, for as much as the Lozde hath aduenged & given the victory of thyne enemyes the chyldren of Ammon. And she sayde vnto her father: do this much for me: let me alone two monethes, that I maye go downe to the mountaynes, and bewaile my virginyte, I and my felowes. And he sayde go and he sent her awaye two monethes. And so she went wyth her companions, and lamented her maydenheed vpon the mountaynes. And after the ende of two monethes she turned agayne vnto her father, wher she dyd with her accordyng to his vowe which he had vowwed, and she had knowne nomā. And it grew to a custome in Israel. The daughters of Israell came pere by pere to lament the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite, foure dayes in a pere.

The .xii. Chapter.

The battail of Jephthah against Ephraim. After the death of Jephthah succeeded Elon. After Elon Abdon.

And the men of Ephraim gathered them selues together, and went northwarde, and layd vnto Jephthah: * Wherfoze wentest thou to fyghe w the chyldren of Ammon, & dydest not call vs to go w the: we will therfoze burne thine house vpon the w fire: & Jephthah sayd vnto the: I and my people were at great tryfe w the chyldren of Ammō. And when I called you, ye deliuered me not out of their handes. And when I sawe & ye deliuered me not, * I put my lfe in my handes, & went vnto the chyldre of Ammō. And the Lozde deliuered the into my handes. Wherfoze then are ye come vnto me now, to fyghe w me? Jephthah therfoze gathered together all the me of Gilead, and fought w the Ephraimites. And & men of Gilead smote & Ephraimites because they sayde: Ye Gileadites are but rineagates of Ephraim amonge & Ephraimites & the Manassites. Whereouer, the me of Gilead toke the passages of Jozdā befoze & Ephraimites. And when those Ephraimites & were escaped, sayd: let vs go ouer, then & men of Gilead sayd vnto the: Art thou an Ephraimite? they sayd: nay. The sayd they vnto him: then saye: Schibboleth

(which is by interpretation, an eare of chyme.) And he sayde: Schibboleth: for he coule not so pronounce. And then they toke hym, and stewe hym at & passages of Jozdā. And ther were ouerthrowen at that tyme of the Ephraimites .xlii. And Jephthah iudged Israel. vi. yere, & dyed, & was buryed in one of the cities of Gilead. After this man, iudged Israel one Abazan of Bethlehe, and he had .xxx. sonnes and .xxx. daughters, whō he sent out, and toke .xxx. other in, for hys sonnes. And when Abazan had iudged Israel. vii. yere, he dyed, and was buryed at Bethlehem.

After him, Elon a zabulonite iudged Israel. x. yere, & Elon & zabulonite dyed, & was buryed in Aialon, in the couētre of zabulon.

After hym, Abdon the sonne of Hellel a pharathonite iudged Israel. And he had .xl. sonnes, and thyrty newes, that rode on .lxx. asse coltes. And when Abdon the sonne of Hellel the pharathonite had iudged Israel eyght yere he dyed, & was buryed in pharathon in the lande of Ephraim, in the mounte of the Amalekites.

The .xiii. Chapter.

Israel being an idolater is oppressed of the Philistines. The birth of Samson. The sacrifice of Samsons father.

And the chyldren of Israel began agayne to commytte wickednes in the sight of & Lozde. * And the Lozde deliuered them into the handes of the Philistines. xl. yere.

And ther was a man in zaraah of the kynred of Dan, named Manoah, whose wyfe was barre, & bare not. Then the wyfe came, & tolde her husband sayenge: a man of God came vnto me, & the fallis of hym was lyke the fallion of an Angel of God, & exadryng fearful. But I asked hym not whence he was, nether tolde he me hys name, but sayd vnto me: * behold, thou shalt be wyth chyld & beare a sonne, & now dyncke no wyne nor strong dyncke, nether eate any vncleane thing: for the ladd shalbe an abstayner to God eue from hys ^(infancie) and from hys byrth, to the daye of his death.

Then Manoah made intercessyon to the Lorde, and sayde: I praye the my Lorde, let the me of God which thou sendest, come once moze vnto vs, and teache vs what we shall do vnto the ladd when he is bozne. And God heard the voyce of Manoah, and the Angel of God came agayne vnto hys wyfe as she sat in the felde. But Manoah her husband was not with her. And the wyfe made haste and ranne, and shewed her husbande, & sayde vnto hym. Beholde, the man appeared vnto me that came vnto me to daye.

And Manoah arose and went after hys wyfe, and came to the man, and sayde vnto hym: art thou the mā that spakest vnto my wyfe? And he sayde: I am. Manoah sayde: now wylt thou sayenge is come to passe: what shalbe the maner of the chyld, & what shall he do? And the angell of the Lorde sayd vnto Manoah: thy wyfe muste absteyne from all that I sayde vnto her: she maye eate of nothing & cometh of the vyne tree, ner dyncke wyne or strong dyncke, nor eat any vncleane thyng: But must obserue al that I bad her.

Manoah sayd vnto the angell of the Lorde: we wyl kepe the styl, vntyl * we haue made redy a kyd, and haue let it befoze the. For Manoah wylt not that it was an angell of the Lorde. And Manoah sayde agayne vnto the angell of the Lorde: what is thy name, that when thy sayenge is come to passe we maye do the some worshyppe? And the angell of the Lorde sayd vnto hym: * why askest thou after my name, whych is secreete.

And so Manoah toke a kyd with a meat-offerynge and offred it vpon a rocke vnto the Lorde. And the angell dyd wonderoulye. Manoah and hys wyfe lokyng vpon. And when the flame came vp towarde heauē fro the aultare, the angell of the Lorde ascended vp in the flame of the aultar. And Manoah and hys wyfe looked vpon it, and fell flat on theyr faces vnto the grounde. But the angell of the Lorde dyd nomoze apere vnto Manoah & his wyfe. And then Manoah hard that it was an angel of the Lorde, and sayd vnto hys wyfe: * we shall surely dye, because we haue sene God. But hys wyfe sayde vnto hym: yf the Lorde wold kyll vs, he wold not haue receaued a burnt offeryng & a meat-offeryng of our handes, nether wolde he haue shewed vs al these thynges, nor wolde he haue told vs any suche. And the wyfe becam sonne, and called his name Samson. And the ladd grew, and the Lorde blessed him. And the sperte of hys Lorde begane to moue him in the host of Da, betwene Zarah & Eshbal.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The marriage of Samson. He killeth a lion, & poundeth a yddol. He killeth a tyger. His wyfe sauerh him and sauerh another.

Samson went downe to Chanath, and saue a woman in Chanath of the daughters of hys Philistines, and he came vp, and told his father and his mother, and sayd: I haue sene a woman in Chanath of the daughters of the Philistines. And now geue me her to wyfe. Then his father and mother sayd vnto him: * Is ther neuer a woman among the daughters of thy brethren, and amonge al my people, but that thou muste go, and take a wyfe of the vncircumcised Philistines? And Samson sayd vnto his father: geue me this woman, for she pleaseth me wel. But his father and mother wylt not that it was hys Lorde doynge, & that he sought an occasion agayn the Philistines, for at that tyme the Philistines raygned ouer Israel.

Then went Samson and hys father and his mother downe to Chanath, and came to hys vnyerdares of Chanath. And beholde, a ponge ^(wood) lye on roared vpon him. And the sperte of the Lorde came vpon him. And he tare hym, as he wolde haue rent a kyd, and yet had nothyng in hys hande, nether tolde his father & mother what he had done. And he went downe, & talked wyth the woman, which semed well fauored in the sight of Samson.

And withyn a shorte space after as he had thyther agayne to take her to wyfe, he was runned out of the waye, to se the carkasse of a lyon. And beholde, ther was a swarme of bees and honny in the carkasse of the lyon. And he toke of the honny in hys handes, and went eatyng, and came to hys father and mother, and gaue the also. And they dyd eate. And he tolde not them, that he had taken the honny out of the carkasse of the lyon.

And so his father came vnto the woman and Samson made there a feast, for so bled the ponge men to do. And when they <sup>(the company of that place)</sup> sawe him, they brought. xxx companions to be with hym. And Samson sayd vnto the: I wyll nowe put forth a ryddle vnto you. And if you can declare it me within vii. dayes of the feast, & fynde it out.

I wyll geue you. xxx. myntes, & xxx. chaunge of garmentes: But & if you cannot declare it me, then shall ye geue me. xxx. myntes and xxx. chaunge of garmentes. And they answered hym: put forth thy ryddle, that we maye heare it. And he sayd vnto them: Out of the enter came meate: & out of the stronge came swemes. And they coude not in. iii. dayes expounde the ryddle. And when the seuenth daye was come, they sayde vnto Samsons wyfe: later thyne husband, ^(and perswade him) that he maye declare vs the ryddle, least we burne the and thy fathers house with fyre.
Hauye ye called vs hyther, to make vs beg-gers. And Samsons wyfe wept before hym ^(she sayeth) and said: Surely thou hatest me and louest me not: for thou hast put forth a ryddle: vnto the chyldren of my folke, and hast not tolde it me. And he sayde vnto her: Beholde, I haue not tolde it my father and my mother, and shall I tell it the?

And Samsons wyfe wepte before hym vii. dayes, whyle the feast lasted. And p. vii. daye he tolde her, because she laye so sore vpo him. And she tolde it the chyldre of her folke.
And the men of the cytie sayd vnto hym the seuenth daye, before the sonne went downe.
What is sweeter then honye, & what is stronger then a lyon? Then sayde he vnto the: If ye had not plowed wyth my caulfe, ye had not founde out my ryddle. And the spere of the Lord cam vpo him. And he went downe to Ascalon, and slewe thyrtye men of them, and spoyled them, and gaue chaunge of garmentes vnto them which expounded the ryddle. And he was wyoth, and wente vpo to hys fathers house. But Samsons wyfe was geuen to one of hys companyons, that he had taken vnto hym.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

¶ Samson teth fyrebrandes to the fore sayles. With the Jawe bone of an asse he killeth a thousande men. Oute of a great cote in the Jawe, God geue hym water.

But it chaunced within a while after, euen in the tyme of whete heruest, & Samson wyspyted his wyfe wyth a kyd, sayenge: I wyll go into my wyfe into the chaumber: but her father wolde not suffer hym to go in. And her father sayde: I thought that thou haddest hated her, & therfore gaue I her vnto one of thy companions. Is not her peger syfter say-ter then the? Take her in steade of the other.
Samson sayde vnto the: Nowe am I moze blamelesse the the Philistines, and therfore wyll I do them displeasure.

And Samson went out, and caught thre hundred foxes, & toke fyrebrandes, and fastened taylor to taylor, and put a fyrebrand in the myddes betwene two taylor. And whan he had set the brandes of fyre, he sent the oute, ^(that they myght runne abrode, which wylt immediatly) into standynge corne of the Philistines, & burnt vpo bothe the reped corne and also the standing, with the vyneyardes and olyues.
Then the Philistines sayde: who hath done this? And it was tolde them that Samson the sonne in lawe of the Chamnite, because he had taken his wyfe, and geuen her to hys companyon. And the Philistines came vpo and burnt her and her father with fyre.

And Samson sayde vnto them: Though ye haue done this, yet wyll I be aduenged of you and then I wyl cease. And he smote the legge and thyrgh with a myghtie plage. And then he wente and dwelte in the caue of the rocke Etam.

Then the Philistines came vpo, & pytched in Juda, and laye in: <sup>(a place, that was afterwarde called) Lebi: (that is a Jawe bone, wher theyr host was scattered abrode.)</sup> And the me of Juda sayd, why are ye come vpo vnto vs? They answered: to bynde Samson are we come vpo, ad to do to hym as he hath done to vs. Then thre thousande men of Juda wente downe to the caue of the rocke Etam, and sayde to Samson: worrest thou not that & Philistines are rulers ouer vs? Wherfore then hast thou done thus vnto vs? He answered them: as they dyd vnto me, so haue I done vnto them.

And they sayd vnto hym agayne: we are come downe to bynde the, and to delouer the into the hnde of the Philistines. And Samson sayd vnto them: swere vnto me: <sup>(I promisse me)</sup> that ye shal not fal vpon my pour sel-ues. They answered hym, sayenge: No, but we wyl bynde the, and delouer & vnto theyr handes: But we wyl not kyll the. And they bouded him with two new cordes, & brought hym from the rocke. And when he came to Lebi, the Philistines howted agaynst him.
And the spere of the Lord came vpo hym, and the cordes that were vpon hys armes, became as flaxe that was burnte w fyre, for the bandes loosed from of hys bandes. And he founde a rotten Jawe bone of an asse, and put forth hys hande, and caught it, and slue a thousande men therwith.

And Samson sayde: wyth the Jawe of an asse, haue I made heapes of them: wyth & Jawe of an asse haue I slayne a thousande men. And whē he had left speakynge, he cast awaye the Jawe bone out of hys hande, and called the place: Ramath Lebi: <sup>(that is vpo in interpretacion the lyftynge vpo of the Jawe bone.)</sup> And he was sore a thyrst, and called on & Lord, and sayde: Thou hast geuen this great victorye,

And when he had dronke, his sperte came agayne, & he was refreshed, wherfoze the name therof was called vnto thys daye the well of the caller on, whych came of the Jawe. And he iudged Israel in the dayes of the Philistines, twenty yeaers.

C The .xvi. Chapter.

Samson is seth by the gates of Gaza. He was deceived by Dalila: He putted downe the house vpon the Philistines, and dyeth wth them.

A Then went Samson to Azath, * and sawe ther an harlot, and went in vnto her. And it was tolde the Azathites, sayēg: Samson is come hyther. And they went aboute, & layde a wayte for hym there, all nyght in the gate of the cite, & were styll all the nyght, sayēg: in the mornynge whā it is daye, we shall kyll hym. And Samson toke his rest tyll mydnyght, & arose at mydnyght, and toke the doores of the gate of the cite, and the two spyde postes, and rent them of, with the barre and all, and put the vpon his shoulders, and carped them vp to the top of an hyll, that is befoze Hebron.

And after thys, it fortuneth, that by the ryuer of Sozek, he lōued a woman, called Dalila: vnto whome came the lordes of the Philistines, and sayde vnto her: perswade hym, and se wherin his great strength lyeth, and by what meane we maye ouercome him, that we maye bynde him, to bypnyng hym vnder, and euery one of vs shall geue the aleuen hundred slynerlynges.

And Dalila sayde to Samson: Oh, tell me where thy great strength lyeth, and how thou myghtest be bounde, and brought vnder. Samson answered vnto her: If they bynde me wth seuen grene wythes I were neuer dyed, I shall be weake as other men.

And then the Lordes of the Philistines brought her seuen wythes I were yet grene and neuer dyed, & she bound hym therewith. Notwithstandynge she had men lyenge in wayte with her in the chaubze. And she sayd vnto hym: the Philistines be vpon I Samson. And immediately he brake the cordes as a strynge of tow, (that is twyned) brake they, when it fealeth fier. And so his strength was not known.

And Dalila sayde vnto Samson: Se, I hast mocked me & tolde me lyes. Now therfoze tel me, wherwith I myghtest be bounde. He answered her: If they bynd me with new ropes that neuer were occupied, I shall be weake, and as another mā. Dalila therfoze toke new ropes, and bounde hym therewith, and sayd vnto him: the Philistines be vpon the Samson. And ther were lyes of wayte in the chamber, and he broke them from his armes, as they had bene but a thred. And Dalila sayde vnto Samson, bythou thou hast begyled me, and tolde me lyes: tell me, howe thou myghtest be bounde. He sayde vnto her: If thou plattedest the lockes of my head wth an heare lace. And he fastened them with a nape, and sayde vnto him: I Philistines be vpon the Samson. And he awaked out of his slepe, & plucked away the nape, that was in the plattinge wth heare lace. And she sayde vnto him agayne: How canst thou saye that I louest me, when thynne hearte is not with me? beholde, I haue mocked me this the tymes, & hast not tolde me, wherin thy great strength lyeth.

And as she laye vpon him with her booke continually verpyng of hym, his soule was encombyred euen vnto the deat. And she tolde her al his bert, & sayd vnto her: I neuer came aser vpon myne heed, for I haue bene an abstayner: (that is to saye continēt) to God, euen fro my mothers wombe: therfoze whan I am shauen, my strength will from me, & I shall ware weake, and be as all other men. And when Dalila sawe that he had tolde her al his heart, she sent and called for the lordes of the Philistines, sayēg: come by yet this once, for he hath shewed me all his hearte.

Then the lordes of the Philistines came vnto her, & brought I money in theyr handes. And she made hym slepe vpon her knee, & to laye his head downe in her lapper, & she shaued a man, & he dyd shauē of the seuen lockes of his head, & begāne to bere him, & his strength was gone fro him. And she sayde: the Philistines be vpon the Samson. And he awaked out of his slepe, & sayd: I will go out now as at other tymes befoze, & shake my self, & I will not. But the Lord was departed fro him. But the Philistines toke hym, and put out his eyes, & brought hym downe to Azath, and bounde him with two fetters of byss. And he dyd grynde in the prison house, but bet the beate of his head beganne to grow agayne after that he was shauen.

Then the lordes of the Philistines gathered them togeather, for to offer a solenne offrynge vnto Dagon theyr God, and to the people: for they sayde, oure God hath deliuered Samson oure enemye into oure handes. And when the people sawe hym, they mocked theyr God: for they sayde: oure God hath deliuered into oure handes oure enemye, & destroyer of oure countreye, whych was the nyne of vs. And when theyr derres were mēry, it fortuneth, that they sayd: send for Samson that he maye make vs laugh.

And they fet Samson out of the prison house, and he played befoze them, and they set hym betwene the pylers. And Samson sayd vnto the ladd that leed hym by þ hand: let me that I maye touche the pylers, that the house stand vpo, and that I maye leane to them. And the house was full of men and women. And there were all the lordes of the Philistines. And there were vpon the rouse a thre thousande men and wemen, that beheld whyle Samson played.

And Samson called vnto the Lozde, and sayde: O Lozde God, thyncke vpon me, and strengthen me, at thys tyme onely, O God that I maye be aduenged of the Philistines for my two eyes. And Samson caught the two middel pylers on which the house stode and on whych it was bozne vp, þ one in hys ryght hande, and the other in hys left, and sayde: my soule shall dye wyth the Philistines, and bowed them wyth all hys myght. And the house fel vpon the lordes and vpon all the people that were therein. And so the dead whych he slewe at hys death, were mo then they which he slewe in his lyfe. And the þis brethren & all þ house of his father came downe, and toke him vp, & brought him and buryed him betwene zarah & Estahol, in the buryinge place of Manoaþ his father. And he iudged Israel twenty yeaeres.

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

I Here was a mā in mount Ephraim named Micah, and he sayde vnto hys mother: the leuen hundred syluerlinges that were taken from the, aboute whych thou cursedst, & spakest it in myne eares. Behold, the syluer is wyth me, I toke it awaye. And hys mother sayde: blessed be þ my sonne, in þ Lozde. And when he had restozed the leuen hundred syluerlinges to his mother agayne, his mother sayde: I vowed the syluer vnto þ Lozde of myne hande for the my sonne: that þ shouldest make a grauen ymage and an ymage of metall. Now therfore, I wyll geue it the agayne. And when he restozed the moneye agayne vnto his mother, his mother toke two hundred syluerlinges, and gaue them to a goldsmith, whiche made therof a grauen ymage, and a ymage of metall, and it was in the house of Micah. And the man Micah had a temple of goddes, and made an Ephod and Theraphim. (That is to saye, a garment for the preste, and Idoles.) And sölled the hande of one of his sonnes which became hys preste. In those dayes ther was no king in Israel but euery man dyd that which was good in his owne eyes.

And there was a ponge mā out of Bethlehem Juda, of the kynred of Juda: whych ponge man was a Leuite, & soioarned ther. And the man departed oute of the ctyte of Bethlehem Juda, to go dwell wher he coulde fynde a couenient place. And he came to mount Ephraim, to the house of Micah as he iourneyed. And Micah sayd vnto him. Whence comest thou? The Leuite answered him. I am of Bethlehem Juda, & go to dwell where I maye fynde a place. (Whence I maye saye it to be for my profyte.) And Micah sayde agayne vnto hym: dwell with me, and be vnto me a father and a preste. And I wyll geue the ten syluerlinges by yeaer, two garmentes, and thy meate and dryncke.

And the Leuite was cōtent to dwell with the man and was vnto hym as one of hys owne sonnes. And Micah cōsecrated þ hāde of the Leuite, and the ponge mā became hys preste, and was in the house of Micah. Then sayd Micah: now I am sure, that the Lozde wyl be good vnto me, seing: I haue a Leuite to my preste.

¶ The. xviii. Chapter.

¶ The chyldren of Dan take the goddes and the preste of Micah awaye. They destroye Laish, and after byde it agayne.

In those dayes * there was no kynge in Israel. And in those dayes the tpybe of Dan sought the an enberitaunce to dwell in, * for vnto that tyme there fell none enberitaunce vnto them amonge the tpybe of Israel. * Job. xlii. b * Ios. xii. b

And the chyldre of Dan sent of their kynred fyue actyue mē in feates of warre out of theyr coastes, euen out of zarah and Estahol, to vewe the land and searche it out, and sayde vnto the: go, and searche out the lande which whā they came to mount Ephraim, euen to þ house of Micah, they lodged there. And when they were in the house of Micah, they knewe the voyce of þ pong man the Leuite: and when they turned in thither, they sayde vnto hym: who brought the hether? what makest thou in thys place? and what hast thou here? And he answered them: thus and thus dealeth Micah with me, and hath byred me, and I am become hys preste. And they sayde vnto hym agayne: A the counsell now of God, that we maye knowe, whether the waye whych we go, shalbe prosperous, or no. And the preste sayde vnto them go in peace, for the Lozde gydeth your waye whiche ye go.

Then the fyue men departed, and came to Laish, and sawe the people that were therein, howe they dwelt careles, after þ maner of Sydons, tyll, and without castynge of paretles: and that noman made any trouble in the lande, or vsurped any dominio, but were farre from the Sydons, and had no busynes wyth other men. And they came vnto theyr brethren to zarah & Estahol. And they brethren sayd vnto them: what haue ye done?

And they answered: Arple, that we maye C go vp agaynste them, * for we haue sene the lande: surely a very good one. And do ye speyll: be not slouthful to departe. But come to coquerre þe lande: * (it shalbe no labour.) If ye wyll go, ye shal come vnto a people that casteth no pavelles, & it is a very large countre: which God hath giuen into your handes. It is also a place, which doth lacke nothinge þe is in the worlde.

And there departed thence of the kynred of the Dannites, out of Zarahah and Esthaol, fyre hundred men appoynted wyth instruments of warre. And they wet vp, and pitched in Bariath Jarim which is in Iuda. Wherefore they called the place, the hoost of Dan, vnto this daye: and it is on the backsyde of Bariath Jarim. And they wet thence vnto mount Ephraim, & came to the house of Michah. Then answered þe fyue men that went to spyre out the countre of Laish, & sayde vnto their brethren: wot ye not þe there is in these houses an Ephod, Cheraphim, a grauen ymage, and an ymage of metall? Howe therefore consyde what ye haue to do.

And they turned thitherwarde and came to the house of þe young man the Leuite, euen vnto the house of Michah, and saluted hym peasably. And the fyre hundred men gyrded wyth weapons of warre, whych were of the chyldren of Dan, stode by þe enteringe of the gate. And the fyue men that wet to spyre out the lande, went in thither and toke the herued ymage, and the Ephod, Cheraphim, & the ymage of metall. And the preast stode in the enterynge of the gate with the fyre hundred men þe were armed vnto batayl. Whyle the other wente into Michahs house, and set the herued ymage the Ephod, Cheraphim: and the ymage of metall. Then sayd þe preast vnto the: what do ye? They answered hym: holde thy peace, laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth, and come with vs, to be our father & preaste. Is it better for þe to be a preast vnto the house of one man, the to be a preast vnto a trybe of kynred in Israel? And the preaste was glad and toke the Ephod, and Cheraphim, and the grauen ymage, & went with þe people. And they turned and departed, and put the chyldren, the castell and theyr other substauce before them.

And when they were a good waye from the house of Michah, the me that were in the houses, and in Michahs house, made an outcrye, and folowed after the chyldren of Dan, and called vnto the. And they turned theyr faces, and sayde vnto Michah: what ayleth the, þe thou makest an outcrye? And he sayde pe haue taken a waye my goddes whych I made, and also the preast, & go your wayes with the. And what haue I more? how then saye ye vnto me, what ayleth the? And the chyldren of Dan sayde vnto hym let not thy voyce be hearde amonge vs, lest any of our lowes runne vpon the, & thou loose thy self with the lyues of all thyne household. And so the chyldren of Dan went theyr waye.

And when Michah sawe that they were stronge for hym, he turned and wente backe vnto his house agayne.

And they toke the thynges which Michah had made, & the preast which he had, & came vnto Laish, euen vnto a people that were at rest & without mistrust, & smote them with the edge of the sword, & burnt the cytie with fyre. And ther was noman to helpe because Laish was farre from Sidon, & they had no medelung with any other mā. And the cytie stode in the valey that lyeth by Bethshalem. And they buyle the there a cytie, & dwelt therein. * And called it Dan, after the name of Dan theyr father which was boine vnto Israel. Howbeit, in very dede the name of cytie was Laish at the begynnynge.

And the chyldren of Dan set them vp the grauen ymage. And Jonathan the sonne of Gerson, the sonne of Manasses and his synners were the preastes in þe trybe of Dan vntill they were carped a waye out of the land captiue. And they set them vp the herued ymage which Michah made, all the while the house of God was in Silo.

¶ The. xix. Chapter.

¶ Of the Leuite, whose wyfe was bylawfully killed in Sidon.

It chaunced in those dayes, whyle there was no kynge in Israel, þe a certain Leuite sogedournynge on the syde of mount Ephraim, toke to wyfe a concubine out of Bethlehem Iuda: and his concubine played the whoze by him, and wente away from hym, vnto her fathers house to Bethlehem Iuda, and there continued foure monethes. And her husbände arose, and went after her, to speake frendly vnto her, euen byynge her home agayne, hauninge his lyf with hym, and a couple of asses.

And he brought hym vnto her fathers house, and when the father of the damoyselle sawe hym, he reioysed of his comynge. And his father in lawe the damoyselles father helpe hym. And the Leuite abode with hym foure dayes, and so they dyd eate and drynke, and lodged there.

The fourth daye when they arose for the moynynge, the man stode vp, to departe. And þe damoyselles father sayd vnto hym in lawe: confort thyne heart with a morsell of bread, and the go your waye. And he sate downe, & dyd eate and drynke with them together. And the damoyselles father sayd vnto the man: Be content I pray the, tarpe all nyght, and let thyne heart be comforted. And whyle the mā stode redy to departe, the father in lawe compelled hym to turne agayne and to tary all nyght there. And he rose vp early the fyfth day to departe, and the damoselles father sayd, comforte thynne herte: and they taryed vntyll after mydday. And they dyd eate both of them together.

C And when the man aroste to departe with his concubine and his lad, his father in law the damoselles father sayde vnto hym: beholde, the day goeth fast a way and draweth towarde euen, tary al nyght: at y least way tary this day here, that thynne herte may be mery. And to morowe get you early vpon your way, that thou mayest get the to thy frunt. Neuerthelater the man wold not tary but aroste and departed, and came as far as Jerus. (whiche is Jerusalem) and hys two asses laden, and hys concubynne and hys lad with him. And when they were fast by Jebus the daye was sore spent, and the ponge man sayd vnto hys master: come I pray the & let vs turne in, into this cytie of the Jebusites: & lodge all nyght there. His master answered him: We wyl not turne into a straung cytie that are not of the chyldren of Israel:

D We wyl go forth to Gibe. And he sayd vnto hys lad, go forthwarde, and we shall come to one of these places to lodge al night ether in Gibe or in Rama. And they went forthwarde vpon theyr way, and the sonne went downe vpon them, when they were faste by Gibe which belongeth to them of Ben Jamin. And they turned thitherwarde to go in, and lodge all nyght in Gibe. And when he came, he sat him downe in a streete of the cytie, for there was no man that toke them to lodgyng. And behold, there came an olde man from his worke, out of the felde at enē, which was also of mount Ephraim, & dwelt as a strainger in Gibe. But the men of the place were the chyldren of Jemini. And whē he had lyfte vp his eyes, he sawe a wayfaryng man in the streete of the cytie. And the olde man sayde: Whether goest thou? And whence comest thou? He answered hym: we come from Bethlehem Juda, towarde the hyde of mount Ephraim: from thence am I, and I went to Bethlehem Juda, & go nowe to the house of the Lozde. And there is no man that receyureth me to house. We haue strawe and yz ouender for our asses, & bread and wyne for me and thy handmayde, and for the lad that is with thy seruante, and we lacke nothyng.

F The olde man sayde: peace be with the, al that thou lackest shall thou fynde with me: only abyde not in the streete al nyght, and so be brought hym into hys house, and gaue fodder vnto hys asses. And they washed theyr feet, and dyd eate and dnyke. And as they were makinge theyr hertes mery, beholde, the men of the cytie which were wycheard, beset the house rounde about, and thrust at the doze, and spake to y man of the house, the olde man, sayeng: byngge forth the man that came into thynne house, that we maye knowe him.

And the man of the house, the olde man went out, and sayde vnto the, Oh, nape my byethē, do not so wickedly, sayng that this man is come into myne house: do not so vnmete a thyng. Behold, here is my daughter a mayden, and thys mans concubynne, them I wyl byng out nowe vnto you, and hūble them, and do with them what semeth you good: but vnto this man, do not so abhominable a thyng. But the men wold not herken to him. And the man toke his concubine, and brought her out vnto the, which knew her, and abused her, all the nyght, euen vnto the moynyng. And when the day began to spryng, they let her go.

And then came the woman in the daye. Syng of the day, and fel downe at the dooze of the mans house, where her lozde was, tyl it was daye. And her lozde aroste vp in the moynyng, and opened the dozes of the house and wente out to go his way. And behold, the woman, euen his concubine laye a longe befoze the doze of the house, and her handes stretched out vpon the thresholde. And he (thynking her to haue bene a slepe) sayde vnto her: vp and let vs begoyng. But she answered not. Thā the man (perceyving that she was dead) toke her vp vpon an Ass, and stode vp, and gat him vnto his owne home. And when he was come vnto his house, he toke a knyfe, & caught his concubynne, and deuided her with the bones into twelue peces, and sent her into al quarters of Israel. And all that sawe it sayd: there was no suche dede done or sence y chyldren of Israel came out of Egypt vnto this day, consyder the matter, take aduilement, and say your myndes.

The. xx. Chapter.

The battell of the Israelites agaynst the trybes of Ben Jamin by the Leuites whiche was hymen.

Then all the chyldren of Israel went out: and the congregaciō was gathered together as it had bene but one man, enē from Dan to Berseba, & vnto the lande of Gilead, vnto the Lozde in Mizpa, and there stode folke out of all quarters and of all the trybes of Israel, in the congregaciō of the people of God, foure hundred thousande sote men that dyd sweardes. And when the chyldren of Ben Jamin harde that the chyldren of Israel were gone vp to Mizpa, and had sayde. O ye chyldren of Israel, tel vs howe thys wickednes happened. And the Leuite, the womans husbāde that was slayne, answered and sayde, I came into Gibe that is in Ben Jamin with my concubine to lodge all nyght. And the men of Gibeon rose agaynste me, and beset the house rounde aboute vpon me by nyghte, and thoughte to haue slayne me: and my concubine haue they so forced, that she is dead. And I toke my concubine, and cutte her in peces: and sente her thowowe out all the landes of the inheritance of Israel. For they haue committed abhominacion and folly in Israel. Behold ye are all chyldren of Israel. Wondre thys matter, and geue your aduys in the case.

C v that

And al the people arose, as it had bene one man, sayeng, there shall not a man of vs go to his tent, neether turne into his house. But this shalbe it that we wyl do to Gibeon: We wyl go by by lotte agaynste it. And we wyl take ten men of the hundred thowowe out al the trybes of Israel, and an hundred of the thousande, and a thousande out of ten thousande, to set vnto the people to make that they may go agaynste Gibeon Ben Jamin, because of all the abhominacion, that they haue wrought in Israel. And so al the men of Israel gathered together agaynste the cytie, knyghte together, as it had bene but one man. And the trybes of Israel sent men thowowe al the trybe of Ben Jamin sayeng

* 20. 17. 18.

* What wyckednesse is thys that is happened amonge you? Howe therfore deliuer vs the men, those chyldren of Belial which are in Gibeon, that we may sleie them, and put a waie euill from Israel.

Neuerthelater, the chyldren of Ben Jamin wolde not herken vnto the voyce of theyr brethren the chyldren of Israel: but gathered the selues together out of the cyties vnto Gibeon, to come out and fight agaynste the chyldren of Israel. And the chyldren of Ben Jamin were nombred at that tyme, out of the cyties. xxvi. thousande men that dyewe swerdes, besyde the inhabitants of Gibeon, which were nombred seuen hundred cholen men. And amonge al these folke were seuen hundred left handed men, whicheuery one coulde sling stones at an hear byeadeth, and not myste. And the chyldren of Israel besyde Ben Jamin, were nombred foure hundred thousande men that dyewe swerdes, and were all men of warre.

And the chyldren of Israel arose, & went vp to Bethel, & asked counsell of God who shoulde begyn the battell agaynste the chyldren of Ben Jamin. And the Lorde sayde Juda shal begyn. And the chyldren of Israel stode vpearly and beseged Gibeon. And the men of Israel went out to battell agaynste Ben Jamin, and the men of Israel put them selues in aray to fight agaynste them, besyde Gibeon. And the chyldren of Ben Jamin came out of Gibeon, & destroyed of the Israelites that day. xxi. thousande men, and brought them to the earth.

And the folke of the chyldren of Israel plucked vp theyr hartes, & went to agayn, and made battell in the same place where they dyd the fyrst day. And the chyldren of Israel wente vp, and wepte before the Lorde euene, and asked of the Lorde, sayeng: And we go agayne to battell agaynste the chyldren of Ben Jamin our brethren. And the Lorde sayde: go vp agaynste them. And the chyldren of Israel came out agaynste the chyldren of Ben Jamin the seconde day. And the chyldren of Ben Jamin went agaynste them out of Gibeon, the seconde daye, and destroyed in the earth of the chyldren of Israel ouer agayne. xviii. thousande men that dyewe swerdes euery man of them.

Then the chyldren of Israel and all the people went vp and came vnto Bethel, and wepte and sat there before the Lorde, and fasted the same day vnto euene, & offered burnt offerynges and peaceofferynges before the Lorde. And the chyldren of Israel asked the Lorde: for there was the arch of the apoyment of god, in those dayes. And Phineas the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron waytyng vpon it at that tyme, sayde: Shall I get me vp to go out any more to battell agaynste the chyldren of Ben Jamin my brethren, or shall I cease? The Lorde sayde vnto him: For thou shalt saye: I will deliuer thee into your handes. And Israel set liers a wayte round about Gibeon. And the chyldren of Israel went vp agaynste the chyldren of Ben Jamin the thrid tyme, and put them selues in aray agaynste Gibeon, as they had done before. And the chyldren of Ben Jamin came out agaynste the people, and were drawe away from the cytie. And they began to smyte of the people dead (as twise before, by two hye wayes of which one goth vp to Bethel and the other to Gibeon thowowe the felde) vpon a thyrde men of Israel. And the chyldren of Ben Jamin sayde: They are fallen before vs, as at the fyrst. But the chyldren of Israel let vs slye and plucke them away from the cytie, vnto the hye wayes.

And all the men of Israel rose vp out of theyr place, and put them selues in aray at Baal Thamar. And lyke wyse the liers a wayte of Israel came forth out of the places, euene out of the medowes & were about Gibeon, & came agaynste Gibeon: ten thousand cholen men out of all Israel, and there was a soze battell. But the other wyl not that the great euill was so nye them. And the Lorde plagued Ben Jamin before Israel, & the chyldren of Israel destroyed of the Beniaminites the same day. xxv. thousande and an hundred men, that dyewe swerdes euery one of them. And when the chyldren of Ben Jamin saw that they were put to the worse the men of Israel gaue rounne to the Beniamites, because they trusted vnto the lapers in wayte which they had layd besyde Gibeā. And the lapers in wayte hastied, and ranne vpon Gibeā, and went and smote all the cytie with the edge of the swearde. And an apomynt had the men of Israel fro the lapers in wayte that they shoulde make a greates smoke ryle vpout of the cytie. And when the men of Israel fled in the battell: Ben Jamin began to smyte deade of the chyldzen of Israel, aboute a thysy personnes, and sayde: the other are put to the worle befoze vs, as in the fyrst battell. But when there began to aryle out of the cytie a pylle of smoke, the Beniamites loked backe: and beholde, the smokyng of the hole cytie began to ascende vp to heauen.

When the men of Israel also turned agayne, the men of Ben Jamin were abashed, for they sawe that euell apyched the. And therfoze they turned theyr backes befoze the men of Israel vnto the waye that leadeth to the wyldernesse, but the men of warre ouertoke the. And besyde that, they which came out of the cytie, destroyed them in the myde of them. And thus they compassed the Beniamites aboute, and chased them to Menuba, and ouer anne the to Gibeā on the east syde: and there were slaine of Ben Jamin, xviii. thousande, whiche were all men of warre. And they turned and fled to the wyldernes warde, and vnto the rocke of Rymmon. And the other slue by the way of the rest of them, fyue thousande men, and spyked vnto them, vntyl they came to Gibeā, and slue two thousande men of them. So that al that were slayne that same day of Ben Jamin were. xxv. thousande men that dyue sweardes, whiche were all men of warre: onely. vi. hundred men turned and fled to the wyldernes, vnto the Roche of Rymmon, and abode there. iiii. monethes. And the men of Israel turned backe agayn vnto the chyldzen of Ben Jamin, and smote them with the edge of the swearde in the cyties, both man and beaste and all that came to hande, and set on fyre all the cyties that they coulde come by.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The inhabytours of Gilead are utterly destroyed.

And every man of Israel sware in Mizpa, sayeng: ther shal none of vs geue hyr daughter vnto any of Ben Jamin to wyfe. And the people came to Bethel and abode there tyll euen befoze God, and lyste by theyr voyces, and wepte soze, and sayde. O Lorde God of Israel, why is thys chastyced in Israel, that there shoulde be thys daye one trybe lackynge in Israell? And on the morowe the people rose vp betyme, & made there an aultare, and offered burnt offerynges and peaceofferynge.

And the chyldzen of Israel asked, who are they among al the tribes of Israel, that came not vp with the cōgregation vnto the Lorde: for they had made a greates othe concerning him that came not vp to the Lorde to Mizpa, sayeng: he shal surely dye. And the chyldzen of Israel had pytie on Ben Jamin theyr byerthen, and sayde: there is one tribe cut of from Israel this day: what shal we do vnto the remnant of them, that they maye haue wyues: we haue sworne by the Lorde, that we wyll not geue them of our daughters to wyues. And they sayde: Is there any of the trybes of Israel, that came not vp to Mizpa to the Lorde? And behold, there came none of the enhabytours of Jabes Gilead vnto the hooste and congregacyon. For the people were vewed: and beholde: there were none of the enhabytours of Jabes Gilead there. And they sent thither a multitude, euen. xii. thousande men of the strongest of them, and commaunded them, sayeng: go and smyte the enhabytours of Jabes Gilead with the edge of the swearde, both women and chyldzen. * And this is it * See xxxi. c. that ye shall do: utterly destroy all the males and al the wemen that haue lye by men. And they founde amonge the enhabytours of Jabes Gilead foure hundred damoselles, virgyns, that had knowen no man, by lyeing with any male. And they brought them vn to the hoost to Silo, whiche is in the lande of Canaan.

And the hole congregacion sent and spake with the chyldzen of Ben Jamin that were in the Roche of Rymmon, and called peaceably vnto them: and Ben Jamin came agayne at that time, and they gaue them wyues whiche they had saued alnye of the wemen of Jabes Gilead. But they sufficed the not. And the people had compassyon on Ben Jamin, because that God had made a gappe in the trybes of Israel. And then the elders of the congregacyon, sayde: what shal we do to the remnant of them, to get them wyues, seynge all the wyues of Ben Jamin are destroyed? And they sayde: there muste be an enheritaunce for them that be escaped of Ben Jamin, that a trybe be not destroyed out of Israel: howbeit, we may not geue them wyues of oure daughters. For the chyldzen of Israel had sworne, sayeng: cursed be he, that geueth a wyfe to Ben Jamin.

Then they sayde: beholde, there is a frak of the Lorde yearly in Silo, which is on the northsyde of Bethel, and on the east syde of the way the way that goeth from Bethel to Sichem and south from Libanon. Therfore they commended the child of Ben Jamin, saying: go and lye in waye in the vynyardes. And when ye se that the daughters of Silo come out to daunce in a rowe, then come ye out of the vynyardes, and catche you euery man a wyfe of the daughters of Ben Jamin. And when they fathers or brethren come vnto vs to complayne, we wyll saye vnto them: haue pittie on vs for they sakes, because we reserved not to eche man hys wyfe in tyme of warre. Neether haue ye geue vnto them, that ye shulde synne at thys tyme.

And the chyldren of Ben Jamin dyd euen so: and toke them wyues accordynge to the nombre of them that daunced, whom they caught. And they went, and returned vnto theyr inheritaunce, and repayed the cyties and dwelte in them.

And the child of Israel departed thence at that tyme, and wente euery man to hys tribe, and to his kynred, and went out from thence euery man to his inheritaunce. * In those dayes there was no kynge in Israel: but euery man dyd that which seemed eyght in his awne eyes.

The booke of Ruth

The fyrst Chapter.

Elimelec goeth with his wyfe and chyldren into the lande of Moab.

that is (in the dayes of a certain Judge) When the Iudges Iudged there fell a darth in the land, and a certain man of Bethlehem Juda went for to sojourne in the countrey of Moab: he and his wyfe, and his two sonnes. The name of the man was Elimelec, and the name of his wyfe, Naomi and the names of his two sonnes were, Mahlon and Chilion, and they were Ephraimites, out of Bethlehem Juda. And when they came into the lande of Moab, they continued there. And Elimelec Naomies husbände dyed, and he remayned with her two sonnes whiche toke them wyues of the naцыons of the Moabites: the ones name was Orpha, and the others Ruth. And they dwelled there about a ten yere. And Mahlon and Chilion dyed also euen borthe of them, and the woman was left desolate of her two sonnes and of her husbände. Then stode she vp with her daughters in lawe, and returned from the countrey of Moab: for she had harde say in the countrey of Moab, howe the Lord had visited his people, and geue them bread. Therfore she departed out of that place wher she was, and her two daughters with her. And they went on theyr way to returne into the lande of Juda. And Naomi sayde vnto her two daughters in lawe: go & returne eche of you vnto your mothers house: and the Lord deale as kyndly with you, as ye haue dealt with the deade, and with me. And the Lord geue you, that you may rest, cyther of you in the house of her husbände. And when she kyssed them, they lye vp theyr voyce, and wepte, and sayde vnto her: we wyl go with the vnto thy folke. And Naomi sayde: turne agayne my daughters: for what cause wyll you go with me? Are there any mo chyldren in my wombe, to be your husbandes? Turne agayne my daughters, and go: for I am to olde to haue an husbände. And if I sayd, I haue hope, if I take a man also thys nyght: yet and thought I had alreedy borne sonnes, wolde ye tary after them, tyll they were of age? or wolde ye let them so longe refrayne from takynge of wyues? Not so my daughters: for it greeueth me muche for your sakes, that the hande of the Lord is gone out agaynst me.

And they lye vp theyr voyces, and turne agayne, and Orpha kyssed her mother in lawe, but Ruth a bode styl by her. And Naomi sayd: se, thy syster in lawe is gone backe agayne vnto her people and vnto her goddes: returne thou after her. And Ruth answered entreate me not to leaue the, and to returne from after the: for whether I go, I wyll go also, and where thou dwellest, there I wyl dwel: thy people shalbe my people, and thy god my god. Where thou dyest there wyl I dye, and there wyl I be buryed. The Lord do so and so to me, if ought but death onely departe the and me asunder.

When she sawe that she was stedfastly mynded to go with her, she lest speaking vnto her. And so they went both, vntill they came to Bethlehem. And when they were come to Bethlehem, it was nopsed of the shammal the cytie, and the women sayd: is not this Naomi? And she answered them: call me not Naomi, (that is to saye, betwixt full) but call me Mara, (that is to saye, bytter.) for the Almighty hath made me very bytter. I went out full, and the Lord hath brought me home agayne empty. Why then call ye me Naomi? For the Lord hath humbled me, & the Almighty hath brought me vnto aduersity.

And she dwelled there with her daughter in lawe Ruth.

Naomi to Ruth the Moabitess her daughter in lawe returned out of the countrey of Moab, and came to Bethlehem, in the beginning of barley harvest.

The. ii. Chapter.

And Naomi gathered coine in the felde of Booz.

AND Naomi husband had a kynsman of strength and might (which was of the kynred of Elimelech) named Booz. And Ruth the Moabitess sayde vnto Naomi: let me go to the felde, and gather eares of coine. ^(suche as the reapers leave) after any man in whose syght, I fynde grace. And she sayde vnto her: go my daughter. And she went & came to the felde, and gathered after the reapers, & her chaunce was, that the same felde perteyned vnto Booz, whiche was of the kynred of Elimelech. And beholde, Booz came from Bethlehem, and sayde vnto the reapers: the Lorde be with you. And they answered hym: the Lorde blesse the. Then sayd Booz vnto his yong man that stode by the reapers. Whose damosell is this? And the yonge man that stode by the reapers answered, and sayde: it is the Moabitess damosell, that came with Naomi out of the countrey of Moab, and she sayde vnto vs: Oh let me lease and gather after the reapers, the eares that remaine: and so she came, and hath continued euen from the mornynge vnto now, saue that she tarped a lytle in the house.

Then sayde Booz vnto Ruth: hearest thou my daughter: go to no nother felde to gather, neyther go from hence: but abyde here by my maydens. Let thynne eyes be on the felde that they may reape, and go thou after the maydens. haue I not charged the yonge men, that they shall do the no hurte? Moreover, when thou arte a thyrtie, go vnto the vessels, and drynke of that which the laddes haue drawn. Then she fell on her face and bowed her selfe to the grounde, and sayde vnto him: howe is it? I haue founde grace in thynne eyes, and that thou shouldest knowe me, sayeng I am an aliaunt.

AND Booz answered and sayde vnto her: al is tolde & shewed me, that thou hast done vnto thy mother in lawe, sence the death of thynne husband, howe thou hast lefte thy father and thy mother, and land where thou wast borne, & art come vnto a nation which thou knewest not in tyme passed. The Lord quyte thy worke, and a full rewarde be given the of the Lorde God of Israell, vnder whose wynges thou art come to abyde. The she sayde: let me fynde fauour in thy syghte my lord, thou that hast comforted me, and spoken hartely vnto thy mayde, whiche yet am not lyke vnto one of thy maydes. Booz sayde vnto her agayne: in tyme of refection come thou hither, and eate of the bread, and dryp thy soppe in the vineger. And she satte downe by the reapers, & he reached her ^{* Jo. 13. v. 2.} parched coine: of the whiche she dyd eate, and was sufficed, and lefte parte. And when she was rylen vp to gather, Booz commaunded his yonge men, sayeng: let her gather euen among the heapes, and forbyd her not. And leaue her some of the sheues for the nonce and let it lye, & she may gather it vp, ^{on (with out shame)} and rebuke her not. And so she gathered in the felde, vntill euen, and threshed that she had gathered, & it was in measure vpon an Ephah ^(that is thre bushels) of barley. ^{on} And she toke it vp, and went into the city: ^D and whā her mother in lawe had sene what she had gathered, she plucked out also, and gaue to her that she had reserved, when she had eaten ynough. And her mother in lawe sayd vnto her: where hast thou gathered to day? and where wroughtest thou? blessed be he, that knowe the. And she shewed her mother in lawe howe she had wrought with him and sayde: the mannes name with whom I wrought to day is Booz. And Naomi sayd vnto her daughter in lawe: blessed be he of the Lorde, for he ceaseth not to do ^{* Job. 1. 2.} good to the lyupng and to the deade. And Naomi sayd agayne vnto her: the man is nye vnto vs, & of our nexte kynne. And Ruth & Moabitess sayd: he sayd vnto me also. Thou shalt be with my yonge men, vntill they haue ended all my harvest: And Naomi answered vnto Ruth her daughter in lawe: it is beste my daughter that I go out with hys maydens, that they fall not vpo the in any other felde. And so she kept her by the maydens of Booz, to gather, vnto the ende of barley harvest, and of wheate harvest also: & dwelt with her mother in lawe.

The. iii. Chapter.

And Ruth gleaneth at Boozs feet, and is knowne his kynsman.

THEN Naomi her mother in lawe sayd vnto her: my daughter, shall I not seke reaste for the, that thou mayst prosper? And is not Booz our kynsman, with whose maydens thou wast? Beholde, he denoweth barley to nyght in the threshing floure: walke thy selfe therfore, and anoynt the, and put thy rayment vpon the, and get the downe to the barne. But let not a man knowe of the, vntill he haue leaste eatyng and drynkyng. And when he goeth to sleape, marke the place where he layeth hym downe, and then go and lyfte vp the clothes, that are on hys fete, and laye the downe there, and so shall he tell the what thou shalt do. And she answered her: al that thou bydest me, I wyl do. And so she went downe vnto the barne, and dyd accordynge to all that her mother in lawe bade her. And when Booz had eaten & dronchen, and made made him mercy, & was gone in, to lye down besyde the heape of coine, she came softly, & lyfte vp the clothes of his fete, and layd her downe. And at mydnyght the man was a frayde and groped. And beholde: a woman laye at his fete. And he sayd: what art thou? she answered: I am Ruth thyne handmayde spreade thy wynges ouer thyne handmayde, for thou art the nexte of the kynne. He sayd: blessed be thou in the Lord my daughter, for thou hast shewed moze goodnes in the later ende, then at the begynning, in as muche as thou folowedest not yong me, whether they were poze or ryche. And now my daughter feare not, I wyll do the all that thou re-querest, for all the cytie of my people dothe knowe, that thou arte a woman of vertue.

And it is true that I am of thy next kynne howbeit, there is one nyer thā I. Carry this nyght. And when moornyng is come, if he wyll mary the, it is good, so let him do. But and if he wyll not haue the, as sure as the Lorde lyueth I wyll haue the: lye styll vntyll the moornyng. And so she lay at his fete vntyll the moornyng. And she arose vp befoze one coude knowe another. And he sayd: let no man knowe, that there came any womā into the barne. And he sayde agayne byng the mantell y thou hast vpon the, and holde it vp. And whan she helde it vp, he mette in syxe measures of barley, and layde it on her.
And she gat her into the citie: and whan she came into her mother in lawe, she sayd how is it with the my daughter? And she tolde her all that the man had done to her. And sayde also: these syxe measures of Barley gaue he me, and sayde: thou shalt not come empty vnto thy mother in lawe. Thā sayd she my daughter, syt styll, vntyll thou knowe howe the matter wyll chaunce. For the man wyll not be in rest, vntyll he haue synysshed the thyng this same day.

¶ The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ Booz taketh Ruth to wyfe, of whom he begat Obed.

Then went Booz vnto the gate and sat him downe there: and beholde, the kynsmā of which Booz spake, cam by. Vnto whō, he sayde: come and syt downe here, and called hym by hys name. And he turned in, and sat down. And he toke ten me of the elders of the cytie, and sayd: syt ye downe here. And they sat down.
And he sayde vnto the kynsmā: Naomi that is come agayne out of the countrey of Moab * wyl sel a parcel of land, which was our brother Emimelees. And I thought to do the to mete, and byd the bye it befoze the enhabytours & elders of my people. If thou be disposed to redeme it, do: but and if thou wylte not pouerchale it, then tell me, that I may knowe. For there is none to chalenge it, saue thou, and I nexte the. And he answered, I wyll pouerchale it.

Then sayde Booz, what day thou wylt the felde of the hande of Naomi, thou mayst take also Ruth the Moabite the * wyfe of the deade, to stee by the name of the deade vpon his enheritaunce. The kynsmā answered: I cannot pouerchale it, for many of myne owne enheritaunce: take thou ryght to the, for I cannot pouerchale it.
Thys was the maner of olde tyme in concernyng pouerches and chaungyng, in to stablyshe all thyng: y a man must of his woore, and geue it his neyghbour, as this was a sure wytnesse in Israel.

Therfoze the kynsmā sayde to Booz: Bye it thou: and so byue of hys woore. Booz sayd vnto the elders and vnto all the people: ye are wytnesses thys daye, that I haue bought all that was Emimeles, and all that was Chillions and Mahlons, of the hande of Naomi. And mozeouer, Ruth the Moabite the wyfe of Mahlon, haue I purchased to be my wyfe, to stee by the name of the deade vpon his enheritaunce, and that this name be not put out from amonge his breythren, and from the gate of his place:
are wytnesses this daye.

And all the people that were in the gate, and the elders sayde: we are wytnesses. The Lorde make the woman that is come in thyne house, lyke * Rabel and Lea, which twayne byd buylde the house of Israel: in thou also valeauntly in Ephrata, and be mouse in Bethlehem. Thy house be lyke house of Pharez * whom Chamar bare to Juda, euen of the seide whiche the Lorde shall geue the of this yonge woman.

And so Booz toke Ruth, and she was wyfe. And whan he wente in vnto her, the Lorde gaue, that she conceived, and bare sonne. And the women sayde vnto Naomi: blessed be the Lorde, the which hath not let the without a kynsmā, to haue a name in Israel, & that shall byng thy lyfte agayne, and cheryshe thine olde age. For thy bouter in lawe which loueth the, hath bouter to him: & she is better to the thā seven daughters. And Naomi toke the chyld, & layd it in lappe, and became nourle vnto it. And her neyghbours gaue it a name, sayeng: this is a chyld bozne to Naomi, & called it Obed.
The same is the father of Isai, the father of Dauid. These are the generations of Pharez: Pharez begat Hezron: Hezron begat Ram, Ram begat Aminadab, Aminadab begat Nahlon, Nahlon begat Salmon.
Salmon begat Booz, Booz begat Obed.
Obed begat Isai, Isai begat Dauid.

The fyfth Chapter.

Elkana bath. ii. wyues, Hanna and Jherenna.

Here was a man of one of the two Ramathes (of þe kindred of Joseph,
of mount Ephraim) named *Elkana the sone
of Jeroham
the sonne of Elipha, the

sonne of Thohu, the sone of Zuph, an Ephra-mite: whiche had two wyues, the one called Hanna, and the other Jherenna. And Jhenenna had chyldren, but Hanna had none.

*And the sayde man went vp out of his cytye every feastfull daye, to praye and to offere vnto þe Lozde of hostes in Silo, where were the two sonnes of Eli: Hophny and Phine-has the Lozdes prestes. And it fel on a solemne day, that Elkana offered, and gaue to Jherenna his wyfe and to all her sonnes and daughters porcions. But vnto Hanna he gaue a porcion with a heuy chere, for he loued Hanna, and the Lozde had made her barren. And her enemy (Jherenna) vexed her soze continually, to moue her, because the Lozde had made her barren. And so dyd she yeare by yeare as ofte as she went vp to the house of the Lozde. And so chafed her, which wepte, and dyd not eate. Thā sayd Elkana her husband to her: Hanna, why wepest thou?
and why eatest thou not? and why is thyne herte troubled? am not I better to the, then ten sonnes? So Hanna rose vp after that they had eaten and dronke in Silo. And Eli the preste satte vpon a stole by one of the syde postes of the temple of the Lozde.
And she was troubled in her mynd, & prayed vnto the Lozde, and wepte soze, and vowed a vowe, and sayd: O Lozde of hostes, if thou wylt loke on the trouble of thyne handmayd and remembre me, & not forget thyne handmayde, but geue vnto thyne handmayde a man chyld: I wyl geue him vnto the Lozde all the dayes of his lyfe, *and there shall no raiser come vpon his heade. And as she continued prayeng befoze the Lozde, it fortuned that Eli marked her mouthe. For Hanna spake in her herte, and her lippes dyd but moue onely, but her voyce was not harde: and therfore Eli thought she had bene dronken, and Eli sayde vnto her: Howe longe wylt thou be dronken? put away from the the wyne that þ hast. Hanna answered and sayde: not so my Lozde, I am a woman of a sorrowful herte: I haue dronke neither wyne nor stroge dryncke, but haue *powzed out my soule befoze the Lozde. Count not thine handmayd to be lyke a daughter of Belial, for oute of þe aboundaunce of my heuyenes & grefe, haue I spoken hyther to.

Eli answered her agayne: and sayd, go in peace: the God of Israel graunt the thy pe-ticion, that thou haste asked of hym. She sayde: let thyne handmayde fynde grace in thy syght. And so the womā went her way, and dyd eate, and loked no moze so sad. And they rose vpearly, and worshypped befoze the Lozde, and then returned, and came to the house to Ramath. And whā Elkana knewe Hanna his wyfe, the Lozde remembred her: for in processe of tyme it came to passe, that she conceyued, and bare a sonne, & called his name Samuel (sayeng:) because I haue asked hym of the Lozde. And Elkana and al his house wente vp to offer vnto the Lozde, the offering due for the feaste, and al so his vowe: Neuer theles, Hanna went not vp but sayde vnto her husband: I wyl tary vntyll the lad be weyned, and then I wyl bryng hym that he maye appeare befoze the Lozde, and there abyde for euer. Elkana her husband answered her: do what semeth the best: tary at home, vntyll thou hast weined him, and I beseeche the Lozde, to make good hys sayeng. And so the woman abode, and gaue her sone sucke vntyll she weyned him.
And when she had weined him she soke him with her, with thre bullockes and an Ephra-of flour, and a bottle of wyne, and broughe him vnto the house of þe Lozde in Silo, and the child was yet but redye of age. And they slew a bullocke, and broughe in þe lad to Eli, and she sayd: Oh my Lozde: as truly as thy soule liueth my Lozde, I am the womā that stode befoze the here prayeng vnto þe Lozde.
For thys lad I prayed, and the Lozde hath geuen me my desyre, which I asked of hym: and therfore I haue geuen hym vnto the Lozde, as longe as he is mete for the Lozde.
And they worshypped the Lozde there.

The ii. Chapter.

The songe of Hanna. The offering of the sonne of Eli.

Ad Hanna prayed and sayde: myne herte reioyseth in the Lord, and mine boine is exalted in the Lord. My mouth is wyde open ouer myne enemyes, for I reioyce in thy saluacyō. There is none so holy as the Lord, for without the, is no thyng. Neyther is there any of strength as is our God. Talke not to muche proude-ly let olde thynges depart out of your mouthes for the Lord is a God of knowledge, and his purposes come to passe. The bowe with the myghtye men are broken: and they that were weake, haue gyde them selues with strength. They that were full, haue hyed out them selues for vzeade, and they that were hungry, craue so to be, tyll the baren hath boine leuen: & the Lord had many chyldren, is wared feble. * The Lord killeth, and maketh alpye: byngeth downe to þ graue and fetcheth vp agayne. The Lord maketh poze, and maketh ryche: byngeth lowe, and heueth vp on hye. * He repleth vp the poze out of the duste, and lyfseth vp the beggar from the donghyll: to set them among prin-ces, and to enheret them with the seate of glory. For the pylers of the earth are the Lordes, and he hath set the rounde world vpon the. He wyll kepe the fete of his sayn-tes, & the wicked shall kepe sylence in darck-nesse, and * in his owne myght shall no man be stronge. The Lordes aduersaries shall be destroyed of him: and out of heauen shall he thunder vpon euery one of them. The Lord shall iudge the endes of the world, and shall gyue myght vnto his kynge, and exalte the boine of his annoynted. And Elhana went to Ramath to hys house, & the lad dyd my- nister vnto the Lord before Eli the preast.

But the sonnes of Eli were chyldren of Belial, and knewe not the Lord. And the preastes made a lawe for the people, & whē- soeuer any man offered any offeryng, & preas- tes lad came, whyle þ fleshe was a sethyng and a fleshoke with thye tette in his hande, and thurst it into the panne: kettie, caldzen or porre. And all that þ fleshe boke brought vp, that the preaste toke away. And so they dyd vnto all the Israelites, that came thither to Silo. Pea, and therto, before they burnt the fatte, the preastes lad came and sayde to þ man that offered: geue fleshe that I maye dresse it for the Preaste, for he wyll not haue sodden fleshe of the, but rawe. And if any man sayde vnto hym: let them burne the fat accordyng to the day, and then take as muche as thyne herte despyeth. The lad wolde answer him, yee, thou shalt geue it me now: and if thou wilt not, I wyll take it with violence. And the synne of the pong men was very greates before the Lord. For men abhoyred the offeryng of the Lord.

But the chyld Samuel ministered be- fore the Lord, & gyded aboute with an Ephod. Moreover, hys mother made hym a lytle coate, and brought it to him from yere to yere, when she came vp with her husband to offer the offeryng in þ solempne feaste: and Eli blessed Elhana and hys wyfe, and sayde: the Lord geue the seede of thys man, for the petycon that she asked of the Lord. And they wente vnto theyr home. And the Lord visited Hanna, so that she conceived and bare thye sones, and thye daughters. And the chyld Samuel grew before the Lord.

Eli was very olde, and berde all that the sonnes dyd vnto all Israel, and howe they lay with the women that were at the doore of the Tabernacle of wyntelle, and he said vnto them: why do ye suche thynges? for of all these people I heare euill report of you. Oh, nape my sonnes: for it is no good reposte that I hear, howe that ye make the Lordes people to trespasse. If one man agaynst another, daylemen may be iudged: but if a man synne agaynst the Lord, who wyll be his dayleman? Notwithstanding, they herkened not vnto the voyce of theyr father, because the Lord wolde slepe them. The chyld Samuel profyted * and grew, and was in fauour both with the Lord, and also with men.

And there came a man of God vnto Eli, and sayd vnto him: thus sayeth the Lord, I apere vnto the house of thy father, whē they were in Egypt subiecte vnto the raos house: And I chose thy father out of the trybes of Israel to be my Preast, & to offre vpon myne aultare, & to burne incense * and to weare an Ephod before me. I gaue vnto the house of thy father all the burnt offerynges of the chyldren of Israel. Wherfore treade ye downe my sacrifice, & myne offerynge, whiche I commaunded to be made in the tabernacle, and honoured the chyldren aboute me, to make pour seluages of the fynte frutes of all the offerynges of Israel my people? Wherfore, the Lord God of Israell sayeth: I sayde, that the house & the house of thy father shuld be before me for ever. But nowe the Lord sayeth: that be farre from me: for they forsake my house, & I wyll worshyppe, and they despyle me, shall come to shame. Behold, the dayes come, & I wyll cut off thyne house, and the arme of thy fathers house shall not be an elder in thine house. And I wyll walte se thine enemy in þ tabernacle of the Lord, & in al the wealth whiche I gaue Israel, & there shall not be an enemy thine house for ever. Nevertheless, I wyll not destroye all the males that come out fro myne aultare. But to make them to be base, and to make thye herte melt.

they shal be multiplied in thyne house * shall dye of they be men.

And this shal be a sygne vnto þe, that shal come vpon the two sonnes * Hophny & Phinehas: euen in one daye they shall dye both.
And I wyll stee me by a faythful preast, þe shall do accordyng to my herte and minde.
And I wyll buyde him a sure house. And he shall walke before myne anoynted for euer.
And they þe are left in thine house, shal come and crouch to him for a lytle peece of spuer & a cake of bread, & shall saye: put me (I praye
the) in one office or other amonge þe priestes, that I maye eate a morsell of bread.

The. lii. Chapter.

The Lozde calleth Samuel thye tymes.

And þe childe Samuel ministred vnto the Lozde before Eli: and the word of the Lozde was precious in those da-yes, neither was ther any open viscion. And it chauned at that tyme, that Eli laye in hys place, & his eyes beganne to waxe dymme þe he coude not se. And per the lampe of God went out, Samuel layd him downe to slepe in the temple of the Lozde, wher the arke of God was. And the Lozde called Samuel, & he sayd, here I am, & he ran vnto Eli, & said: here am I, for thou calledst me. And he said: I called the not: go agayne, and slepe. And he went, and layd him downe to slepe. And the Lozde called once agayne: Samuel, and Samuel arose and went to Eli, and sayd: I am here, for thou bydest call me. And he answered: I called the not my sonne. So agayne & take thy rest: Samuel knewe not yet the Lozde, neither was the word of the Lozde yet opened vnto hym. And the Lozde went to, & called Samuel þe thyrde tyme. And he arose, and went to Eli, and sayde: I am here for þe hast called me. And Eli perceaued that the Lozde had called the chylde. Therfore, Eli sayd vnto Samuel: go, and lye downe: and if he call agayne, then saye: speake on Loz-de, for thy seruante heareth. So Samuel went, & layde hym downe in hys place. And the Lozde cam, and stode, & called as before, Samuel Samuel. Samuel answered: speake on for thy seruante heareth. And the Lozde sayd to Samuel: behold, I wyll do a thinge in Israel, that both the eares of as many as heareth it, shall tynge. In that daye I wyl calle vpon agayne Eli, all thynges whych I haue spoken concernyng hys house fro the beginnyng to the endyng. I haue tolde hym that I wyl iudge his house for euer. For þe wykednes whych he knoweth. For when þe people cursed hys sonnes for the same wykednes, he hath not corrected the. And therfore, I haue swozne vnto the house of Eli, þe wykednesse of Elies house, shall not be purged with sacrifice nor offeryng for euer.
Samuel laye tyl the morninge, and opened the doores of the house of the Lozde.

And Samuel feared to shewe Eli the vy-sion. Then Eli called Samuel, & sayd: Samuel my sonne. And he answered: here I am.
He sayd: what is that the Lozde hath layde vnto the? I praye the hyde it not from me.
* God do so, and so to the, if thou hyde any thyng from me, of all that he sayde vnto the.
And Samuel tolde hym euerye whytt, and hyd nothyng from hym. And he sayde: it is the Lozde, let him do what semeth him best.

And Samuel grewe, and the Lozde was with hym, & left none of hys wordes unper-formed. And al Israel from Dan to Berla-be wyfte that faythfull Samuel was made the Lozdes prophete. And the Lozde appered agayne in Silo: for þe Lozde opened him selte to Samuel in Silo, thowow the word of the Lozde.

The. liii. Chapter.

The arke of the Lozde is takn. Eli & his chylde dye.

And Samuel spake vnto all Israel.
(And it is fortuneth that in those dayes the Philis-tynes came together to fyghe.) And Israel went out agaynst þe Philistynes to battayle and pytched beside the helpe stone. And the Philistynes pytched in Aphek. And put the felues in araye agaynst Israel. And when they loyned the battell, Israel was put to þe wozls before the Philistynes. And the Philistynes slue in araye alonge by the feldes, about a foure thousand men.

And when þe people were come into theyr tentres, the elders of Israel sayde: wherfore hath the Lozde caste vs downe this daye before the Philistynes: let vs fetch the arke of the appoyntment of the Lozde oute of Silo vnto vs, that when it cometh amonge vs, it maye saue vs, out of the hand of our enemy.
And so þe people sent to Silo, & fet fro thens the arke of the appoyntment of þe Lozde of hostes, whych dwelleth betwene þe cherubyns.
And there were the two sonnes of Eli, ho-phi and Phinehas w the arke of the appointment of God. And it fortuneth, that when the ark of the appoyntment of the Lozde came into the hooft, al Israel shouted a myghtye shoute, so that the earth rangge agayne.

And when þe Philistynes herde the noyse of the shoute, they sayd: what meaneth the shoute of this myghty shoute in þe hooft of the Ebrynes? And they vnderstode, how that the ark of the Lozde was come into the hooft.
And the Philistynes were afrayed, & sayde: God is come into the hooft. And they sayde agayne: Wo vnto vs, for it was neuer so before this: Wo vnto vs, who shal deliuer vs out of the hande of these myghtye Goddes? these are þe Goddes þe synners & Egyptians w so many plagis in þe wyldernes. Be strange and quite poure felues lyke men, O ye Philistynes, that ye be no seruantes vnto the Ebrynes

*Judg. xiii. a Ephraim, as they have bene to you. Be of a manly courage therfore & fyght. And the Philistines fought, & Israel was put to þe worse and fled every man into his tente. And there was an exceeding great slaughter, for there were ouerthrowen of Israel. xxx. M. foremē. And þe arke of God was taken, & þe two sonnes of Eli, *Hophni, & Phinehes were dead. And there ran a man of Ben Jamin oute of the araye, & came to Silo þe same dape with his clothes rent & earth vpon his head. And when he came, Eli sate vpon a stole, & looked towarde the waye: for his heart feared for the arke of God. And when the man came into the cytie, and tolde it, all the cytie cryed.

*1. Reg. ii. 8

*1. Reg. iii. 8

And whē Eli herde the nyste of þe crying he sayd: What meaneth this nyste of the rumoze? And þe man came in hastily, and tolde Eli. Eli was. xcviij. yere olde, and *hys fyght fayled hym þe coulde not se. And the man sayd vnto Eli: I am he þe came out of þe araye, & fled this dape out of þe boost. And he sayde: what thyng is fortunēd my sonne? The messenger answered, & sayde. Israel is fled before þe Philistines, & there is a greates slaughter chaunled amonge þe people, and thy two sonnes, Hophni & Phinehes are dead, & the arke of God is taken. And it fortunēd þe whan he made mencyon of the arke of God, Eli fell from of his stole backward vnto the threshold of the gate, and hys necke brake, and he dyed: for he was an oldeman and hewe, and iudged Israel fourtye yeres.

And his daughter in law Phinehes wyfe was wchylde & nye þe byrthe. And when she hearde þe tydynge that þe arke of God was takē, and þe father in lawe, & her husbāde were dead, she bowed her selfe, and traueled, for her paynes came vpon her. And about þe tyme of her death, the women þe stode aboute her, sayd vnto her: feare not, for þe hast bozne a sonne: but she answered not, nor regarded it. And she named the childe *Achabod, sayinge: The gloze is departed fro Israel. Because the arke of God was taken, & because of her father in lawe and her husbāde. And she sayde agayne: The gloze is gone from Israel, for the arke of God is taken.

*The gloze is gone.

C The. v. Chapter.

C Dagon the God of the Philistines is cast flat before the arke.

And the Philistines toke the Arke of God, and carped it fro the helpe stone vnto Asdod, agayne the Philistines toke the arke of God, and brought it into þe house of Dagon, and set it by Dagon. And when they of Asdod were vpon þe nexte dape in the moynynge, beholde, Dagon laye vnto the earth before the Arke of the Lorde. And they toke Dagon, and set hym in hys place agayne. And whē they were vpon early in the nexte moynynge, beholde, Dagon laye vpon the ground before the arke of the Lorde, wth his head, and hys two handes cut of vnto the threshold, that only the shape of a fyngre was left on hym. And therfore is it, that þe wordes of Dagon (neither any man þe cometh into Dagon's house) treade not on the threshold of Dagon in Asdod, vnto this dape. For the hande of the Lorde was heuy vpon them of Asdod, and he destroyed them, and smote them with emerodes, bothe Asdod and in all the coastes therof. (The byllages also and the houses in the myddes of the countre were full, and there was a confusyon of great death in the countre.) And when the men of Asdod sawe þe so, they sayde: the arke of the God of Israel shall not abyde here with vs, for his hande is soze vpon vs & vnto Dagon our God. They sent therfore and gathered all the lords of the Philistines vnto them, and sayd: what shall we do wth the Arke of the God of Israel? They answered: let the arke of þe God of Israel be carped aboute vnto Gath. And they carped the arke of the God of Israel aboute. And it fortunēd, þe when they had carped aboute, there was by the hande of the Lorde a myghtye greates nyste in the cytie, and he smote the men of the cytie both smal & great, and they had secreete diseases. (The men of the cytie toke counsell, and made the felices preyntes of Dagon.) Therfore they sent the arke of God to Ekron. And aslone as the arke of God, came Tharon, the Tharonites cryed out sayinge: they haue brought the arke of the God of Israel to vs, to sere vs and our people.

And so they sent, and gathered together all the lordes of the Philistines & sayde: let a waye the arke of the God of Israel, to agayne to hys owne place, that it serue vs and our people. For ther was great lamentacion ouer the dead thowout all the cytie, and the hande of God was exceeding soze there. And the men that dyed not, were smytten wth the Emerodes: and the men of the cytie went vnto heauen.

C The. vi. Chapter.

C The hysne byrthe home the arke wth the rewarde.

The arke of the Lorde was in þe tref of þe Philistines seven monethes: and þe Philistines called the prestes ad the sothlapers sayinge: what shall we do wth the arke of the Lorde? tell vs where wth we shall carpe home agayne. They sayde. If you send the arke of þe God of Israel home agayne, let it not empye. But rewarde it wth the passe offeringe: and then ye shall be wth it, and it shall be knowen to you, why þis hath befallen you.

Then sayde they: And what shall be the trespasse offeringe, whiche we shall carpe wth hym? They answered: fyue golden and. v. golden myce, accordyng to the nōbre of the lordes of ꝑ Philistines. For it is one maner of plague on you all, and on your lordes. Wherfoze ye shal make ymages like to your artes, and ymages lyke to poure myce that corrupt the lāde, and ye shall geue glory vnto ꝑ God of Israel: that he maye take his hand from of you, and from of your goddes, and from of your lande.

B Wherfoze do ye harden your hertes as the Egyptis and þharao hardened theyr hertes: whych when he toke an agaynste them, vnto they not let the people go, & they departed: Howe therfoze, make a newe carte, and take two melche kyne: on whose necke ther hath come no yock. And tye the kyne to the carte, and bynng ꝑ calves home from them. And take ꝑ arke of ꝑ Lorde, & laye it vpon ꝑ cart, & put the iewels of golde: whych ye rewarde him with for a synofferyng in a cofre by the syde therof: and send it awaye, that it maye go. And yf ye se ꝑ he go vp by the way of his owne coaste to Bethlames: then it is he ꝑd vs thys great euyl. Yf no, we shall knowe then, that it is not hys hand ꝑ smote vs: but it was a chaunce that happened vs.

C And the men byd euē so: ad toke two kyne that gaue mylke, and tyed them to the carte and kepte the calves at home, and they layd the arke of the Lorde vpon the cart and the cofre wth the myce of gold, and wth the ymages of theyr artes. And ꝑ kyne toke the streygth waye to Bethlames, & wete on the streygth waye: and as men byd went, loyded, & turned neether to the ryght hande ner to the left. And ꝑ lordes of the Philistines wente after them, vntill the borders of Bethlames.

And they of Bethlames were reappnyng theyr wheate heruest in the valey. And they lyt vp theyr eyes, and spied ꝑ arke. And reioyced when they sawe it. And ꝑ carte came into the felde of one Jehosua a Bethlamite, and stode styl there. There was also a great stone. And they claue ꝑ wode of the carte and offred ꝑ kyne a burnt offeryng vnto the Lorde. And the Leuites toke downe the arke of the Lorde & the cofre that was wth it, wherin the iewels of golde were: & put them on the great stone. And the men of Bethlames sacrificed burnt sacrifice, and offered offerynges ꝑ same daye vnto the Lorde. And when the true lordes of ꝑ Philistines had sene it, they returned to Aharon ꝑ same daye. And there are the golden artes which the Philistines gaue to amēdes for a trespassofferyng to the Lorde: for Aldod one: for Gaza one: for Ashalon one: for Gath one: and for Aharon one. And golden myce, accordyng to the nōbre of all the cyties of the Philistines, euen accordyng to the true lordes, bothe of walled townes & of townes vntwalled: euen vnto the great stone of lamentacyō, wher in they set downe the arke of the Lorde: which stone remapneth vnto thys daye in the felde of Jehosua the Bethlamite. And he plaged the mē of Bethlames, because they had sene the arke of the Lorde. And he sene amonge ꝑ people fyfthe thousande and therscore ad ten men. And the other people lamented, because the Lorde had slayne the people wth so great a slaughter. Wherfoze ꝑ men of Bethlames sayd: who is able to stande before the Lorde so holpe a God: and to whom shal he go fro vs? And they sent messengers to the enhabitors of Mariathiarim, sayinge: The Philistines haue brought agayne the arke of the Lorde: come ye downe therfoze and set it vp to you.

The. vii. Chapter.

The arke is brought to Mariathiarim.

And so ꝑ men of Mariathiarim came and set vp the arke of the Lorde: & brought it into the house of Aminadab in Gibeā, and sanctified Eleazar his sonne, to kepe the arke of ꝑ Lorde and whyle the arke abode in Mariathiarim, the dayes multiplied, and there passed ouer xx. yeres, and al the house of Israel lamented after the Lorde. And Samuel spake vnto all the house of Israel, sayinge: yf ye be come agayne vnto the Lorde wth all your hertes, then put awaye ꝑ strange goddes and Astaroth from amonge you: & prepare poure hertes vnto the Lorde, and serue hym only: for he shall ryd you out of ꝑ hand of ꝑ Philistines. Then ꝑ chyldren of Israel byd put awaye Baalim & Astaroth, and serued the Lorde onely. And Samuel sayd: gather al Israel to Mizpa, and I wil praye for you vnto the Lorde. And they gathered together to Mizpa, and dreywe water: and powred it out before the Lorde, and fasted ꝑ same daye and sayd there: we haue synned agaynst the Lorde. And Samuel indged the chyldren of Israel in Mizpa. Wht ꝑ Philistines heard ꝑ the chyldre of Israel where gathered together to Mizpa, the lordes of the Philistines wēt vp agaynst Israel. And when ꝑ chyldre of Israel heard that, they were afrayed of ꝑ Philistines, & the chyldren of Israel sayde to Samuel: craue not to crye vnto the Lorde oure God for vs, ꝑ he maye slane vs out of ꝑ hand of ꝑ Philistines. * And Samuel toke a suckynge lambe, and offred it all together for a burnt offeryng vnto the Lorde: & cryed vnto the Lorde for Israel, & the Lorde heard him. And as Samuel offred ꝑ burnt offeryng ꝑ Philistines came to spyght agaynst Israel, But the Lorde thondered a great thonder ꝑ same daye amonge the Philistines, & scattered the, that they fell before Israel. And the men of Israel went out of Mizpa, and pursued the Philistines, & folowed vpon them, vntill the place that is vnder Bethcar.

D And then Samuel *toke a stone, and pyt ched it betwene Mizpa and the mark of the rocke, & called the name thereof, the *stone of helpe, saying: hitherto hath ϕ Lorde helped vs. And so ϕ Philistines were brought vnder, & they came nomore into the coastes of Israel: & the hãde of the Lorde was agaynst the Philistines all the dayes of Samuel.

Therto, ϕ ctyes whych that ϕ Philistines had take from Israel, were restozed agayne to Israel, euen from Acaron to Gath, wyth the coastes of the same, and Israel plucked them oute of the handes of the Philistines. And ther was peace betwene Israel and the Amozites. Samuel iudged Israel al the dayes of his lyfe, & went about peare by peare to Bethel, Gilgal, and Mizpa, and iudged Israel in all those places, and came agayne to Rama: for there was hys house, & ther he iudged Israel also, & there he buyt an altar vnto the Lorde.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

¶ The people requyre a kynge.

When Samuel was old, he made hys sonnes iudges ouer Israel. The name of his eldest sonne was Joel, and the name of ϕ secõde Abia: ad they were iudges in Beersaba. And hys sonnes walked not in hys wayes: but turned a syde after lucre, & *toke rewarde, & peruerter the ryght. Then al the elders of Israel gathered them together, and cam to Samuel vnto Rama and sayd vnto hym: beholde, thou art olde, & thy sonnes walke not in thy wayes. Nowe therfore *make vs a kinge to iudge vs as al other nacions haue. But the thyng displeased Samuel whẽ they sayd: gene vs a kynge to iudge vs. And Samuel prayed vnto the Lorde. And the Lorde sayde vnto Samuel: heare the voyce of the people in al that they saye vnto the. For they haue not cast the a-waye, but me: that I shuld not raygne ouer them. And as they haue euer done (sence I brought the out of Egypte vnto this daye, and haue forsake me, and serued other goddes) euen so do they vnto the. Nowe therfore hearken vnto their voyce: howbeit, yet testifye vnto them and shewe them *the aucthorite of ϕ kynge that shall raygne ouer them.

And Samuel told al the wordes of ϕ Lorde vnto the people, that asked a kynge of hym, and he sayde: this shalbe ϕ aucthorite of the kynge that shall raygne ouer you: *he wyl take your sonnes and put them to hys charettes, & make his hoysmen of them, to runne before his charret: & wyl make him of them, captaynes ouer thousandes & ouer fiftyes, and wyl set the to eare hys grounde, and to gather in his herneft, and to make instrumēttes of warre, and apparell for his charettes. And he wyl take your daughters, and make them apotycaries, cookes and bakers. And he shall take the best of your felde, & make your vncyardes, and of poure olyue trees, and geue them to hys seruauntes. And he shall take the tenth of your seed, and of your vncyardes, and geue it to hys chamberlains, and to hys seruauntes. And he shall take the best of your menseruauntes and menseruauntes, and ponge men, and of your shepe, and put the to hys wothe. And he shall take the tenth of your shepe, and ye shalbe his seruauntes. And ye shall crye out at that tyme vpon your kynge, whych ye shall haue chosen you, and the Lorde wyl not heare you that daye.

Nevertheless, the people wolde not heare the voyce of Samuel, but byd say: nay, so. But there shalbe a kynge ouer vs, that we maye be lyke other nacions, & that our kynge maye iudge vs, and go out before vs, and fygght our battaylles. ¶ Then when Samuel hearde all the wordes of the people, he rehearsed them in the eares of the Lorde. And the Lorde sayd to Samuel: hearken vnto theyr voyce, & make them a kynge. And Samuel sayd vnto the men of Iud: go euery man vnto hys ctye.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

¶ Saul the sonne of Cis is chosen kynge.

There was a man of Ben Iamin named Cis, ϕ sonne of Abiel, the sonne of zeroz, the sonne of Bechozath, the sonne of Appiah, ϕ sonne of a man that was a geminite, a man of strengthe & myght: and the same had a sonne called Saul, a goodly pong man & a sayze: so that amonge the children of Israel ther was none goodlyer than he. For from ϕ shoulders vppwarde, he was hyer then all the other people. And the fathers of this Cis Sauls father were lost: & Cis sayde to Saul hys sonne: take one of the feldes wyth the & go vp and seeke the asses. And he went thozow mount Ephraim, and thozowe the lande of Salisa: but they founde them not. Then they wet thozow the lande of Salim, and there they were not. Then they wet also thozow the lande of Iam, they founde them not. At the last, when they were come to the lande of Iuph, Saul sayd to his lad ϕ was wth him: come, let vs retorne lest my father leaue caring for the asses, and take thought for vs. He sayd vnto him: behold, there is in this ctye a mā of God, and he is a worshipfull man: all ϕ he sayd, cometh suerly to passe. Nowe then let vs trespasse: peraduenture he shal shewe vs the waye we maye go. Then sayde Saul to his lad: yf we wyl go, what shal we buye for man? For our bread is all spent out of our vessels, & there is no other present to buye the man of God: what haue we? And he answered Saul agayne, and sayde: I haue founde about me the fourth parte of a shekel.

the Lorde answered him: se, this is the man whome I spake to the of. Thys same shall raygne ouer my people.

Then wēt Saul to Samuel in the mydthe sears house is. Samuel answered Saul and sayde: I am p̄ sear, go vp before me vnto p̄ hyll, for ye shall eate wyth me to daye.

And to morowe I wyll let the go, and wyll tell the all that is in thyn heart. And as for thyn asses that were lost thre dayes ago, care not for them for they are founde. And moreouer, whose shal p̄ beutysul chynges of Israel be: belonge they not to the, & vnto al thys fathers house? But Saul answered and sayde: am not I the sonne of a Jeminite, of the smallest trybe of Israel? and my kynred is p̄st of al the kynredes of p̄ trybe of Ben Jamin. Wherefore then speakest p̄ so to me?
And Samuel toke Saul and hys lad, and brought them into the parler, & made them syt in the chiefe place amonge them p̄ were

And Samuel sayde vnto the cooke: bynge whych I said vnto the: kepe it with the. And the cooke toke vp the shoulder, & that which was vpon it, & set it before Saul. And Sa-the hyll into the cytie, Samuel comuned w̄ Saul vpon the toppe of the house: and whā they arose early about the spyng of p̄ daye Samuel called Saul vpon the toppe of the house, sayenge: vp, that I maye sende the aat the doores, both he and Samuel. And whē they were come almost oute of the towne, Samuel sayde to Saul: vpd the lad go be-

And Samuel called the people together vnto the Lozde to Mizpa, and sayd vnto the chyldren of Israel: thus sayde the Lozde God of Israel: I brought Israel out of Egypt, and deliuered you out of the hande of the Egyptians, and out of the handes of al kyngdomes that troubled you. And when he stode amonge þ people, he was hyer then any of þ people, from the shouldeers vntwarde. And Samuel sayd to all the people: Se ye not hym, whome the Lozde hath cholen, & howe ther is none lyke hym amonge all the people? And all þ people howted & sayd: * God lend the kyngge lyfe.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

¶ The people renueth the kyngdome of Saul. Nged Jabez in Gilead. And all the men of Jabez sayde vnto Nabas: make a councaunt wyth vs, and we wyll be thy seruantes. And Nabas þ Ammonite answered them: In thys wyll I make a councaunt with you yf I maye thrust out al your eyes, & byngne that shame vpon all Israel. To whom þ elders of Jabez sayde: geue us seuen dayes respite: yf we maye sende messengers vnto all the coastes of Israel. And if there be no man to helpe vs, we wyll come out to the. Then cam the messengers to Gibea vnto Saul, and tolde thys tydynge in the eares of the people. And all the people lyfte vp theyr voyces & wept. And beholde, Saul came folowynge the catell out of the felde, and Saul sayde: what ayleth this people, that they wepe? And they tolde hym the tydynge of the men of Jabez. And þ sperte of God cam vpo Saul, when he heard that tydynge, and he was exceedingly angry, and toke a yoke of oxen, and bedewed them in peces, and sent them thozow out all the coastes of Israel by the handes of messengers, sayenge: whosoener commeth not forth after Saul & after Samuel, so shall hys name be serued. And the feare of the Lozde fell in the people, and they came out as it had been but one man. And when he * nombred them in Bezek, the chyldren of Israel were the hundred thousande men, and the men of Judah thyrtye thousande. And they sayde vnto the messengers that came: so saye vnto the men of Jabez in Gilead: to morowe by thys tyme the sonne be hote, ye shall haue help. And the messengers cam and shewed þ men of Jabez, which were glad. Therfore þ men of Jabez sayde: to morowe we wyll come oute vnto you, and ye shall do wyth vs all that pleaseth you. And they that remayned, were shattered: so þ two of them were not left together. And the people sayd vnto Samuel: what is he that darre do? Shall Saul raygne ouer vs: byngne thos that we maye slaye them.

And Saul sayd: ther shal no mā dye this dape, for to dape þe Lozde hath saued Israel. Then sayde Samuel vnto the people: come that we maye go to Gilgal, and reneue the kyngdome there. And al the people went to Gilgal, and made Saul kyng there, befoze the Lozde in Gilgal. And there they offred peaceoffrynges befoze the Lozde. And there Saul and all the men of Israel reioyled exceedingly.

The. xii. Chapter.

Samuel declarerh hym selfe to be an innocent Judge.

Samuel sayd vnto al Israel: beholde, I haue hearkened vnto your voyce in all that ye sayde vnto me, and haue made you a kyng. Nowe therfoze, poure kyng walketh befoze you. And I am olde & graye headed: & behold, my sonnes are with you, and I haue walked befoze you from my chyldhode vnto thys dape. Beholde, here I am: beate recozde of me befoze the Lozde and befoze his anoynted. * Whose ore haue I taken: of whose alle haue I takē? Whom haue I done wꝛonge to? Whom haue I hurt? Of whose hande haue I receaued any bypbe, to blynde myne eyes therwyt, and I will restore it you agayne. They sayde: thou hast done vs no wꝛonge, noz hurt vs, nether hast thou taken ought of any mannes hande. He sayde vnto them agayne: the Lozde is wytnesse agaynst you, and his anoynted is wytnesse thys dape, that ye haue founde naught in my hādes. And they answered: he is wytnesse. And Samuel sayd vnto the people: it is the Lozde, that made Moyses and Aaron, and that brought your fathers out of þe lāde of Egypte. Nowe therfoze stāde still, that I maye reason wꝛ you befoze þe Lozde, accozdyng to all the ryghteousnesses of þe Lozde, which he shewed both you & your fathers.

* After þe Jacob was come into Egypte, and your fathers cryed vnto the Lozde: the Lozde sent Moyses & Aaron, which brought your fathers out of Egypt, & made the dwel in this place. * And whā they forgot þe Lozde their God, he deliuered the into the hand of Asyara capayne of the host of hazor: * and into the hande of the Philistynes, and * into the hande of the kyng of Moab, and they fought agaynst them. And they cryed vnto the Lozde, & sayde: we haue synned, because we haue forsaken þe Lozde, and haue serued Baalim and Ashtaroth. Nowe therfoze deliuer vs out of the handes of oure enemyes: and we will serue the. And the Lozde sente Jerobaal * Gadai * Jephthah, & Samuel and deliuered you out of the handes of your enemyes on euery syde, and ye dwelled safe. And for al that, when you saw that Rabas the kyng of the chyldzen of Ammon, cam agaynst you, ye sayde vnto me: * not so but a kyng shal raygne ouer vs, whē yet þe Lozde your God was your kyng. Nowe therfoze, beholde, the kyng whome ye haue chosen, & whom ye haue despyed: lo, the Lozde hath set a kyng ouer you. If ye will feare the Lozde and serue hym, and heare hys voyce, and not disobeie the word of the Lozde: both ye and the kyng that raygneth ouer you, shall folowe the Lozde your God: If ye will not hearken vnto the voyce of þe Lozde, but disobeie the Lozdes mouth, then shall the hand of the Lozde be vpon you & on your fathers. Now also stāde, and se this great thynge: which the Lozde wyll do befoze your eyes: is it not now wheat heruest? I wyll call vnto þe Lozde, and he shall sende thunder and raygne: þe ye maye perceaue and se, howe that poure wickednes is great, which ye haue done in þe syght of the Lozde, in askyng you a kyng. And so, Samuel called vnto the Lozde, and the Lozde sente thunder and rayne the same dape. And all the people feared the Lozde and Samuel exceedingly. And all the people sayd vnto Samuel: praye for thy seruantes vnto the Lozde thy God, that we dye not: for we haue synned in askyng vs a kyng, & despyde all the synnes that euer we dyd.

And Samuel sayd vnto the people, feare not. Ye haue in dede done all thys wyckednesse, yet departe not from folowynge of the Lozde. But serue hym euen wyth all poure hertes. Nether turne ye after dayne thynge whiche are not able to piosyte you, for they are but vanytie. For the * Lozde wyll not forsake hys people, because of hys great names sake: because it hath pleased the Lozde, to make you hys people. Whereouer God forbyd, þe I shulde synne agaynst the Lozde, and cease prayng for you, but to shew you the good and ryghte waye. Therfoze feare you the Lozde, and serue hym in the truth, & wyth all poure heartes: and consyde howe great thynge he hath done for you. But ad if ye do wyckedly, then shall ye perishe, both ye and your kyng.

And when the men of Israel sawe it, they were in a strapte, and feare came vpon the people, & they hyd them selues in caues, and in pretye holes, and in rocks, ad in hye places, and in pyttes. And there came out of the host of the Philistines thre compaynes, to destroye: one compayne turned vnto the waye that leadeth to Ophra vnto plande of Saul. And another compayne turned the waye to Bethozon. And the thyrde compayne turned to the waye of the coast that is sene aboue the vale of zeboim towarde & wylberness. There was no synth founde thowoe ouer all the land of Israel. For the Philistynes sayde: Let happely the Ebies make them swerdes & speeres. But all the Israelites wente to the Philistines, to mende euery man his ware, hys mattock, hys axe & hys neede toles: And then the edges of the warres, mattocks, donge forks, and axes were blunne, and also the forks were to be set in. And in tyme of battel there was neither sworde nor speere founde in the handes of any of the people that were wth Saul & Jonathas. But wth Saul and Jonathas hys sonne was there som what founde. And the most of the Philistynes came out, to go ouer to Wichmas.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Jonathas and his harnesse deere puttyd the Philistynes to fyght. He catcht the horse.

Ad it fortunyd & same tyme, that Jonathas the sonne of Saul sayde vnto hys yonge man that bare hys harnesse come, and let vs go ouer to the Philistynes watche that are ponde on the other syde. He tolde not hys father. And Saul tarped in the uttermoost parte of Gibea vnder Ramon, whych is in Wigron, and the people were wth hym were vpon a syxe hundred men. And Abia the sonne of Abitob, Jonathas brother, the sonne of Abineas, the sonne of Eli, was the Lordes yeast in Saul and ware an Ephod. And the people wth not that Jonathas was gone.

And in the myddes of & passage, by whiche Jonathas sought to go ouer vnto the Philistynes watche) were there two sharpe rocks, euen one on the one syde, and the other on the other syde: the one called Bozer, and the other Senne. The forefront of the mountaine northwarde towarde Wichmas, and the other was southwarde towarde Saul. And Jonathas sayde to & yonge man that bare hys harnesse: come and let vs go vnto the watch of these vncircumcised, & aduenture the Lord wyll woike wth vs, for it is no hardnesse with the Lord to fight ether in manye or in fewe. And hys harnesse beare sayd vnto him: do al that is in thine hart: So wher it pleaseth the: Behold, I am wth the, as thyne hart lusteth. Then sayd Jonathas: beholde, we go ouer vnto the men, & shall thew oure selues vnto them: they saye on this wise to vs, tarpe: what come to you, the we will stand stil in our place and not go vp vnto the. But & if they come vp vnto vs, the we will go vp for the Lord hath deliuered the into oure handes. And this shal be a sygne vnto vs. And the bothe thewed the selues vnto & watch of the Philistynes.

Philistines. And þe Philistines sayde: se, the hebrunes come out of þe holes where they had bydd them selues in. And þe men of the watch answered Jonathas and hys harness bearer, & sayd: come vp to vs, and we wyl shewe you a thyng. And Jonathas sayde vnto his harness bearer, come vp after me, for þe Lord hath deliuered them into the hāde of Israel. And Jonathas claime vp vpo hādes & fete, & his harness bearer after him. And ^{(so when they had} ^{come Jonathas face)} they fell befoze Jonathas: & his harness bearer flue the after him. And that first slaughter which Jonathas and his harness bearer made, was vpo a twenty mē, with in the compasse as it were about an halfe a-ker of lande. And there was a feare in þe host in the fete, & among all people: in so muche that they þe were gone out of the watche to robbe, were afrayd also: and the earth trimbled, for the fear that was sent of God. And the watchmen of Saul in Gibeā Ben Jamin, sawe. And beholde, the people (of the Philistines) were scattered & were smytte as they went. Then sayde Saul vnto the people: was with him. Searche and se, who is gone away fro vs. And when they had nom-bered, beholde, Jonathas & hys harness bearer were not there. And Saul sayd vnto Abia: bying hyther the arke of God. For þe arke of God was at that tyme with the childzen of Israel. And it fortunēd þe while Saul called vnto the preast, þe people that was in the hoste of þe Philistines speede farther abode & entreale do ^{(by itle and itle, and gaue a moze cleare} ^{sounde.)} And Saul sayde vnto þe preast: with drawe thynne hādes. And Saul ioynd hym selfe vnto al þe people that were with him, & they came to the battel. And behold * euerie mānes sword was against his fellowe, and there was a very great rumoz. Moreover, the Ebzues þe were with the Philistines before that tyme, and were come with them in to all partes of the hoste, turned, to be wth the Israelites þe were with Saul & Jonathas.
 And al þe men of Israel also, which had byd them selues in mount Ephraim, as sone as they harde howe that the Philistines were fled, they folowed after them in the battell.
 And so God holpe Israel that day. And the battell continued vnto Bethanen.

And when the men of Israel were kepte doone with hunger that daye, Saul charged the people with an othe sayeng: Cursed be the man þe eateth any foode vntyl nyght, tyl I be aduēged of myne enemyes: And so, none of þe people tasted any sustinaūce. And al the inhabytens of þe lande came to a wood where hony lay vpon the grounde. And the people came into the wood: And behold, the hony droppēd, & no man moued hys hand to his mouth, for þe people feared the oth. But Jonathas hearde not when his father charged the people with the oth, wherefoze he put forth the ende of the rod that was in his hāde and bypte it in an hony combe, and put hys hande to hys mouth, and hys eyes receyued light. Then answered one of the people and sayd: thy father aduēred the people, sayeng: Cursed be þe man that eateth any sustinaūce this day, and the people were saynt. Then sayde Jonathas: my father hath troubled the lande: se howe myne eyes hath receyued syght, because I tasted a lytle of this hony:

 howe muche moze then to daye if the people had eate of þe spoule of they: enemyes which they founde. And had there not bene then a muche greater slaughter amonge the Philistines: And they layed on the Philistines that daye, from Michmas to Aialon. And the people were excedyng saynt.

And the people gat them to the spoule, and toke shepe, oxen, & calues, and flue them on the grounde and the people bydeate them * with the bloude. Then men tolde Saul, sayeng: Beholde, the people synne agaynst the Lord, in that they eate with the bloude.
 And he sayde: ye haue trespassed. Rowle a greate stone vnto me this day, & Saul sayd agayne: Go abode amonge the people and byd them bying me euerie man hys ore and euerie man his shepe, and slep them here, and synne not agaynst the Lord in eatyng with the bloude. And the people brought euerie man his ore in his hande, by nyght, and flue them there. And Saul made an altare vnto the Loide. And þe was the fyrst altare that he made vnto þe Loide. And Saul sayde: let vs go do wne after the Philistines by night and spoule them, vntyl it be day in the mornyng, and let vs not leaue one man of them.
 And they said: do whatsoeuer thou thinkest best. Then sayde the preast: let vs come hy-ther vnto God. And Saul asked of God: Shall I go downe after þe Philistines? Will thou deliuer them into the hādes of Israel?
 But he answered hym not at þe tyme. And Saul sayde: let the people come hyther out of al quarters, and knowe & se by whom this synne is chaunced this daye: for as trulpy as the Loide spueth whiche saneth Israell, though it be in Jonathas my sonne, he shal bye the deathe. But there was no man amonge all the people that answered him.

Then he sayde vnto all Israel: be ye on one syde, and I & Jonathas my sone wyl be on the other syde. And the people sayd vnto Saul: what thou thynekest best, þe do. Ther-foze Saul sayde vnto the Loide God of Israel: geue a perfect losse. ^{(Loide God, geue thou thy} ^{iudgement. Howe happeth it, that thou geuest thy seruant} ^{no answer to daye? If thou spare be in me of in Jonathas} ^{my sonne. Howe it, wyl thou requyte it in the people.)} And Saul & Jonathas were caught, but þe people scaped free. And Saul sayd, cast lo-ces betwene me & Jonathas my sonne. And Jonathas was caught. Then Saul sayd to Jonathas: tel me what thou hast done. And Jonathas tolde hym, & sayd: I tasted a lytle honey with the ende of the rod that was in myne hande: and lo, I must dye.

Saul answered: God do so and so to me thou shalt dye the death Jonathas. And the people sayd vnto Saul: what Jonathas dye which hath so mightely helped Israel? God forbyd. As truly as the Lord lyueth there shall not one heere of hys heade fall to the ground, for he hath wrought with God this day. And so the people deliuered Jonathas, that he dyed not. And then Saul departed vp from folowynge the Philistines. And the Philistines went to theyr owne place. And so Saul helde the kyngdome ouer Israel, & fought against al his enemies on euery side agaynst Moab: agaynst the chyldre of Ammon: agaynst Edom: agaynst the kynges of Joba, and agaynst the Philistines. And wherher soeuer he turned hym selfe, there he wanne: and he gathered his host together, & smote the Amalekites, and rid Israel out of the bandes of the that spoyled them. The sonnes of Saul were: Jonathas, Jesui, and Melchisua. And hys two daughters were thus named: the elder was called Merob, & the yonger Michol. And the name of Sauls wyfe, was Abinoa the daughter of Abimaaz. And the name of his chiefe captaine was Abner the sonne of Ner, Sauls vncle. And this was Sauls father. And Ner the father of Abner was the sonne of Abiel. And there was soe warre agaynst the Philistines, al the daies of Saul. And whom soeuer Saul sawe to be a stronge man, and mete for the warre he toke him vnto him.

¶ The xv. Chapter.

¶ Saul is commaunded to slepe Amaleke. He is disobedient to the voyce of God. Samuel mourneth for Saul.

Samuel sayde vnto Saul: * the Lord sent me to anoynt the, to be kyng ouer hys people Israel. Howe therfore hearken thou vnto the voyce of the wordes of the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: I remember that which Amaleke dyd to Israel: howe they layed wayte for them in the waye, as they came out of Egypte. Now therfore go, and smyte Amaleke, and destrope ye all that pertyneth vnto them, and se thou haue no compassion on them. * and couerte not thyng that they haue: slepe both man and woman, infant and sucklyng, oxe, & shepe, camell and Asse.

And Saul gathered the people together, and nombred the in Telaim, two hundred thousande foote men, and ten thousande men of Iuda. And Saul came vnto a ctyle of Amalek, & set watche in the valey. And Saul sayde vnto the Kenites: go, & departe, & get you downe from amonge the Amalekites, lest I destrope you with them: for ye shewe mercy to al the chyldren of Israel, whiche came out of Egypte. And so the Kenites departed from amonge the Amalekites.

And Saul smote the Amalekites in Heula, as thou comest to Sur, that is before Egypte, & toke Agag the kyng of the Amalekites alpye, & utterly destroyed al the people with the edge of the sword. And Saul and the people spared Agag, and the better shepe, & the fatter oxen, & the lambs, and all that was good, & wold not destroye them. But all that was foule & naught they destroyed utterly. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Samuel, sayng: it repeth me, that I haue made Saul. For he is turned from me, and hath not fourmed my commaundementes. And Samuel was euell apayed, and cryed vnto the Lord all nyght. And when Samuel was early, to mete Saul in the morning, he told Samuel, that Saul was come to Ramel, and beholde, he hath made him there place, and is turned, and departed, and goeth downe to Gilgal.

And Samuel came to Saul, & shewed him what sacrifice vnto the Lord of the best of the which he had brought from Amalek. And when Samuel came vnto Saul, Saul sayd vnto him: What be thou in the Lord. I haue fulfilled the commaundment of the Lord: Samuel sayde: what meaneth then the bleatynge of the shepe in myne eares, and the noyse of the open shepe here? Saul answered: they haue brought them from the Amalekites. For I spared the best of the shepe and of the oxen, to sacrifice them vnto the Lord thy God. And the remnant haue we destroyed.

Samuel sayd to Saul: let me tel the what the Lord hath sayd to me this nyght. And he sayde vnto him: saye on. Samuel sayde: when thou wast lytle in thine owne house, wast thou not made the heade of the tribe of Israel? And the Lord anoynted the, ouer Israel. And the Lord sente the on iourney, and sayde: Go, and utterly destroye those synners the Amalekites, and agaynst them, vntyl thou utterly destroye them. And wherfore hast thou not hearkened vnto the voyce of the Lord, but hast turned to the praye, and hast done that which is wicked in the syght of the Lord?

And Saul sayde vnto Samuel: I haue hearkened vnto the voyce of the Lord, & haue gone the way which the Lord sent me vnto, and haue brought Agag the kyng of Amalek, and haue utterly destroyed the Amalekites. But the people toke of the best shepe, oxen, and the chiefe of the shepe, whiche shulde haue bene destroyed, & went vnto the Lord thy God in Gilgal.

Samuel sayd: hath the Lord as great pleasure in burnt sacrifices & offerings, as when the voice of the Lord is obeyed? Behold, to obey is better then sacrifice, & to hearken is better then the fat of rammes. For rebellion is as the synne of wycheecraft, and stubbornnes is as the wychednesse of Idolatry. Because thou hast cast away the worde of the Lord, therefore hath the Lord cast away the also, from being kyng.

And Saul sayde vnto Samuel: I haue sinned, for I haue gone farther then the saying of the Lord and thy wordes, because I feared the people, & obeyed their voice. Now therefore take away my synne, and turne agayne with me, & I may worship the Lord. And Samuel sayde vnto Saul: I will not returne with thee: for thou hast cast away the worde of the Lord, and the Lord hath cast away thee, that thou shalt not be kyng ouer Israel. And as Samuel turned him selfe to go away, he caught the lappe of his coate, and it rent. And Samuel sayd vnto him: the Lord hath rent the kyngdome of Israel from thee this day, & hath geuen it to a neyghbour of thine, that is better then thou. The strength of Israel will not begyle nor repent: for he is not a man, that can repent.

He sayde: I haue sinned. But nowe honour me before the elders of my people, and before Israel, & turne agayne with me, that I may worship the Lord thy God. And so Samuel turned agayne, & folowed Saul. And Saul worshipped the Lord. Then sayd Samuel: Bynge ye hither to me, Agag the kyng of the Amalekites. And Agag came vnto him delicately. And Agag sayd: truly thy bitter death cometh on. And Samuel sayde: As thy swerde hath made women chyldelesse, so shall thy mother be chyldelesse aboue other women. And Samuel bewed Agag in peces before the Lord in Gilgal. And the Lord Samuel departed to Rama. And Saul wente home to his howse to Gibea. And Samuel came no moare to se Saul, vntyl the day of his death. Reuerthelss Samuel mourned for Saul, and the Lord repented, that he had made Saul kyng ouer Israel.

¶ The .xvi. Chapter.

Dauid is anoynted kyng. An euell sperte cometh vpon Saul.

The Lord sayd vnto Samuel: Howe long wilt thou mourne for Saul seynge I haue caste hym awaye from reynynge ouer Israel? Fyll thynne horne with oynment, and come, that I may sende thee to Isai the Bethlemite, for I haue prouyded me a kyng amonge his sonnes. And Samuel sayd: howe can I go? For if Saul heare it, he will kyll me. The Lord answered: Take an heifer with thee and say: I am come to offer to the Lord. And call Isai to the offering, and I will shewe thee what thou shalt do: And thou shalt anoynt him whom I name vnto thee. And so Samuel byd as the Lord bad him, and came to Bethlehem, and the elders of the towne were astonied at his commynge, and sayde: *Comest thou yearely? He answered: Ye, I am come to offer vnto the Lord. *Sanctify your selues, and come with me to the offering. And he sanctified Isai and his sonnes, and bad them to the offering. And when they were come, he looked on Eliab, and sayde: Surely the Lordes anoynted is before him. But the Lord sayd vnto Samuel: loke not on his fashion, or on the heighte of his stature, because I haue refused him: for God seeth not as man seeth. For man loketh on the outwarde appearance: but God beholdeth the hart. Then Isai called Abinadab, and made hym come before Samuel. And he sayde: neyther hath the Lord chosen this. Then Isai made Shamma come, and he sayde: neyther yet hath the Lord chosen him. Agayne Isai made leui of his sonnes to come before Samuel. And Samuel sayde vnto Isai: the Lord hath chosen none of these.

And Samuel sayde vnto Isai: are here all thy chyliden? He sayd: there is yet a lytle one behynde, that keepeth the shepe. And Samuel sayd vnto Isai: sende and fet hym, for we will not sit downe, tyll he be come hyther. And he sent, & brought hym in. And he was browne, and of an excellent betwyt, & wellfaoured in syght. And the Lord sayd: Arise, and anoynt him, for this is he. Therefore Samuel toke the horne with the oynment, & annoynted him in the middes of his brethren. And the sperte of the Lord came vpon Dauid, from that day forthwarde. And Samuel rose vp, and went to Rama.

But the sperte of the Lord departed from Saul, and an euell sperte sent of the Lord vexed him. And Sauls seruantes sayde vnto him: Beholde, an euell sperte sent of God vexed thee, let our Lord therefore commaunde his seruantes (that are before thee) to seke a man, & is a connyng player with an harpe: that when the euill sperte sent of God cometh vpon thee, he may playe with his hand and thou shalt be eased. Saul sayd vnto his seruantes: prouyde me a man that can play well, and bynge him to me. Then answered one of his seruantes and sayde: Beholde, I haue sene a sonne of Isai the Bethlemite, that can play vpon instrumentes, and is an actiue fellowe, and a man of warre and prudent in doyng of feates, & wel made and the Lord is with him. Wherefore Saul sent messengers vnto Isai, and sayde: sende me Dauid thy sonne, which is with the shepe. And Isai toke an asse laden with breade, and a flack a sack of wyne, and a kyb, and sent them by David his sone vnto Saul. And David came to Saul, & stode before him, & he loued him very wel, and he was made hys harp-bearer. And Saul sent to Iſai, sayeng: let David remaine with me, for he hath found fauour in my syght. And so it fortuneth, that when the cruel spyete sent of God came vpon Saul, David toke an harpe, & played with his hande, & so Saul was refreshed, & did amende, and the cruel spyete departed fro him.

C The. xlii. Chapter.

C David ouercometh Goliath Goliath.

The Philistines gathered theyr hoste to battell, and came together to Socoth which is in Iuda, and pitched betwene Socoth and Azekah, in the cost of Dammin. And Saul and the me of Israel came together, and pitched in the Oke valley, and put them selues in aray, to fyght agaynst the Philistines. And the Philistines stode on an hyll on the one syde, and Israel stode on an hyll on the other syde, and there was a valley betwene the: And there came a man betwene them both, out of the tentes of the Philistines, named Goliath of Gath syxe cubites and an hand byedeth longe, and had an helmet of brasse vpon hys heade, and a coate of mayle about him. And hys weyght of hys coate of mayle was fyue thousande spyles of brasse. And he had bootes of brasse vpon his legges, and a shilde of brasse vpon his shulders. And hys speare was lyke a weuers beame. And his speare heade weyged. vi. hundred spyles of yron. And one bearyng a shilde went before him.

And he stode and cryed agaynst the hoste of Israel, & said vnto the: Why are ye come out in aray to battell? am not I a Philistine and you seruautes to Saul? chole you a mā from amonge you, & let him come downe to me. And if he be able to fyght with me, & to beate me, then wyl we be your seruautes. But if I can ouercome hym and beate hym then shall ye be our seruautes, & serue vs. And the Philistine sayde: I defy the host of Israel this day, geue me a man, & we maye fyght together. When Saul and all Israel harde those wordes of the Philistine, they were discouraged, and greatly afrayd. David was of some of an Ephraimite, as mention is made afore of Bethlehem Iuda, named Iſai, which had eyght sones. And was an olde man in the dayes of Saul, and came to age amonge men: And the thre eldest sones of Iſai wente, and folowed Saul to the battell. And the names of hys thre sones that went to battell, were: Eliab the first, and the nexte, Abinadab, and the thre Hamma, and David was the leaste. And the thre eldest went after Saul. David also wente, and departed from Saul, to his hys fathers shepe at Bethlehem. And the Philistine came forth in the morning encuyng, and continued forty dayes.

And Iſai sayd vnto David his sone: for thy brethren an Ephra of thys parthe corne & these ten loaves, and byng it to the hoste to thy brethren. And carrye with thee these vnto the captayne, & loke for thy brethren fare, and set out theyr way. And Saul and they, and al hys men of Iſrael were in the oke valey, fighting with the Philistines. And David rose vp early in the morning, and lefte hys shepe with a keper, & came and went as Iſai had comaunded hym, and came with in the compasse of hys host. And the hoste wente out in aray, and shouted in the battell: for Israel & the Philistines had put the selues in aray, the one agaynst the other. And David toke downe the gere from hym, and put them vnder the handes of the keepers of the vessels, & ran into the host, and came and saluted his brethren. And as he talked with them, Beholde: there stode a mā in the wyndes (Goliath the Philistine by name) of Gath out of the aray of the Philistines, & spake the maner aboue reherled, that David had sayd. And all the men of Israel, whē they sawe the man, ranne awaye from hym, and were soe afrayd. And euery man of Israel sayd: Woe ye thys man come forth: euery man sayd: Israel is he come. * And to hym he beate hym, wyl the kyng geue greuous payes, and wyl geue him his daughter to wyfe, & make his fathers house fre in Iſrael.

And David spake to the men that were with him, and sayd: What shalbe done to the man that beate this Philistine, & taketh awaye the shame fro Israel? And what is this circuncised Philistine, that he shulde defy the host of the luyng God? And the people answered him (after this maner), saying: As shall it be done to the mā, that beate hym. And Eliab hys eldest brother harde this, & spake vnto the men, and Eliab was angry with David, & sayde: Why camest thou hither? & with whom halte thou left? seest thou the man, & the malice of thynne herte, that thou shalt come downe to se hys battell. And David sayd:

And what haue I now done? is there not a woorde? And he departed from hym into the pylles of another, & spake of þe same maner, & the people answered hym agayn, as befoze

And they that harde the wordes whiche Dauid spake, repeated them befoze Saul, whiche caused hym to be set. And Dauid said to Saul: Let no mannes herte sayle hym be cause of hym. Thy seruauit wyl go, & fyght with yonder Philistine. And Saul sayde to Dauid agayne: thou arte not able to go against yonder Philistine, to fyght with hym for thou arte but a chyld, but he is a man of warre euen fro his yowth. Dauid answered vnto Saul. Thy seruauit keppe his fathers shepe, and there came

* a Lyon & lyke þys a Beare, and toke a shepe out of the flocke. And I went out after hym, and smote hym, and toke it out of his mouth. And whē he arose agaynst me, I caught hym by the bearde, and smote hym, and slue hym. And so thy seruauit slue the Lyon, and the Beare (also) hath thy seruauit slayne. And truly this uncircumcised Philistine shalbe as one of them. (Saying, wyl I go, and take away þe rebuke of þe people, for what is this vnder thy shepe?) saying he hath rayled on the host of þe lyping God.
And Dauid spake mozeouer: the Lord that deliuered me out of the hand of þe Lyon and out of the hande of the Beare, he shal deliuer me also out of the hande of the Philistine.

And Saul sayd vnto Dauid: go, and the Lorde shal be with the. And Saul put hys rayment vpon Dauid, and put an helmet of brasse vpon his head, & put a coate of mayle vpon hym, and girded Dauid with hys owne sword vpon his rayment. And he assayed to go. And because he neuer proued it, Dauid said vnto Saul: I cannot go with these: for I haue not vsed my selfe therto: and Dauid put them of hym, and toke hys staffe in hys hande, and chose him fyue smoth stones out of a brooke, and put the in a sheperdes bagge whiche he had, & in a sling poke: & his slinge was in his hāde, & he went to the Philistine

And the Philistine came and due nere a-gaynst Dauid, & the man þe bare the shyld went befoze hym. And when the Philistine looked about, and sawe Dauid, he disdayned hym, for he was but yonge, & well coloured, and goodly to loke vpon. And the Philistine sayde vnto Dauid: am I a dogge, that thou comest to me with a staffe? and þe Philistine cursed Dauid in þe name of his goddes. And the Philistine sayd to Dauid: come to me, & I wyl geue thy fleshe vnto the foules of the ayre, & to the beastes of the felde. Then sayd Dauid to the Philistine: thou comest to me with a sword, a speare and a shyld: But I come to the in þe name of the Lord of hostes the God of the hostes of Israel, whom thou hast rayled vpon. This day shal the Lorde deliuer the into my hande, and I shal smyte the, & take thyne head fro the, and wyl geue the karcaises of þe host of þe Philistines thys daye vnto the foules of the ayre, and to the beastes of the earth, that al they which be in the world, may knowe, that there is a God in Israel. And all this congregacyon shal know, that þe Lord saureth not with sword and spear. For the battel is the Lordes, and he shal geue you into our handes.

And whē the Philistine arose to come and drawe npe vnto Dauid. Dauid hasted, & ran into the battel euen agaynst the Philistine.
And Dauid put his hand in his bagge, and toke out a stone, and slange it, & smote the Philistine in his forehead, & the stone smucke into his forehead: and he fell Gronelyng to the earth. And so Dauid overcame the Philistine with a slinge and a stone, and smote the Philistine, & slue hym, euen whā Dauid had no sword in hys hand. But Dauid ran and stode vpon the Philistine, and toke hys sword, and due it out of his sheath, and slue hym, & cut of hys head therewith. And when the Philistines sawe, that theyr champion was dead: they fled. And the men of Israel and of Iuda arose, and howted, & folowed after þe Philistines, vntyll they came to the vale, and vnto the gates of Akaron. And the Philistines fell downe wounded by the way to Saaratim, euen vnto Gath & Aka-ron. And the chyldren of Israel returned fro chasinge after the Philistines, and spoyled theyr tentes. And Dauid toke the deade of the Philistine, and broughte it to Iersusalem:
But he put his armour in his tente.

When Saul sawe Dauid go for the a-gaynst the Philistine, he sayd vnto: Abner the captayne of his hoste: Abner, whose sone is this yong mā? Abner answered: as truly as thy soule lyueth (O kyng) I cannot tell.
And the kyng sayde: Enquire thou, whose sonne the yonglinge is. And when Dauid was returned from þe slaughter of the Philistine Abner toke him, and brought him be-foze Saul, with the deade of the Philistine in his hande. And Saul sayd to him: whose sonne arte thou, thou yong man? Dauid answered: I am the sonne of thy seruauit I sai the Bethlehemite.

The xviii. Chapter.

The battel betweene Dauid and Jonathas.
Saul went about to slay Dauid.

And whē he had made an ende of speakinge vnto Saul, the soule of Jonathas was knyt with the soule of Dauid, and Jonathas loued hym as hys owne soule. And Saul toke him that day, and wolde let him go home to his fathers house. And Jonathas made a couenaunt with Dauid, because he loued

loured him as his a true soule. And Jonathan put of his awne coate that was vpon him, & gaue it Dauid, & thereto his cloke, his sword his bowe and his gyrdle. And Dauid wente out whether soeuer Saul sent hym, and behaued him selfe wysely. And Saul set hym ouer his men of warre, and he was accepted in the syght of al the people, and in the syght of Sauls seruantes.

B And it happened as they went, when Dauid was returned from the slaughter of the Philistine, & wemen came out of all cyties of Israel synnyng & dauncyng, agaynst kyng Saul, and with tymbrells, with ioye, and with instrumentes of musick. And wemen answered one another in theyr play, & sayd:

*1. Sam. xxi. b.
and. xxix. b.

* Saul hath sleyn his thousande, and Dauid his ten thousande. And Saul was excedyng wroth, and the sayeng displeased him and he said: they haue ascribed vnto Dauid ten thousand, and to me but a thousand, and what can he more haue, saue þe kyngdome? Wherfore Saul looked on side of Dauid fro that day forthwarde. And it happened on the morowe,

C that the euell spere sente of God came vpon Saul, and he prophesied in the myddes of þe house. And Dauid played with his hande lyke as at other tymes, and there was a tanelyn in Sauls hande. And Saul toke the tanelyn, and sayd: I wyl nape Dauid to the wal with it. And Dauid auoyded out of hys presence two tymes. And Saul was afearde of Dauid, because þe Lord was with hym, & was departed fro Saul. Therfore Saul put him from him, and made him a captayne ouer a thousande, and he wente out & in before the people. And Dauid behaued him selfe wysely in all his wayes, & the Lord was with him. Wherfore when Saul sawe that he was so excedyng wysely, he was afrayd of him. But all Israel & Juda loued Dauid, because he went out in before them.

D And Saul sayde to Dauid. Behold, my eldest daughter Merob, her I wyl geue the to wyfe. Only play the ma with me, & syght þe Lordes battelles. For Saul thought: mine hande shal not be vpon him, but the hand of þe Philistines. And Dauid answered Saul:

E what am I? and what is my lyfe? or the kynred of my father in Israel, that I shulde be sonne in lawe to the kyng? Howbeit, when the time was come þe Merob Sauls daughter shulde haue bene geue to Dauid, he was geuen vnto Abiel a Gethothite, to wyfe. Howbeit, Michol Sauls daughter loued Dauid. And they wewed Saul: & the thyng displeased him not. And Saul sayde: I wyl geue hym her & he may be a snare to hym, & that the hande of the Philistines may be agaynst him. Wherfore Saul sayde to Dauid: thou shalt this day be my sonne in lawe in the other daughter. And Saul commaund ded his seruantes, to come with Dauid secretly & to say: Beholde the kyng hath a word to the, and all his seruantes shal be nowe therfore the kynges sonne in lawe.

And Sauls seruantes spake these wordes in the eares of Dauid. And Dauid semeth it to pou a lyght thyng to be a kynges sonne in lawe: I am a poore man and of small reputacion. And þe seruantes brought Saul worde agayne, sayeng: of this man spake Dauid. And Saul said: this wyl I say to Dauid: the kyng careth for no other dowry, but for an hundred foreskinne of the Philistines, to be auenged of the kynges enemies. But Saul thought to make Dauid fall into þe handes of the Philistines. And when his seruantes tolde Dauid these wordes, it pleased Dauid wel to be the kynges sonne in lawe. And on the dayes nexte pyed, Dauid arose with hys men, & smote slawe of the Philistines, two hundred men. Dauid brought theyr foreskinnes, and distypped the kynges therof, to be hys sonne in lawe. * Wherfore Saul gaue him Michol hys daughter to wyfe. And Saul sawe vnderstode, howe that the Lord was with Dauid, & that Michol hys daughter loued him, and he was the more afrayd of him. And Saul became alway Dauids enemy. The Lordes of the Philistines wold not furth. And it fortuneth that when they wold furth, Dauid behaued hym selfe wysely: then all the seruantes of Saul: so that his name was muche set by.

¶ The. xix. Chapter.

¶ Saul commaundeth to slee Dauid. Michol hys wyfe saureth hym.

Saul spake to Jonathan hys sonne, and to al his seruantes, that they shulde kyll Dauid. * But Jonathanas Sauls sonne had a great honour to Dauid, and Jonathan tolde Dauid sayeng: Saul my father goeth about to slepe the. Nowe therfore take hede to thy selfe vntyl the morning, and abyde in some secret place, and hyde thy selfe. And I wyl go out, and stande by my father in the mornynge where thou arte, and wyl comon with my father of the, and what soeuer I shal say, I wyl tell the.

And Jonathan spake good of Dauid to Saul hys father, and sayd vnto him: not the kynges synne agaynst hys sonne Dauid, for he hath not synned agaynst the, and his wordes haue bene to the good. For he dyd put his lyfe in the danger, and slewe the Philistine, and he brought to passe a greater health for Israel. Thou sawest it, and thou knowest wherfore then wylt thou synne agaynst a innocent bloude, and slepe Dauid without cause? And Saul perkened vnto þe Jonathas, and swaie: as truly as the Lorde lyueth he shall not dye. And Jonathas called Dauid, and shewed him al those wordes and brought Dauid to Saul. And he was in his presence as in tymes past.

And the warre began agayne, and Dauid went out and fought wth the Philistines, and slue them with a great slaughter, & they fled fro him. And the cruel sperte sent of the Lorde was vpon Saul, as he sat in hys house hapyng a Iauelyn in his hand, & Dauid played with his hand. And Saul entreded to napele Dauid to the walle with the Iauelyn. But he rypd hym selfe out of Sauls p^{re}sece, as he smote the speare ^(with a bygne stroke) into the walle. And Dauid fled and was saued the same nyght. Saul also sent messengers vnto Dauids house, to watch hym, and to slep hym in the mornynge. And Michol Dauids wyfe tolde it hym, sayeng. If thou saue not thy selfe this nyght, to morowe I wyll be slayne. And so Michol let Dauid dowe thowre a wyndowe, and he went and fled, and was saued. And thā he toke an Image and layed it in the bed, and put a pylowe stuffed with goates hear vnder y^e head of it, and couered it with a cloth. And whē Saul sent messengers to fetch Dauid, the sayd, he is syche. And Saul sent the messengers agayne to se Dauid, sayeng: byynge hym to me, ded & al, that I may slep him. And whē the messengers were come in: Beholde, there lay an ymage in the bed, with a pylowe of goates hear vnder the head of it. And Saul sayde vnto Michol: why hast thou mocked me so, and sente away myne enemy that he is escaped? Michol answered Saul. For he sayde vnto me, let me go, or els I wyll kyll the. And so Dauid fled, and escaped, & came to Samuel to Rama, and tolde him al that Saul had done to hym. And he & Samuel went and dwelt in Ratoth.

And one tolde Saul, sayeng: Beholde, Dauid is at Ratoth in Rama. And Saul sent messengers to fet Dauid. And whē they saue a company of prophetes prophelyng, and Samuel standynge faste by them the sperte of God fell vpon the messengers of Saul, and they prophesied to. And when it was tolde Saul, he sent other messengers, and they prophesied lyke wyse. And Saul sent messengers yet agayne the thyrde tyme, and they prophesied also. Thā went he him selfe to Rama, & came to a greete well that is in Berda, and he asked and sayde: where are Samuel and Dauid? And one sayd: Beholde, they be at Ratoth in Rama, and he went thither, euen to Ratoth in Rama, and the sperte of God came vpon hym also, and he went prophesying, vntyl he came to Ratoth in Rama. And he strepte of his clothes and prophesied befoze Samuel in lyke maner, and fell naked all that day and all that nyght. * And therof it is, that they saie: is Saul also among the prophetes? * i. ier. ii. 2

¶ The. xx. Chapter.

¶ Dauid complayneth vnto Jonathas.

AND Dauid fled from Ratoth which is in Rama, came, & sayd befoze Jonathas. What haue I done? wherin am I faulty? what is the synne that I haue comytted befoze thy father, that he sekeh my lyfe? He sayde vnto hym: God for byd, thou shalt not dye. Beholde, my father wyl do no thyng ether great or small, but that he wyl shewe it me. And how shuld my father hyde this thyng from me? He wyl not do it. And Dauid swaie agayne, and sayde, thy father knoweth that I haue found grace in thyne eyes, and therefore he sayeth: Jonathas shal not knowe it, least he be fory. And in very dede, euen as truly as the Lorde lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, there is but a steppe betwene me and death. Then sayde Jonathas vnto Dauid: whatsoeuer thy soule desyeth, that I wyl do vnto the. And Dauid sayde vnto Jonathas: Beholde, to morowe is the begynnynge of the moneth, & I shulde spe with the kyng at meate. But let me go, that I maye hyde my selfe in the feldes vnto the thyrde day at euen. If thy father speake of me, then saie, Dauid asked leaue of me, that he myght go to Berplehe to his owne cite, for there is holden a petyl fraiste for all the kynred. And if he saie it is wel done, then thy seruau^t shal haue peace. But and if he be angry, thā be sure that wickednesse is vtterly concluded of hym. And then thou shalte shewe mercy vnto thy seruau^t * for thou hast made with me thy seruau^t a bonde in the Lorde. Notwithstandynge, yf there be in me any trespass, then slepe me thy selfe, and byynge me not to thy father. * i. xx. r. b. l. a. and. x. s.

And Jonathas answered, God kepe that fro the: ^(neither is it possible to come to passe.) For if I knowe, that wickednesse were concluded of my father, to come vpon the, thinkest thou, that I shulde not tel it the? Thā sayde Dauid: who shall tell me, if thy father answered cruelly? And Jonathas said vnto Dauid, come and let vs go out into y^e feld. And they went out both of them into the felde.

And Jonathas sayde vnto Dauid: The Lorde God of Israel loke on it, whē I haue groped my fathers myn^d, one tyme or other within this thye dayes, & it stande wel with Dauid. If I then sende not vnto the & shew it the, the Lorde do so and so vnto Jonathas. But if my father haue any pleasure to do y^e euell, I wyll shewe the also, and sende the a way that thou mayest go in peace. And the Lorde be with the, as he hath bene with my father.

father. And thou shalt perforce vnto me the mercy of the Lorde, not onely whyle I lyue but euen when I am deade, and plucke not thy mercy away fro my houle for euer: So not when the Lorde hath destroyed the enemyes of Dauid, euery one from the face of the earth.

And so Jonathas made a bonde with the houle of Dauid, desyring þ the Lorde shulde seke it out by the handes of Dauids enemyes (if it were broke.) And w other wordes dyd Jonathas sweare vnto Dauid, because he loued him. For he loued hi, as his awne soule.

D Then sayde Jonathas to Dauid: to morowe is the fyrst day of the mone. And thou shalt be missed, because þ place where thou wast wont to sit, shall be empty. Therfore this day thre dayes come down in any wyle vnto the place where thou diddest hyde thy selfe, whan the busynes was in hande: euen by the stone Cell. And I will shote thre arrowes by the one syde therof, as though I shot them at a marke, & wyl sende a lad, and byd hym go seke the arrowes. And if I say vnto the lad: se, the arrowes are on thys syde the, byng them: then come þ: for it is peace & no hurte, as sure as the Lorde lyueth. But and if I saye vnto the lad, beholde, the arrowes are beyond the, then go: (in peace) for the Lorde hath sent the a way. And as touchyng this which thou and I haue spoken: behold the Lorde be betwene the and me for euer.

And so Dauid byd him selfe in þ felde. And when the newe mone was come, the kynge sat him downe to eate meate. And the kynge sat hym downe after the olde maner, in hys seat by the wall. And Jonathas arose and Abner sat by Daules syde, & Dauids place was empty. Acuerthelelle, Saul sayde nothyng at al that day. For he thought: some thyng hath chaunced him þ he is not cleane. But on the morowe which was the seconde day of the newe mone, it happened that Dauids place was empty agayne. And Saul sayde vnto Jonathas his sonne. Wherfore cometh not þ sonne of Isai to meate, neither yesterday nor to daye? And Jonathas answered vnto Saule. Dauid asked licence of me, to go to Bethle, for he said: let me go I praye the for our kinred doth hold an offering in þ cytie, and my brother hath sent for me. And therfore if I haue found fauour in thine eyes, let me go, and se my brethren. This is the cause that he cometh not vnto þ hyngers table. Then was Saule angry with Jonathas, and sayde vnto him: Thou wicked rebell, do not I knowe, that þ hast chosen the sonne of Isai vnto thine owne rebuke, & vnto the rebuke & shame of thy mother? For as longe as the sonne of Isai lyueth vpon the earth, þ shalt not be stablyshed, nor yet thy kingdome, wherfore nowe send and fet him vnto me, * for he is the chyld of death.

And Jonathas answered vnto his father, and sayd to hym. Wherfore shal I dye? what hath he done? And Saul was a speare to hit him, wherby Jonathas was well, þ it was utterly determined of his father, to slay Dauid. And so Jonathas went from the table in a greete anger, & dyd no meate the second day of the mone. It was sorow for Dauid, because his father had done him shame. On þ next morning, Jonathas went out into the felde, at the tyme appoynted with Dauid, and a lytle lad with him. And he sayd vnto hys boye: runne and seke out myne arrowes whiche I shote. As the boy ran he shot an arrow by and by. And when the lad was come to þ place wher Jonathas had shot the arrowe, Jonathas cryed after the lad, and sayde: I shot the arrowe beyond the: And Jonathas cryed after the lad agayne: make speede, and run not slow. And Jonathas lad gathered vp the arrowes, and came to hys master. But the lad wyll nothyng of the matter. Only Jonathas and Dauid wyll it. And Jonathas gaue hys weapons vnto the lad that was with hym, and sayde vnto him: go and saye them to the towne. And as sone as the day was gone, Dauid arose out of a place þ was towarde the south, and fel on his face to the grounde, and wooshypped thre tymes. And they kyssed either other, and went together so long, tyl Dauid excraded in weeping. And Jonathas sayde to Dauid: go in peace. And þ thynges which we haue sworn both of vs in the name of þ Lorde, sayng: the Lorde betwene the & me, & betwene thy syde & my let the stande for euer. And he arose, & departed. And Jonathas went into the towne.

¶ The .xxi. Chapter.

Dauid fleeth into Gath to Achimelech the prieste of him the newe breade to sacrifice his hunger. Achimelech he sleeth to king Achis, & there cometh him selfe to be

Then came Dauid to Gath to Achimelech þ priesst: And Achimelech was astonied at þ sodayne coming of Dauid, & sayd vnto him. Why arte thou alone, & no man with the? And Dauid sayde to Achimelech þ priesst: the kynge hath commaunded me to do certeyne thyng, and hath sayde vnto me: no man knowe where about I send the, & what I haue commaunded the to do: And I haue appoynted my seruantes, to seeke in suche places. Nowe therfore if þ hast any breade, or what cometh to hande.

And the priesst answered Dauid, and sayde: there is no comen breade vnder my hande, but here is halowed breade, if þ men haue kepte them selues from vncleane thynges, especiall women. Dauid answered the priesst, and sayde vnto hym: I truth women hath bene locked vp from vs about a thre dayes when I came out and the vessels of the younge men were holy. Howe beit thys waie is vnpure, and howe muche more shall there be holynes in the vessel.

* And so the preast gaue him halowed bzed, for there was no nother bzed there, saue the shewebreds, that were take from befoze the Loyde, so put fershe bzed there, the daye that it was taken awape.

And ther was there the same daye a certē man, of the seruauntes of Saul abydyng befoze the Loyde, named Doeg an Edomite the cheifest of Sauls heard men.

C And Dauid sayd vnto Abimelech: is not here vnder thyne hand ether speare or swerd for I haue nether brought my swearde nor my hamelle wpth me, because I kynges busyness required haste. And the preast sayde: the swerd of Goliath the Philistine whom thou sleest in the Dcke valley, beholde, it is here wrapt in a cloth behynd the Ephod. If thou wilt take that: take it, for there is no nother saue that here. And Dauid sayd: ther is none so that, geue it me.

And Dauid arose and fled the same daye from the presence of Saul, & went to Achis the kyng of Geth. And the seruauntes of Achis sayde of hym: is not thys Dauid the kyng of the lande? dyd they not syng vnto him, in daunces, sayinge: * Saul hath slayne his thousande, and Dauid his ten thousand?

D And Dauid put those wordes into hys bert, & was foze afrayed of Achis the kyng of Geth. And he chaunged hys speche befoze them, & sayned hym selfe mad in theyr handes, & scrabled on the doores of the gate, and let his spertel fall downe vpon his beard.

Then sayde Achis vnto hys seruauntes: Lo, ye se that thys man is besyde hym selfe, wherfore then haue ye brought hym to me? haue I nede of mad men? ye haue brought thys felowe to playe the mad mā in my presence: Shall he come into my house?

C The. xxii. Chapter.

Doeg betrareth Dauid. Abimelech is accused of treason and slayne, and. xxxiii. preastes mo wpth hym be cause they receiued Dauid. Rob is destroyed of Saul, Abimelech speeth to Dauid.

D And therfoze departed thence, and escaped, and cam vnto the caue D. Dollam. When his bzythzen also & all hys fathers house heard it, they went downe thither to hym. And there gathered vnto hym all men that were in comynance, & in det, and troubled in theyr myn des, and he became a captaigne ouer them.

And there were wpth hym vpon a foure hundred men. And Dauid wente thence to Wyppa in the lande of Moab: and sayde vnto the kyng of Moab: Let my father and my mother (I praye the) come forth vnto you, tyl I knowe what God wyl do for me. And he brought them befoze the kyng of Moab. And they dwelt wth him al I while that Dauid kepte him selfe in hold. And the prophet Gad sayde vnto Dauid: abyde not in holde, but departe and go into the land of Iuda. Then Dauid departed and came into the forest hareth. And Saul hearde I Dauid was come abrode, and also the men that were wth him. And Saul sat in Gibea vnder a tree in Rama, haupnge hys speare in his hāde, & al hys men stode about him. And Saul sayd vnto hys seruauntes that stode about hym. Heare: I praye you, ye sonnes of Iemini: will the sone of Isai geue euery one of you feldes and vineyardes, and make you all captaignes ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes: that ye haue also conspyred agaynst me, & there is none that telleth it me in mine eare? * And where as my sonne hath made a bonde with the sonne of Isai, ther is none of you that mourneth for me, or sheweth it in myne eare: beholde, my sonne hath stered vp my seruaunt to lye a wayte agaynst me this same daye.

Then answered Doeg I Edomite which also stode by the seruauntes of Saul, & said: I sawe the sonne of Isai, when he came to Rob, to Abimelech s sonne of Abitob, whych asked counsel of the Loyde for hym and gaue him vitaples, and the swearde of Goliath the Philistine also. Then the kyng sent and called for Abimelech the preast s sonne of Abitob, and all his fathers house, that is to saye, the preastes that were in Rob.

C And they cam all to the kyng. And Saul sayde: heare nowe thou sonne of Abitob. He answered: here I am, my Loyde. And Saul sayd vnto him: why haue ye conspyred agaynst me, thou & the sone of Isai, in that thou hast geue him vitaple, & a swearde, and hast asked counsell of God for him, that he shuld arple agaynst me, & lye a wayte for me thys daye? Abimelech answered the kyng & sayd: who is so fapthfull amōg all thy seruauntes as Dauid, & therto the kynges sonne in law & goeth at thy byddyng, & is had in honoure in thyne house: haue I this daye begon first to aske counsell of God for hym? That he farre from me (yf I had knowen it) let not I kyng put such a thing vnto his seruaunt, in all the house of my father. For thy seruaunt knewe nothyng of all thys, ether lesse or more. The kyng sayd: thou shalt surely dye Abimelech, thou and all thy fathers house. And the kyng sayde vnto the foremen that stode aboute hym: turne, and slei I preastes of the Loyd, both because theyr hā is wpth Dauid, & because they knowe when Dauid fled, & shewed it not to me. But the seruantes of the kyng wolde not mōue theyr handes, to

1. xxx. r. v. 11. a and. xx. b des, to fall vpon the prestes of the Lorde.

And the kynge sayd to Doeg: turne thou, and fall vpon the prestes. And Doeg the Edomite turned, and ranne vpon the prestes, and slue that same daye foure skore ad syue personnes, that dyd weare a linnen Ephod. And Abiathar the prestes smote he wpyth the edge of the swearde, bothe men and women, chyldren and suckylnges, oxen and asses and shepe.

And one of the sonnes of Ahimelech, the sonne of Abiathar (named Abiathar) escaped & fled to David. And Abiathar shewed David, howe that Saul had slayne the Lordes prestes. And David sayd vnto Abiathar: I wyl it the same daye, wpa Doeg the Edomite was there, that he wolde tel Saul.

And I am cause of þe death of all the soules of thy fathers house. Abyde thou wpyth me, and feare not: for yf anye man seke my soule, he shall seke thynne also, wpyth me thou shalt be in sauegard.

The. xliii. Chapter.

David fleeth into the wyldernes of ziph.

When they tolde David sayenge: Beholde the Philistines fyght agaynst Keilah, and spoyle the barnes.

Therfore David asked the Lorde aduise sayenge: shal I go and smyte these Philistines? And the Lorde answered vnto David: go and smyte the Philistines, and saue Keilah. And Davids men that were wpyth him, sayd vnto hym: se, we be afrayed here in Iuda: how moch more then yf we come to Keilah agaynst the host of the Philistines? Then David asked the Lorde agayne.

And the Lorde answered hym and sayde: Arise, and go downe to Keilah, for I wyl deliuer the Philistines into thynne hande.

And so David and hys me went to Keilah, and fought wpyth the Philistines, and droue awaye theyr catell, and smote them wpyth a great slaughter. And so David saued the inhabytters of Keilah. And it chaunced, when Abiathar the sone of Ahimelech fled to David to Keilah, þe brought an Ephod wpyth hym in hys hande.

And it was tolde Saul, that David was come to Keilah. And Saul sayde: God hath deliuered him into myne had. For he is in now þe is come into a towne that hath gates & barres. And Saul called al the people together to warre, for to go downe to Keilah, and to beslege David & hys men. And David hauynge knowlege that Saul mygnyed myschere agaynst him, sayd to Abiathar þe prest: * Bynge þe Ephod. Then sayd David: O Lorde God of Israel, thy seruaut hath hearde, þe Saul is about to come agaynst Keilah to destroye the cytie for my sake. Wyl the men of Keilah deliuer me into hys hande? And wil Saul come downe, as thy seruaut hath heard saye? O Lorde God of Israel, tel thy seruaut. And the Lorde sayd: Wyl come downe. Thā sayd David: Wyl the me of Keilah deliuer me and the me that is with me into the had of Saul? And the Lorde sayde: they wyl betraie pou.

Then David & his men which were wpyth a syre hūdyed, arose & departed out of Keilah & wēt wpyther they coule. And it was tolde Saul, that David was fled from Keilah, and he let the iourney alone. David abode in the wyldernes in strong holdes, & remayned a moūtayne in the wyldernes of ziph. And Saul sought him euery daye, but God kept hym not into his had. And David saw þe Saul was come out, to seke his lyfe. And David was in the wyldernes of ziph in the thicket. And Jonathas Sauls sonne and he went to David into the thicket, and comforted his hande in God, & sayde vnto him: feare not, for þe hand of Saul my father shal not fynde the, and thou shalt be kynge over Israel, & I must be next vnto the. And thus doeth Saul my father knowe. * And they made a bond both of the together before the Lorde. And David tarped byll in the thicket, and Jonathas went to his house. Then cam the ziphites to Saul, to Gibeā, saying: Dost thou not David hyde him selfe fast by the strong holdes, in a thicket that is by the hill of Hachila, on the ryght syde of the wyldernes? Nowe therfore kynge, thou mayst come downe accordyng to all the lust of thy soule: come downe, & our parte shalbe to deliuer him into the kynges hand. And Saul sayd: Blessed are ye in the Lorde: for ye haue compassion on me. So I praye you, & shalde matter well, knowe & se hys haunte, wpyth hys fote hath bene, and who hath seene there, for it is tolde me, that he is very secret, and worketh craftely. So therfore, I haue all the lurking places, where he hydeth himselfe, and come ye agayne to me with certentye, and I wyl go wpyth pou. And yf he is in the lande, I wyl serche hym out thence out all the thousandes of Iuda.

And they arose, and went to ziph before Saul. But David and hys men were in the wyldernes of Maon, in the playne that is in the ryght the ryghte bande of Jesimon. Saul also and his men went to seke: and they tolde David therfore he went vnto a rocke, and abode in the wilderness of Maon. And whē Saul heard that, he folowed after David in þe wilderness of Maon. And Saul and his men went on the one syde of the mountayne, and David and his men on the other syde. And David toke thought, how to get frō Saul. For Saul and his men compassed David & his men, round about, to take the. But ther came a messenger to Saul, sayinge: hast the and come, for the Philistynes are come into the lande. Therfore, Saul returned from persecuting David, and went agaynst the Philistines. And therfore is it, that they called the place: The rock of separacyon. And David went thence, and dwelt in strong holdes at Engadi.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

David flieth into Engadi and there dyeth hym in a caue. Saul cometh in thither to do his calmerie.

When Saul was come agayne from followinge after the Philistynes, it fortuned, that ther were, which told hym sayinge: beholde, David is in the wilderness of Engadi. Then Saul toke the thousand chosen men out of all Israel, & went to seke David and his men in the heyght of the rockes, where wylde goates remayne.

And he came to the flockes of shepe in the waye. And Saul wente into a caue to couer his fete. And David and his men remayned in the inwarde partes of the caue.

And the mē of David sayd vnto him: se, þe daye is come, of whyche the Lorde sayd vnto the: Beholde, I wyl deliuer thyne enemyes into thyne hāde, and thou shalt do to him as it shall seme good in thy sight. Then David arose and cut of a lappe of Sauls garmente pryncely. And immediatly Davids hert smote hym because he had cut of a lap of Sauls garment. And he sayd vnto his mē the Lord kepe me from doyng that thyng vnto my master the Lordes anoynted, to laye myne hand vpon him, seynge he is the anoynted of the Lorde. (For as truly as the Lorde lyueth excepte I Layde myne hand vpon, or excepte his daye come, or yf he go not downe to warre and perishe: the Lorde be mercifull vnto me, that I laye not my hande vpon the Lordes anoynted.) And so David kept of his seruantes wyth these wordes, and suffered them not to ryse agaynst Saul.

But Saul rose vp out of the caue & went awayne, David also arose and wente out of þe caue, and cryed after Saul, sayinge: My Lorde kyng. And when Saul looked behynd hym, David bowed to the earth, & bowed hym selfe, and sayde to Saul: wherfore geueth thou an eare to mennes wordes þe saye, David sekerth euell agaynst the? Beholde, thy daye thyne eyes haue senne, howe that the Lorde hath deliuered the thys daye into myne hande in the caue. And some had me kyll the, but I had compassion on the, & said: I wyl not lay my handes on my master, for he is the Lordes anoynted. And mozeouer, my father, beholde, and se yet the lap of thy garment in my hande, in as much as I kyllled the not, when I cut of the lap of thy garment. Understand therfore, and se, that ther is neyther euell nor wychednesse in me, and that I haue not synned agaynst the. And yet thou huntst after my soule to take it. The Lorde be iudge betwene the and me, and the Lorde aduenge me of the. But myne hande be not vpon the. Accordyng as the old proverbe sayeth: wychednesse procradeth from the wyched: But myne hande be not vpon the. After whom is the kyng of Israel come out? After whome doest thou moue persecucion? after a dead dog, and after a flee? The Lorde be iudge, and iudge betwene the and me, and se and plete my cause, and auenge me of thyne hande.

When David had made an ende of speaking these wordes to Saul, Saul sayd: *is this thy voyce my sonne David? and Saul lyfte vp his voyce, and wepte, & sayd to David: thou arte ryghteouiser then I, for thou hast rewarded me wyth good, where as I haue rewarded the with euell. And thou hast shewed thys daye, how that thou hast dealt louyngly with me, for as much as when the Lorde had locked me in thyne handes, thou kyllledst me not. For who shal fynde his enemye, and let hym depart into a good waye? Therfore the Lorde reward the with good for that thou hast done vnto me thys daye. And now beholde, I wote well þe thou shalt be kyng, and that the kyngdome of Israel shalbe stablyshed in thyne hande.

¶ There now therfore vnto me by þe Lorde that thou shalt not destroye my seide after me, & that thou shalt not put my name oute of my fathers house. And David swore vnto Saul, and Saul wote home. But David and his men gat them vp vnto an holde.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

Samuel dyeth. David flieth into the wilderness of Maon.

And Samuel dyed, and al the Israelites gathered together, and lamented hym, and buried him in his owne house at Rama.

And David arose, and gat hym to þe wilderness of Maon. And ther was a man in Maon whose posselsys was in Carmel, and the man was exceeding myghtye, and had thre thousand shepe & a thousand goates. And he was cheryng his shepe in Carmel.

The name of the man was Abai, and the name of his wyfe was Abigail, and she was a woman of a synfuler wylledome, and bewtifull. But the man was churlyſhe, and of ſpewde condicions, and was of the kynred of Caleb. And David hearde in the wyl-derneſſe, þ ꝑ Abal dyd there hys ſhepe. And David ſent out ten young men, and ſayd vnto them: get you vnto Carmel, and go to Abal, ad grete him in my name. And thus ſhal ye ſay: peace be to the, peace be to thyne houſe and peace be vnto all that thou haſt. Beholde, I haue hearde ſaye, that thou haſt ſhepers. Now, thy ſheperdes were with vs ^{as (in the wylderneſſe),} and we dyd them no ſpyte neſther was ther ought ^{as (of the ſtocke)} myſſing vnto them, all the whyle they were in Carmel: aſke thy laddes, and they wyl ſhe w the. Wherefore let theſe younge me ſynd fauoure in thyne eyes (for we come in a good ſeaſon) and geue I praye the what ſouer commeth to thyne hande, vnto thy ſeruauntes, and to thy ſonne David.

And whan Dauids younge me came, they told Abal all thoſe wordes in the name of David, & the helde they: peace. And Abal answered Dauids ſeruauntes, & ſayde: what is David? & what is the ſonne of Iſai: there is plenty of ſeruauntes now a dayes, that breake away euery man from hys maſter. Shall I the take my bread, my water & my ſhepe, & I haue kyled for my ſhepers, & geue it vnto men whom I wote not whence they be: And ſo Dauids ſeruauntes turned their waye, and went agayne, and came and told him al thoſe ſayinges. And David ſayd vnto hys men: gyde euery man hys ſweard aboute hym. And they gydded euery man his ſweard about him, and David was gydded with his ſweard. And there folowed David vpon a foure hundred men, and two hundred abode by the ſtuſſe. But one of þ laddes told Abigail Abals wyfe, ſaying: Behold, David ſent meſſengers vnto oure maſter out of the wylderneſſe to ſalute hym and he rayled on them. And yet the men are very good vnto vs, and dyd vs no diſpleaſure, neſther miſſed we any thinge, as longe as we were conuerſant wth them, when we were in the fel- des. They were a wall of defence vnto vs bothe by nyght and daye, all the whyle we were with them keepynge ſhepe. Nowe ther- fore, take hede, & ſe what thou haſt to do for there is an occaſyon of euell geuen agaynſte our maſter and all his houſholde, ſeyng: he is as a ſone of Belſai vngacious to ſpeake to. Then Abigail made haſt, and toke two hundred loaves, & two bottelles of wyne, & ſyue ſhepe ready dyſſed, and ſyue meaſures of parched cozne, and an hundred frayles of ſpygges, and laded them on aſſes, and ſayde vnto her younge men: go ye befoze me. Beholde, I come after you. But ſhe tolde her huſband Abal nothinge therof. And as ſhe rode on her aſſe, ſhe came pympely downe the ſyde of the hyll, and beholde, David and his me came downe agaynſt her, & ſhe met them.

And David ſayde: in vayne haue I kept all that this ſelowe hath in the wylderneſſe ſo that nought was myſſed of al that putted vnto hym. And he hath quyte me out for good. So and ſo do God vnto the mymes of David, yf I leaue of al that putte- ne to him, by the daſynge of the daye, any thinge that pyſſeth agaynſt the walle. And when Abigail ſawe David, ſhe bowed her ſelfe before him, & fel befoze him on her face, and bowed her ſelfe to the grovnde at his fete, and ſayd: Let this vngacious be counted myne, my Lorde, and let thy handmayde ſpeake in thyne audier, & ſay the worde of thy handmayde. Let my Lorde ^{as (the kynge)} regarde this vngacious Abal: for as his name is ſo is he, Abal is his name, & ſollie is with hym. But I thy handmayde ſawe not the younge men of my Lorde whom thou ſendeſt. Nowe therefore Lorde, as ſure as the Lorde ſpuech, & as thy ſoule ſpuech, the Lorde hath wythholde thee from comyng to ſpede bloud, ad with- drawe thyne hand from bloud ſpede. Nowe I praye God that thyne enemyes ad they entende to do my Lorde euell, maye be as Abal. And now this is þ bleſſing which thy handmayde hath brought vnto my Lorde: let it be geuen vnto the younge men, that ſelowe my Lorde. For geue þ treſpaſſe of thy handmayde, for the Lorde will make my Lorde a ſure houſe, becauſe my Lorde ſpyghed the batayles of the Lorde, and there can none euell be founde in the in all thy dayes. And yf any man ryle to perſecute the ſeke thy ſoule, the ſoule of my Lorde ſhall be bounde as in the bondell of the lpyng wth the Lorde thy God. And þ ſoules of thy enemyes ſhall God caſt out, euen as oute of the myde of a ſpyng. And when the Lorde ſhal haue done to my Lorde all the good that he hath promyſed the, and ſhal haue made the ruler ouer Iſrael: then ſhall it be no diſcourage vnto the, ner diſcourage of hearte vnto my Lorde, that thou haſt not ſpede bloud can- leſſe, ner aduenged thy ſelfe.

But when the Lorde ſhal haue dealt wth my Lorde, the thyneke on thyne handmayde. And David ſayd to Abigail: bleſſed be the Lorde God of Iſrael, whych ſent this daye to mete me. Bleſſed is thy ſayng & bleſſed art thou, which haſt kepte me from daye from comyng to ſpede bloud, & from aduengyng my ſelfe with myne owne hand. For in very dede, as ſure as the Lorde God of Iſrael ſpuech, whiche hath kepte me from hurtynge the, excepte thou hadde be- ſted and met me, thyneſt þ, there hadde be- leſte vnto Abal by the daſynge of the daye.

dape, a pysser agaynst the wall: And so David receaued of her hand, that whych she had brought hym: & sayde to her: go vp in peace to thyne house. Beholde, I haue hearde thy voyce, and haue accepted thy persone.

And Abigail came to Nabal: & beholde, he helde a feast in hys house, lyke the feast of a kyng, and Nabals hert was mery wpythin hym, for he was verpe dꝛochē. Wherefore she tolde hym nothyng, nether lesse nor moze, until the moꝛowe dape. But in þe moꝛnyng when the wyne was gone out of Nabal, his wyfe tolde hym tēse wordes, and his heart dyed wpythin hym, and he became as a stone, And vpon a ten dayes after, the Lord smote Nabal, that he dyed. And whē David heard that Nabal was dead, he sayde: Blessed be the Loꝛde that hath iudged the cause of my rebuke of the hand of Nabal, and hath kept hys seruauant from euil, and hath recompensed the wickednesse of Nabal, vpo his owne head. And David sent to comen wpyth Abigail: to thynēt to take her to his wife. And when the seruantes of David were come to Abigail to Carmel, they spake vnto her saying: David sent vs vnto the, to take þe to his wyfe. And she arose, and bowed her selfe on her face to the erth, & sayde: Beholde let thy hādmayde be a seruauit, to washe the fete of the seruantes of my Loꝛde. And Abigail hasted, and arose, & gat her vp vpon an Asse wpythfue damoselles of hers that went at her fete, and she went after þe messengers of David, and became hys wyfe. David also toke Ahinoam of Jezabel, & they were both hys wyues. But Saul gaue Michol hys daughter Dauids wyfe to Phalti the sonne of Laïs which was of Gallim.

¶ The. xxvi. Chapter.

¶ Saul sleapeth in hys tent, and David taketh away hys speare and a crewele of water, that rode at hys head.

The zippites came vnto Saul to Gibeā, sayeng: Doth not David hyde him selfe in þe hil of Hachila which is befoze Jersimon? Saul arose, and went downe to þe wyl-dernesse of ziph, haupng thre thousande chosen men of Israel with hym, for to seke David in the wyldernesse of ziph. And Saul pitched in the hil of Hachila which lyeth befoze Jersimon, by þe waye side. But David dwelt in the wyldernesse. And he sawe that Saul cam after hym into the wyldernesse. David therfoze sent out spyes, and vnderstode, that Saul was come in very dede.

And David arose and came to the place where Saul had pitched, and David behelde the place, where Saul laye, and Abner the sonne of Ner which was his chefe captayne Saul laye wpythin, & the people & the hooste rounde about hym. Then answered David and spake to Ahimelech the herhite, and to Abisai the sonne of Zarnia & brother to Joab saying: who wil go downe with me to Saul to the hooste? And Abisai sayde: I wyl go downe with the.

And so David and Abisai came downe to the people by nyght. And beholde, Saul lay slepyng wpythin the hoost, & his speare stakke in the ground at his head. But Abner & the people laye rounde aboute hym. Then sayde Abisai to David: God hath deliuered thyne enemye into thyne hād this dape. Now therfoze, let me smyte hym once wpyth my speare to the earth, and I wyl not smyte hym the seconde tyme. And David sayde to Abisai: destrope hym not. For who can laye his hād on the Loꝛdes anoynted, and be gyltlesse. And David sayde furthemoze: as sure as þe Loꝛde lyueth, the Loꝛde shall smyte hym or his dape shal come to dꝛe, or he shal descende into battell, and there perishe.

The Loꝛde kepe me fro laying myne hand vpon the Loꝛdes anoynted: But take thou now þe speare that is at hys head, & þe crewele of water, & let vs go. And so David take þe speare and the crewele of water from Sauls head, and they gat them awaye, and noman sawe it, or marked it, or awaked. For they were all a slepe, because the Loꝛde had sent a dead slepe vpon the. Then David went ouer to the other syde, and stode on þe toppe of an hyll asafarre of (a great space beyng betwene them) and David cryed to the people, and to Abner the sonne of Ner, saying: hearest thou not Abner? Abner answered, & sayde: What art thou that cryest to the kynges? and David sayde to Abner: art not thou a man: and who is lyke the in Israel? Wherefore the hast thou not kept thy Loꝛde þe kyng? For ther cam one of the folke in, to destrope the kyng thy Loꝛde. It is not good þe thou hast done. As truly as the Loꝛde lyueth, *ye are woꝛthy to dꝛe, because ye haue not kepte poure master, the Loꝛdes anoynted. And now se wher the kynges speare is and the crewele of water, that was at hys head.

And Saul knewe Dauids voyce, & sayd *is thys thy voyce my sonne David? & David sayd: it is my voyce, my Loꝛde. O kyng And he sayde: wherefoze doth my Loꝛde thus persecute hys seruauant? for what haue I done? or what euell is in myne hande? Now therfoze let my Loꝛde the kyng heare the wordes of hys seruauant. If the Loꝛde haue stered the vp agaynst me, let hym smell the sanoure of a sacrifice. But if they be the children of mē, curled are they befoze þe Loꝛd For they haue cast me out this dape from a bidpyng in the enheritaunce of the Loꝛde, saying: dꝛe, and go serue other goddes. Nowe therfoze let not my bloude fall to the earth befoze the face of the Loꝛde. For the kyng of Israel is come out to hunt a flee, as whē one doeth hunte a partrege in the mountaynes. Then sayde Saul: I haue synned, come agayne my sonne David, for I wyll do the no moze harme because my soule was precious in thynne eyes thys daye. Beholde, I haue played the sole, and haue erred exceedingly. And David answered and sayde: Beholde, the kynges speare, let one of the young men come ouer and set it. The Lorde rewarde euery man accordynge to hys ryghteousnesse and sayth: for the Lorde deliuered the into my hande thys daye, but I wolde not laye myne hand vpon the Lordes anoynted. And behold, like as thy lyfe was much set by this daye in myne eyes: so be my lyfe set by in the eyes of the Lorde, that he deliuer me out of all tribulation. Then Saul sayd to David: Blessed art thou my sonne David, for thou shalt be a doer and prenayle.

And so David went his waye, and Saul turned to his place agayne.

The xxvii. Chapter.

David fleeth to Achis kyng of Geth.

AND David sayde in hys hart: I shall percythe one daye or other by the hand of Saul. Therefore is there nothyng better for me, then to flee and saue my selfe in the lande of the Philistines, and Saul shall cease and seke me nomoze in all the coastes of Israel, & so shall I escape out of hys hand. And David arose, and he and the syre hundred men þ were with hym wnto Achis the sone of Maach, kyng of Geth. And David dwelt with Achis at Geth, both he & his men euery mā wyth his housholde, & David with his two wyues: Abinoā þ Jezrahelite, and Abigail Rabals wyfe of Carmel.

B And it was tolde Saul that David was fled to Geth, and he sought no moze for him. And David sayde vnto Achis: If I haue nowe founde grace in thynne eyes, let them geue me a place in some towne in þ felde, þ I maye dwell there. For why shulde thy seruant dwell in þ head cytie of the kyngdome with the? Then Achis gaue him zikleg that same day, for which cause zikleg pertayneth vnto the kynges of Iuda vnto thys daye.

And the tyme that David dwelt in the countrey of þ Philistines, was foure monethes, and certayne dayes. And David & hys men

C went vp and ranne vpon the Gerasites, the Gerzites and the Amalekites: for those nations were from the begynnyng the inhabitants of the land, as men go to Sur, vnto the land of Egypte. And David smote the lade, and let neyther man ner woman alpye, and droue awaye the shepe, the oxen, the asses, camelles, and clothes, and retourned, and cam to Achis. And Achis sayde: where haue ye bene a rounge thys daye? And David answered: Towarde the south of Iuda, and towarde the south of the Iezrahelites, and to-warde the south of the Kenites. And David saued neyther man nor woman alpye, he freed them to come to Geth, for feare (sayde he) lest they shulde tell on vs sayinge: David and so wyll be his maner al the tyme he dwelleth in the countrey of the Philistines. And Achis beleued David, sayinge: he doeth his people of Israel, and therefore shalbe my seruant for euer.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The Philistines moue warre agaynst Saul wherch seeth after an enchanter.

AND it chaunced in those dayes, that the Philistines gathered theyr host together to warre, to fyghe with Israel. And Achis sayd to David: Be sure, thou shalt go out with me to the battell, thou and the men that are with the. And David sayd to Achis: then thou shalt knowe, what thy seruant can do. And Achis sayd agayne to David: Then I wyll make the keeper of my head for euer. * Samuel was then dead, and all Israel had lamented hym, & buried hym in Rama hys owne cytie. * And Saul put the weme that had spretes of prophesie, and the soothsayers out of the lade. And the Philistines gathered together, and cam and pytched in Sunem. And Saul gathered Israel together, & they pytched in Gilbe. And when Saul sawe the host of the Philistines, he was afrayed, and hys herte was astonied. And when Saul asked counsell of the Lorde, the Lorde answered hym not by dreames, nor by Urim nor by prophetes. Then sayde Saul vnto his seruantes: * seke me a woman þ hath a spirit of prophesie, that I maye go to her & sit of her. And his seruantes sayd to him: Beholde, there is a womā that hath a spirit of prophesie at Endor.

And Saul chaiged hym selfe, and put in other rayment, & then went he and the men wyth hym, and they came to the woman in nyght. And he sayde: prophesie vnto me by the sprete, & bring me hym vp whom I shall name vnto the. And the woman sayde vnto hym: Beholde thou knowest what I haue bath done, howe he hath destroyed þ weme that had prophesying spretes, & the soothsayers oute of the lande. Wherefore then wilt thou an occasyon agaynst my soule, that I maye kyll me? And Saul swore to her by the Lorde sayng: As surely as the Lorde liueth, thou shalt haue no harme chaunce þ for this thyng. Then sayde the womā: whom shall I bring vp vnto the? he answered: Bring me Samuel. Whē þ woman saue Samuel cryed wyth a lowde voyce, & spake to Saul sayinge: why haste thou disceaued me? art Saul. And the kyng sayde vnto her: I am not afrayde. What seest thou? The woman sayd vnto Saul: I se goddes ascendyng vnto out of the earth. He sayde vnto her agayne:

C what fallis he of? She answered: there cometh vp an olde man wth a mantell vpoⁿ hym And Saul perceaued y^t it was Samuel and he stouped wth his face to the grounde, and bowed hym selfe. And Samuel sayd to Saul: why hast thou vnquieted me, to make me be brought vp? Saul answered: I am soze encombred. For the Philistines make warre agaynst me, & God is departed from me, and answereth me nomore, nether by prophetes nether by dreames. And therfore I haue called y^e, that thou mayest tell me, what I shall do. Then sayd Samuel: wherfoze dost thou aske of me, whyle the Lorde is gone fro the, and is become thyne enemy? Truly y^e Lorde hath done for hym selfe, euen as he spake by my hand. * For the Lorde hath rent y^e kyngdome oute of thyne hande, and geuen it thy neyghboure Dauid. Because thou obeydest not the voyce of the Lorde, nor executedst his farrer wthath vpoⁿ the Amalekites, therfore hath the Lorde done this vnto the this day. And moreover, the Lorde wyl deliuer Israel wth the into the handes of the Philistines.
C To morowe shalt thou and thy sonnes be wth me, and the Lorde shall geue the hooft of Israel into the handes of the Philistines. Then Saul fell stragghe wape flat on the earth as longe as he was, & was soze adread, because of the wordes of Samuel.

D And there was no strength in hym, for he had eatte no bread all the dape and the nyght before. And the womā cam vnto Saul, and saue that he was soze troubled, & sayd vnto hym: Se, thyne hādmayde hath obeyed thy voyce and * haue put my soule in my hande, and haue hekened vnto thy wordes whych thou saydest vnto me. Now therfore heken thou also vnto the voyce of thyne hādmayd and let me set a morsel of bread before the, y^e thou mayest eate and get the strength, and then go on thy iourneye. He refused, & sayde: I wyl not eate. But hys seruantes and y^e woman together compelled him, and he hekened vnto they^r voyce. And so he arose fro the earth, and sat hym on a bed. The womā had a fat calfe in the house, and she halsted ad kylled it, and toke slowze & kneded it, & dyd bake swete cakes therof, and brought them before Saul and before his seruantes. And when they had eatte, they stode vp, and went awape the same nyght.

The. xxix. Chapter.

C Dauid goeth wth kyng Achis to fight agaynst Saul.
The Philistines were gathered together wth all they^r armyes vnto Apphet: And the Israelites pyched in Aijah, which is in Iesrahel. And the Lordes of the Philistines went forth wth the hundredes and thousandes. But Dauid and hys men came beppnde wth Achis. Then sayde the Lordes of y^e Philistines, what art thounder Chuzes? Achis sayd vnto the Lordes of the Philistines: Is not thys Dauid the seruauant of Saul the kyng of Israel, whych hath bene wth me these dayes or yeaeres? B haue foude no fault in him, sence he fled vnto me vnto this dape. And the Lordes of the Philistines were wroth wth hym and sayd vnto hym: Make this felowe returne, that he maye go agayne to his place whych thou hast appoynted him: & let him not go downe wth vs to battell, lest in the battell he be an aduersarye to vs. For wherwth could he better obtayne the fauoure of hys master, then wth the heades of these men? Is not this Dauid, to whom they sange in daunces * Saul slue hys thousande, and Dauid hys ten thousande? Then Achis called Dauid, & sayd vnto hym: As sure as the Lorde lyueth, thou hast bene honest, and good in my syght whan thou wentest out and in wth me in y^e the hooft: nether haue I founde euil wth the sence thou camest to me vnto this dape: Reuerthelesse, the lordes of the Philistines fauoure the not: Wherfore now retourne, and go in peace, that thou dysplease not the lordes of the Philistines. And Dauid sayd vnto Achis: And what haue I done? what hast thou founde in thy seruauant, as longe as I haue bene wth the vnto thys dape, that I maye not go fyght agaynst the enemyes of my Lorde the kyng?

Achis answered & sayd to Dauid: I knowe D that thou art good, & art in my syght, as an Angell of God. Now wthstādpyng the lordes of the Philistines haue sayde: Let hym not go vp wth vs to battell. Wherfore now ryse vp earlye in y^e moorninge wth thy masters seruantes that are come to the: and whyle be vp earlye (as sone as ye haue lychte) departe. And so Dauid & hys men rose vp earlye to departe in the moorninge, & to returne into the land of the Philistines. And y^e Philistines went vp to Iesrahel.

The. xxx. Chapter.

C Dauid retourneth from kyng Achis to the zikleg burnt.

B At whan Dauid & hys men were come to zikleg the third dape, the Amalechites had rusthed in vpon the south, and vpon zikleg, & had smytten zikleg, & burnt it wth fyre, & had taken the women (y^e were therein) prisoners, both smel & great: but slew not a man, saue carped the wth the, & wēt they^r wapes. So Dauid and hys men came to the cytie: & beholde, it was burnt wth fyre, & their wyues they^r sonnes and they^r daughters were carped a wape. Then Dauid & the people that was wth hym, lyfte vp they^r voyces and wept, vntill they coude wepe nomore. And Dauids two wyues were take prisoners al- B so: Abinoi the Jezrabelyte, and Abigail the wyfe of Nabal the Carmelyte. And David was in a thre wyde combraunce: for the people entended to stone hym, because the bertes of all the people were vexed for theyr sonnes & theyr daughters.

But David toke a good courage to hym in the Lorde bys God & sayde to Abiathar p prest Abimelechs sonne: I praye p, byng me the Ephod. And Abiathar brought the Ephod to David. And David asked counsell at the Lorde, sayinge: shall I folowe after this companye? and shall I ouertake them? And he answered him: folowe, for thou shalt ouertake them, and recouer the praye.

So David and the syre hundred me that were with hym, wnt & cam to the ryuer Besoz. wger a part o' them abode. But David & foure hundred men folowed: for two hundred abode behynde, beyng to werpe to go ouer the ryuer Besoz. And they founde an Egyptian in the felde, and brought hym to David & gaue hym bread to cate, & water to dryncke, & gaue hym a fewe fygges & two clusters of reasyns. And when he had eaten, bys spere cam agayne to hym: for he had eaten no bread nor dryncke, no water in the dayes & thre nyghtes. And David sayd vnto him: to whom belogest thou? & whence art thou? he sayd: I am a yoge ma of Egypt and seruaunt to an Amalekite: and my master left me behynde, because it is thre dayes agone, p I fell sycke: we came a roung vpo the south of Chetys, and against Juda, and toward the south of Caleb. And we burnt zphleg wth fyre. And David sayde to hym: canst thou byng me to this companye? And he sayde: sweare vnto me by God, that thou wylt nether kyl me, nor delpyer me into the handes of my master, and I wyl bynge the to the companye. And when he had brought hym thither, beholde, they lape skattered a-bode vpon the earth, eatyng & drynckynge & daunsyng, because of the plectous & great praye p they had carped awaye out of p land of the Philistines, & out of the lade of Juda.

And David layd vpon the from the euen vntyl the twylgght on p moztowe: so p there escaped not a man of them, saue foure hundred young men whych rode awaye vpo camels, and fled. And David recouered al that the Amalekites had carped awaye, & David rescued his two wyues: so that ther was no person of the lackyng, small o' great, sonne o' daughter, o' of the spoule of all that they had taken awaye, David recouered them al agayne. And David toke all the shepe, & the oren. And they dzaue the before bys catell, & sayd: this is Dauids pray. And David cam to the two hundred men, that were to werpe for to folowe David, whome they had made also to abyde at the ryuer Besoz. And they came to mete David, and p people pmeted hym. And whē David cam to p people, he luted the. The answered all the wyched and the vnehyftes (of the men that went w David) & sayde: because they went not with the therfore wyl we geue them none of the pray that we haue recouered. But let every man take bys wyfe and bys chyldren: These le them cary awaye and be walkyng.

Then sayde David: ye shall not do so, my bzethren, w that which the Lorde hath geue vs, & hath preserued vs, & delpyered the companye p came agaynst vs, into oure handes. For who shuld berke vnto you in this matter? But as bys parte is p gorth downe & fyghteth, so shall bys parte be that tarrye by the stuffe, p it maye be parted alpe. And so fro that daye forwarde: was that make a statute and lawe in Israel, vntyl this daye. Whē David therfore cam to zphleg, he met the elders of the praye vnto the elders of Juda, and to bys frendes, sayinge: se, there is a helpyng for you, of the spoule of the enemyes of the Lorde. He sent to them of Bethel: to the of south Ramoth: to the of Jathir: to them of Aroer: to them of Sephamoth: to them of Esthemaa: to them of Racheil: to them of the cyties of Jerahmeel: to them of syon of the Benites: to them of Bozama: to them of Bozalan: to them of Athach: to the that are in Hebron, and in all places, wher David and bys men were wont to haunt.

he Philistines fought agaynst Israel and the men of Israel fled awaye fro the Philistines, & fell downe wounded in mounte Gilboa. And the Philistines preyed soze vpon Saul & bys sonne, & slewe Jonathan, & Abinadab & Melchisua Sauls sonnes. And whē the battell went soze agaynst Saul, the archers with bowes founde hym, and he was soze afraied of the archers. But bys harness bearer wolde not, for he was soze afraied. And Saul toke a sword & fell vpo it. And whē bys harness bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell lykewise vpo his sword, & dyed wth hym. And so dyed, & bys thre sonnes, and bys harness bearer, and all bys men that same daye together.

And when the men of Israel that were of the other syde of p valye, & they of the other syde Jordan heard p the men of Israel were put to flyght, and that Saul and bys sonnes were dead, they left the cyties, & came awaye and the Philistines cam, and dwelt in them.

And they cut of hys heade, and strypped him out of his harnes, and sent into the lande of þe Philistines on euery syde that they shulde pylp the it in the temple of theyr Idoles, and amonge the people. And they layed vp his harnesse in the house of Achis, but they hanged vp hys body on the wall of Bethsan. * When the inhabitants of Jabes in Gilead hard therof, what the Philistines hadde done to Saul, they arose (as many as were stronge men) & went al nyght and toke the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sonnes from the wall of Bethsan, and came to Jabes, and * burnt them there, and toke theyr bones, and buryed them vnder a tree at Jabes, and fasted seuen dayes.

¶ The lamentacion of David for Saul and Jonathan:

3 After the deathe of Saul, when David was returned from the * slaughter of the Amalekites, and had bene two dayes in zigleg: Behold, there came a man the thyrde day out of the hooft from Saul, with his clothes rent and earth vpon hys heade. And when he came to David, he fell to the earth, and dyd obeysaunce. David sayde vnto hym: whence comest thou? He sayde vnto hym: Out of the hooft of Israel I am escaped. And David sayde vnto hym: And what is chaunced? tell me. He sayde: the people is fled from the battle, and many of the people are ouerthrowen, and dead, and Saul and Jonathan hys sone are deade also.

And David sayd vnto the ponge man, that tolde him these thynges: how knowest thou that Saul and Jonathan hys sone be deade? The ponge man that tolde hym, answered: I came by chaunce to mount Gilboa. And beholde, Saul leaned vpon hys speare. For the charettes and compaynes of horsemen folowed hard after him. And when he looked backe, he sawe me, and called me. And I answered: here am I. And he sayde vnto me: what arte thou? I answered hym: I am an Amalekite. He sayde vnto me agayne. Stand vpon me, and see me. For anguysh is come vpon me, though my lyfe be yet all in me. And so I skode vpo him, and slue him, for I was sure that he coulde not lyue, after that he had fallen. And I toke the crowne that was vpon hys heade, and the braselet that was on hys arme, and haue brought them hyther vnto my Lorde.

¶ Then David toke holde on hys clothes, * and rent them, and so dyd all the men that were with him. And they mourned, & wepte, and fasted vntyll euen, for Saul and Jonathan his sonne, & for the people of the Lorde, and for þe house of Israel, because they were ouerthrowen with the swerde. * 11. Reg. iii. 2 and. xlii. 1

And David sayde vnto the ponge man that brought hym these thynges. Whence art thou? And he answered, I am the sone of an alpaunt an Amalekite. And David sayd vnto him: Howe is it that thou wast not afrayde, to lay thyne hande on the Lordes anoynted, to destrope him? And David called one of hys ponge men and sayde: Go to, and runne vpon him. And he smote hym: that he dyed: then sayd David vnto him: thy bloud be vpon thyne owne head. * For thine owne mouth hath testified agaynst the sayeng: I haue slayne the Lordes anoynted. * 1. Reg. xix. 10. Luke. xix. 17.

And David mourned with thys lamentacion ouer Saul and ouer Jonathan hys sonne, and bad teache the chyldren of Israel the vse of the bowe. And beholde, it is wyrtten in the booke of the psalme. * 1. Reg. x. 16. 2. Reg. i. 10.

¶ And David sayde: Consyther, O Israel, these that be deade and wounden vpon the hye hylls. O noble Israel, the wounden are slayne vpon the hylls: Oh howe are the myghty ouerthrowen. * Tell it not in Gath, nor publishe it in the streates of Ascalon: lest the daughters of the Philistines reioyse, and lest the daughters of the vncircumcised triumph. Ye mountaynes of Gilboa, vpon you be nether drwe nor rayne, no vpo the felde of offerpuges. For there the wynde of the myghtie is caste downe: the wynde of Saul, as though he had not bene anoynted with oyle. The bowe of Jonathan and the swerde of Saul turned neuer backe agayne emptye, from the bloude of the slayne, & from the

Saul and Ionathas were louely & pleasant in theyr lyues, & in theyr deathes they were not deuyded. They were swyfter then Eagles, and stronger then Lyons. He daughters of Israel wepe ouer Saul, whiche clothed pou in purple with pleasures, and hanged ornamentes of golde vpon your apparell. Howe were the myghty slayne in battell? After this it is fortunied, that David asked counsel at the Lord, sayeng: Shall I go vp into any of the cyties Juda? And þe Lord sayde vnto him: go. And David sayde agayne. Whither shall I go? He answered: Vnto Hebron. And so David went thither with his two wyues, Abinoam þe Iesrahelite, & Abigail Nabals wife the Carmelite. And the men that were with him, did David carry vp also, eueri mā with his household. And they dwelte in the townes of Hebron. And the men of Juda came, and there they anoynted David kyng, ouer the house of Juda. And they tolde David sayeng: It is * the men of Iabes in Gilead that buryed Saul. And David sent messengers vnto the men of Iabes in Gilead, and sayd vnto them: blessed are ye vnto þe Lord, that ye haue shewed suche kyndnesse vnto your lord Saul, and haue buried him. And now the Lord shewe mercy and truth vnto you. And I will do you also suche kyndnes as ye haue done in this thyng: Therefore now let your handes be stronge and playe ye the men: For your master Saul is deade. And they that are of the house of Juda haue anoynted me kyng ouer them. But Abner the sonne of Ner þe captayne of Sauls hoste, toke Ishboeth the sonne of Saul, and brought him to Mahanaim, and made hym kyng ouer Gilead, and ouer the Assurites, and ouer Iesrahel, Ephraim, Ben Jamin, and ouer all Israel. And Ishboeth Sauls sonne was fourty yere olde, when he began to reygne ouer Israel, and reigned two yere. But þe house of Juda folowed David. * And the tyme whiche David reigned in Hebron ouer the house of Juda, was. vii. yere and fyre monethes. And Abner the sonne of Ner and the seruantes of Ishboeth the sonne of Saul went out of Mahanaim, to Gibeon. And Joab the sonne of Zaria and the ser-uantes of David wente out, and met them by the Pole of Gibeon. And they sat downe the one, on the one syde of the Pole, and the other on the other syde. And Abner sayde to Joab: let the yonge men aryse, and playe before vs. And Joab sayde: Let them aryse. Then there arose and wente ouer, twene of Ben Jamin by nombze, whiche perteyned to Ishboeth the sonne of Saul, and thre of the seruantes of David. And eueri caught his felowe (that came agayn) by the head, and thruste his swerde in his syde, and so they fell downe together. And for the place was called: The felde of the myghty. And it is in Gibeon. And there began an excedyng cruell battell that same day. For Abner and the men of Israel slew for the seruantes of David.

And there were thre sonnes of Zaria there: Joab, Abisai and Asahel. And Asahel was as lyghte of foote as a wilde Ree, and Asahel folowed after Abner, and came neyther to the ryght hande nor to the left, from Abner. Then Abner looked behynd him, and sayde: arte thou Asahel? He answered: yee that I am. Abner sayde: turne the right to the ryght hande of the left and catche one of the yonge men, and take the his weapon. But Asahel wolde not departe from him. And Abner sayd agayne to Asahel departe from me. Wherfore shoulde I synge the staffe ground, and not be able to holde vp myn to Joab thy brother? Howbeit, when he wolde in no wyse departe, Abner with the hynder ende of the speare smote hym in the throte rybbes, that the speare came out behynd hym: that he fell downe in the same place, and dyed there. And as many as came to the place where Asahel fell downe and dyed, stode still. Joab also and Asahel folowed Abner. And the sonne went downe, when they were come to the hyll Ama that lyeth before Giah by þe way that goeth to the wyldernesse of Gibeon. And the chyldren of Ben Jamin gathered them selues together on a heape, to Abner, and stode on the toppe of an hyll. Then Abner called to Joab, and sayde: Shall the swerde be stode still for ever? knowest thou not, that it shall be byternesse in the latter ende? howebeit shall it be, yee thou bydest the people from folowynge the? yee? And Joab sayde: as truly as God lyueth, I will not spoken in the moynynge, the people had bene departed, eueri one from perswytynge his brother. And so * Joab blew a trumpet, and all the people stode still, and put after Israel no moze nether fought they no moze. And Abner and his men walked ouer Jordan, and paste thowre all Bethron tyll they came to Mahanaim.

And Joab returned from persecuting Abner. And when he had gathered all the people together, there lacked of Davids seruantes nyntene men, and Absal. But the seruantes of David had slayne of Ben Jamin, and of Abners men, thre hundred and the scoze men. And they toke vp Absal, & buried him in the sepulchre of hys father in Bethlehem. And Joab and hys men wente all nyght, vntill the daunynge of the daye, and came to Hebron.

CChe. iii. Chapter.

Abner cometh to David and byngeth hym hys wyfe Michol. Joab killeth Abner.

There was longe warre betwene the house of Saul, and the house of David. But David waxed stronger and stronger, and y^e house of Saul waxed weaker and weaker. * And vnto David were chyliden bozne in Hebron: hys eldest sonne also was Ammon, of Ahinoam the Jezraelite: the seconde Cheleab of Abigail the wyfe of Nabal y^e Carmelite: the thyrde Absalom, the sonne of Maachab y^e daughter of Thalmay, the kyng of Gessur: the fourthe, Adonia, the sonne of Hagith: the fyfte, Sephatia the sone Abital: the syxte Jethraab y^e Egla Davids wyfe. These were bozne to David in Hebron. And it fortuned, that whyle there was warre betwene the house of Saul and the house of David, Abner helde vp the house of Saul. And Saul had a concubyne named Rizpa, the daughter of Ahia. And Ishobeth sayde to Abner: Wherefore haste thou gone into my fathers concubynes? Then was Abner very wrothe for the wordes of Ishobeth, and sayde: Am I not a dogges head, which against Juda do shewe mercy this daye vnto the house of Saul thy father, and to hys brethren and frendes, and haue not deliuered the into the hande of David: and thou fyndest a faulte in me this daye for thys woman? * So and so do God to Abner. For as the Lorde hath sworne to David, so wyll I be on hys syde, to byngne the kyngdome from the house of Saul, that the throne of David may be stablished ouer Israell, and ouer Juda euen from Dan to Bersabe. And he coulde geue Abner neuer a worde to answer, because he feared him.

And Abner sent messengers to David secretly, sayng: Whose is the lande? Make a bonde with me, and beholde, my hande is with the, to byngne all Israel vnto the. He sayd: It is good, that I make a bonde with the. But one thyng I requyre of the, that thou se not my face, except thou fyrt byng Michol Davids daughter, wher thou comest to se me.

And David sent messengers to Ishobeth

Sauls sonne: sayng, * deliuer me my wyfe Michol, which I married with * an hundred foreskinnes of y^e Philistines. And Ishobeth sent, and toke her from her husbände * Daltiel the sone of Laïs. And her husbände went with her, & came wepyng behynde her, tyll they came to Bahurim. Then sayde Abner vnto hym, go and returne. And he returned. And Abner had communicacyn with the elders of Israel, sayng: ye sought for David in tymes past, that he myght be your kyng. Nowe then do it: for the Lorde hath sayd of David: By the hand of my seruante David I wyll saue my people Israel, out of y^e handes of the Philistines, and out of the hande of all they^e enemies. And Abner spake in y^e eares of Ben Jamin, and went to tel in the eares of David in Hebron, all that Israell was contente with, and the whole house of Ben Jamin. And so Abner came to David to Hebron, hauyng twenty men with hym, and David made hym & the men that were with hym a feaste. And Abner sayde vnto David: I wyll vp, and go gather al Israel vnto my lord the kyng, that they maye make an appoyntement with the, and that thou mayst commaunde all, as thynne harte desyret. And when David had let Abner departe, he went in peace.

And beholde, the seruantes of David, & Joab came from chasyng the robbers, and brought a great pray with them. But Abner was not with David in Hebron: for he had sent him away to depart in peace. Wherfore Joab and all the holste that was with hym, were come, men tolde Joab sayng: Abner the sonne of Ner came to the kyng, and he hath sente hym away, y^e he is gone in peace. Then Joab came to the kyng, and sayde: What hast thou done? Behold, Abner came vnto the, and why hast thou sent him away, that he shulde scape quyte? Thou knowest Abner y^e sone of Ner, for he came to discyue the, and to knowe thy outgoynge & ingoynge, and to knowe all that thou doest. And when Joab was come out fro David, he sent messengers after Abner, which brought hym a gayne from the well of Syza, unknowynge to David. And when Abner was come a gayne to Hebron, Joab toke him alyde in y^e gate: * to speake with him secretly, & smote him vnder the thozt rybbes that he dyed, for the bloud of Absal hys brother. And when afterwarde it came to Davids eare, he sayd: I and my kyngdome are gyltes before the Lorde for euer concernynge the bloud of Abner the sonne of Ner. Let the bloude remayne on the heade of Joab & on all hys fathers house: that the house of Joab be neuer wout one o^r other that hath runnyng yssues o^r leper, and that leaneth on a staf, and y^e doth fall on the sword, & lacketh bread. And the cause why ¶ Baanah and Rechab ſlay Iſboſeth the ſonne of Saul.

¶ When Sauls ſonne heard that Abner was dead in Hebron, his handes were feble, and all the Iſraelites were aſtrayde: and Sauls ſone had two women that were captaynes ouer the ſoudyars, the one called Baanah, and the other Rechab, the ſonnes of Rimmon a Berothite, of the chyldzen of Ben Jamin: for Beroth was reckened to Ben Jamin. And theſe Berothites fled to Githaim, and ſo iourned there vntyll the ſame tyme. * And Jonathas Sauls ſonne had a ſonne that was lame on his fete. And he was ſyue yere olde, when the tydynges came of Saul and Jonathas out of Iſrael. And hys nouriſe toke him vp, & fled away. And as ſhe made haſt to ſer, the chyldre fell, & began to halt, & hys name was Giphthiſeth. And the ſonnes of Rimmon the Berothite, Rechab and Baanah went, and came in the heat of the day to the houſe of Iſboſeth, whiche ſlepte on a bed at none. ¶ And the woman that was the keeper of the doze, and cleuſed the doore, was a ſleper. ¶ And they came into the myddes of the houſe as though they wolde haue fetched whete, and Rechab & Baanah hys brother ſmote hym vnder the thozt rybbes and fled. For when they came into the houſe, he ſlept on a bed in his reſting chamber, and they ſmote him and ſlue hym, and beheaded hym, and put his heade, and gat them away thence, and playne all the nyght. And they brought the head of Iſboſeth vnto Dauid, to Hebron, and ſayde to the kynge: behold, there is the head of Iſboſeth Sauls ſonne, thynne enemy which ſought after thy lyfe. And the Lozde hath auenged my lozde the kynge thynne enemy of Saul and of his ſede.

¶ And Dauid answered Rechab and Baanah hys brother, the ſonnes of Rimmon the Berothite, and ſayd vnto them: * as I haue ſworne vnto the Lozde, which hath deliuered my ſoule out of all aduerſities: When I ſayde to the kynge: behold, there is the head of Iſboſeth Sauls ſonne, thynne enemy which ſought after thy lyfe. ¶ Dauid ſe yet againe anoynted kynge, and takerh the Arke from Syon.

¶ The came all the trybes of Iſrael vnto Dauid, vnto Hebron, and ſayd: We holde, we are of thy bone, and of thy fleſhe. And in tyme paſte when Saul was our kynge, thou leddeſt Iſrael in and out. And the Lozde hath ſayde to the: thou ſhalt fede my people Iſrael, and thou ſhalt be captayne ouer Iſrael. And ſo all the eldes of Iſraell came to the * kynge to Hebron. And kynge Dauid made a couenaut with them in Hebron befoze the Lozde. And he anoynted Dauid kynge ouer Iſrael. Dauid was thyrty yere olde, when he began to reygne, and he reygned forty yere. In Hebron he reygned ouer Iuda ſeuene yere, and ſyremonethes: And in Ieruſalem he reygned thyrty and thre yeres ouer all Iſrael and Iuda.

¶ The kynge alſo and his men went to Ieruſalem, vnto the Jebuſites, the inhabytantes of the lande. Which ſpake vnto Dauid ſaying: excepte thou take away the blynde and the lame, ſhalt thou not come in hyther. For they ſayd: Thou art not able to come in hyther. Neuertheleſſe, Dauid toke the ſtrong hold of Syon. The ſame is the cytie of Dauid. And Dauid ſayde the ſame day: Who ſhall ſee me?

foener smytheth the Jebusites, & getteth vp to the gutters of the houses, & smytheth the lame & the blynde that bare Dauid's soule:

*Wherfore: they sayde, the blynde and the lame shall not come into the house. And so Dauid dwelte in the towre, and called it the cytie of Dauid, & buylt round about it from Wyllo inward. And Dauid prospered and grew, & the Lorde God of hostes was with him. And Hiram kynge of Tyre sent messengers to Dauid, & Cedar trees, & carpenters and masons for walles: and they buylt Dauid an house. And Dauid perceived, that the Lorde had stablyshed hym kynge ouer Israel, & that he had exalted his kyngdom for his people Israels sake. And Dauid toke him mo concubynes and wyues out of Ierusalem, after he was come from Hebron, and mo sones, and daughters were yet bozne to Dauid. *And these be the names of the sones that were bozne vnto hym in Ierusalem: Samma: Dobah, Nathan, and Salomō, Iddar also and Elisua, Nepheg, and Japhia, Elisama, Eliada, and Eliabbelet.

But when the Philistines harde, that they had anoynted Dauid king ouer Israel, they came all vp to seke Dauid. And as sone as Dauid harde of it, he gatte hym to an holde.

And whan the Philistines came, they layde the a longe in the valey of Raphaim. *And Dauid asked counsell of the Lorde sayng:

Shall I go vp to the Philistines? wyle thou deliuer the into my hādes? And the Lord answered vnto Dauid: go vp, for I wyl dōntles deliuer the Philistines into thy handes. And Dauid came to the playne of Perazim and smote them there, and sayde: the Lorde hath deuyded myne enemies asondre before me, as waters be deuyded asondre. And therfore, the name of the place was called: the playn of Perazim: And there they left theyr Images, and Dauid and his men toke them vp. And the Philistines came yet agayne, and layde them selues in the valey of Rephaim.

And whā Dauid asked at the Lorde: *Shall I go vp agaynst the Philistines? wyle thou deliuer them in to my hādes? He answered: Thou shalt not go vp but compassie them on the backsyde, and come vpon the ouer agaynst the Peretrees. And when thou hearst the noyle of a thing goyng in the toppes of the Peretrees, then remoue. For then shal the Lorde go out before the, to smyte the host of the Philistines. And Dauid dōd as the Lorde had commaunded hym, and smote the Philistines from Geba, vntyll thou come to Gazer.

The. vi. Chapter.

The Arke is brought forth of the house of Abinadab. Uza is stricken and dyeth. Dauid distressed by the ark, is therefore distressed of his wife Michol.

Gayne: Dauid gathered together all the chosen men of Israel, euen thyrty thousande, and arose and went with al the folke that were with him of the men of Iuda, to fet awaye from thence, the Arke of God: whose name is called the name of the Lord of hostes that dwelleth vpon it, betwene the cherubyns. And they put the Arke of God vpon a newe carte, and brought it out of the house of Abinadab that was at Gibeā. And Uza and Ahio the sonnes of Abinadab draue the newe carte. And when they brought it out of the house of Abinadab that was at Gibeā, with the Arke of God, Ahio wente before the Arke. And Dauid and all the house of Israel played before the Lord in sondry instrumentes made of Cedre wode, with harpes of, psalteries, tymbrells, fedellys, and Symbals.

And when they came to Nachons threthynge floure, Uza put his hande to the arke of God, and helde it, for the oxen strombled. And the Lorde was wrothe with Uza, and God smote hym in the same place for his faulte, and there he dyed before the Arke of God. And Dauid was displeased, because the Lorde had smytten Uza. And the name of the place was called Peretz. The retyng of Uza, vntyll this daye. And Dauid was then afrayde of the Lorde, and sayde: howe shall the Arke of the Lord come to me? And so Dauid wolde not byynge the Arke of the Lorde vnto hym into the cytie of Dauid. But Dauid carreyed it into the house of Obeth Edom a Gethite. And the Arke of the Lorde continued in the house of Obeth Edom the Gethite, thre monethes, and the Lord blessed Obeth Edom, and al his household. And one tolde kynge Dauid howe that the Lorde had blessed the house of Obeth Edom, and al that perteyned vnto him because of the Arke of God. And Dauid wente and brought the Arke of God from the house of Obeth Edom, into the cytie of Dauid with gladnes. (And there were with Dauid seuen sottes of dauncers, and caddies for sacrifice.) And when they that bare the arke of the Lorde, had gone syre spaces, he offered an oxe and a fat shepe. And Dauid (playn on harpe & organ, and) daunced before the Lorde with all his myght, and was geyded with a linnen Ephod. So Dauid and al the house of Israel brought the arke of the Lorde, with shottynge and trompet blowyng.

And it fortuned, that as the Arke of the Lord came into the cytie of Dauid, Michol Dauid's daughter looked thorow a window and sawe kynge Dauid spyng, and daunced before the Lord, and she despyed him in her perter. And when they brought in the Arke of the of the Lorde, they set it in hys place, euen in the myddes of the tabernacle. And David had pyched for it. And David offered burnt offerynges & peace offerynges before the Lorde. And as sone as David had made an ende of offeryng burnt offerynges & peace offerynges, he blessed the people in the name of the Lorde of hostes, and gaue amonge all the folke, euen amonge the whole multitude of Israel, as wel to the wemen as men, to euery one a Cake of breadye, and a pece of fleshe, and a flakket of byrncke. And so all the people departed euery one to his house.

Then David returned to blesse his household, and Michol the daughter of Saul came out to mete David, and sayd: O howe glorious was the kyng of Israel this day, which was vncouered to day, in the eyes of the mapdens of hys seruantes, as if it had ben a light byrned felowe vncouered. And David sayde vnto Michol: I thought to daunce before the Lorde, which chose me rather then thy father, and all hys kynne, and comaunded me to be ruler ouer all the people of the Lorde, euen ouer Israel. And therfore wyl I play before the Lorde. And wyl yet be more vyle then so, and wyl be meke in myne owne syght: and of the very same mayde seruantes which thou hast spoken of, shall I be had in honour. Therfore Michol the daughter of Saul had no chyld, vnto the day of her death.

The vii. Chapter.

David buildeth God an house: but is rebuffed by God.

It fortuned, that as the kyng sat in his house after that the Lorde had geuen him rest rounde aboute from all his enemyes, he sayd vnto Nathan the prophete: beholde, I dwell nowe in an house of Cedar trees, but the Arke of God dwelleth within the curtayne. And Nathan sayd vnto the kyng: go, and do all that is in thyne herte, for the Lorde is with the.

And it fortuned the same nyght that the worde of the Lorde came vnto Nathan, sayeng: go, and tel my seruant David, thus sayeth the Lorde: shalt thou buyde me an house to dwell in: for I haue not dwelt in any house sence the tyme that I brought forth chylidren of Israel out of Egypte, vnto this day: but haue walked in a tente & tabernacle. In all the places where in I haue walked with all the chylidren of Israel, spake I one worde with any of the trybes of Israel (sence I comaunded Iudges to fede my people Israel) sayeng: why buyde ye not me an house of Cedar trees? Nowe therfore, so saye vnto my seruant David: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. * I toke the from the shepe cote (as thou wast folowynge shepe) that thou myghtest be ruler ouer my people Israel.

And I was with the in al that thou haue done, to, and haue destroyed all thyne enemyes out of thy syght, and haue made the a great name, lyke vnto the name of the great men that are in the worlde. And therefore I haue apoynte a place for my people Israel, and wyl plante it, & they maye dwell in a place of theyre owne, and moue no more, saying: what wicked people trouble them any more, as they dyd at the beginning: sence the tyme that I set Iudges ouer my people of Israel. And I wyl geue the rest from al thyne enemyes. And the Lorde telleth the, that he wyl make the an house.

And when thy dayes be fulfilled, thou shalt slepe with thy fathers, and I wyl be vp thy seede after the, which shall growe out of thy body, & wyl stablyshe his kyngdome. * He shall buyde an house for my name, and I wyl stablyshe the seate of his kyngdome for euer. * I wyl be hys father, and I shall be my sonne: * if he synne, I wyl chastise him with such a rodde as men be chastened with, and with suche plagies as the chyldren of me be plagued w. But my mercy shall depart away fro him, as I toke it fro Saul, who I put downe before the. And thine house and thy kyngdome shall endure for euer after the, * and thy seate shall be stablyshed for euer. Accordyng to al these wordes, and accordyng to all thys visyon, dyd Nathan speake vnto David. Then went David in, and let him downe before the Lorde, and sayde: what am I, O Lorde God, and what is my house, that I shuldest haue brought me thus farre forth? And thys was a small thyng in thy syght, O Lorde God, but thou hast spokt also of thy seruantes house for a greates whyle to come: for thys is vble of man, O Lorde God. And what shall David saye more vnto the: for thou Lorde God knowest thy seruant. Euen for the wordes sake and accordyng to thyne herte hast thou done al these great thyngs to make them knowen vnto thy seruants.

Wherfore thou art great, O Lorde God, for there is none lyke the: * neyther is there any God saue thou, accordyng to al that we haue harde with our eares. * And what people in the earth is like thy people Israel, whose God, went and deliuered them, that they myght be hys people, & that he myght make him a name, & to the we greates & terrible thynges in the earth, for thy people, that thou redemest to the out of Egypte, and thou people with theyre goddes. For thou hast depnyed thy people Israel, to be thy people for euer. And thou Lorde arte become the God. And nowe (Lorde God) the worde that thou hast spoken concernyng thy seruants and his house: make it good for euer, as thou hast sayde. For so shall thy name be magnified magnified for ever, of men that shal say: the Lord of hostes is the God of Israel: and the house of thy seruauunt shal be stablyshed before the Lord. For thou, O Lord of hostes, God of Israel, hast tolde in the eare of thy seruauunt, sayeng: I wyl buyd the an house. And therfore hath thy seruauunt founde in his harte, to pray this prayer vnto the. * Therfore now Lord God, part God, and thy wordes must be true, thou that hast tolde thy goodnesse vnto thy seruauunt. And now we go to, & blesse the house of thy seruauunt, that it may continue for ever before the Lord. For O Lord God hast spoken it, & with thy blessing shall the house of thy seruauunt be blessed for ever.

The viii. Chapter.

David overcometh the Philistines.

After this it fortuned & David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, & toke the byrdle of bondage out of the hande of the Philistines. * And he smote the Moabites, and measured them with a lyne and cast the downe to the ground. And with two lynes measured he them whom he slue and the lengthe of one lyne saued he a lyne. And so became & Moabites Davids seruantes, and payed tribute. David smote also, Hadarezer the sonne of Rehob kyng of zoba as he went to reconer his border at the ruer pherai. And David toke a thousande and seven hundred horsemen of hys hoste, and twenty thousande sote men, and cut of the hofe of all his charet horses, reseruyng only one hundred charettes. And when the Syrians of Damascon came to succour Hadarezer kyng of zoba, David slue of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men, and put souldpours in Syria Damascon. And the Syrians became seruantes, to David payeng tribute. And thus the Lord saued David, in all that he wente vnto. And David toke the spydes of golde that belonged to the seruantes of Hadarezer, and brought them to Ierusalem. And out of Beta and Berobai (cities of Hadarezer) byd David byng excedyng much byasse. (whereof Salomon made all the brasen vessel in the temple, and the brasen Lamps, and the pillars, and the altare.)

* When Thoi kyng of Hamath hard howe David had smytten all the host of Hadarezer, he sent Joam his sonne vnto kyng David, to salute hym with peace, and to blesse him, because he had fought agaynst Hadarezer, and beaten hym: for Thoi had greate war with Hadarezer, which (Joam) broughte with him, vessels of syluer, vessels of golde, and vessels of brasle. Whiche brasle kyng David did dedicate vnto the Lord with the syluer & golde that he had consecrated of all nacions, whiche he subdued: of Siria of the Moabites, and of the chyldren of Ammon, & of the Philistines, and of Hamalek, and of the spoule of Hadarezer sonne of Rehob kyng of zoba. And David gat hym a name after that he returned & had smytten of the Syrians in the valley of Salt. xviii. thousand men. * And he put keepers in Edom, euen as thowoe out al Edom put he souldiers, and al thep of Edom became Davids seruantes. And the Lord kepte David whatsoeuer he toke in hande. And David reigned ouer all Israel, and executed right, and iustice vnto all hys people. And * Joab the sonne of Zeruia was ouer the hoste, and Jehosaphat the sonne of Ahub was recorder. And Sadoch the sonne of Ahitob, and Ahimelech the sonne of Abiathar were the preastes, and Sarai was the scribe. And Banaiab the sonne of Jehotada was ouer the Cretchites and the Shelethites: and Davids sones were cheternulars.

The ix. Chapter.

David restoreth all the felous of Saul, to myght do seth the sonne of Jonathas.

Ad David sayde: is there yet any man left of & house of Saul? For I wyl shewe him mercy for Jonathas sake. And there was of the household of Saul a seruauunt whose name was ziba: and when they had called hym vnto David, the kyng sayde vnto him: art thou ziba? he sayde: thy seruauunt is he. And the kyng sayde: remaineth there yet any man of & house of Saul, wher I may shewe the mercy of God vpon? ziba answered the kyng: * Jonathas hath yet a sonne, which is lame on his fete. The kyng said vnto him: where is he? ziba sayde vnto the kyng: behold, he is in the house of Achish & sonne of Amiel of Lodber. Then kyng David sent, and let hym out of the house of Achish the sonne of Amiel out of Lodber. Some wher Michiboseth the sonne of Jonathas, & sonne of Saul was come vnto David, he fell on hys face, and byd reuerence. And the kyng sayde: Michiboseth he answered: Behold, thy seruauunt. David sayde vnto hym: feare not, for I wyl surely shewe the kyndnes for Jonathas thy fathers sake, & wyl restore & all the all the felde of Saul thy father, and thou shalt eate breade on myne owne table continually. And he bowed him selfe, and sayde what is thy seruaut, that thou shouldest wete safe to loke vpon such a dead dogge as I am?

* Michas.

Then the kyng called vnto ziba Sauls ponge man and sayde vnto hym: I haue geuen vnto thy masters sonne, all that perteyned to Saul & to all hys house. Se therfore that thou, and thy sonnes and thy seruantes tyll the lande, and bynge in, that thy masters sonne may haue fode to eate. But Wiphiboeth thy masters sonne shall eate bread alway vpon my table. For ziba had fyftene sonnes & twenty seruantes. Then sayde ziba vnto the kyng. Accordyng to all that my Lorde the kyng hath commaunded his seruaut, so shall thy seruaut do. Wel (sayde the kyng) Wiphiboeth shall eate vpon my table, as one of the kynges sonnes. Wiphiboeth had a sonne that was ponge, named Michas, and all that dwelled in the house of ziba were seruantes vnto Wiphiboeth. And Wiphiboeth dwelt in Ierusalem, for he dyd eat euer at the kynges table, and was lame on both his fete.

* II. Sam. xiii. b.

The. x. Chapter.

The messengers of David are diligently entered into the house of Achish.

It Chaped after thys, that the kyng of the chyldren of Ammon dyed, and Hanon hys sonne reigned in hys steade. Thā sayd David. I wyl shewe kyndnesse vnto Hanon the sone of Nahas, as his father shewed kyndnesse vnto me. And David sent to comforte him by the hand of hys seruantes our ^(the death of) hys father. And Davids seruantes came into the lande of the chyldren of Ammon, and the lordes of the chyldren of Ammon sayde vnto Hanon theyr Lord: thyneest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comfortours to the? Hath not David rather sente his seruantes vnto the, to searche the cytie, and to spye it out, and to ouerthrowe it?

Wherfore, Hanon toke Davids seruantes, & shaued of the one halfe of euery manes bearde, and cut of theyr garmentes in the myddle, euen harde to the buttockes of the, and sente them awayne. When they tolde it vnto David, he sent to mete them (for they were men exceedingly a shamed) and hys kyng sayde: tary at Jericho vntyll your beardes be growen, and then returne. And when the chyldren of Ammon sawe that they stāche in the spyght of David, they sente and byred the Syrians of the house of Rehob, and the Syrians of zoba. .xx. thousande fote men, and of kyng Maacha a thousande men, & of Jitob twelue thousand men. And when David harde of it, he sent Joab and all the host of stronge men. And the chyldren of Ammon came out, and waged battell at the mouth in of the gate, and the Syrians of Rehob, Jitob, and Maach were selues in the felde.

When Joab sawe that the battell was agaynst hym before, and he chose of al the frethe pong men, and put them in aray agaynst the Syrians. And the rest of the people he left into the hand of Abisay his brother, that myght put them in aray agaynst the chyldren of Ammon. And he sayde, If the Syrians be stronger then I, thou shalt be stronger then I. I wyl come and succoure the. So he quite the lyke a man, and let his staffe out people, and for the cytie of God. And the Lorde do that which is in his owne eyes. And Joab procured, and the people that was with him, fought with the Syrians. But they fled before him. And when the chyldren of Ammon sawe the Syrians were fled, then fled they before Abisay, and entred into the city. So Joab returned from the chyldren of Ammon, and came to Ierusalem. And when the Syrians sawe that they were put to the worse before Israel, they gathered them together. And Hadarazer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beynde theuer. And they came with theyr army, and had the captayne of the hoste of Hadarazer went before them.

And when it was shewed David, he gathered all Israel together, and passed Iordan, and came to Helam: And the Syrians set them selues in aray agaynst David, and fought with hym: and the Syrians fled before Israel. And David besygged forty hundred charrettes of the Syrians, and forty thousande horsemen, and smote Hadarazer the captayne of theyr hoste, who dyed there. And when all the kynges (that were seruantes to Hadarazer) sawe that they were put to the worse before David, they made peace with the, and serued him. And so the Syrians feared to helpe the chyldren of Ammon any moze.

The. xi. Chapter.

The aduocacy of David with Achish the king of Gath.

And it came to passe (after the peare was expyred) in the tyme when kynges were to go forth to battell, Dauid sent Joab & hys seruantes wyth hym, and all Israel, whych destroyed the chyldren of Ammon, & besieged Raba. But Dauid tarried styl at Jerusalem. And it chaunced in an euening, that Dauid arose out of his bed and walked vpon the rouse of the kynges palace, and from the rouse he sawe a woman washing her selfe: and the woman was very bewyfull to loke vpon. And he sent to enquire what woman it shuld be, sayeng: is it not Bethsabe the daughter of Eliam, and wyfe to Urias the Hethite? And Dauid sent messengers, & fet her. And she came in vnto him, and he laye wyth her. And she (immediatly) was purifyed from her uncleynesse, and returned vnto her house. And the womā conceived, and sent, and tolde Dauid, and sayd: I am wyth childe. And Dauid sent to Joab (sayenge): sende me Urias the Hethite. And Joab sent Urias to Dauid. And when Urias was come vnto hym, Dauid demaunded of hym: howe Joab dyd, and howe the people fared, and howe the men of warre prospered. And Dauid sayde to Urias: go downe to thyne house & walche thy fete. And Urias departed out of the kynges palace, and ther folowed him a scrupce from the kynges table. But Urias slepte at the doze of the kynges palace, withall the seruantes of hys lord, and went not downe to hys house.

Which whē they had told Dauid (sayeng: Urias wen not downe into his house.) Dauid sayd vnto Urias: Camest thou not from thy journey? why dyddest thou not go downe vnto thyne house? Urias answered Dauid. The arke and Israel and Juda dwell in paupryons: and my lord Joab and the seruantes of my lord lye vpon the flat earth and shall I then go into myne house, to eate, and dryncke, and lye wyth my wyfe? By thy lyfe and by the lyfe of thy soule, I will not do thys thyng. And Dauid sayde vnto Urias: tarre here this daye also, and to morowe I will let the departe. And so Urias abode in Jerusalem that daye, and the morowe. And whan Dauid had called hym, he dyd eate and dryncke befoze hym, & he made hym dyoncke. And at euen he went out to lye on hys couche wyth the seruantes of hys lord, but went not downe to hys house. On the morowe Dauid wrote a letter to Joab, & sent it by the hande of Urias. And he wrote thus in the letter, sayenge: put Urias in the forefront of the sharpest battell, and come ye backe fro hym, that he maye be smytten and dye. So whan Joab besieged the cytie, he asygnd Urias vnto a place, where he wyfte that stronge men were. And 5 men of the cytie came out, & fought wyth Joab. And ther were certayne overthowen of the people, & of the seruantes of Dauid, and Urias the Hethite dyed also.

Then Joab sent, and tolde Dauid all the thynges concernyng the warre, and charged the messenger, sayenge: whē thou hast made an ende of tellyng the matters of the warre vnto the kyng, yf he begynne to fume, and saye vnto the: wherfoze approached ye so nye vnto the cytie, whan ye dyd fyght? wyfte ye not that they wolde hurle and shote fro the wall? who smote Abimelech sonne of Jeroboam? dyd not a woman cast a pect of a mylstone vpon hym from of the wal, and he dyed in Thebes? why went ye nye the wall? then saye thou: thy seruant Urias the Hethite is dead also.

So the messenger wente, and came, & shewed Dauid all that Joab had sent hym for, and the messenger sayde vnto Dauid: the men preapled agaynst vs, & cam out vnto vs into the felde, & we (wyth violence) strake vnto the, euen vnto the enterynge of a gate. And the shoters shote from the walles, vpon thy seruantes, and some of the kynges seruantes be dead. And thy seruant Urias the Hethite is dead also. And Dauid sayd vnto the messenger: thus shalt thou saye vnto Joab: let not that thyng trouble the. For the chaunce of warre is dyuerse, and the swearde deuoureth one as well as another: make thy battell more stronge agaynst the cytie to ouerthrowe it, & se that thou courage Joab. And when the wyfe of Urias heard that her husbände was dead, she mourned for hym. And whā the mournynge was past, Dauid sent and fet her to his house, and she became hys wyfe, and bare hym a sonne. But thys thyng that Dauid dyd, displeased the Lord.

The .xii. Chapter.

Dauid is reproued for the slaughter of Urias
The chyche conceived in aduourte dyeth After

And the Lord sent Nathan vnto Dauid. And he came vnto him, and tolde him: there were two men in one cytie, the one rich, and the other poore. The ryche man had exceeding many shepe and oren. But the poore had nothyng save one lytle shepe, whiche he had bought, and noryshed vp. And it grewe vp wyth hym and wyth his chyldre also, and dyd eate of his owne meate and dranche of his owne cuppe, and slepte in his bolome, & was vnto hym as his daughter. And ther came a strainger vnto the ryche man. And he coulde not fynde in hys herd to take of his owne shepe, and of his owne oren, to dresse for the strainger that was come vnto hym. But toke the poore mans shepe, and drested it for the man that was come to him. And Dauid was exceeding wythe wyth

¶ The man & sayd to Nathan: as surelye as the thyng * is the chyld of death. He shall restore the lambe * foure folde, because he dyd thys thyng, and had no pytyle. And Nathā sayd to Dauid: thou art the man. Thus sayeth the Lozde God of Israel, * I anoynted & kynge ouer Israel, and rydde the out of the hand of Saul, I gaue the thy masters house and thy masters wyues into thy bosome, and gaue the, & house of Israel and of Iuda, and myghte (yf that had bene to lytle) haue geuen despyed the commaundement of the Lozde to do wyckednesse in hys syght: thou hast kylde Urias the Hethite wylth the swearde, and hast taken hys wyfe to thy wyfe; & hast slayne hym wylth the swearde of the chyldre of Ammon.

E Nowe therfore, the swearde shal neuer depart from thyne house, because thou hast despyssed me, and taken the wyfe of Arias the Bethite, to be thy wyfe. Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I will steepe vp euell agaynst the, euen oute of thyne owne house, & will take thy wyues before thyne eyes, and geue them vnto thy neyghboure, and he shall lye with thy wyues in the syght of the sonne. For thou dydest it secretlye. But I will do this thynge before all Israel, and in the open sunne lycht.

¶ And Dauid sayde vnto Nathan * I haue sinned agaynst þe Lozbe. And Nathan sayd vnto Dauid : þe Lozbe also hath put awaye the synne, thou shalt not dye. Howbeit, because in doyngte this dede, thou hast geuen the enemies of þe Lozbe a cause to rayle, the chyldre that is bozne vnto the, shall surely dye. And Nathan departed vnto hys house. And the Lozbe stroke the chyldre that Urias wyfe bare vnto Dauid, ad it syckened soze. Dauid therfore besought God for the chyld and fasted and went in, and laye all nyght vpon the earth. And the elders of hys house arose and went to him, to take him, vp from the earth. But he wolde not, nether dyd he eate meat wryth them.

And it happened ſeuenth daye, that the chylde dyed. And the ſeruauntes of Dauid durst not tell him, that the chylde was dead. For they ſayd: beholde whyle ſ chylde was yet aljue, we ſpake vnto him, and he wolde not hearken vnto once voyce. Howe will he then bere hym ſelfe, if we tell him, that the chylde is dead? But Dauid ſeynge hys ſeruauntes whysperynge, perceaued, that the chylde was dead, & Dauid ſayd vnto his ſeruauntes: is ſ chylde dead? They ſayde: yee. And Dauid aroſe from the earth, & waſhed and anoynted him ſelfe, and chaſtge hys apparel, and came into the houſe of ſ Loyde, and woſhypped, and after ward came to hys owne houle & bad that they shoulde let before hym, & he dyde ate. Then sayd he vnauntes vnto him: what thyng is this thou hast done. Thou dydest fast and for the chyld whyple it was a lyue, and sone as it was dead, thou dydest eate meat. He sayd: whyple & chyld was lyue, I fasted and wept. For this I thought who can tell whether God wyl haue mercy on me, that the chyld maye lyue. * But now seynge it is dead, wherfore shoulde I faste I byynge hym agayne any moze. I shall eate hym, rather then he shall come agayne me. And Dauid comforted Bethshabe wyfe, and wente in vnto her, and laye with her, and she bare a sonne, and called his name * Salomō, and the Lozde loued hym. And he sent by the hande of Nathan the prophete and called his name * Iedibia, of the Lozdes behalf.

Joab fought agaynst Raba the cytye of the chyldren of Ammon, and toke the cytye of the kyngdom. And Joab sent messengers to Dauid, sayenge: I haue made a slawe Raba, and haue taken the cytye wyth wyctes. Nowe therfore gather the rest of the people together, and besyge the cytye, for thou mayest take it: lest I take it, and doe after my name. And Dauid gathered all the people together, and went agaynst Raba, besyged it, and gat it. * And he toke the kynges crowne from of his head, wher was yed an hundred wyghte of golde, and thre were precious stones. And it was set on his wyde head. And he brougnt out the spoyle the cytye in excedynge greate aboundance. And he carped out the people that was therein, and put them vpon sawes and vpon barowes, and vpon axes of yron, and cast them into the tyle hell. Thus dyd he wylde the cyties of the chyldren of Ammon. And Dauid and all the people returned vnto Ierusalem.

The xiii. Chapter.

Amnon Davids sonne bepleet bys vader Edamar. Absalon ther so;e aplyeth Amnon.

After this it chaunced / That Ishai the sonne of David had a saye syster, named Thamar whom Amnon the sonne of David loured. And he was loun-gered, that he sel her selfe for the lone of hys syster Thamar: for she was a virgin, and he thought it harde for hym to haue hys purpose of her. But Amnon had a frende, called Ionadab, the sonne of David's brother: and Ionadab was a wise wyle man. And he sayde vnto hym: how meth it, that thou bring the kinges daughter thus consumed euery daye: wilt thou not tell me / Amnon answered hym: I wil

Chamar my brother Absaloms syster. Jonadab sayde vnto him: laye þe downe on thy bedde, and make thy selfe sycke. And when thy father is come to se the, saye vnto hym: Ohlet my syster Chamar come, and geue me meate, and dresse it in my syght, that I maye se it & eate it of her hande.

And so Amnon laye downe, & made hym selfe sycke. And when þe kyng was come to se him, Amnō sayde vnto him: Ohlet Chamar my syster come, & make me a couple of frytters in my syght, & I maye eate of her hande. Then Dauid sent home to Chamar, sayyng: go now to thy brother Amnōs house, and dresse hym meat. So Chamar wente to her brother Amnōs house, & he was layed downe. And she toke flour, and made paste, and dresed frytters in his syght, & dyd bake them, and toke a platter, & powred the oute before him, but he wolde not eate. And Amnon sayde: haue oute all men from me. And they went all out fro him. And Amnon sayd vnto Chamar: bypunge the meate into the chambze, & I maye eate of thyne hand. And Chamar toke the frytters, whiche she had made, and brought them into: þe chambze to Amnon her brother. And whan she had set them before hym, to eate, he toke her, & sayde vnto her: come lye wyth me my syster. And she answered hym: naye my brother, do not force me, for there hath no such thyng bene done in Israel: do not thou this abhomy nation. For whyther shall I be able to go with my shame. And thou shalt be as one of the soles in Israel. O speake vnto þe kyng, and he shall not denye me vnto the.

Howbeit he wolde not herken vnto her hope but toke her, & forced her, & laye wyth her. And the Amnon hated her exceedingly: so that the hate wherewith he hated her, was greater then þe loue, whiche he before loved her. And Amnon sayd vnto her: vp, & get thee hie. She answered hym: thou hast no cause this euil þe thou puttest me awaye is greater then þe other þe dydest vnto me. Neuertheles he wolde not heare her, but called his hope that serued him, & sayd: put a waye this woman fro me, & bolt þe doze after her. And he had a kyrtell of dyuers colours upon her: for wyth such were þe kynges daughters (that were virgins) appareld. Then his seruante brought her out, & locked the doze after her. And Chamar toke and put ashes on her head, & eft her gape kyrtell þe was on her & layed her hāde on her head, & so went: & as she wente, cryed. And Absalom her brother sayd vnto her: hath Amnō thy brother deue dyth þe? Now yet he styll my syster: he is thy brother. Let not this thing greue thine heart. And so Chamar remayned desolate in her brother Absaloms house. But whan kyng Dauid herd of all these thynges, he was very wyth. (And he wolde not here þe syster of Amnon his sonne: for he loved hym, because he was his firstborne.) And Absalom sayde vnto hys brother Amnon nether good ner bad. Howbeit Absalom hated Amnon because he had forced hys syster Chamar.

And it happened after two yere, that Absalom had þe sheperers in þe playne of Hazor besyde þe crybe of Ephraim, & had all the kynges sonnes, & cam to the kyng, and said: beholde, thy seruant hath shepe therers, let the kyng & his seruantes come to thy seruant. The kyng answered Absalom: naye my sonne. We wil not go al, ner be chargeable vnto the. And Absalom laye soze vpon hym: howbeit he wolde not go, but blessed hym. Then sayd Absalom: þe thou wilt not come, the let my brother Amnō go with vs. And the kyng answered hym: what nedeth it, that he go wyth the? But Absalom made such instance that he let Amnon, and all the kynges chyldren go with him.

Now had Absalom comaunded hys ponge men, sayenge: marke when Amnons hert is merke wyth wyne, & when I byd you smyte Amnon, then kyll hym: and feare not, haue not I bydden you: he holde therfore, & playe the mē. And the ponge men of Absalom dyd vnto Amnon euen as Absalom had comaunded. And all the kynges sonnes arose, & euerie man gat hym vp, vpon hys mule, & fled. And it fortuned, that whyle they were yet in þe waye, the ponges cam to Dauid sayeng: Absalom hath slayne all the kynges sonnes & ther is none left alpye. Then Dauid arose, and tare his garmetes, & laye along on the erth: and all his seruantes stode by to the, clothes rent. And Jonadab the sonne of Shimeach Dauids brother, answered, and sayd: let not my Lord suppose þe they haue slayne all the ponge men the kynges sonnes, saue Amnō only is deade. For þe hath bene determined in Absaloms mynde, sence he forced hys syster Chamar. Nowe therfore, let not my Lord the kyng take the thyng to greuouse to thynke þe all the kynges sonnes are dead, saue Amnon only is dead.

But Absalom fled. And the ponge man that kept the watche, lyfte vp hys eyes, and looked: And beholde, ther came manye people by a waye, alonge by the hynder parte on an hilles syde. And Jonadab sayd vnto þe kyng beholde, þe kynges sonnes come: As the seruant sayde, so it is. And as sone as he had left speakyng: beholde, the kynges sonnes came, and lyfte vp theiꝝ voyces, and wyte. The kyng also & all hys seruantes wepte exceedingly. But Absalom escaped and wote to Chalmat the sonne of Amihur kyng of Geshur. And Dauid mourned for hys sonne euery daye. And so Absalom escaped & went to Geshur, and dwelt there thre yeres. And kyng David besyde to go forth vnto Absalom: For where as Amnon was dead, he was comforted ouer hym.

C By the wysedome of the woman of her what she shoulde saye.

And Joab fell to the ground on his face, bowed hym selfe, and blessed the kyng.
Joab sayd: now thy seruauant knoweth I haue founde grace in thy syght (my rose, & went to Gesur, and brought hym & must nedes haue it) the heere of hys head wayed two hundred spyles after þe kynges wyght. And thys Abalom had thre sonnes bozne hym & one daughter, named Chamar, whiche was a fayre woman to looke vpon. So Abalom dwelt two yere in Ierusalem, & saue not the kynges face. Therfore Abalom sent for Joab, to haue sent hym to the kyng. But he wolde not come to hym. And wha he sent againe, he wold not come. Therfore he sayde vnto hys seruantes: beholde, Joab hath a parcell of lande faste by my place, & he hath barlepe therin. Go, and set it on fyre. And Abaloms seruantes set it on fyre. (And Joabs seruantes came wth theyr garments rent, and sayde: Abaloms seruantes haue burnt the peece of lande wth fyre.)

Then Joab arose and came to Abalom vnto hys house, and sayde vnto hym, wherfore haue thy seruantes burnt my felde wth fyre? And Abalom answered Joab: behold I sent for the, desyryng the to come, because I wolde haue sent the to the kyng, for to saye: wherfore am I come from Gesur? It had bene better for me, to haue bene there byll. Nowe therfore, wolde I se the kynges face. And yf ther be any trespass in me, kylle thou me. And so Joab cam to the kyng, and tolde him: which whan he had sent for Abalom, he came to the kyng, and fell to the ground on his face befoze hym. And the kyng kyssed Abalom.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

¶ Abalom maketh insurreccion agaynst hys father. Dauid is fayne to flee for feare of hym.

After thys it fortuned, that Abalom gat hym charettes & hoxsles, & fiftye men to rane befoze hym. And he rose vprely in the moynge, and stode in the place of the entrepyng in of the gate. And enery man that had any matter, and came to þe kyng for indgemēt, hym dyd Abalom cal vnto him: and sayd: of what cytie art thou? he answered: thy seruant is of one of þe trybes of Israel. And Abalom sayd vnto him: thy matter is good & ryghteous, but ther is no man deputed of the kyng to heare the. Abalom sayde mozeouer: Oh, that I were made iudge in the lād, that euery mā whych hath any pley and matter in the lād, might come to me, & that I myght do him iustyce? And whan any mā cam nye to him, and dyd hym obepaunce, he put forth his hande and toke hym to hym, and kyssed hym. And on thys maner dyd Abalom to al Israel that came to the kyng for indgement, & he scale the heartes of the men of Israel. And after fourty yeaeres it fortuned that Abalom sayd vnto the kyng: let me go nowe to Hebron, and pape my vowe whiche I haue vowed, vnto the Lorde: for thy seruant vowed a vowe (when I was in Gesur in the lande of Siria) saying: yf the Lorde shall bypnyng me agayne to Ierusalem, I wyll serue the Lorde. And the kyng sayd vnto hym: go in peace. And so he arose, and went to Hebron.

But Abalom sent spyes thozow out all the trybes of Israel, sayinge: as sone as ye heare the voyce of the troyet blowe, ye shall saye: Abalom raygneth kyng in Hebron. And w Abalom went two hundred men out of Ierusalem, that were called. And they wēt with pure hertes, not knowing of any thing. And Abalom sent also for Ahithophel the Gilonite Dauids counsellor, that he sholde come out of his cytie Gilo, whyle he offered sacrificys. And there was wrought stronge treason. For the people went and increased wth Abalom in multitude. And ther came a messenger to Dauid and sayde, þe hertes of the mē of Israel are turned after Abalom. And Dauid sayde vnto all hys seruantes that were with hym at Ierusalem: vp, that we maye be gone, for we shall not els escape from Abalom. Make spede, to departe: lest he come sodenly, and catche vs, and bynyge some myschefe vpon vs, and synpte the cytie with the edge of the swearde. And þe kynges seruantes sayd vnto hym: beholde, thy seruantes are redy, to do whatsoeuer my Lord the kyng shall apoynte.

And the kyng & all his housholde departed a fote. And he left behynd hym ten concubines, to kepe the houses. And so the kyng and all the people wēt out a fote, and tarped in a place that was farre of. And all his seruantes wēt about hym. And all the Cherethites & all the Ghelethites and al þe Gethites (which were men of warre) (eul. vi. hundred men) which were come a fote from Geth) wēt befoze þe kyng. Then sayd þe kyng to Jehai the Gethite, wherfore comest thou wth vs? Returne & abyde wth the kyng, for thou art a stranger, & art remoued from thine owne place. Thou comest but yesterdaye, & shuldest thou quyet the to daye to go wth vs? I wil go whether I can. Therfore returne thou: & carry agayne thy brethren. Mercy and truth (shall the Lorde do vnto the.) And Jehai answered þe kyng and sayde: as truly as God lyueth, and as my lord þe king lyueth, in what place my lord the kyng shalbe, whether in death or lyfe, euē there also wyll thy seruant be. And Dauid þe kyng sayd to Jehai, come then, & go forwarde. And Jehai the Gethite went forth, and all hys men, and all þe chyliden that were wth hym. And all the countrey wepte wyth a loude voyce, and so dyd all the people that went forth. The kyng also hym selfe passed ouer þe broke Kydzon. And all the people went towarde the waye that leadech to the wilbernes. And Sadoch and all the Lemites were wth hym, & bare the Arke of the appoyntment of God. And there they set do vnto the Arke of God. And Abiathar went vp, vntill the people were all come ouer, out of the cytie. And þe kynge sayd vnto Sadock. Carry the Arke of God agayne into þe cytie. For I haue synde fauoure in the eyes of the Lorde, he wyll brynge me agayne, and shewe me both it, and the tabernacle therof. But þe Lorde thus say: I haue no luste vnto the, beholde, here am I, let hym do wyth me, what semeth good in his eyes.

2. Sam. 17. 1.

The kynge sayde also vnto Sadock the priest: Art not thou a *Sear? Returne into the citie in peace. And take pour two sonnes wyth you: Ahimaaz thy sonne, & Jonathas the sonne of Abiathar. Beholde, I wyl tary in the felde of the wyldernesse, vntill there come some word fro you to be tolde me. Sadock therfore and Abiathar carryed the arke of God agayne to Jerusalem, and they taryed there. And David went vpo mount Olyuet, and wept as he went, and had hys head couered, and went barefoote. And all the people that was wyth hym, had euery man hys head couered, & as they went vp, they wept also. And one tolde David, sayinge. Ahithophel is one of them that haue conspyred with Absalom. And David sayd: O Lorde turne the counsell of Ahithophel into folyshnes.

When David was come to the toppe of the mount he worshypped God: and beholde Husai the Archite came agaynst hym with hys coote toyned, and hauping earth vpon his head. Vnto whome David sayde: þe thou go wyth me, thou shalt be a burthen vnto me. But þe thou returne to the cytie, & saye vnto Absalom: I wil be thy seruante O kynge: (as I haue thus longe bene thy fathers seruante, so am I now thy seruante) I mayst for my sake destroye the counsell of *Ahithophel. And thou hast there with the, Sadock and Abiathar the priestes, vnto whom thou shalt shewe all that thou canst heare oute of the kynges house. And beholde, they haue ther with them they two sonnes: Ahimaaz Sadockes sonne, and Jonathas Abiathars sonne: by them also shall ye sende me al that ye can heare. And so *Husai Davids frende gat hym to the cytie. And Absalom also entered into Jerusalem.

The xvi. Chapter.

As the kynge presented to David, both false are: curst Ahithophel. Hemei curst David, and buried bones at him. Absalom, by the counsel of Ahithophel, with his fathers concubines.

And when David was a lytle past, the toppe of the hyl: beholde, ziba the seruante of Ahithophel came to mete hym wyth a couple of asses laden, & vpon them two hundred loaves, & one hundred bottles of Relynges, and an hundred frayles of dyed pygges, and a bottle of wyne. And the kynge sayde vnto ziba: what meanest thou wyth these? And ziba sayde: They be for the kynges household to ryde on, & to and frute for þe yonge men to eat, and wyne that such as be saynt in the wyldernesse, bypyncke. And the kynge sayde: where is thy masters sonne? ziba answered vnto þe kynge: beholde he tarreth styll at Jerusalem. And he sayde: this daye shall the house of David restore me the kyngdome of my father. And sayde the kynge to ziba: beholde, thine and that pertayned vnto *Ahithophel. And ziba sayde: I do homage to the. I beseeche that I maye synde grace in thy syght, O Lorde, O kynge.

And when kynge David came to Bethrim: beholde, thence came oute a man of the kynred of the house of Saul, named *Hemei the sonne of Gera, and he came oute wyth a bowe, and with stones. And he cast stones at David, and at the seruantes of kynge David. And all the people also and al the men of warre were in hys ryght hande, and on hys left. And the kynge sayde: *Hemei when he curst: come forth, come forth thou bloudshedder, and thou man of Beliall. The Lorde hath brought vnto the, all the bloude of the house of Saul, whose stead thou hast raygned, and the Lorde hath deliuered the kyngdome into the hande of Absalom thy sonne. And beholde, thou art come to thy myschefe, because thou art a bloudshedder.

Then sayde Ahysai the sonne of Zair to the kynge: why dothe this dead dogge curse my lord the kynge? let me go now, and take of the head of hym. And the kynge sayde: what haue I to do wyth you? ziba the sonne of Zair: let hym curse: for the Lorde hath bydden hym curse David. And the kynge then saye: Wherfore hast thou done so? And David sayde to Ahysai, and to all hys seruantes, beholde, my sonne whiche hath myne owne body, seeketh my life. How much more then maye this sonne of Zair do? Suffre hym to curse: for þe Lorde hath bydden hym: hapely the Lorde wyll loke vnto wepyng eyes and wretchednesse, and do good for his cursyng this daye. And as David and his men went by the waye, Hemei went alonge on the hylles syde ouer agaynst hym, and curst as he went, and threwe stones at hym, and cast duste. And þe kynge and all that were wyth hym cam wepyng, and refreshed them selues *there.

And Absalom & al the people of Israel came to Jerusalem, & Ahithophel was wyth him. And as sone as Husai the Archite Davids frende, was come vnto Absalom, he sayde vnto hym: God saue the kynge. And he saue the kynge. And Absalom sayd agayne to Husai: is this þe kyndnesse thou owest to the frende: Why wentest thou not wpyth hym? Husai answered vnto Absalom: nape not so but whom the Lorde and this people and al chymen of Israel chose, hys wyll I be, and with hym wil I dwel. Howeouer, vnto who shal I do seruice, but euen to his sonne? And as I was seruauant before wpyth thy father, euen so shal I be with the. Then spake Absalom to Abithophel: geue counsell what is best for vs to do. And Abithophel sayde vnto Absalom: get the in vnto thy fathers concubines, wyche he hath left to kepe þ house. And all Israel shal heare, that thou art cast out of thy father: then shal the handes of all that are with the, be stryde. And so they pitched Absalom a tent vpon the toppe of the house. And he went in vnto his fathers concubines in the syght of all Israel.

And the counsell of Abithophel which he counceled in those dayes, was as a man had asked counsell of God: euen so was all the counsell of Abithophel, both wpyth Dauid and wpyth Absalom.

¶ The. xlii. Chapter.

¶ Abithophel, kynges hys counsell of Absalom, of Husai and of Isai, hangeth hym selfe.

Abithophel sayde vnto Absalom: let me chose out nowe twelue thousand men. And I wil by þ folowe after Dauid this nyght. And I wil come vpon hym, whyle he is wetp and weake handed, & I wil feare hym. And all the people that are wpyth hym, shall fle. And so wyl I smyte þ kyng onely, and wyl bypyng agayne all the people vnto the, euen as caselye as yf I wolde bypyng any other thyng. And when I haue slayne the mā whom thou seekest, all the people shall haue rest. And the sayinge pleased Absalom well, and all the elders of Israel. The sayd Absalom: cal also Husai the Archite, and let vs heare hys counsell. When Husai was come to Absalom, Absalom spake vnto hym, sayinge: Abithophel hath geuen such counsell: shal we do after hys sayinge, or not tell thou.

Husai answered vnto Absalom: the counsell þ Abithophel hath geuen, is not good at this tyme: For (sayd Husai) þ knowest thy father, and hys men, howe þ they be strong. And they be chafed in their myndes, and are euen as a Beare robbed of her whelpes in the feld. Thy father is a man also practysed in warre, & maketh no taryng wpyth þ people. Beholde he lurketh now in some caue, or in some other (stronge) place. And though some of hys mē be ouerthrowen at the fyrst bynt, yet they that heare it wyl saye: The people that foloweth Absalom, be put to þ worse. And the best mē thou hast whose bettes are as the bettes of Lyons, shall bypyne ther at. For al Israel knoweth, that thy father is a myghty man, and they wyche be wpyth hym are all men of warre.

Therefore my counsell is that all Israel be gathered vnto the, from Dan to Beersheba, (wyche are as þ side of the see in nobye) and that thou go to battayle in thyne owne person. For so shal we come vpo hym in one place or other, wher we shall fynde hym and we wyl sal vpon him, euen as thicke as the dewe falleth on the grounde. And of all the mē that are with him, we shal not leaue him one. Howeouer, yf he be gotten into a towne then shal all the men of Israel bypyng ropes to that cytie, and we wyl drawe it into the ryuer, vntyl ther be not one stone founde ther. And Absalom and al the men of Israel sayde: the counsell of Husai the Archite is better, then the counsell of Abithophel. For it was euen the Lordes determinacyon to destroye the good counsell of Abithophel: þ the Lorde myght bypyng euil vpon Absalom. Then sayd Husai vnto Sadock and Abia the prestes of thys and that maner vpo Abithophel and the elders of Israel counsell Absalom. And thus and thus haue I counceled. Nowe therefore send quicklye, & let we Dauid sayinge: tarpe not all nyghte in the felde of the wyldernesse, but get þ ouer, lest the kyng be deuoured, and all the people þ are with hym. Nowe Jonathas & Abimaaz abode by the well Rogell: (for they myght not be lene to come into the cytie.) And a wench went and told them. And they went, and the wed kyng Dauid.

Reuerchele, a lad sawe them, and tolde it to Absalom. But they went both of them awaye quychlye, and came to a mans house in Bahurim, which had a well in his yerde, into the which they went downe. And a woman toke & spredde a coverlet ouer þ wells mouth, and strawed fynterpe corne thereon. And the thyng was not lpyed. And whē Absaloms seruantes came to the wyfe to the house, they sayde: Where is Abimaaz & Jonathas? The woman answered them: they be gone ouer the lytell byoke of water. And when they had sought them, and coude not fynde them, they returned to Jerusalem. And as sone as they were departed, the other came oute of the well, and wente and tolde kyng Dauid, and sayde vnto hym: by and get þ quychlye ouer the water for such counsell hath Abithophel geuen, agaynst you. Then Dauid arose, and all the people that were with hym, & they were come ouer Jordan be that it was daye: so þ there lacked not one of the, that was not come ouer Jordan. And whē Abithophel sawe, that his counsell was not folowed, he ladeled hys alle, and arose, and gate hym home to hys owne house, & so to his owne cytie, and put hys household in order.

der, and haged hym selfe, and dyed, and was buried in the sepulchre of hys father.

6 Then David came to Mahanaim. And Absalom passed ouer Jordan, he and all the men of Israel wyth him. And Absalom made Amasa captaine of þe hoost in stede of Joab, whych Amasa was a mannes sonne named Jethra an Israelite, þe wente into Abigail the daughter of Nabal, syster to Jeruia Joabs mother. So Israel and Absalom ptyched in the land of Gilead. And whē David was come to Mahanaim, Hobi the sonne of Nabal out of * Rabba the cytie of the chyldren of Ammon, & Machir the sonne of Amiel oute of Lodeber, and * Berzelai the Gileadite out of Roglim, brought beddes, balsens earthen vessels, wheate and barley, flour and parched corne, beanes, ryce, oremell, honye, butter, shepe and cheste of kyne, for David & all the people that were wyth hym, to eate. For they sayd: The people is hongry, wery and thyrstye in the wyldernesse.

The xviii. Chapter.

Abisai is overcome in battel. He haged by the bere in an Oke. He is kyled and put in a pych. David is so forowfull for the death of Absalom that he wepeth.

1 And David nombred the people that were wyth him, and set captaynes of thousandes and of hundredes ouer the. And David sent forth the chyld part of the people vnder the hand of Joab, and another parte vnder the hand of Abisai the sonne of Jeruia Joabs brother, and the other thyrde parte vnder the hand of Jethai the Gethite. And the kynge sayd vnto the people: I wyl go wyth you also. And the people answered: Thou shalt not go forth: for yf we sic, our aduersaries wyl not care for vs: nether shall they regarde vs, though halfe of vs were slayne: but þat art worth ten thousand of vs: wherfore it is better, that thou succour vs out of the cytie. And the kynge sayde vnto them: what semeth you best, that wyl I do.

2 And the kynge stode by the gate syde, and all the people came oute by hundredes & by thousandes. And the kynge comaunded Joab and Abisai, and * Jethai saying: intreate the yonge mā Absalom gently for my sake. And all the people hearde, & the kynge gaue all the captaynes charge concernynge Absalom. And so the people went oute into the felde agaynst Israel: and the battell was in the wode of Ephraim: Where the people of Israel were put to the worse befoze the seruauntes of David, and there was a greate slaughter that daye, euen of twentye thousande men. For the felde was fought there in dynerse places, all abrode vpon þe earthe. And the wood deuoured mo people that daye than dyd the swerde. And Absalom came befoze þe seruauntes of David: and he was a wyle, which caried him vnder the bowes of a greate Oke. And hys head was caught of the Oke, and he was lyfte betwene heauen and earth: and the Oke that was vnder hym, went hys waye. And whē sawe it tolde Joab, sayeng: beholde, I see Absalom hange in an Oke: and Joab sayd vnto the man that tolde him. Yf thou wylt se him, why dydest not thou there lyme him to the grounde, and I wolde haue graunted ten sylles of syluer, and a gyrdle.

The man sayde vnto Joab: though I woldest lye a thousande sylles of syluer in my hande, yet wold I not stretch out my hand agaynst þe kynges sonne. For he was wyth our eares when the kynge charged us, and Abisai, and Jethai, sayeng: Behold, that none touche the yonge man Absalom. Moreover, yf I had done it, I shoulde haue done agaynst myne owne lyfe: for there is no matter byd from the kynge: yet and thou thy selfe woldest haue bene agaynst me. Then sayd Joab: I maye not stand thus: ryenge wyth the.

And he toke thre speares in hys hande, and thruste them thorow Absalom, whyle he was yet alpye on the body of þe tree. And ten seruauntes that bare Joabs weapons, turned, and smote Absalom, and slayd hym. And when Joab blew the trompet, the people returned fro folowynge Israel: for he spared the people. And they toke Absalom, and cast hym into a great pye in the wode, and layed a myghtye greate heape of stonys vpon hym. And all Israel fled to their tentes. And thys Absalom yet in hys lyf, * toke counsell and reared vp a pyller, whiche is in kynges dale. For he sayde: I haue no sonne. And therfore to kepe my name in remembraunce do I it. And he called the pyller after hys owne name. And it is called vnto this daye: Absaloms pyller.

Then sayd Ahimaaz þe sonne of Sadach let me runne now, and beare the kynge nynges, how that þe Lozde hath iudged þe guyte of the hāde of his enemyes. And he sayde vnto hym: thou art no man to beare good tydynge to daye: thou shalt beare tydynge another tyme: but to daye thou shalt beare none, because þe kynges sonne is dead. Then sayde Joab to Chusi: go and tell the kynge, what yf halt sene: And Chusi tolde him selfe vnto Joab, and ranne. Then sayd Ahimaaz the sonne of Sadache agaynst Joab: come what come wyll, let me also run after Chusi. And Joab said: Wherfore wilt thou runne my sonne, seying þe shalt beare tydynge: I shal haue no rewarde: well, I saye: come what wyll, let me rime. He sayde vnto hym: runne. Then Ahimaaz ranne by the playne waye, and came befoze Chusi.

And David sat betwene the two gates. And the watchmen wente vnto the rouse ouer the gate vnto the wal, and lyfte vp his eyes, and sawe: & beholde, there came a man runnyng alone. And the watchman cryed, & tolde the kyng. And the kyng sayde: if he be alone, there is good tydinges in his mouth. And he came, and dyed nye. And the watchman sawe another man runnyng, and he called vnto the porter and sayde: beholde there cometh another man runnyng alone. And the kyng sayde: he is also a tydinges bynnger. And the watchman sayd: me thynketh the runnyng of the forimost is lyke the runnyng of Ahimaaz the sone of Zadock. The kyng sayde: he is a good man, and cometh with good tydinges. And Ahimaaz called and sayde vnto the kyng: good tydinges, and he fell downe flat to the earth vpon his face before the kyng, and sayde: blessed be the Lorde thy God, which hath shut vp the men that lyfte vp theyr handes against my lord the kyng. And the kyng sayde: is the ponge man Absalom safe? Ahimaaz answered: when Joab sent (Chusi) the kynges seruaut, and me thy seruaut, I sawe muche a do. But I wote not what it was. And the kyng sayde vnto him: turne, and stande here. And he turned, and stode still.

And beholde, Chusi came also, and sayd: Good tydinges my lord the kyng, for the Lorde hath quyte the thys daye out of the hande of al them that rose agaynst the. And the kyng sayde vnto Chusi: Is the ponge man Absalom safe? Chusi answered: The enemyes of my lord the kyng, and all that eyle agaynst the, to do the hurte, be as that pong man is. And the kyng was moued, and wente vp to a chambze ouer the gate, and wepte. And as he went, thus he sayd: O my sonne Absalom, my sonne, my sonne Absalom, wolde God I had dyed for the: O Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

¶ The. xix. Chapter.

David is restored to his kyngdome, and brought agayne to Ierusalem.

And it was tolde Joab: beholde, the kyng wepeth and mourneth for Absalom. And the victory of that day was turned into mournyng vnto all the people. For the people hard say that day howe the kyng sorowed for his sonne. And the people stode a waye that daye from goyng into the cite, as people confounded to steale a way, when they see in battell. But the kyng byd his face, and cryed with a loude voyce. O my sonne Absalom, O Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

And Joab came into the house to the kyng and sayd: thou hast shamed this daye the faces of all thy seruantes, whiche thys daye haue saved thy lyfe, & the lyues of thy sones and of thy daughters, & the lyues of thy wyues, and of thy concubynes, in that thou lovest thine enemyes, and hatest thy frendes. For thou hast declared thys daye, that thou regardest neyther thy lordes nor seruantes. And this day I do perceiue, that if Absalom had lyued, and al we had dyed this day, that had pleased the wel. Howe therfore vp, and come out, and speake kyndely vnto thy seruantes: For I sweare by the Lord, excepte thou come out, there wyl not tary one man with the this nyght. And that wyl be worse vnto the, then all the euill that fell on the from thy youth vnto thys houre. Then the kyng arose, and sat downe in the gate. And they tolde vnto all the people, sayeng: Beholde, the kyng doth syle in the gate. And all the people came before the kyng. But Israel fled, euery man to his tente.

And it fortuned that al the people were at strete thowowe out all the trybes of Israel, sayeng: the kyng saued vs out of the hand of our enemyes, he deliuered vs out of the hand of the Philistines, and now he is fled out of the land for Absalom. But Absalom whome anointed ouer vs, is deade in battell. Therfore, why are ye so still, that ye byng not þ kyng agayne? And kyng David sent to Zadock & Abiathar þ prelates, sayeng: speake vnto the elders of Iuda and say: why are ye behynde to byng the kyng agayne to his house, seyng that such tydinges is come fro all Israel vnto the kyng euen to his house? (For the kyng had sayde: Thus shal ye say vnto the people of Iuda.) Ye are my brethren, my bones and my fleshe: wherfore then are ye the laste that byng the kyng home agayne? And say ye to Amasa: arte thou not of my bone and of my fleshe? God do so and so to me, if thou be not captayne of þ host to me for euer in þ counee of Joab. And he bowed the hertes of all the men of Iuda, euen as the hert of one man: so that they sent this word to þ kyng: Return thou with al thy seruantes. So the kyng returned, & came to Iordan. And Iuda came to Gilgal, for to go downe to mete the kyng and to conuey him ouer Iordan. And Himei * the sonne of Gera, the sonne of Jemini, ¶ Himei. xlv. 2. whiche was of Bahurim, halsted, and came with the men of Iuda to mete kyng David and there were a thousand me of Benjamin with him, and a ziba þ seruaut of the house of Saul and his. xv. sonnes and twenty seruantes with him. And they went quickly ouer Iordan before þ kyng. And there went ouer a boat that caried ouer þ kynges household and they byd him pleasure.

And Himei the sonne of Gera fell before the kyng (as he was come ouer Iordan) and sayd vnto him: let not my lord impute wickednes vnto me, nee remembre the thynges (that thy seruaut byd wyckedly when my Lorde the kyng departed out of Ierusalem) that the kyng shuld take it to bert. For thy seruauit doth knowe, howe that I haue done anyssle. And therfore behold, I am the fyrst this daye of all the house of Ioseph, that am come to go downe, to mete my lord & kyng.

 But Abisai the sonne of zeruia answered, and sayde: Shall not Semci dye for thys, because he cursed the Lordes anointed? And Dauid sayde: what matter is betwene you and me ye sonnes of zeruia? For thys daye ye be aduersaries vnto me. Shal there any mā dye thys daye in Israels? Do not I knowe, that I am this daye kyngde ouer Israel? And therfore the kyng sayde vnto Semci: thou shalt not dye, & the kyng sware vnto hym.

E And Amiphiboseth the sonne of Shaul came also to meete h kyng, and had neither washed hys fete, ner shauen hys bearde, ner washed his clothes from the tyme the kyng departed, vntyll he came agayne in peace. And it fogtuned that when he was come to Jerusalem, and met the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto him: wherfoze wilst thou not thou with me Amiphiboseth? he answered: my lord: O kyng, my seruauunt deccrued me. For thy seruauunt sayd I wold haue myne Aste labied to ryde theron, for to go to the kyng, because thy seruauunt is lame. And ziba hath falsely reported of thy seruauunt vnto my lord the kyng. And my lord the kyng is as an angel of God: do therfoze what semeth good in thine eyes. For al my fathers house were but dead men befoze my lord the kyng: and yet dydest thou put thy seruauant among them: yett eat at thynne owne table. What right therfoze haue I yett, to crye any moze vnto the kyng? And the kyng sayde vnto hym: Why speakest thou yett in thine owne cause? ziba haue sayd: thou & ziba deuide the landes betwene you. And Amiphiboseth sayd vnto h kyng: per, let him take all: for so muche as my lord the kyng is come agayne in peace vnto his owne house.

And Berisai the Gileadite came downe from Roglim, and went ouer Jordan with the kyng, to conuey him ouer Jordan: Berisai was a very aged man, euen foure score yere olde, & prouided þe kyng of sustenance, whyle he laye at Wabanaim: for he was a man of very great substance. And the kyng sayde vnto Berisai: come thou with me, & I will fede the with me in Ierusalem. And Berisai sayd vnto the kyng: I am thus olde, and howe am I able to go vp with the kyng vnto Ierusalem? I am this day foure score yere olde: and can I decreue betwene good and euill? Hath thy seruaut any tast in that beareth of dynneth? Can he hear any more the voyce of synnginge men and women? Wherefore then woulde thy seruaut be yet a burthen vnto my lord the kyng?

Thy seruauunt wyl go a lytle waye dan with the kynge: and wyl wyl the recompence it me with suche a reward let thy seruauunt turne backe againe.
I may dye in myne owne cytie, and ried) in y graue of my father and of my ther. Behold, here is thy seruauunt let him go with my lord be the kynge, to him, what shall please the.

And the kynge answered: Chimean shall go with me. And I wyll do to him what thou shalt be content with. And whatsoeuer thou shalt requyre of me, that same wyll I do the. And all the people went ouer Jordan. And when the kynge was come ouer, he kylled Berselai, and blessed hym, and wet backe againe vnto his owne place. And then the kynge went to Gilgal, and Chimean went with him, and so dyd all the people of Iuda, and brought ouer the kynge, and there were but halfe the men of Israel.

And beholde, all the men of Israel to the kyng, and sayde vnto him, why haue our brethren & men of Iuda stolen the ark and haue brought the kyng & his house and all Dauids men with him ouer Iord And all the men of Iuda answered them of Israel: the kyng is nere of hym, & we wherefore be ye angry for & matter? know ye that we eate of the kynges cosse, & we we take vs any gyftes? And the men of Israel answered the men of Iuda and sayde we haue ten partes in the kyng, & he to more rpyght to Dauid then ye. Wherfore dyd ye deliue vs, that our aduise should be fynde had in restoring our kyng againe And the wordes of & men of Iuda were better then the wordes of the men of Israel every man of Israel went from David, and followed Seba the sonne of Bichzi. But the men of Juda claue faste vnto the kyng, from Iordan to Jerusalem.

And David came to his house to Jerusalem, and toke the ten women hys concubines, that he had left behynd him to kepe the house, and put them in warde, and fed them: but lay no moze with the. And so they were enclosed vnto the day of theyr death, lpyung in wyndowhod.

B Then sayde the kyng to Amasa: call me the men of Juda together agaynst the thyrd day, and be thou here also. And so Amasa went to gather the men of Juda together: but taried longer thā the time which he had appoynted him. And David sayd to Abisai: nowe shall Seba the sonne of Bichzi do vs moze harme, then dyd Absalom. Take thou therfore thy lordes seruauntes, and folowe after hym: lest he get him walled cyties, and escape vs. And there went out after him Joabs men, and the Crethites and the Shelethites and all the myghtyest men. And they departed out of Jerusalem to folowe after Seba the sonne of Bichzi. And when they were at the greate stone in Gibeon, Amasa went before them. And Joabs garmēt (that he had about him) was gyrded vnto him, and he had gyrded theron, a knyfe, whiche was ioynd faste to his lopyes, in suche a sheath, that (as he went) it fel some tymes out. And Joab sayd to Amasa: art thou in health my brother? And Joab toke Amasa by the chyn with the ryght hande, to kysse hym. But Amasa toke no hede to the knyfe that was in Joabs hande, for ther with he smote hym ^{in þe wozt rybbes}, and shed out hys bowels to the grounde, and thruste at hym nomoze, and he dyed.

D So Joab and Abisai his brother folowed after Seba the sonne of Bichzi. And one of Joabs men stode by him, and sayde: he that beareth any fauour to Joab, or good wyl to David, let hym go after Joab. And Amasa lay waled in bloude, in the myddes of the way. And there was a man, which when he sawe that ^{all the people stode byll}, he rowled Amasa out of the way into the felde, and cast a cloth vpon hym, because he sawe that every one that came, stode byll by him. And as sone as he was tumbled out of the waye, all the people went after Joab, to folowe after Seba the sonne of Bichzi.

E And he went thownde al the trybes of Israel vnto Abel, and to Bethmaacha and al the places of Barim. And they gathered together, and went after him. And they came, and beleged hym in Abel & in Bethmaacha. And they cast vp a banche agaynst the cytie that stode in the vallepe. All the people that was with Joab, thrust at the wall to ouerthrowe it. Then cryed a wyse woman out of the cytie, heare heare, byd Joab come hyther that I may speake with hym. When Joab was come vnto her, the woman sayde: arte thou Joab? he answered: I am he. She sayd vnto him: heare þe wordes of thy handmayde: And he answered: I do heare. And she sayde agayne: They spake in þe olde tyme, sayeng: men must aske (peace fyrt), howe muche rather shulde they so do to? Abels: For so haue they cōtynued (hyther to): I am one of them that are peaceable and saythfull in Israel. And thou goest aboute to destroye a cytie, and a mother in Israel. Why wylst thou deuoure the enheritaunce of the Lozde.

And Joab answered, and sayde: God forbyd, God forbid it me, that I shuld either deuoure or destroye. The matter is not so: but a man of mount Ephraim (Seba the sonne of Bichzi by name) hath lyfte vp his hande agaynst the kyng, euen agaynst David. Deluyet vs him only, and I wyl departe from the cytie. And the woman sayde vnto Joab: G Beholde, hys heade shalbe throwen to the, ouer the wal. And then the woman went vnto all the people with her wylsdoine. And they smote of the heade of Seba the sonne of Bichzi, & cast it out to Joab. ^{And he blew a trompet}, and they scattered from the cytie, every man to hys tente. And Joab returned to Jerusalem, vnto the kyng.

Joab was ouer all the host of Israel. And Banaia the sonne of Jehoiada was ouer the Crethites and Shelethites. And Ithram was ouer the tribute. And Jehosaphat the sonne of Ahub was Recorder. Seua was scribe. And Sadock and Abiathar were the preastes. And Iea the Jaitite was Davids preaste.

¶ The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ These be the peccers. The beugraunce of the synners of Saul lyghetech on hys seven sonnes, which are daniel, four great battelles, which David had agaynst the philistines.

Then there fel an hongre in þe dayes of David, the peaces together. And David enquired of the Lozde. And the Lozde answered: it is for Saul, and the house of bloude, because he hne the ^{* Gibaonites}. And the kyng called the Gibaonites, and sayd vnto the. (Nowe the Gibaonites were, not of the ^{* chyldren of Israel}, but a remnant of the Amorites, and the chyldren of Israel swore vnto them: And Saul sought to slep the, for a reie that he had to the chyldren of Israel & of Juda.) Wherefore David sayde vnto them, what shall I do for you, & wherewith shall I make the attonement that ye may blesse the enheritaunce of the Lozde?

The Gibaonites answered him: we wyl haue no syluer nor golde, of Saul nor of hys house: neyther is it our mynde, that þe wyl-

Best kyll any man in Israel. he sayde: what saye ye then that I shall do for you? They answered the kynge: the man that consumed vs & imagined to bring vs to nought, hym wyl we destroye, that nought of him continue in any of the coastes of Israel. Let. vii. men of his sonnes be deliuered vnto vs, and we wyl hange them vp vnto the Lorde, in Gibeath of Saul, whom the Lord had chose. And the kynge sayd: I wyl geue them you.

But the kynge had compassion on Giphibosheth the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Saul, because of the Lordes orph, that was betwene them: euen betwene Dauid and Jonathan the sonne of Saul. But he toke the two sonnes of Rizpa the daughter of Aia (whom he bare vnto Saul) euen Armoni and Giphibosheth, and 7 syue sonnes of Michol (the daughter of Saul) whom he bare to Abiel the sonne of Nerisai the Gephathite. And he deliuered them vnto the handes of the Gibeonites, whiche hanged them in the hyll before the Lorde. And they fel all leue together, and were slayne in the dayes of haruest: euen in the fyrst dayes, and in the begynnyng of Barley haruest.

And Rizpa the daughter of Aia toke sac-cloth and hanged it vp for them vpon the Roche, euen from the begynning of haruest vntill rayne dropped vpon them out of heuen: and suffered nether the byrdes of heaue to fall on the byrde, nor beastes of the felde by nyght. And it was tolde Dauid what Rizpa the daughter of Aia the concubine of Saul had done: and Dauid wente, and toke the bones of Saul & of Jonathan his sonne, from the men of Jabes in Gilead (whiche had stollen them from the strete of Bethlan where the Philistines had bagged them, wher the Philistines had slayne Saul in Gilboa) And he brought thence the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his sonne, and they toke vp the bones of them that were hanged. And the bones of Saul and Jonathan his sonne buried they in the countrey of Ben Jamin, in zela, in sepulchre of Cis his father. And when they had performed all that the kynge commaunded. God was then at one with the lande.

It fortuneth, that the Philistines had yet warre agayne with Israel. And Dauid went downe and his seruantes wpe hym, and fought agaynst the Philistines. And Dauid wared saynt, and Iehoy of Rob one of the sonnes of the gyautes (the yron of whose speare wayed thre hundred lyes, and he beyng gyrded with a newe sword) thoughte to haue slayne Dauid. * But Iehoi the sonne of Iarua succoured him, and smote the Philistine and kyled him. Then the seruantes of Dauid wared vnto hym, sayeng: Thou shalt go no moze out with vs to battel, that thou quench not the lyght of Israel. And after this, there was a battel with the Philistines at Rob, and then Sibbechai the Gathite slewe Gath whiche was one of the sonnes of the Gyautes.

And there was yet another battell in * Rob with the Philistines, where Elhanan the sonne of Jaier Dargim, a Bethlehemitte slewe one Goliath Gethite: 7 stake of whose speare was as great as a weavers cloth beam.

And there was yet another battell in Geth where was a man of a greates stature, and had on euery hand. vi. fyngers and on euery fote. vi. toes. xliiii. in all. And was boyme so of the kynred of the gyautes in Geth. And when he despyed Israel, Jonathan the sonne of Simea the brother of Dauid slewe hym. These foure gyautes were boyme in Geth, and fell into the hande of Dauid and into the handes of his seruantes.

¶ The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ The songe of Dauid for hys vniuersall triumphe over his enemies.

And Dauid spake the wordes of this songe vnto the Lord what tyme the Lord had deliuered him out of the hand of all his enemies and out of the hande of Saul.

And he sayde: the Lord is my rocke, and my castell, and my deliuerer. God is my strength, in him wyl I trust: he is my hynde, and the hope of my saluation: my worshippe & my refuge: my sauour, thou shalt saue me from wronge.

* I wyl call on the Lorde which is my worshippe, and so shall I be saued from myn enemies. For the corrupcions of death closed me aboute: the floudes of Belial put me in feare. The sorowes of hell compassed me aboute: the snares of death ouer toke me. In my tribulacion wyl I call vpon the Lorde, and crye to my God. And he shall heare my voyce out of his temple, and my crye shall enter into his eares. The earth trembled and quaked: the foundacions of heauen moued and shoke, when he was angry.

Smoke went vp in hys wrath, and consuming fyre out of hys mouth, coales were kindled therof. And he bowed heauen, and came downe, and there was darckenes vnder his fete. And he sat vpon Cherub and fleye, he was sene caried vpon the wynges of the wynde. He made darckenes a tabernacle rounde about him, with waters gashed greater in thicke cloudes. Thynges of brightness of hys presence were the fyres kindled.

God thundered from heauen, and he that is moste hye, dothe put out hys voyce. He shot arrows, and scattered them: he hurled tenyng, and ouerthrewe them. The flowe-rynges of the see appeared, and the founda-rynges of the worlde were sene, by the reason of the rebukynge of the Lorde, and thowowe of the blasfyming of the breath of hys nosterelles.

He shall sende from heauen, and set me, he shall plucke me out of many waters.

He shall deliuer me from my myghty ad-uersary, and fro myne enemyes, for they are to strong for me. When they had overtaken me in the daye of my calamitie the Lorde shaped me vp. For he brought me out into rounthe: he deliuered me, because he had a loue vnto me.

* The Lorde wyl rewarde me accordyng C to my ryght wysnesse: accordyng to the pu-renes of my handes wyl he recompence me.
For I haue kepte the wayes of the Lorde, and done no wyckednes agaynste my God.
For all his lawes are in my syght, and hys statutes wyl I put a waye from me. In hys syght also haue I bene vndefyled, and haue kepte me fro myne owne iniquitie.

And the Lorde dyd to me agayne, accor-dyng to my ryght wysnesse, euen after my pu-renes in hys eyesyght. With the godly thou shalte be godly, and with the man that is vncorrupte, thou shalt be vncorrupt. With the pure thou shalt be pure, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde. And the poore people shal be in aduersite, thou shalt helpe. And on the proude shalt thou caste thyne eyes. Thou arte my lyght O Lorde: the Lorde shall lyght my darkenesse.

For with thy helpe I wyl runne thowowe an host of men, & in my God wyl I spyng ouer a wall. God is vncorrupte in his way: the worde of the Lorde is tryed in the fyre:
he is the defender of al the that trust in him.

For who is a God, saue the Lorde? who D is myghty, saue our God? God strengteth me with power, and tyddeth the way in battell cleare before me. He maketh my fete lyke hartes fete, and setteth me fast: vpon myne holde.

He teacheth my handes to fyght, & euen a bowe of stele is to weake for myne armes.
D Thou hast geuen me the shild of thy sal-uacion, and with thy louyng mekenes thou doest multiply me. Thou shalt make me space to walke in, & my legges shal not faile me. I wyl folowe vpon myne enemyes and destrope them, and turne not agayne vntyl I haue consumed them.

I wyl waste them and smyte them, that they shall not be able to aryse: yee, they shal fall vnder my fete.

Thou hast gyded me about with myghte to battell, and them that rose agaynste me, hast thou subdued vnder me.

And thou madest myne enemyes & them that hated me to turne theyr backes to me that I myght destrope them. They loke for helpe, but there is none to saue the: yee, euen vnto the Lorde do they crye, but he heareth them not.

I wyl beate them as smale as the dust of the erth: I wyl stampe them as the dytte of the create, and wyl spreade them abroad.

Thou shalt deliuer me from the dissen-cion of my people: thou shalt kepe me to be an heade ouer nacions: the people whiche I knewe not, shall serue me.

Strange chyldren dissemble with me:
At the hearing of the eare they obeye me.

Strange chyldren wyl spycke a way, and they shal be smytten with feare in the prouyng chambr. God is a lyne, and blessed be my maker: magnified be God, my moste strong saluacion. It is God that aduengerth me, & hyngeth downe the people vnder me.
He deliuereth me fro myne enemyes, thou also shalt lyfte me vp on hye from the that ryse agaynste me, thou shalt deliuer me from the wycked men.

And therfore I wyl prays the (O Lorde) among the nacions, and wyl syng vnto thy name. Whiche sheweth greates saluacion for his kyng, and dealeth mercifully with his anoynted: euen with Dauid, and with hys sede for euermoze.

Dauid the sonne of Isay sayde: And the man (whiche was made, the annoynted of the God of Jacob, and the noble psalmist of Israel) sayde: the sperte of the Lorde spake by me, and hys worde was in my tonge. The God of Israel spake of me, euen y most myghty of Israel, sayd: he that beareth rule ouer men, ought to rule iustly in the fear of God. And as y morning lyght when the sonne is vp, a morning in whiche are no cloudes to let the brightnes, and as the grasse of the earth is by the vertue of the rayne. Shall not my house be so with God?
* For he hath made with me an euercastyng conenaunt, perfecte & sure in al poyntes: and this is truly all my healt and al my desyre that it growe but not as grasse. But the vngodly man of Belial shal be as a thorne cleane plucked vp, which can not be takē with han-des: But the man that shal touche the, must haue pyn, or a longe helue. * O ye muste they be burnt with fyre in the same place.

These be the names of the myghty men

And the people (which was returned, and went after hym to rñe to the spoule. After hym was Samma f sonne of Age the Hararite: and the Philistines gathered together besyd a towne. (Where was a parcell of lande full of rye) and the people fled from the Philistines. But he stode in the myddes of the grounde, and defended it, and slue the Philistines. And the Lorde gaue greate victory.

* These thre (which were of f thyrty chefe captaynes) went downe to David in f haruest tyme vnto the caue Adullam, & the host of the Philistines abode in the valey of Gypaunes. And David was then in an holde. And the souldours of the Philistines were in Bethlehem. And David longed and said: (Oh, that I had of the water that is in the well by the gate of Bethlehe, for to drynke. And the thre myghty bzake thozowe f host of the Philistines, and fet water out of the well of Bethlehe that was by the gate, and toke and brought it to David. Nevertheless he wolde not drynke therof, but offred it vn to the Lorde, and sayd: the Lorde forbyd that I shulde do so. Is not this the bloude of the men that wente in ioperdy of theyr lyues: and therfore he wolde not drynke it. And these thynges dyd these thre myghty men.

* 11. Sam. xxi. g.

* Abisai the brother of Joab, the sonne of Saraiab, was chefe among the thre, and he lyfte vp hys speare agaynst the hundred, and slue them, and had the name among the thre. For he was nobler man then the thre, and was theyr captayne. Howbest he attayned not vnto (the thre) thre.

And Banaiab the sone of Jehoiada (the sonne of a myghty man) valyaunt in actes, of Hadzeel, slue two strong lpons, euen lyds of Joab. He went downe also, & slue a lpon in a ppt in tyme of snowe. And he slue an Egyptian a goodly bygge man, whiche had a speare in his hande. But he wente downe to him with a staffe, and plucked the speare out of the Egyptians hand, & slue him with hys owne speare. These thynges dyd Banaiab the sone of Jehoiada, & had the name among the thre worthys. He was honorable amog thyrty, but he attayned not to the (fyrste) thre. And David made hym of his counsell. Abiel the brother of Joab also was one of the thyrty. ¶ The xxiii. Chapter.

David caused the people to be numbred, and therfore is Israel plagued with pestilence: so that in thre dayes there dyed. lxx. thousande.

And agayne, the Lorde was wroth agaynst Israel, and he moned David agaynst them, in that he sayd: * go and numbre Israel and Juda. For the kynge sayde to Joab the captayne of hys hoste: go thou abrode now, thozowe out all the trybes of Israel, euen from Dan to Beer Seba, and numbre ye the people, that I may know the numbre of them. And Joab sayde vnto the kynge: I beseeche the Lord thy God, to make thy people as many mo as they be: ye and and hundred tymes in many mo, and that the eyes of my lord the kynge may se them. And what is the cause that my lord the kynge hath a luste to this thyng? For withstanding the kynge was preuayled agaynst Joab and agaynst the captaynes of the hoste.

And Joab and the captaynes of the hoste wente out from the presence of the kynge, to numbre the people of Israel. And they passed ouer Jordan, and pyched in Arcor on the ryght syde of the cytie that lyeth in the myddes of the valey of Gad, ouer agaynst Iart. And then they came to Gilead, and to the netherlande, where was a newe habitation, & from thence they came to Dan Jaan about to Sidon, & came to the strong hold of Tyr, and to all the cyties of the Heuites and of the Cananites, & then went out to founteyns of Juda, eue to Beerseba. And so, wher they had bene abroade thozowe out all the lande, they returned to Ierusalem agayne, after the ende of nyne monethes and twenty dayes. And Joab deliuered vp the numbre and the name of the people vnto the kynge. And there were in Israel egypt hundred thousande men of myghte that dyd the swerdes. And the men of Juda were fyue hundred thousande men.

And Davids herte smote hym, after that he had numbred f people. And David sayd vnto the Lorde: I haue synned exceedingly in that in that I haue done. And now the Lorde take away the trespass of thy seruant, for I haue done verie folysly. And when Dauid was vp in a moynynge, the word of the Lorde came vnto the prophete Gad Dauids sear, sayeng go & say vnto Dauid, thus sayeth the Lorde: I offre the thre thynges, chosse the whiche of them I shall do vnto the.

So Gad came to Dauid, and shewed him, and sayde vnto hym. Wylt thou haue seuen yeres hunger to come in thy land, or wylt thou haue iii. monethes before thyne enemies, they following the, or that there be thre dayes pestilence in thy lande? Nowe therfore aduise the, & se, what answere I shall geue to hym that sent me. And Dauid sayd vnto Gad: I am in extreme trouble. * We wyl fal nowe into the hande of the Lorde, for muche is his mercy, & let me not fall into the hande of man.

And so the Lorde sente a pestilence in Israel, from the moynynge vnto the tyme appointed. And there dyed of the people from Dan to Beerseba seuentie thousande men. And when the angel stretched out his hande vpon Ierusalem to destroy it, the Lorde had compassion to do that euell, and sayde to the angel that destroyed the people: it is now sufficient: holde thyne hande. And the angel of the Lorde was by the thyrsyng place of Arefna the Jebusite. And Dauid spake vnto the Lorde (when he sawe the angel that smote the people) and sayd: lo, it is I that haue synned, & I that haue done wickedly. But these shepe, what haue they done? let thyne hande (I pray the) be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house.

And Gad came the same day to Dauid, and sayde vnto hym: go vp and reare an aultare vnto the Lorde in the thyrsyng flowre of Arefna the Jebusite. And Dauid (according to the sayeng of Gad) went vp, as the Lorde commaunded. And Arefna looked, and sawe the kyng and his seruantes comyng towardes hym. And Arefna wente out, and bowed hym selfe before the kyng flat on his face vpon the grounde, and Arefna sayde: wherfore is my Lorde the kyng come to his seruant? Dauid answered: to bye the thyrsyng flowre of the, and to make an aultare vnto the Lorde, that the plague maye cease from the people.

And Arefna sayde vnto Dauid: let my lord the kyng take and offre what semeth hym good in his eyes: Beholde, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and sheades and the other instrumentes of the oxen for wood. All these thynges dyd Arefna geue vnto the kyng, and sayd moreover vnto the kyng: the Lorde thy God accepte the. And the kyng sayd vnto Arefna: not so but I wyl bye it of the at a wyce, and wyl not offre sacrifice vnto the Lorde my God of the whiche doth coste me no thyng. And so Dauid bought the thyrsyng flowre, and the oxen for fyfty sheeles of syluer. And Dauid buyt there an aultare vnto the Lorde, and offered burnte sacrifices and peace offrynges. And so the Lorde was intreated for the lande. And the plague ceased from Israel.

The ende of the seconde boke of Samuel: otherwyle called the seconde boke of the kynges.

The thyrd boke of the kynges after the rekenyng of the Larynistes: whiche thyrd boke is the fourth also, is but one with the hebreues.

The fyrst Chapter.

The yonge virgin Absag kept Dauid in byre extreme age. Adonia occupieth the realme vnto the kynges to his father. Salomon is anoynted kyng, and so Adonia getteth hym away.

Ad kyng David was olde and stricken in yeres: so that when they couered hym with clothes, he caught no heate: wherfore his seruantes sayde vnto hym: let there be sought for my lord the kyng a yonge mayden, to stande before the kyng and to cheryshe hym. And let her lye in thy bosome, that my lord the kyng may get heate. And so they sought for a yonge damosell thowowe out all the coastes of Israel, and founde one Absag a Dunamite, and brought her to the kyng. And the damosell was excedyng fayre, and cheryshed the kyng, and mynistred to hym. But the kyng knewe her not.

And Adonia the sonne of Hagith exalted hym selfe, sayng: I wyl be kyng. And he gat hym charettes & horlmen, and fyfty men to runne before hym. And his father wolde not displease hym at any tyme, nor sayd so moch to hym as, why dost thou so? And he was a goodly mā, & his mother bare hym nexte after Absalom. And he toke counsell at Joab the sonne the sonne of zarua, and at Abiathar p prest. And they helped Adonia. But Sadocke the prest, Banaiabu p sonne of Ichoiada, Ratha the prophet, Semel and Rei, and all the men of myght whiche were with Dauid, favoured not Adonia. And Adonia sacrificed shepe and oxen, and fat catell, by the stone of zoheloth, which is faste * by the well of Rogel, and called all his brethren the kynges sonnes, and the men of Juda the kynges seruantes. But Nathan the prophet and Banaiabu, and the other myghty men, and Salomon his brother he called not.

Wherefore, Ratha spake vnto Bethsabe the mother of Salomon, sayeng: haste p not harde howe that Adonia the sonne of Hagith doth reygne, and Dauid our lord knoweth it not: Now therfore come, & I wil geue the counsell, howe to saue thyne owne lyfe, & the lyfe of thy sonne Salomon. So and get the in vnto kyng Dauid, and saye vnto hym: didst not thou (my lord O kyng) swear vnto thy handmayde, sayeng: Salomon thy sonne shall reygne after me, & he shall sit vpon my seate, whys then Adonia kyng? Beholde, whyle p pet talkest there with p kyng, I wil come in after the, and confyrme thy wordes.

And Bethsabe went in vnto the kyng into the chābre. And the kyng was very olde, and Abisag the Sunamite ministred vnto the kyng. And Bethsabe stouped, and made obeysaunce vnto the kyng. And the kyng sayde: what is the matter? She answered hym: my lord, thou swarest by the Lord thy God vnto thyne handmayde: Salomon thy sonne shall reygne after me, and he shall sit vpon my seate. And beholde, nowe is Adonia, kyng, and my lord the kyng woteth not of it. And he hath offered oxen, fat catell, & many shepe, and hath called all the sonnes of the kyng, and Abiathar p prest, and Joab the capayne of the host. But Salomon thy seruant hath he not bydden. And nowe my lord (O kyng) the eyes of all Israel waite on the, that thou shouldest tel the, who ought to sit on the seate of my lord the kyng after hym. For elles when my lord the kyng shall slepe with his fathers, I and my sonne Salomon shalbe synners.

And whyle he pet talked with the kyng, Ratha p prophet came also. And they tolde the kyng sayeng: beholde, here cometh Nathan the prophet. And when he was come in to the kyng, he made obeysaunce before the kyng vpon his face on the ground, & Ratha sayde: My lord (O kyng) hast thou sayde: Adonia shall reygne after me, & he shall sit vpon my seate? For he is gone downe thys daie, & hath slayne many oxen, and fat shepe and hath called all the kynges sonnes, & the captaynes of the host, & Abiathar the prest. And beholde, they eate and dryncke before him, and say: God saue kyng Adonia. And me thy seruant, and Sadocke the prest. Banaiabu the sonne of Ichoiada, & thy seruant Salomon hath he not called. Is this thyng done of my lord the kyng, & thou hast not shewed it vnto thy seruant, who hath sit on p seate of my lord the kyng after him?

Then kyng Dauid answered, and sayde: cal me Bethsabe. And she came in to p kynges presence, & stode before him. And p kyng swore, sayeng: As truly as the Lord (that hath ryd my soule out of al aduersite) euen as I swore vnto the by the Lord God of Israel, sayeng: Salomon thy sonne shall reygne after me, & he shall sit vpon my seate for me, so wyl I do this day. Then Bethsabe bowed on her face to the earth, and by her reverence vnto the kyng, and sayde: I pray God that my lord kyng Dauid may lyue euer. And kyng Dauid sayde: cal me Sadocke the prest, & Ratha the prophet, and Banaiabu the sonne of Ichoiada. And they came before the kyng. The kyng also sayd vnto them: take with you the seruantes of your lord, & set Salomon my sonne vpon myne owne Mule, and carpe hym downe to Gidon. And let Sadocke the prest, & Ratha the prophet anoynte hym there, kyng ouer Israel. And blowe ye with trumpettes, & say: God saue kyng Salomō. And then come vp after him that he may come & sit vpon my seate. And he shalbe kyng in my steade. And I wil commaunde him to be capayne ouer Iuda and Juda. And Banaiabu the sonne of Ichoiada answered the kyng, and sayde: I pray God p the Lord God of my lord the kyng say so to. And as God hath bene to my lord the kyng, euen so be he with Salomon also, & make his seate greater, then the seate of my lord kyng Dauid hath ben.

And so Sadocke the prest, and Ratha the prophet, and Banaiabu the sonne of Ichoiada, and the Cherhites and Phelthites went downe, and set Salomon vpon kyng Dauid's Mule, and brought him to Gidon. And Sadocke p prest toke an hoine of oyle out of the tabernacle, and anoynted Salomon. And all they of the people blew trumpettes, and sayde: God saue kyng Salomō. And all the people came vp after hym, ppyng with pypes and reioysyng greatly, that the earth rang with the soude of them.

And Adonia & all the gesses that he had called vnto hym, heard it, euen as they had made an ende of eatyng. And when they harde p soude of the trumpet, they sayde: howe hath this thing happened? Is there is such a noyse in the citie? And as he pet spake: beholde, Jonathan the sonne of Abiathar the prest came. And Adonia sayde vnto him: come in, for p valyaunt man, and bypnyest good tyng. And Jonathan answered & sayd to Adonia: God Nerly our Lorde kyng David hath made Salomon kyng. And the kyng hath sent wth him Sadock the prest, & Nathan the prophete, & Banaiabu the sonne of Jehoiada & the Cerethites, and the Phelithites, and they have let hym vpon the kynges mule. And Sadock the prest, and Nathan the prophet. have anoynted him kyng in Gihon. And they came up agayne, and reioysed, that the cytie was sounde agayne. And that is the noyse, that ye haue hearde. And Salomon sitteth on the seate of the kyngdom. And moresoer the kynges seruantes came to blesse oure lorde kyng David, sayinge: thy God make the name of Salomon moze honozable then thy seate. And the kyng bowed hym selfe vpon the bed. And thus sayd the kyng: Blessed be the Lorde God of Israel: whych hath made one to syt on my seate thys daye, myne eye seinge it.

And all the gesses that were wth Adonia were afrayed, and rose vp, and wth euerie man his waye. And Adonia feareinge the presence of Salomon, arose, & went, ^{into the tabernacle of the Lorde:} and caught hold on the hornes of the altare. And one tolde Salomon sayinge: beholde, Adonia doth feare kyng Salomon: for he hath caught holde on the hornes of the altare, sayinge: let kyng Salomon swere vnto me this daye that he wyl not sleie his seruant wth the swerde.

And Salomon sayd, yf he wyl be a chyld of vertue, then shall not an heere of hym fall to the earth. But and yf wyckednes be founde in him, he shal dye. And so kyng Salomon sent, and they brought him from the altare. And he came, and dyd obeyssaunce vnto kyng Salomon. And Salomon sayde vnto hym get the to thynne house.

The. ii. Chapter.

^{David dyeth. Adonia requyeth to haue Absalon his concubine, & therfore Salomon commaundeth to slaye hym. Absalon is put from his pyllar: bene. Benai and Joab are slayne.}

In the dayes of David dyed wyfe that he shulde dye, and he charged Salomon wth his sonne, sayinge. I go the waye of all the worlde, & be thou kyng therfore, and shewe thy selfe a man. I hope thou the watch of the Lorde thy God, that thou walke in his wayes, and kepe his statutes, whis preceptes, his iudgements, & his testymones, euen as it is wyrtte in the booke of Moses: that thou mayst prosper in all that thou doest, and in euery thyng that thou mekest wth thall.

That the Lorde also may make good his word, whych he spake vnto me, sayinge: yf thou shalt take hede to the waye, & they shall be before me in truth, wth all they: her-tes, & wth al they: soules, & then shalt thou not be wthout a man on the seate of Israel.

* Moreover, thou wottest, how Joab the sonne of Zaruia serued me, and what he dyd to that two captaynes of the hostes of Israel: vnto Abner the sonne of Ner, and vnto Amasa the sonne of Jether: whom he slue, & shed bloude in tyme of peace (euen as it had bene in warre) and put the bloude of warre vpon his gyrdle that was aboute his loynes, and in his shoes that were on his fete. Deale wth hym therfore accordyng to thy wyddome, and byng not his hooze head downe to the graue in peace. * But the kyndnes vnto the sonnes of Berselai the Gileadite, that they maye eat at thy table. For they came to me, when I fled from Absalom thy brother.

* And beholde, thou hast wth the Beniaminithe sonne of Era, the sonne of Gemini, of Baburim, which cursed me wth an horrible curse, in the daye whan I went to Mahanaym. But he came to meet me at Jordan, and I swore to hym by the Lorde sayinge: I wyl not sleie the wth the swerde: But thou shalt not count hym as vngylet. For thou art a man of wyddome, & knowest what thou oughtest to do vnto hym. His hooze head shalt thou byng to the graue wth bloude.

And so David slepte wth his fathers, and was buryed in the cytie of David. And 7 dayes whiche David raygned v^o Israel, were fourtye yeares: seuen yeares raygned he in Hebron: and thirtie & thre yeares raygned he in Jerusalem. * Then sat Salomon vpon the seate of David his father, and his kyngdome was stablyshed myghtely.

And Adonia the sonne of Hagith came to Bethsabe the mother of Salomon. And he sayd: * Comest thou peaceably? And he sayd peaceably. He sayde, moresoer: I haue somwhat to saye vnto the. She sayde: saye on. And he sayd: thou knowest that the kyngdome was myne, and that al Israel set theyr faces on me, that I shulde raygne, howbeit, the kyngdome is turned awaye, and geue to my brother: for it is apoynted hym of the Lorde: and nowe I aske a peticon of the: deny me not. And he sayd vnto hym: Saye on. And he sayd: speake, I praye the, vnto Salomon the kyng, for he wyl not saye the nay, that he geue me Absalon the Sunamite to wyfe. And Bethsabe sayd: well, I wyl speake for the vnto the kyng.

Bethsabe therfore went vnto kyng Salomon, to speake vnto hym for Adonia. And the kyng rose vp to mete her & bowed hym selfe vnto her, and sat hym downe on his seate. And there was a seate set for the kynges mother, and she sat on his ryghte syde. Then she sayde: I desyre a lytle peticon of the, I praye the save me not naye. And the kyng sayde vnto her: Alke on my mother, for I will not save the naye. She sayde: let Abisag the Sunamite be geuen to Adonia thy brother to wyfe. And kyng Salomon answered and sayde vnto hys mother: why doest thou aske Abisag the Sunamite for Adonia: aske for hym þy kyngdome also: for he is myn elder brother, and hath for hym Abiathar the p̄casse, and Joab the sonne of Zaruia. Then kyng Salomon sware by the Lozde, sayinge: God do so, and so to me, yf Adonia haue not spoken this word agaynst hys owne lyfe. Nowe therfore, as truly as the Lozde lyueth, whych hath ordeyned me, and set me on the seate of Dauid my father, and made me an house, as he promised, Adonia shall dye this daye. And kyng Salomon sent by the hande of Banaiah the sonne of Jehoiada, and he smote hym that he dyed.

And vnto Abiathar the p̄cass, sayde the kyng: get the to Anatoth vnto thyne owne felde: for thou arte worthy of death: but I will not at this tyme kyl the, because thou barest the arke of the Lozde God before Dauid my father, and because thou hast suffered wyth my father in all hys afflictions. And so Salomon put away Abiathar from being p̄cass vnto the Lozde: that he myght fulfyl the wordes of the Lozde whych he spake ouer þy house of Eli in Silo. Then tydynges cam also to Joab: for Joab had turned after Adonia though he turned not after Absalom. And Joab fled vnto þy tabernacle of þy Lozde and caught holde on the hornes of the altare. And it was told kyng Salomon, how that Joab fled vnto the Tabernacle of the Lozde and stode by the altare. The Salomon sent Banaiah the sonne of Jehoiada, sayinge: go and fall vpon hym.

And Banaiah came to the tabernacle of the Lozde, and sayd vnto him. Thus sayeth the kyng: come out. And he sayd: naye, but I wil dye euil here. And Banaiah brought the kyng worde agayne, sayinge: thus sayd Joab, and thus he answered me.

And the kyng sayd. Do euil as he hath sayde: smyte hym, and burye hym, that thou mayest take awaye the bloude whych Joab shed causelesse, from me, and from the house of my father. And the Lozde shall bypunge his bloud vpon hys owne head, for he smote two men ryght wyse and better then he, and slue the with the swerde, my father Dauid not knowyng thereof: euil Abner the sonne of Ner, captayne of the host of Israel, and Amasa the sonne of Jether captayne of þy host of Iuda. Theyr bloud shall therfore retorne vpon the heade of Joab, and on the head of his seed for euil. But vpon Dauid, and vpon hys seed, and vpon hys house, and vpon hys seate shall ther be peace for euil of the Lozde.

So Banaiah the sonne of Jehoiada went vp, and smote hym, and slue hym, and buryed hym in hys owne house in the wylderne. And the kyng put Banaiah the sonne of Jehoiada in hys rowme ouer the doore and put Sadock the p̄cass in the rowme of Abiathar.

And the kyng sente and called Semei, and sayde vnto hym: buyde the an house in Jerusalem, and dwel there: and se that thou go not forth thence any whether. For be thou sure, that the daye that thou goest oute, and passest ouer the ryuer of Cedron, thou shalt dye that daye, and thy bloude shall be vpon thyne owne head. And Semei said vnto the kyng. This is a good thyng: as my lord the kyng hath sayde: so will hys seruante do. And Semei dwelt in Jerusalem many daye. And it chaunced after thre yeres, that two of þy seruantes of Semei ranne away vnto Achis, sonne of Maacha kyng of Geth. And they tolde Semei, sayinge: behold, thy seruantes be in Geth. And Semei rode vp, and saddled hys Asse, and gat hym to Geth to Achis, to seeke hys seruantes, and returned, and brought hys seruantes agayne from Geth.

And it was tolde Salomon, how that Semei had gone from Jerusalem to Geth, and was come agayne. And the kyng sente and called Semei, and sayd vnto hym: why I not charge the by the Lozde with an othe, and testified vnto the, sayinge: be sure, that whensoever thou goest oute, and walkest abroad any whether, thou shalt dye þy death? And thou saydest vnto me: it is good thynges that I haue heard. Why then hast thou not kept the othe of the Lozde and the commandement that I charged the wyth?

The kyng sayde moze ouer to Semei: thou remembrest all the wyckednesse whych thyne heart knoweth, and that thou dydest to Dauid my father. The Lozde also shall bypunge thy wyckednesse vpon thyne owne head: and kyng Salomon shall be blessed, and the seate of Dauid stablished before þy Lozde for euil. So the kyng commaunded Banaiah the sonne of Jehoiada: whych went out, and smote hym that he dyed. And the kyngdome was stablished in the hande of Salomon.

The. iii. Chapter.

Salomon taketh Pharaos daughter to wyfe. The Lozde appeared to him and geaueth him wysdome. The p̄cassyng of the two harlots who quide ouer þy kynges chylde: and Salomons sentence thereon.

Salomon made a fymite with the raokynge of Egypt, & toke Pharaos daughter, and brought her in to the cytie of Dauid, whiche had made an ende of buyldynge his house.

his owne house, & the house of the Lord, and the wal of Jerusalem rounde about. Wherby the people sa: cōspired in altars made on hylls, because there was no house buylte vnto the name of J^{h} Lord, vntyl those dayes. And Salomon loued J^{h} Lorde, and walked in the ordynaunces of Dauid hys father, saue one-ly that he sacrificed and offered incense vpon altars in hylls.

* And the kyng went to Gibeon, to offer there: for that was a speciall offering place. And a thousand burnt offerings dyd Salomon offer vpon that altare: and in Gibeon J^{h} Lorde appeared to Salomon in a dreame by nyght. And God sayd: aske what thou wilt that I maye geue it the. And Salomō sayd: thou hast thewed vnto thy seruauit Dauid my father great mercy, when he walked before the in truerth, in ryghteousnesse, and in playnesse of heart wth the. And thou hast kepte for hym thys greates mercy, that thou hast geuen hym a sonne, to syt on his seat: as it is come to passe thys daye. * And now, O

Lord my God, it is thou that hast made thy seruauit kyng in steade of Dauid my father. * And I am but younge, and wote not howe to go out and in. And thy seruauit is in the myddest of thy people, whiche thou hast chosen. And verily the people are so manye that they cannot be tolde nor nombred for multitude. * Geue therfore vnto thy seruauit an vnderstandynge hert, to iudge the people, that I maye decerne betwene good and bad. For who is able to iudge thys, thy so myghty a people?

And thys pleased the Lorde well, J^{h} Salomon had desyred thys thyng. And God sayd vnto hym: because thou hast asked thys thyng, and hast not asked longe lyfe, nether hast asked ryches, nor the soule of thyne enemyes, but hast asked vnderstandynge and discrecyon in iudgement.

Beholde, I haue done accordynge to thy petycyon. For I haue geuen the a wyle and an vnderstandynge herte, so that there was none lyke the before J^{h} , nether after the shall any lyke vnto the. And I haue also geuen the, that which thou hast not asked, euē ryche and honoure, so that ther shall be no kyng lyke vnto the all thy dayes. And yf J^{h} wyle walke in my wayes, to kepe myne ordynaunces and my commaundementes, * as thy father Dauid dyd walke, I wyl lengthen thy dayes. When Salomon awoke, beholde it was a dreame. * And he cam to Jerusalem and stode before the Arke of the Testament of the Lorde, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings, and made a feaste to all his seruantes.

* Then came there two women, that were harlottes, vnto the kyng, and stode before hym. And the one woman sayde: Oh my Lorde, I and thys woman dwell in one house. And I was deliuered of a chylde with her in the house. And the thyrde daye after that I was deliuered, she was deliuered also: and we were together, and no stranger wyth vs in the house, saue we two.

And this wyues chylde dyed in J^{h} nyght, for she smothered it. And she rose at mydnyght, & toke my sonne from my syde, whyle thyne handmayde slept, and layde it in her bosome and put her dead chylde in my bosome. And when I rose vp to geue my chylde sucke, beholde, it was dead. But whan I had looked vpon it in the moynyng, beholde, it was not my sonne, whych I dyd beare.

The other woman sayde: it is not so: but my sonne lyueth, and thy sonne is dead. And she sayde agayne: No, but thy sonne is dead and my sonne is alpye. And thus they pleaded before the kyng. Then sayd the kyng: the one sayth, this that is alpye is my sonne and the dead is thyne. And the other sayeth, naye: but thy sonne, is the dead, and the lyuyng chylde is myne. And the kyng sayd: brynge me a swerde. And they brought out a swerde before the kyng. And the kyng sayd: Deuyde the lyuyng chylde in two, and geue the one halfe to the one, and the other to the other.

Then spake the woman, whose the lyuyng chylde was, vnto J^{h} kyng, for her bowelles yerned vpon her sonne, and sayde: I beseeche the my lorde, geue her the lyuyng chylde, and in no wyle slepe it. But the other sayd let it be nether myne nor thyne, but deuyde it. Then the kyng answered and sayd * geue her the lyuyng chylde, and slep it not for she is the mother therof. And all they of Israel hearde of the iudgement, whiche the kyng had iudged, and feared the kyng: for they sawe that the wysdome of God was in hym to do iustyce. J^{h}

And Salomons byead for one daye was xxx. quarters of manchet flour, & thre skore quarters of meale: ten stalled oxen, and. xx. out of the pastures, and a hundred shepe, besyde hertes, buches, and wyld goates, and capons. For he ruled in al the region on the other syde Euphrates, from Thiphsah to * Aza, ouer all the kynges on s other syde s ryuer. And he had peace with al his seruantes on euery syde. And Juda & Israel dwelt wythoute feare, euery man vnder hys byne and vnder hys fyggtree, frō Dan to Beersheba, all the dayes of Salomon.

And Salomō had * xl. M. stalles of hoxles for charrettes, and. xii. M. hoxsmē. And s offycers prouyded vytayle for kyng Salomon and for all that cam out of any place to kyng Salomons table, euery man hys moneth, so that there lacked nothyng. * And God gaue Salomon wysdome & vnderstandyng exceedyng muche, and a large hert, euen as the sand that is on the se shore: and Salomons wysdome excelled the wysdome of al the chyldre of the east cuntry and all the wysdome of Egypte. For he was wyser then all men, yee then, Ethan the Ezrahite, and Heman, Chalcol, and Darba the sonnes of Mahol. And hys name was spokē of thowowe oute all nacjons on euery syde. And Salomon spake thre thousand prouybes. And hys songes were a thousande and fyue. And he spake of trees, euen frō s Cedar tre that groweth in Libanon, vnto s Rose that springeth out of the wal. He spake also of beastes, of foules, of woymes, & of fyttes. And there came of all nacjons to heare the wysdome of Salomō, and frō all kynges of the earth, which had heard of his wysdome.

The. v. Chapter.

* Kyng Salomon sendeth Cedar tymber to the byldyng of the temple. The description of the woyses.

Ad Hiram kyng of Tyre sent hys seruantes vnto Salomon, for he had heard, that they had appointed hym kyng in the rowme of his father. * For Hiram was euer a louer of Dauid. * And Salomon sent to Hiram, saying: thou knowest * how that Dauid my father coulde not buyde an house vnto the name of the Lorde his God, for the warres whiche were aboute hym on euery syde, vntyll the Lorde put them vnder the soles of hys feet. But now the Lorde my God hath geue me rest on euery syde, so that there is neither aduersarie, nor any euyll plage. And behold, * I am determined to buyde an house vnto the name of the Lorde my God, as the Lord spake vnto Dauid my father, saying: thy sonne whom I wyll set vpon thy seat for s, he shal buyld an house vnto my name. Now therfore, comaunde thou that they deme out Cedar trees out of Libanō. And my seruantes shalbe wyth thyne, and vnto the wyll I geue the hye for thy seruantes, accordyng to all suche thynges as thou shalt apoynt. For thou knowest that ther are not among vs, that can shyll to hewe tymber, lyke vnto the Sidoncs.

Whā Hiram heard the woyses of Salomō, he reioysed greatly, & sayd. Blessed be the Lorde this day which hath geue vnto Dauid a wyse soune ouer this myghty people. And Hiram sent to Salomon, saying: I haue collected the thinges which I sentest to me for,

I will accomplishe all thy desyre, concernyng cymbre of Cedar trees & fyre. My seruauntes shall bypnye the fro Liban to I see. And I wyll conuey the by wypppe vnto the place y thou shalt shew me, & wyll cause them to be discharged there, & thou shalt receaue them.
And thou shalt do me a pleasure agayne, yf thou mynyste fode for myne house. And so Hiram gaue Salomon Cedar trees & fyre trees accordyng to all his desyre. And Salomon gaue Hiram twenty thousand quarters of wheate for fode to his household, and twenty buttres of pure oyle. Thus muche gaue Salomon to Hiram yere by yere.

And the Lozde gaue Salomon wysdome as he promysed hym. And there was peace betwene Hiram & Salomon, and they two were confedered together. And kyng Salomon reysed a some out of al Israel. And the some was thyrty thousand men, whom he sent to Libanon, ten thousand a moneth by course, so that whan they had bene one mo-neth in Libanon, they abode two monethes at home.

And Adoniram was ouer y some. And Salomon had thyrty skore and ten thousande that bare burdens, and foure skore thousand malons in the mountaynes: besydes the lozdes, whos Salomon appoynted to ouersee the woyke, euen thyr thousand & thyr hundred.
Whiche ruled y people (and them) y wrought in the woike. And the kyng commaunded them to bypnye great stones, fre stones, and hewed stones for y foundacyon of the house.
And Salomons malons & the malons of Hiram dyd betwe the, wyth the workmen of the corners. And so they prepared both tymbre and stones for the buyldyng of the house.

The. vi. Chapter.

Howe and whan the temple was buylded.

And it came to passe that in the four hundred and foure skore yere (after the chyldren of Israel were come out of the lande of Egypte) and * in the fourth yere of the rayne of Salomon vpon Israel and in the moneth ziff, whych is the seconde moneth * he beganne to buylde the house of the Lozde. And the house whych Salomon buylt for the Lozde, was thyr skore cubites long & twenty cubites broad, & thyrty cubi-tes hye. And * he made a porch before the bo-dye of the temple, which was twenty cubi-tes lōg after the bredth of the house, and ten cubites broad, euen in the forefront of the house. And in the house he made wyndowes broad without, and narrow within.

And in the wall of the house, he made chabers rounde about, (eue in the walles of the house) rounde about the temple & the queer, and made sydes rounde aboute. The nether-most chamber was fyue cubites broad, and the myddle was fyue cubites broad, and the third was seue cubites broad. For wythout in the wall of y house he layed beames round about, that the beames of the chambers shuld not be fastened in the walles of the house.

And the house was buylt of stone, made per-fecte alre dy before it was brought thither, so that there was nether hammer ner axe, ether any tole of yron heard in y house, whyle it was in buyldyng.

The doze of the myddle chambze was in the tyght syde of y house: and men wente by with wyndyng steares into the myddle cha-bze, and oute of the myddle, into the thyrde, And so he buylt the house and fynyshe it & roust it with beames of Cedar timber. And then he buylt chambzes to all the temple of fyue cubytes heygth, and they were ioyned to the house, with beames of Cedar.

And the woꝛde of the Lozde came to Salomon, saying: concernyng the house whych thou art in buyldyng, yf y wylt walcke in myne ordinaunces, & execute my lawes, and kepe all my commaundementes, to walcke in them: then wyll I make good vnto the, my promes * whiche I promysed Dauid thy father. * And I wyll dwel among the chyldre of Israel, and wyll not forsake my people Israel. Salomon therfore buylt the house, and fynyshe it, and syled the walles of the house within, wyth bordes of Cedar tre: eue from the panemente of the house vnto the rosse dyd he syle the walles of it within, with Cedar tre, and boarded the flooze of the house with planches of fyre.

And he syled twenty cubytes in the sy-des of the queer of the temple, both floze and walles, with bordes of Cedar, and dressed it within in the secreete place of the temple, eue in the moost holye. And the fyfth house, that is to saye, the bodye of the temple wythoute was fourety cubites longe. And the Cedar of the house within, was herted wyth kno-pes and grauen wyth floures, and all was Cedar tymber, so y no stone was sene. And the queer that was wythin the temple, he prepared, to set there the Arke of the appoyntement of y Lozde. And the queer before, was twenty cubytes longe, and twenty cubites in bredth, and twenty cubytes in heygth.
And he syled it wyth pure golde, and boarded the aultare with Cedar.

And Salomon also syled the house within wyth pure golde. And he made golden barres runne along the queer, whych he had co-uered wyth golde. And the whole house, he ouerlapde with gold, vntyl he had ended it.
And the aultare y was in the queer he ouerlayde wyth golde also.

* 270. 37. b

And within the queer he made two Cherubins of olpue tree, ten cubytes hie. & fyue cubytes long was a wyng of þe one Cherub, & fyue cubytes lōg was a wyng of the other Cherub: so that from the vtermoost parte of one wyng vnto the vtermoost parte of the other, were ten cubytes.

* 270. 37. b

And the other Cherub was ten cubytes hie also: so þe both the Cherubs were of one measure & one syde: for the heygth of þe one Cherub was ten cubytes, & so was it of the other. And he put the Cherubs wythin þe inner house. * And the Cherubs stretched out thei wynges, so that the one wyng of the one touched the one wal, and the one wyng of the other touched the other wall. And the other two wynges of them touched one another in the myddes of the house. And he ouer layde the Cherubs with golde.

And in all the walles of the house round about, he made fygyres of carued and syled woꝝke: as namely, pictures of Cherubs and paulme trees & graue flowres, both wythin in the queer, & without in the tēple. And the flowre of þe house he couered wyth gold, both within in the queer, & also without in the tēple. And in þe enterpryng of the queer he made two dozes of olue tree: And both the vpper and two syde postes were fyue square. The two dozes also were of olpue tree, & he graued the with grauyng of Cherubs & paulme trees: & graue flowres, & couered them wyth golde, & layde thynne plates of gold vpon þe Cherubs & paulme trees. And in like maner dyd he in the doze of the temple, sayng that the postes were of olpue tree, foure square. The two dozes were of fyre tree, and ether doze w two foldyng leues, he graued thereon Cherubs, paulme trees and flowres, and couered the with gold, which was layed thynne vpon the carued woꝝke.

And he buylt þe pinner court w thre rowes of hewed stone, & one rowe of Cedar wodd.

In the fourth yere was the foundacion of the house of the Loꝝde layde: euen in the moneth zif: And in the leuenth yere, in the moneth Bull (which is the egypt moneth) was þe house full finished, thozow out all the partes thereof, accoꝝdyng to all the fastyon of it. And so was he leue peare in buyldyng it.

¶ The vii. Chapter.

¶ The buyldyng of the house of Salomon. The house of Pharaos daughter. The foꝝme of þe pillars of bzasse, of the bzassen ste. &c.

But Salomon was buyldyng þe house of the Loꝝde thirtene yere, and fynished it all. And he buylt the house in the wood of Libanon, an hundred cubytes long, and fyfthe cubites bzoad, and. xxx. cubites hie. And (it stode) vpo foure rowes of Cedar pillars, and Cedar beames (were layed) vpo the pillars. And the rouse was Cedar about vpon the beames that laye on the pillers, euen. xlv. beames in fyfene rowes. And there were wyndowes in thre rowes, & wyndowes were one agaynst another the folde. And the dozes w the syde postes, & the vpper poste, were foure square, & had wyndowes one agaynst another the folde.

And he made a poꝝch by the pillers (þe hie vpo the house) fyfthe cubytes long & .xxx. cubites bzoad: & þe poꝝch was befoze those & the other pillers: for there was a thicke tre set befoze the. Then he made a poꝝch to lye and iudge in, syled wyth Cedar thozow out all þe pauementes. And his owne house (þe he kept residence in: and that was in another court wythout the poꝝche) was made of the same woꝝke. And then Salomon made an house for Pharaos daughter * (who he had taken to wyfe) lyke vnto the fastyon of the poꝝch.

And all these were of þe best stones, hewed after a measure, & sawed with sawes, wyth in and without, from þe foundation vnto the beames (that laye aboue, after þe measure) and euen so on the out syde towarde þe great court. And the foundation was layed vpon ryche stones & that very great stones, wher of some were ten cubytes, and some egypte cubytes. And aboue were good stones squared after a certayne rule, & couered with Cedar. And the great court rounde about was wyth thre rowes of hewed stones, & one row of Cedar planches, after the maner of the pinner court of the house of the Loꝝde, & of the poꝝch of the temple. * And kyng Salomon sent and fet one Hiram out of Tyre, a wyddowes sonne of þe trybe of Nephtalim, his father beyng a mā of Tyre. Which Hira was a craftesman in bzasse * full of wyddome, in derstandyng and connyng: to woꝝke al maner of woꝝke in bzasse. And he cam to kyng Salomon, & wrought all his woꝝke. For he cast * two pillers of bzasse of. xlviii. cubytes hie a pece, & a stryng of. xii. cubites dyd compass ether of them about. And he made two head peces of molte bzasse (after þe fastyon of a crowne) to set on the toppes of the pillers: The heygth of þe one head pece cōteyned fyue cubytes, & the heygth of the other head pece cōteyned fyue cubites also, he made also net woꝝke & garlades of cheryn woꝝke, vpon the head peces that were on þe toppe of þe pillers euen leuen (rowes) vpon the one head pece, & leuen vpo the other. And so he made the pillers, & two rowes rounde aboute, in the one wyzethen woꝝke, to couer the head peces that were vpon the pōgranates. And thus dyd he also for the other head pece. And the head peces that were on the toppes of the pillers, couered he aboue with a curious woꝝke of scales, toward þe palace by þe space of. iiii. cubites. Aþerwile, vnder þe head peces in those pillars beneth, ouer agaynst þe myddes of the toze þe net woꝝke: And vpo þe secōde head pece here ther two hundred pōgranates in two rowes rounde about. And he set vp the pyl-lers in the porch of the temple. And when he had set vp the ryght pylle, he called the name therof * Iachin: and when he had set vp the left pylle, he called the name therof * Boaz.

And in the toppe of the pillers was a worke of roses, and so was the workmanshyp of the pillers synpysed.

And he made a molten lauatozpe, ten cu-bites vnde from hym to hym, rounde in compasse, & fyue cubites hie. And a stryng of the type cubites dyd cōpasse it aboute, and vnder the hym of it there were knoppes rou-nde about, ten in one cubite: & they cōpased the lauatozpe rounde about. And the knoppes were cast wth, in two rowes, when it was cast. And it stode on twelue oxen: of whych the loket toward the north. iii. toward the west. the toward the South & thre toward the East, and the lauatozpe stode vnder the, and al the hinder partes were inward. It was an hād breaddeth thicke, & the hym wrought lyke the hym of a cup wth flowres of lilyes.
And it contayned two thousand Battes.

And he made ten sokettes of brasse, foure cubites lōg, and foure cubites broad a pece, and the cubites hie. And the worke of the sokettes was on this maner: They had sy-des, and the sydes were betwene the ledges.

And on the sydes that were betwene the ledges, were lyons, oxen & Cherubs. And lyke wyle vpon the ledges that were aboue: and beneath the lyons & oxen, were certayn addityōs made of thynne worke. And vnder eu-ery loket were foure brassen wheles, and boz-des of brasse. And in the foure corners therof, were vnderletters (vnder the lauatozpe) caste the ouer agaynst his fellow.

And the italcke of the lauatozpe was in the myddle of it, & (where it is lene on the out syde) one cubite hie, & a cubite and an halfe rounde, and in the heygth of it were grauen workes whose sydes were made foure square, & not rounde. And vnder the sydes were foure wheles, and the axeltrees loyned fast to the bot-tome. And the heygth of every whele was a cubite and an halfe. And the workmanshyp of the wheles was lyke the worke of a cha-ret whele. And the axeltrees, the nanelles, spokes & shaftes were all moultren. And ther were foure vnderletters in the foure corners of one loket: and the vnderletters were of the verye bottome selfe.

And in the heygth of the bottome was there a rounde compasse of halfe a cubite hie: and in that heygth of the bottome, there were both ledges and sydes out of the name.
For in the bozdes of the ledges & on the sydes he had grauen pictures of Cherubins, lyons & palm trees, one by another rounde about.
Thus made he the ten sokettes after this maner: And they had all one fassyon of casting: one measure, and one spise. The made he ten lauers of brasse, one lauer cōtaynyng fourtye Battes: and one lauer was foure cu-bites, and vnder every one of the ten sokettes he put one lauer. And he put fyue of those sokettes on the ryght syde of the house, and other fyue on the left: And he set the lauatozpe on the ryght syde of the house Eastwarde & toward the South.

And Hiram made pottes, shouelles & ba-sens, & so fynished all the worke that he made kyng Salomō for the house of the Lorde: that is to saye, two pylles & two rounde headpeces that were to be set on the toppes of the two pyllers, & foure hundred pomegranates for the two net workes, (euen two rowes of pō-granates in one net worke) to couer the two headpieces that were to be set on the toppes of the pyllers: And the ten sokettes, and ten lauers on the sokettes. The lauatozpe, & twelue ore vnder it, & pottes, shouelles & basens. And al these vesselles which Hiram made to kyng Salomon for the house of the Lorde, were of bryght brasse. In the playne of Jordan dyd the kyng caste them: euen in the thicke claye betwene Socob & Zartban. And Salomon left all the vesselles vnwayed, because they were so excedyng many, neyther found they out the weygth of the brasse.

And so Salomon made all the vesselles that pertayned vnto the house of the Lorde: the golden altare, & the golden table, whereon the shewbread was: And fyue candelsticks, for the ryght syde, & fyue for the left, before the quer, of pure golde: wth flowres, lampes, and inoffers of golde: and boules, flat peeces, ba-sons, spones and masours of pure golde: and hyndges made he of golde both for the doores of the quer (the place most holy) and for the doores of the temple also.

And so was ended all the worke that kyng Salomon made for the house of the Lorde.
And Salomō brought in the thynges which Dauid his father had dedicated: euen the syluer, gold and vesselles, & layed the vp among the treasures of the house of the Lorde.

The viii. Chapter.

The Arke is borne into the temple. A cloud colleth the temple. The temple is blessed.

hen Salomō gathered together the elders of Israel, all the heddes of the trybes, (and the that were ca-ptaynes amonge the fathers of the chyl dren of Israel) vnto hym in Ierusalem that they myght bring vp the arke of the appointment of the Lorde out of the cite of Dauid, whiche is Sion. And all the men of Israel assembled vnto kyng Salomon to the feast that falleth in the moneth Etha-nim, which is the seuenth moneth. And all the elders of Israel were come and the prestes toke vp the Arke. They bare þe Arke of the Lozde, into the tabernacle of wyntelle, & all the holy vesselles that were in the tabernacle: those byd þe pyrautes & the Leuytes bere. And kyng Salomon & al the congregacion of Israel that were assēbled vnto hym (and went wth hym befoze the Arke) byd offer speere and oren, that coulde not be tolde nor nombred for multitude.

And so þe pyrautes brought þe Arke of the appoyntment of þe Lozde vnto his place: euen into þe quere of the temple & place moost holy, vnder þe wynges of the Cherubs. For þe Cherubs stretched out their wynges ouer þe place of the Arke, & couered both it and also þe stauēs therof a hye vpon it. And they drew out the stauēs, that þe endes of them myght appere out of the holy place wthyn þe quere, but they were not sene wythout. And there they haue bene vnto this dape, & there was not bynge in the Arke, & saue the two tabyles of stone which Moyses put there at Horeb, in the which (tabyles) þe Lozde made an appoyntment wth the chyldren of Israel, whan he brought them out of the lande of Egypt.

And it fortunēd þe when the pyrautes were come out of the holy place, the cloude fylled the house of the Lozde, that þe pyrautes coulde not stande and minister, because of the cloude for the gloze of the Lozde had fylled þe house of the Lozde. Then spake Salomon: þe Lozde * sayd that he woldd well in þe darck cloude. I haue bylt the an house to dwel in, an habytacyon for the to abyde in for euer. And the kyng turned his face, and blessed all the congregacyon of Israel, & al the congregacyon of Israel stode still. And he sayde:

Blessed be the Lozde God of Israel, whych spake wth his mouth vnto Dauid my father * and hath with his hād fulfyllid it, saying: Shes the dape þe I brought my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no cytie of al þe trybes of Israel, to buylde an house that my name myght be therein: But I haue chosen * Dauid, to be ruler ouer my people of Israel.

And it was in þe hert of Dauid my father to buylde an house for the name of the Lozde God of Israel. And þe Lozde sayd vnto Dauid my father: Wher as it was in thine hert to buylde an house vnto my name, þe dyddest well, that thou wast so mynded. Neuer thelesse thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sonne that shall come out of thy loynes, he shall buylde the house vnto my name. And the Lozde hath made good his worde that he spake. And I am rplen vp in þe rowme of Dauid my father, & spt on þe seate of Israel, as þe Lozde promysed, & haue buylt an house for þe name of the Lozde God of Israel. And I haue prepared therein a place for the Arke, wherin is the couenaunt of the Lozde, which he made with our fathers, whan he brought them out of the lande of Egypt. Salomon stode befoze the altare of the Lozde in þe syde of all the congregacion of Israel, & stretched out his handes towarde heauen, and sayde: * Lozde God of Israel, ther is no God lyke the in heauen aboue, or in the earth beneth, that kepest couenaunt and mercy for thy seruantes that walche befoze the with al thy hert: thou that hast kept wth thy seruant Dauid my father, that thou promysedest him. Thou spakest also wth thy mouth ad hast fulfyllid it wth thyne hād, as it is come to passe this dape. Therfoze, now Lozde God of Israel, kepe with thy seruante Dauid my father, that thou promysedest hym, saying: * Thou shalt not be wythoute a man in my syght to spt on þe seate of Israel: so that thy chyldren take hede to theyr waye, that they walche befoze me, as þe haue walched in my syght. And nowe (O God) of Israel, let thy worde be verifed, which thou spakest vnto thy seruant Dauid my father.

Wyl God in dede dwell on the earth? Holde the heauens, & heauens of al heauens are not able to cotayne the: And how shuld then thy house do it that I haue buylded? Hauē thou therfoze respect vnto the prayer of thy seruant, and to his supplicacyon (O Lozde my God) to heare the voyce & prayer befoze the this dape: that thyne eyes maye be open toward this house, nyght and dape, euen towarde this place (of whych thou hast sayd, * My name shall be there.) That thou maye herke vnto the prayer, whych thy seruant prayeth in this place: And regarde thou the supplicacyon of thy seruante & of thy people Israel, whan they praye in this place: And heare thou in heauē thy dwelling place, and when þe hearest, haue mercy. * If any man trespasse agaynst his neygbdoure, and then go an oth betwene them, and the one complē the other, and come swearynge befoze thine altare in this house, then herken thou in heauen and worke and iudge thy seruantes, þe thou condemne the vngodlye to bynge his waye vpon his head, & iustifye þe ryghte. When thy people Israel be put to the worlde befoze the enemye, because they haue synned agaynst the, and afterwarde turne agayne to þe, and knowlege vnto thy name, and praye and make supplicacyon vnto þe in this house: then heare thou in heauen, to be mercyfull vnto þe synne of thy people Israel and byng the agayne vnto the land, whych thou gauest vnto theyr fathers.

* If heauen be shut vp, & there be no rayne, because they haue synned agaynst the: yet þe praye in this place, & knowlege vnto thy name, & turne from their synne, & thou be thy shourgyng of them: then heare thou in heauen, and be mercyfull vnto the synners of thy thy seruantes and of thy people Israel, that thou shewe them a good waye to walke in, and geue rayne vpon the land that thou hast geuen to thy people to inherite.

If there be in the land dearth, or pestilence, mouth, blasting, grethopper or caterpillar, or if they enemy besedge them in the lande of theyr cities, or whatsoeuer plague or synchance: * then what prayers and supplicacion so euer be made of any man of all thy people Israel, whiche shall knoweledge euery man the plague of his owne herte, and stretch forth his handes toward this house. Heare thou then in heauē, euen in thy dwelling place, and be mercifull, and worke, and geue euery man accordyng to his wayes (euen as thou that onely knowest his herte, for thou onely knowest the hertes of all the chyldren of men:) that they may feare the as longe as they lyue in the lande, whiche thou gauest vnto our fathers. And yf he wylle, if a straunger that is not of thy people Israel, * come out of a farre countrey for thy names sake, for they shal heare of thy great name, and of thy myghty hande and of thy stretched out arme, and shall come and praye in this house. Therfore, heare thou in heauen thy dwelling place, and do al that the straunger calleth to the for: that all nacyns of the earth maye knowe thy name and feare the, as do thy people Israel: and that they maye knowe that thy name is called vpon in this house whiche I haue buylt.

If thy people go out to battell agaynst their enemy, whet her soeuer thou shalt send them, and shall pray vnto the (O Lord * towarde the way of the cytie which thou hast chosen, and towarde the house that I haue buylt for thy name: (heare thou in heauen theyr prayer and supplicacion, and iudge theyr cause.)

If they synne agaynst the * (for there is no man that sinneth not) and thou be angry with them, and deliuer them into the hande of theyr enemyes, so that they carry them away prisoners vnto the lande of theyr enemyes, whether farre or neare, yet yf they turne agayne vnto theyr hertes in the land (to the which they be carryed away captiue,) and returne and praye vnto the in the lande of theyr enemyes, sayeng: we haue synned, we haue done wickedly, and haue committed iniquity, and so turne agayne vnto the with all theyr herte, and al theyr soule in the lande of theyr enemyes (whiche led them away captiue) and praye vnto the, towarde the waye of theyr lande, whiche thou gauest vnto theyr fathers, and towarde the cytie which thou hast chosen, and toward þ house which I haue built for thy name: then heare thou theyr prayer & supplicacion in heauen thy dwelling place, and iudge theyr cause:

and be mercifull vnto thy people that haue synned agaynst the, and vnto all theyr iniquities (wherby they haue done wickedly agaynst the) and get thou them the fauour of those whiche led them away captiue, that they may haue compassion on them. For they be thy people, and thyne inheritaunce, which thou broughtest out of Egypte, euen from the myddel of the fornace of yron. And let thyne eyes be open vnto the prayer of thy seruant, and vnto the prayer of thy people Israel * to hearken vnto them, in all that they call for vnto the. For thou dydest seperat them from among all the nations of the earth, (to be thyne owne inheritaunce) as thou saydest by the hande of Moses thy seruant, when thou broughtest our fathers * out of Egypte O Lord God.

* And when Salomon had made an ende of prayeng all this prayer and supplicacion vnto the Lord, he arose from before the altare of the Lord, and from knelyng on his knees, and from stretching of his handes vp to heauen, and stode & blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loude voyce: sayeng Blessed be the Lord, that hath geuen rest vnto his people Israel, accordyng to al that he promysed: * there hath not fayled one worde of al the good promys which he promysed by the hande of Moses his seruant. The Lord our God be with vs, as he was with our fathers, and forsaue vs not, neyther leaue vs: but that he may bowe our hertes vnto hym, that we may walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, his statutes and his lawes, which he commaunded our fathers. And these my wordes whiche I haue prayed before the Lord, be nye vnto the Lord our God day and nyght that he defende the cause of his seruant, and the cause of his people Israel (what thing soeuer chaunce at any tyme) that all nacyns of the earth may knowe, that the Lord is God, and none but he. Let your herte therefore be perfecte with the Lord our God, that ye walke in his statutes, and kepe his commaundementes, as this day.

And the kyng and all Israel with hym, offered offerynges before the Lord. * And Salomon offered a sacrifice of peaceofferynges vnto the Lord, and he offered vnto the Lord. xxii. thousand oren, and an hundred & twenty thousand shepe: And so þ kyng and al the chyldren of Israel dedicated the house of the Lord. The same day dyd the kyng halowe the myddle of the court, that was before the house of the Lord: for there be offered burnt offerynges, meat offerynges and the fat of þ peaceofferynges: because þ blasen altare that was before the Lord was to lytle to receyue the burnt offerynges, meat offerynges, and the fat of the peaceofferynges.

And Salomon helde that same tyme an hye feaste and all Israel with hym, a very great congregacyon, euen from the entryng in of hemath vnto the ryuer of Egypte. before the Lord our God, * seven dayes and seven dayes, euen. xlii. dayes. And the viii. day he sent the people away. And they blessed the kyng and went vnto thei: tetes ioyous and with glad herte, because of all the goodnesse that the Lord had done for Dauid his seruaunt, and for Israel hys people.

The ix. Chapter.

¶ The Lord appeared the seconde tyme to Salomon. Salomon went to Hiram. The Canaanites become tributaries. He sendeth shippes for golde. He buildeth many cyties.

* Dnt. xli. c.

And when Salomon had * synished the buildinge of the house of the Lord and the kynges palace, and all that he had in hys mynde, and was appoynted to make: the Lord appeared vnto him agayne as he appeared vnto hym at Gibeon. And the Lord sayde vnto him: I haue harde thy prayer and thy intercessyon, that thou hast made before me: for I haue halowed thys house (whych thou hast builde), to put my name there for ever, and myne eyes & myne herte shall be there perpetually. And if thou wilt walke before me (as Dauid thy father walked, in purenes of herte and in ryght troulesnes) to do all that I haue commaunded the, and wilt kepe my statutes, and my lawes, then will I stablysh the seate of thy kyngdome vpon Israel for ever, as I promysed to Dauid thy father sayeng: * Thou shalt not be without a man vpon the seate of Israel.

* Dnt. xli. c.

But and if ye and your chyldren turne away from me, and will not kepe my commaundementes and my statutes (whiche I haue set before you) but go and serue other goddes, and worshipp them: then will I weede Israel out of the lande, which I haue geuen them: And this house which I haue halowed * for my name, will I caste out of my syght. And Israel shall be a proverbe and a fable amonge al nacions. And this house shall be taken away: so that every one that passeth by it, shall be astonied, and shall saye, and they shall saye: * why hath the Lord done thus vnto this lande and to this house? And they shall answer: because they forsoke the Lord they: God, which brought their fathers out of the lande of Egypt, and haue taken holde vpon other Goddes, and haue worshipped them, and serued them: therefore hath the Lord brought vpon the all this euil. * And it fortuned, that at the ende of twenty yeres, Salomon synished the buildinge of the two houses, that is to wete, the house of the Lord and the kynges palace. And Hiram the kyng of Tyre brought Salomon tymbre of Cedar, and fyre trees, golde, and whatsoeuer he desired: And Salomon agayne gaue Hiram. xx. cyties in the lande of Galilee. And * Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cyties whiche Salomon had geuen hym, and they pleased him not. And he sayde: what cyties are these, which thou hast geuen me, my brother? and he called them the lande of Cabul vnto this day. And Hiram sente the kyng vi. score hundred wayght of golde. And this is the summe, which kyng Salomon tauled for a trybute whan he builded the house of the Lord and hys owne house, and Willo, and the wall of Jerusalem, and Hazor, and Megiddo, and Gazar.

¶ For Pharaos kyng of Egypt went by, and toke Gazer, and burnt it with fyre, and saw the Canaanites that dwelte in the cytie, and gaue it for a present vnto his daughter, Salomons wyfe. And Salomon buylt Gaza and Beth Horon the nether: and Baalath and Tamar in the wyldernesse and in the lande: and al the treasure cyties that Salomon had, (and were builded: those he made strong) and cyties for hys charettes, and cyties for his horsmen, and all that Salomon desired and wolde buyde in Jerusalem, in Libanon and in all the lande of his dominion.

And all the people that were left of the Amozites, Herhites, Pherezites, Hevites and Jebusites, (which were not of the chyldren of Israel) they: chyldren that were left after the in the lande, whom the chyldren of Israel also were not able to destroye. Those dyd Salomon compele to byng tribute vnto this daye. But of the chyldren of Israel dyd Salomon * make no bondemen. But they were men of warre, hys mynisters, his lordes, his captaynes, and rulers of his charettes and hys horsmen. And these were the lordes, that were set ouer Salomons wyfe: euen fyue hundred were they and fifty, and they ruled the people that brought wyfe.

And Pharaos daughter came vnto the cytie of Dauid vnto the house which Salomon had buylt for her. And then dyd he also buyde Willo. And thysle a yere dyd Salomon offre burnt offerynges and praye offerynges vpon the altare, which he buylt vnto the Lord: And he burnt incense vpon the altare that was before the Lord, and he synished the house.

And kyng Salomon made a navy of shippes in Azion Gaber whiche is betwixt Elath, on the bynche of the red see, in the lande of Edom. And Hiram sent by shippes also of his seruauntes, that were wyse, and had knowledge of the see, with the seruauntes of Salomon. And they came to Ophir and set from thence one and twenty

The .x. Chapter.

The quene of Saba cometh to heare the wysdome of Salomon, whose royalte is here described.

And the quene of Saba hearing the fame of Salomon (concerning the name of the Lord) came to proue him with hard questions. And she came to Jerusalem with a very greete trayne: with Camelles that bare sweete odoures, & golde exceeding much, and precious stones. And she came to Salomon, and communed with hym of all that was in her hert. And Salomon declared vnto her al her questions, so that there was not one thyng hyd from the kyng, which he expounded not vnto her.

And the quene of Saba conspyred al Salomons wysdome, and the house that he had builded, and the meate of his table, and the settinge of his seruantes, the ordre of his ministers, and theyr apparell, his dynche, & his burnt sacrifices that he offered in his house of the Lord, and she was astonied. And she sayde vnto the kyng. It was a true word I hard in myne owne land of thy sayenges: of thy wysdome. Howbeit I beleued it not till I came, & sawe it with myne eyes. And beholde, the one halfe was not tolde me: for thy wysdome and prosperite exceedeth the fame which I harde of the. Happy are thy men: and happy are these thy seruantes, which stande ever before the, & hear thy wysdome. Blessed be the Lord thy God, which loved the, to set the on the seate of Israel, because the Lord loved Israel for ever, & made the kyng, to do equite and ryght wysenes.

And she gaue the kyng fyve score hundred weyght of gold, and of sweete odoures exceeding much, and precious stones. There came no more suche aboundaunce of sweete odoures, as the quene of Saba gaue to kyng Salomon. The nauy also of the shippes of Hiram (that caried golde from Ophir) brought lykewyse great plenty of Almuge trees and precious stones. And the kyng made of the Almuge trees, pylers for the house of the Lord and for the kynges palace and made harpes & psalteries for syngers. There came no more suche Almuge trees, nor were any more sene vnto this day. And kyng Salomon gaue vnto the Quene of Saba accordyng to all her desyre whatsoever she asked: besydes that he gaue her of a free wyll with his owne hand. And so she returned vnto her owne countrey: bothe she, and her seruantes.

The weyght of golde that came to Salomon in one yere, was fyve hundred thre score and fyve talentes of gold, besydes that he had of chapmen and of marchauntes and of Botycaryes, and of all the kynges of Arabye, and of the lordes of the countrey. And kyng Salomon made two hundred bouklers of beaten golde, fyve hundred speles of golde went to a boukeler. And he made thre hundred shylles of beaten golde, thre pounde of golde wente to one shylle, and the kyng put them in the house of the wood of Lybanon.

And the kyng made a great seat of pury, and couered it with the best golde. And the seate had fyve steppes. And the toppe of the seate was rounde behynde, and there were pomelles on epyther syde on the place of the seate, and two Lyons stode besyde the pomelles. And there stode .xii. Lyons on the steppes. vi. on a syde. There was none lyke (worke) sene in any kyngdome. * And all kyng Salomons dynkyng vesselles were of golde, and lykewyse al the vesselles of the house of the wood of Lybanon were of pure golde. And as for syluer, it was nothyng worth in the dayes of Salomon. For the kynges nauy of shippes went on the see vnto Charlys with the nauy of Hiram shippes: euen once in thre yere wente the nauy to Charlys, and brought gold and syluer Elephantes teeth, apes and pecoques. * And kyng Salomon exceeded all the kynges of the earth both in ryches and wysdome. And all the world resorted to Salomon, to heare his wysdom, which God had put in his hert. And brought hym euery man his presente, vesselles of syluer and vesselles of golde, raiment, harnesse, and sweete odoures, and horses, and Gules, yere by yere. And Salomon gathered together charrettes and horsmen: and he had a thousand and .iiij. hundred charrettes, and .xii. thousand horsmen, whom he bestowed in the charet cyties, and with the kyng at Jerusalem.

* And the kyng made syluer in Jerusalem as plenteouse as stones, and Cedar as plenteouse as the wilde segge trees that growe aboundantly in the feldest. The bypnyng of horses also out of Egypte: and the collection of the warres: dyd the kynges marchauntes take agayne, and solde the stuffe for a pryce. A charet came vp out of Egypte for .vi. hundred sicles of syluer: that is, one horse for an hundred and fyfty. And euen so for al the kynges of the herbites and for the kynges of Siria, dyd they bypnyng them out, to rowe theyr handes.

The .xi. Chapter.

Salomon hath seuen hundred quenes & thys hundred concubynes, whiche bypnyng hym to pdalecty. Dps adis mersarjes ret all agaynst hym. Be dperb.

But kyng Salomon loved many outlandyche women: and the daughter of Pharaon: and women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, tes, zidonites and herhites. Where as yet (concernyng these nations) the Lorde sayde vnto the chyldren of Israel: * come not ye at them, nor let them come at you: Elles wyll they turne your hertes after theyr goddes.

Neuertheles, Salomon claue vnto them in loue. * And he had seuen hundred Quenes, and thre hundred concubynes, and his wyues turned away his herte. For it came to passe, when Salomon was olde, hys wyues turned his herte after other Gods: and hys hert was not perfecte with the Lord hys God, as was the hert of Dauid his father: For Salomon folowed Ashtaroth the God of the zi-dons, and Milcom, the abhommation of the Ammonites. And Salomon wrought wickednes in the syght of the Lorde, & folowed not the Lorde perfectly, as dyd Dauid hys father. For than dyd Salomon buyde an hye place for Chamos the abhommation of Moab, in the hyl that is befoze Jerusalem, & vnto Moloch the abhommation of the chyldren of Ammon. And lyke wyse dyd he for all hys outlandyshe wyues, whiche burnt ense & offered vnto theyr godds. And for Lorde was angry with Salomon, because hys hert was turned from the Lord God of Israel * which had appeared vnto hym tyme & gaue hym a charge (concernyng this thyng) for he shuld not folowe other godds. But he kepte not for, whiche the Lorde commaunded hym: wher-foze the Lorde sayde vnto Salomon: for as much as this is done of the, & thou hast not kept myne appoyntment, and my statutes (whiche I commaunded the) I wyll rent the kyngdome from the, and wyll geue it to thy seruaunt. Notwithstandyng in thy dayes, I wyll not do it, because of Dauid thy father but wyll take it from the hande of thy sone.
Howbeit, I wyll not take away al the kyngdome: But wyll geue one trybe to thy sone, because of Dauid my seruaunt, and because of Jerusalem which I haue cholen.

And the Lorde stered vp an aduersary vnto Salomon: euen one Hadad an Edomite, of the kinges seide, which was in Edom. For when Dauid was in Edom, and Joab the captaigne of the hoste was gone vp to bury them that were slayne, he smote all the men chylde in Edom. For vi. monethes did Joab remain there and all Israel, tyl he had destroyed all the men chylde of Edom. And this Hadad fled and certen other Edomites of his fathers seruantes with hym, to come into Egypt: Hadad beyng yet a lytle chylde.
And they arose out of Hadan, and came to Parā, and toke me with them out of Pa-rā, & came to Egypt vnto Pharaos kyng of Egypt, which gaue hym an house, and ap-poynted him vitayles, and gaue him lande.

And Hadad gat great fauour in the syght of Pharaos, so that he gaue hym to wyse the syfster of hys owne wyse, euen the syfster of Chahpenes syquene. And syfster of Chapenes bare him Genubath his sonne, whom Chahpenes noryshed in Pharaos house.

And Genubath was at Pharaos house amonge the sonnes of Pharaos. And when Hadad harde in Egypte, that Dauid was layde to slepe with hys fathers, and for Joab the captaigne of the hoste was deade also, he sayd to Pharaos: let me departe, that I may go to myne owne countrey. Pharaos sayde vnto him: what hast thou lacked here with me, that thou woldest thus go to thine owne countrey? He answered: nothyng: howbeit, let me go. And God stered hym vp another aduersary, one Rezon the sonne of Eliaba, which fled from his Lorde Hodaazer kyng of zoba. And he gathered men vnto him, and became captaigne ouer the company, when Dauid slewe them. And they went to Domasco, and dwelt there, and reygned in Domasco. Therefore was he an aduersary to Israel all the dayes of Salomon. And this was the myschefe, in that Hadad dyd aduerse Israel, and reygned ouer Siria.

And Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat an Ephraimite of zareda (whose mother was called zeruah, which was a wydowe, and he Salomons seruaunt) lyfte vp his hande a-gaynst the kyng. But this was the cause, that he lyfte vp his hand agaynst the kyng Salomon bytello, and mended the bysken places of the cytie of Dauid hys father.
And this felowe Jeroboam was a man of warre. And Salomon sawe the poynt man, that he was able to do the worke, he made him ruler ouer all the charges of the house of Joseph. And it chaunced at that season, that Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, and the prophet Abiab the Silonite met him by the way, haupnge a newe mantell on hym, and they two were alone in the felde. Abiab caught the newe mantell that was on hym and rent it in twelue peces, and sayde to Jeroboam: take the ten peces. For thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: behold, I wyll rent the kyngdome out of the handes of Salomon, and wyll gyue ten trybes to the * and he shall haue one, for my seruaunt Dauid sake & for Jerusalem the cytie which I haue cholen out of al the trybes of Israel: because they haue forsaken me, and haue worshyped vnto Ashtaroth the God of the zidons, and Chamos the God of the Moabites, and Milcom the God of the chyldren of Ammon, and haue not walked in my wayes (to fulfill my pleasure, my statutes and my lawes) as dyd Dauid his father.

I wyll not take the whole kyngdome out of his hand: but I wyll make him chere al the lyfte longe, for Dauid my seruaunt sake, whom I chole: because he kepte my commadementes and my statutes. * But I wpll take the kyngdome out of his sonnes hand, and wyl geue it vnto the, euen ten trybes of it, and vnto his sonne wyl I gyue one trybe that Dauid my seruaunt may haue a lyght alway before me in Ierusalem, the cytie which I haue chose me, to put my name there. And I wpll take the, and thou shalt reygne accordyng to all that thy soule desyreth, and shalt be kyng ouer Israel. And if thou herken vnto all that I comaunde the, and wylt walke in my wayes and do that is ryght in my lyght, that thou kepe my statutes and my commaundementes (as Dauid my seruaunt dyd) then wpll I be with the, & buyld the a sure house that shall continue, as I buylded for my seruaunt Dauid, and wpll geue Israel vnto the. And I wpll for thyss offence (which Salomon hath commytted) bere the sede of Dauid, but not for euer.

Salomon fought therfore to kyll Jeroboam, and Jeroboam arose, and fled into Egypte vnto Sisak kyng of Egypte, and continued there in Egypte vntill the death of Salomon. The reste of the wordes that concerne Salomon, and all that he dyd, and his wysdome: are they not wyrtten in the booke of the wordes of Salomon? The tyme that Salomon reygned in Ierusalem vpon all Israel, was fourty yere. And Salomon slepte and he layde him with his fathers, and was buryed in the cytie of Dauid his father, and Rehoboam his sonne reygned in his steade.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

¶ The kyngdome is deuised. Rehoboam reyneth ouer two trybes, and Jeroboam ouer ten. Adiram is sonne. Jeroboam maketh golden calves.

Red * Rehoboam wente to Sichem: for all Israel were come to Sichem, to make him kyng. And Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat (which was yet in Egypte) harde of it * for he fled to Egypte from the presence of kyng Salomon, and dwelte in Egypte. So they sent and called hym: and Jeroboam and all the congregacyon of Israel came, and spake vnto Rehoboam, sayeng thy father made our pocke greuous, now therfore, make thou the greuous seruice of thy father and hys soze pocke whiche he put vpon vs, lyghter, and we wpll serue the. And he sayd vnto them: departe yet for the space of thre dayes, and the come agayne to me. And the people departed.

And kyng Rehoboam toke counsell with the olde men that stode before Salomons father, whyle he yet lyued, and sayde: what counsell geue ye, that I may haue matter to answer thys people? And they sayde vnto him: If thou be a seruaunt vnto this people this day, and folowe theyr myndes and answer them, and speake kynde wordes to them: they wpll be thy seruauntes for euer.

But he forsoke the counsell that the olde men had geuen him, and called vnto hys counsell yonge men, that were growen vp with him, and wayted on him.

And he sayde vnto them: what counsell geue ye, that we may answer thys people? for they haue commoned with me, sayeng: make the pocke whiche thy father dyd put vpon vs, lyghter: And the yonge men that were growen vp with him, spake vnto hym sayeng. Thus shalt thou speake vnto thys people (that haue sayde vnto the: thy father made our pocke heuy, but make thou it vs lyghter.) Euen thus shalt thou saye vnto them: My lytle synger shall be wayghtyer, than my father was in the loynes. And now where as my father dyd lade you and put a greuous pocke vpon you, I wpll make it heuier. My father also corrected you with scourges, but I wpll chastyse you with scorpions. And so Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the thyrde daye, as the kyng had apoynted, sayeng: come to me agayne the thyrde day. And the kyng answered the people choslychly, and lefte the olde mens counsell (that they gaue hym) & spake to them after the counsell of the yonge men, sayeng. My father made your pocke greuous, and I wyl make it greuouser. My father also chastised you with whippes, but I wpll chastyse you with scorpions. And the kyng herkened not vnto the people: for it was the ordinaunce of God, that he myght * perforce his sayeng, which the Lord spake by Ahia the Silonite vnto Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat.

And so, when all Israel sawe, that the kyng regarded them not, the people answered the kyng with these wordes, sayeng: * what poyson haue we in Dauid? we haue no inheritaunce in the sonne of Isai. * To pour tentes, O Israel, nowe se to thyne owne house Dauid. And so Israel departed vnto theyr tentes. howbeit, ouer the chyldren of Israel which dwelt in the cytie of Iuda, dyd Rehoboam reygne styll. The kyng Rehoboam sent Adiram the recepuer of the trybute. And all they of Israel stoned hym to death. But kyng Rehoboam made spede to get him vp to his charet, and to fflye to Ierusalem. And they of Israel rebelled agaynst the house of Dauid, vnto this day. And when all Israel hard that Jeroboam was come agayne, they sent and called him vnto the multitude, and made hym kyng ouer all Israel: and there was no trybe that folowed the house of Dauid, but Iuda onely. * And when Rehoboam was come to Ierusalem, he gathered all the house of Iuda, with the trybe of Ben Jamin an hundred & foure scoze thousande of chosmen (which were good warriors) to fyght agaynst the house of Israel.

And the worde of God came vnto Se-maia the man of God, sayeng: speake vnto Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon kyng of Iuda, and vnto al the house of Iuda & Ben Iamin, and to the remnaunt of the people, sayeng: Thus sayeth the Lorde. Ye shal not go vp, nor yet fyght agaynst your brethern the chyldren of Israel, retorne euery man to his house, for this thing is my doyng. And this thyng turned to synne, for the people went (because of the one) as farre as Dan. And he made an house of hyl aultares, * and made preastes of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sonnes of Levi. And Jeroboam made a feaste the .xv. daye of the eyght moneth, lyke vnto the feaste that is in Iuda, and offered on the aultare. And so did he in Bethel, to offre vnto the calves that he had made. And he put in Bethel the preastes of the hyl aultares, which he had made. And he offered burnt offerynges vpon the alter, whiche he had made in Bethel, the .xv. daye of the eyght moneth: euen in the moneth whiche he had ymagined of hys owne herte: and made a solempne feast vnto the chyldren of Israel, and offered vpon the aultare, and burnt incense.

The .xiii. Chapter.

Jeroboam doyn sacrifice vnto the calves, is reprehended of the prophete. His hande dyeth vp, wher he putteth it out agaynst the prophete. The prophete in helles, and dymeth.

Ad behold, there came a man of God out of Iuda (by the word of the Lorde) vnto Bethel, and Jeroboam stode by the aultare to put incense. And he cryed agaynst the aultare in the worde of the Lorde and sayde. O aultare, aultare, thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, a chyld shall be bozne vnto the house of Dauid, (Josia by name) and vpon the shal he offre the prestes of the hyl aultares that burnt incense vpon the,

and mennes bones shal be brente vpon the. And he gaue a token the same tyme, sayeng this is the token, that the Lorde hath spoken it. Beholde, the aultare shal rente, and the ashes that are vpon it, shal fall out.

And when the kyng harde the sayeng of the man of God (which had cryed agaynst the aultare in Bethel) he stretched out his hande from the aultare, sayeng: holde hym. And his hande which he put forth agaynst him, dyed vp, & he coude not pull it in agayne to him: the aultare also claued asunder, and the ashes fell out from the aultare, accordyng to the token which the man of God had geuen by the worde of the Lorde. And the kynge and the red, and sayde vnto the man of God. * Chy pray vnto the Lorde thy God, and make intercession for me, that my hande may be restored me agayne. And the man of God besought the Lorde, and the kynges hand was restored agayne, & became as it was afore.

And the kyng sayd vnto the man of God come home with me, that thou mayest dye, and I wyll geue thee a reward. And the man of God sayde vnto the kyng: if thou woldest geue me halfe thyne house, I wyll not go in with the, neither wyl I eate bread or drinke water in this place. For so was it charged me, thowowt the worde of the Lorde, sayeng: eate no bread nor dryncke water, nor turne agayne by the same way that thou camest. And so he went another way, and returned not by the way that he came to Bethel. And there dwelte an olde prophet in Bethel, and his sonnes came, and tolde him all the dookes, that the man of God had done that day in Bethel, and the wordes which he had spoken vnto the kyng to lde they they: father also. And they: father sayde vnto the: what way wente he? And his sonnes shewed hym what waye the man of God wente, which came from Iuda. And he sayd vnto his sonnes: saddle me the asse. Which when they had saddled, he gat hym vpon theron, and went after the man of God, and founde hym sitting vnder a tre. And he sayd vnto hym: art thou the man of God that comest from Iuda? And he sayde: I am.

He sayde vnto him: come home with me, and eate bread. He answered: I may not turne with the, to go in with the, neither wyl I eate bread or drinke water with the in this place. For it was sayd to me in the worde of the Lorde: Thou shalt eate no bread, nor drinke water there, nor turne agayne to go by the way that thou camest. He sayd vnto hym: I am a prophet also as wel as thou, and my gell spake vnto me in the worde of the Lorde sayeng: bryng hym agayne with the to thyne house, that he maye eate bread and dryncke water. And he lped vnto hym. And so he wente agayne with hym, and dyd eate bread breade in hys house and dryncke water.

 And it fortuned, that as they satte at the table, the worde of the Lorde came vnto the prophete, that broughth him agayne. And he cryed vnto the man of God that came from Iuda, sayeng: thus sayeth the Lorde: because thou haste disobeyed the mouth of the Lorde, and hast not kepte the commaundement which the Lorde thy God commaunded the: but camestt backe agayne, and hast eatte bread and dryncke water, in the place (concernyng the whiche the Lorde dyd say vnto the. Thou shalt eate no breade nor dryncke no water) thy carkasse shall not come vnto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

And so it came to passe, that when he had eaten bread and dryncke, the prophete which broughth him agayne, saddled him an asse. And when he was gone, * a Lyon met him by the way, and slue him, and his carkasse was cast in the way, and the asse stode therby, and the Lyon stode by the coorse also. And men that passed by, sawe the carkasse cast in the way, and the Lyon standyng therby: and they came and tolde it in y^e towne where the olde prophete dwelt. And when the prophete that broughth hym backe agayne from the waye, harde th^{is} of, he sayde: it is the man of God:
 he was disobedient vnto the worde of the Lorde, and therfore the Lorde hath deliue-red hym vnto the Lyon, whiche hath rente him and slayne him, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde, which he spake vnto him. And he spake to hys sonnes, sayeng: saddle me an asse: and so they dyd. And he went, & founde hys body caste in the waye, and the asse and the Lyon stode by the coorse. And the Lyon had not eaten the carkasse, nor hurt the asse.

And the prophete toke up the body of the mā of God, and layed it vpon the asse, & broughth it agayne: and the olde prophete came to the cite to lamente, and to bury hym. And he layde his body in hys owne graue, and they lamented ouer hym. (Alas my brother.) And when he had buryed hym, he spake to his sonnes, sayeng. When I am dead, se that ye bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buryed: laye my bones besyde his bones. * For the sayeng whiche he cryed at the word of the Lorde agaynst the altare in Bethel (and agaynst all the houses of hyll altares which are in p^{er}tyes of Samarie) shall come to passe.

Wherfore, for all that, Jeroboam conuerted not from hys wycked waye: but turned backe, and made of the lowest of the people priests of hyll altares. And who so pleased him, he fylled hys hande, and he became priest of the hyll altares. And this thynge turned to synne vnto the house of Jeroboam even to destructione hym, and to byrnyng hym to naught from of the face the earth.

The xliii. Chapter.

 nelles, and a cruse of honey, and go to hym rose, and went to Silo, & came to the house of Abia. But Abia could not se, for his eyes were waxen bynne for age.

And the Lorde sayde vnto Abia: beholde, shalt thou say vnto her. And when she came in, she seyned her selfe to be another woman.

 thou wyfe of Jeroboam, why seynest thou

¶ III. Reg. 10.

* Whosoever (of Jeroboams house) dye in the towne, hym shall the dogges eate: & he þ dyeth in the felde, shal the foules of the ayre eate: for the Lorde hath sayd it. Cip therfore and get the to thyne house. Beholde, when thy foot entereth into the cytie, & chyldre shal dye. And all they of Israel shall mourne for him, and bury him: for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the sepulchre, because in hym there is founde goodnesse toward the Lorde God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam.

Moreover, the Lorde shall sterre hym vp a kyng ouer Israel which shall destrope the house of Jeroboam in that daye. But what is it now? For the Lorde shal smyte Israel, as whan a reede is shaken in the water and he shall weede Israel out of thyss good lande (whiche he gaue to theyr fathers,) and shal scatter them beyonde the ryuer, because they haue made the groues, and angered the Lorde. And he shall geue Israel vp, because of the synnes of Jeroboam, which did synne and made Israel to synne.

¶ And Jeroboams wyfe arose, and departed, and came to Thirzah, and whā she came to the threshold of the doze, the chyldre was dead. And al Israel buried hym, and lamented hym, accordyng to the word of the Lorde which he spake by the hande of his seruante Abia the prophet. And the rest of the wordes that concerne Jeroboam, howe he warred, and howe he reygued. Behold, they are writen in the boke of the cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And the dayes whiche Jeroboam reygued, were .xxii. yere. And when he was layed a slepe with hys fathers, Nadab hys sonne reygued in hys steade.

¶ Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon reygued in Juda, and Rehoboam was .xli. yere olde when he began to reygne, and he reygued .xvii. yere in Jerusalem (the cytie which the Lorde dyd chosse out of all the trybes of Israel, to put his name there.) hys mothers name was Naama an Ammonite. And Juda wrought wychednesse in the syght of the Lorde, and angered hym in moo thynges then theyr fathers dyd, in theyr synnes, whiche they synned. The rest of the wordes that concerne Rehoboam, and all that he dyd, are they not wyrtten in the boke of the Cronicles of the kynges of Juda? And there was warre betwene Rehoboam and Jeroboam all theyr lyues. And Rehoboam slepte with hys fathers, and was buried besyde his fathers in the cytie of David. hys mothers name was Naama an Ammonite. And Abiam hys sonne reygued in his steade.

The .xv. Chapter.

¶ Wicked Abia reygued ouer Juda, & reygued .x. yere. The batzell betweene Asa and Baasa. Jehoaphat succedeth Asa. Baasa succedeth Jeroboam. Baasa killeth Nadab.

In the .xviii. yere of kyng Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, reygued Abiam ouer Juda. The mothers name was Maacha & daughter of Abisalom. And he walked in all the synnes of his father, whiche he had done befoze hym, and his hart was not perfect with the Lorde his God * as the herte of David hys father. Neuerthelesse for Dauids sake did the Lorde his God gaue him a light in Jerusalem, that he set vp his sonne after hym, and to stablish Jerusalem: because David dyd that which was ryght in the syght of the Lorde, and turned from nothyng that he commaunded him all the dayes of hys lyfe * saue onely in the mater of Azias the heretike. And there was warre betwene Rehoboam and Jeroboam as long as he lyued. The rest of the wordes that concerne Abiam, and all that he dyd, are they not wyrtten in the boke of the Cronicles of the kynges of Juda? And there was warre betwene Abiam and Jeroboam. And Abiam slepte with his fathers, and they buried him in the cytie of David. And Asa his sonne reygued in his steade.

* In the .xx. yere of Jeroboam kyng of Israel, reygued Asa ouer Juda. .xli. yere reygued he in Jerusalem, and hys mothers name was Maacha, the daughter of Abisalom. And Asa dyd that semed right in the syght of the Lorde, as dyd David hys father. * And he toke awaye the wydoze keepers out of the lande, and put awaye all the abhominacions that his father had made. And he put downe * Maacha his mother from beeryng rule, because she had made Images in gyltes. And Asa destroyed her Images, and burnt them by the bzooke Cedron. But the hyl aul ters were not put downe. Neuertheles Asas herte was perfecte with the Lorde.

* And Baasa kyng of Israel, went vp agaynst Iuda, & buylt Rama, so þ he wolde let none go out o: in. to Afa kyng of Iuda. Then Afa toke all the syluer & golde, that was left in the treasures of the house of the Lorde, & the treasures of the kynges house and deliuered them vnto the bandes of hys seruantes, & Afa sent them to * Benhadad the sonne of Tabzimmon the sonne of hezion kyng of Syria, (that dwelt at Damasco,) sayenge: there is a bonde betwene me & the, betwene my father & thy father. And behold I haue sent vnto the a present of syluer and golde that thou come & breake the bond that thou hast w Baasa kyng of Israel, that he maye departe from me. So Benhadad herened vnto kyng Afa, and sent the captaynes of þ hostes (whych he had) agaynst þ cyties of Israel, & smote Hion, & Dan, & Abel, Beth Daacah, & all þ regyon of Ceneroth, with all the lande of Nephtali. And when Baasa heard thereof, he lefte buyldynge of Rama & dwelt in Thirza. Then kyng Afa made a proclamacyon thowout all Iuda, þ none shuld be excused. And so they toke the bones of Ramah & the tymbre (wherwith Baasa had buylded,) & kyng Afa buylt w them the byll of Ben Iamin at Mizpa.

The remnaunt of all the wordes that concerne Afa, and all hys myght, & all that he dyd, & the cyties whych he buylded, are they not wyrtten in the booke of the chronicles of the kynges of Iuda. Neuerthelesse in his old age he was dyspleased in his fete. And Afa slepe with his fathers, and was buryed by syde hys fathers in þ cytie of Dauid hys father. And * Jeholaphat hys sonne raygned in his steade. And Nadab the sonne of Jeroboam beganne to raygne vpon Israel þ second yere of Afa kyng of Iuda, & raygned vpon Israel two yere. And he dyd euell in þ syght of þ Lorde, walkynge in the waye of his father & in his synne wherwith he made Israel synne. And Baasa the sonne of Abia (which was of the house of Isachar) conspired agaynst hym, and Baasa smote hym at Gibbethon whych is a cytie of the Philistines for Nadab and all Israel layed spege to Gibbethon. Euen in the thyrde yere of Afa kyng of Iuda, dyd Baasa slaye him & raygned in hys steade. * And it fortunyd þ wha he was kyng, he smote all the house of Jeroboam, & he left him naught that breathyd vntyl he had put hym cleane out, accordyng vnto the sayng of the Lorde, which he spake by þ seruauit Abia the Shelonite: because of the synnes of Jeroboam wherwith he synned and made Israel synne, wha he with hys prouocacyon angred the Lorde God of Israel.

The rest of the wordes that concerne Baadab, & all that he dyd, are they not wyrtten in the booke of the chronicles of þ kynges of Israel: And there was warre betwene Afa and Baasa kyng of Israel all theire dayes.

So in þ thyrde yere of Afa kyng of Iuda, began Baasa þ sonne of Abia to raygne ouer all Israel in Thirza. xxiij. yere. And he dyd þ which is euell in þ syght of þ Lorde walkynge in the waye of Jeroboam, and in hys synne, which made Israel to synne.

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

¶ Jehu prophesied agaynst Baasa, whom Ela succedeth. Zimri killeth hys master Ela, and destroyeth the house of Baasa. Adad succedeth Zimri, & taketh to wyfe Izebel Jezabel.

Then the worde of the Lorde came to Jehu the sonne of Hanani agaynst Baasa, sayeng: for as much as I exalted the out of the duste, and made the captayne ouer my people Israel, and thou hast walked in the waye of Jeroboam, and hast made my people Israel to synne, to angre me with their synnes: Behold, I wyll roote out the posterite of Baasa, and the posterite of hys house, and wyll make his house lyke the house of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat. ¶ That man of Baasa whych dyeth in the cytie, hym shall the dogges eate: & that man of hym whych dyeth in the felde, shall the foules of the ayre eate.

The rest of the wordes þ concerne Baasa, and what he dyd, & hys power, are they not wyrtten in þ booke of þ chronicles of þ kynges of Israel: And so Baasa slepte w his fathers, and was buryed in Thirza. And Ela his sonne raygned in hys steade. And by the hãde of þ prophete Jehu þ sonne of Hanani, came þ worde of the Lorde agaynst Baasa, and agaynst hys house, and agaynst all the wyckednesse that he dyd in the syght of the Lorde (in angrynge him w the worke of hys owne hãdes) þ he shulde be lyke the house of Jeroboam, & because he killeth hym, (that is to saye Jehu the sonne of Hanani the prophete.)

The. xvi. yere of Afa kyng of Iuda began Ela þ sonne of Baasa to raygne ouer Israel in Thirza, two yere. And hys seruauit zimri (whych was captayne of halfe hys charettes) conspyred agaynst hym, as he was in Thirza dynchynge: & was dracken in the house of Arza stuarde of hys house in Thirza. And zimri came, & smote hym, and killeth hym in the. xvij. yere of Afa kyng of Iuda, & raygned in hys steade. And it fortunyd that whan he was kyng, & sat on hys seate, he slue all þ house of Baasa, not leauynge therof, one to pylle agaynst a wal: Pee, he slue his kynnsfolkes and frẽdes, also. And thus dyd zimri destroye all the house of Baasa of Baala, accordyng to þe worde of þe Lozde, which he spake agaynst Baala by the hand of Jechu þe prophet, for al the synnes of Baala and synnes of Ela þys sonne, whych they synned, and made Israel to synne, and angre the Lozde God of Israel with theyr vanyties. The rest of the wordes þe concerne Ela & all he dyd, are they not wyrtten in þe boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Israel?

In the xxvii. yere of Ala kyng of Juda, dyd zimri ragnye. vii. dayes in Chirza, and the people was then in the hoost besyegynge Gibbethon a cytie of þe Philistines. And the people in þe hoost heard one saye: zimri hath conspired, & slayne the kyng: wherfore, all they of Israli made Amri (the captayne of the hoost) kyng ouer Israel that same daye euen in the hoost. And Amri departed vnto Gibbethon, & al Israel wyth him, & they besyeged Chirza. And when zimri sawe þe cytie muste nedes be taken, he went into the palace of the kynges house, and burnt hym selfe & the kynges house wth fyre, and so dyed, for þys synne whiche he synned, in doyng that whych is euell in the syght of the Lozde and in walkyng in the waye of Jeroboam and in his synnes whych he dyd, and in that he made Israel to synne.

The rest of the wordes þe concerne zimri and the treaso that he wrought, are the not wyrtten in the boke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. Then were the people of Israel deuyded into two partes, for halfe þe people folowed Tibni þe sonne of Sinath, makyng hym kyng: and the other halfe folowed Amri. But the people that folowed Amri, reuayled agaynst the people that folowed Tibni the sonne of Sinath. And so Tibni dyed, and Amri ragned.

In the xxxi. yere of Ala kyng of Juda, beganne Amri to ragnye ouer Israel. xii. yere. Wyth yere ragned he in Chirza. He bought the hyl Schomron of one Schemar for two talentes of syluer, and buyt in the hyl, and called the name of the cytie whych he buyt, after the name of Schemar whych had bene owener of the hyl Schomron. But Amri wrought þe whych is euell in the eyes of the Lozde, and dyd worse then all þe were before hym. For he walked in all the waye of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, and in þys synnes, that made Israel synne, to angre the Lozde God of Israel wyth theyr vanyties. The rest of the wordes that concerne Amri, and all that he dyd, and his strengthe that he shewed, are they not wyrtten in the boke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel? And so Amri slept wyth þys father and was buryed in Schomron, & Abab þys sonne ragned in þys steade.

In þe xxxviii. yere of Ala kyng of Juda beganne Abab the sonne of Amri to ragnye ouer Israel, and the same Abab the sonne of Amri ragned ouer Israel i Samaria. xlii. yere. And Abab þe sonne of Amri dyd euell in the syght of the Lozde, aboue al þe were before him. For it semed vnto hym but a lytle thyng to walke in the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat. He toke Jezabel also þe daughter of Ethbaal kyng of the Sidonites to wife, and went and serued Baal, and worshypped hym. And he reared vp an altare for Baal in the temple of Baal, whych he had buylded in Schomron. And Abab made grones, and proceeded further in angrynge the Lozde God of Israel, then al the kynges of Israel that were before hym.

In þys dayes dyd Hiel of Bethel buyde Jericho. And it coste hym Abiram þe eldest sonne when he layde þe foundacion, & þe yongest sonne Segub, when he set vp þe gates, accordyng vnto the worde of the Lozde whych he spake by Iosua þe sonne of Nun.

¶ The. xlii. Chapter.

¶ Elias is norished and fed of moune, and after he sent to zarpath (otherwysse called Sarepta) for a man whose chyld he reareth to lyte.

Ad Elias the Thespyte whych was of the inhabytters of Gilead sayd vnto Abab: *as truly as the Lozde God of Israel lyueth, before whom I stode *ther shalbe nether dewe nor rayne this yere, but accordyng to my worde.

And the word of þe Lozde came vnto him sayng: get the hence, & turne the eastward, and hyde thy selfe in the broke Cherith, that is it that lyeth before Iordane: Thou shalt drynke of the ryuer, and I haue commaunded the rauens to fede þe there. And so he did and dyd accordyng vnto the worde of the Lozde: for he went, and dwelt by þe broke Cherith, þis before Iordan. And the rauens brought hym bread & fleshe in the morning, and lykerwysse bread & fleshe in þe euynge, & he drake of the brooke. And it chaunced after a whyle, þe brooke dyed vp, because ther fell no rayne vpon the erth. And the worde of the Lozde came vnto hym, sayng: *vp and get þe to zarpath, whych is in Sidon, & dwel there. Beholde I haue commaunded a wydowe there to sustayne the. So he arose, & went to zarpath. And whē he came to the gate of the cytie, þe wydowe was there gathering styckes. And he called to her, and sayd: *fet me, I praye the, a lytle water in a vessel, & I may drynke. And as she was goyng to fet it, he cryed after her, & sayd: bring me I praye þe, a morsel of bread also in thy hand. She sayd: As truly as the Lozde the God lyueth, I haue no bread ready, but euen an handful of meale in a barell, & a lytle oyle in a cruse. And behold, I am gathering styckes for to go in, and drele it for me & for the sonne, that we maye eate it: and dye.

And Elias sayde vnto her feare not, com-

Cand doas I haſt ſayde: but make me thereof a lytle cake fyrſt of all, & bynge it vnto me: and after ward make for the and thy ſonne. For thus ſayth the Lorde God of Iſrael: the meale in the barell ſhall not be waſted: neither ſhall the oyle in the cruſe be mynſhed, vntyll the Lorde haue ſent rayne vpon the earth. And ſhe went, and dyd as Elia ſayde. And ſhe and he & her houſe dyd cate a good ſpace, & the meale waſted not oute of the barell, neither was the oyle ſpent out of þe cruſe accordyng to the worde of the Lorde, whych he ſpoke by the hande of Elia. I

And after theſe thynges, it happened, þe ſonne of the wyfe of the houſe fel ſicke. And þys ſykenelle was ſo ſore, þe ther was no breath leſte in hym. And ſhe ſayde vnto Elia: what haue I to do wyth the. O thou man of God: art thou come vnto me, to call my ſonne agayne to remembraunce and to ſlaue my ſonne? He ſayde vnto her: geue me thy ſonne. And he toke hym out of her lap, & caried hym vp into a loſte where he abode, and layde hym vpon þys owne bed, and called vnto the Lorde, and ſayde: O Lorde my God, haſt thou purſhed alſo this wydow (with whom I dwell as a ſtraunger) & haſt ſlayne her ſonne? And he ſtretched hym ſelf vpon the chyldre the tymes, and called vnto the Lorde, and ſayde: O Lorde my God, let thys chyldes ſoule come into hym agayne. And the Lorde heard the voyce of Elia, & the ſoule of the chyldre cam into hym agayne, and he reuured. And Elia toke þe hope & brought hym downe out of the chambze into þe houſe and deliuered hym vnto his mother, & Elia ſayd: beholde, thy ſonne lyueth. And the woman ſayde vnto Elia: nowe I knowe, that thou art a man of God, and that the worde of the Lorde in thy mouth, is true. I

¶ The. xviij. Chapter.

Elia is ſent to Ahab. Obadiah (otherwyſe called Ab-dia) ſerued an Ahab: prophetes. Elia killeth all Baals prophetes: and afterwarde obcapureth rayne.

After proceſſe of many dayes þe worde of the Lorde came to Elia in the thyrde yere, ſayinge: Go ſewe thy ſelfe vnto Ahab, and I wyl ſende rayne vpon the earth. And Elia went to ſewe him ſelfe vnto Ahab, & ther was a great ſampſymmet in Achomron. And Ahab called Obadiah, whyche was the gouerner of þys houſe: and Obadiah feared God greatly: For whē Jeza-bel deſtroyed the prophetes of the Lorde, he toke an hundred prophetes & hpd them, ſyſtic men in one caue & ſyſtye in another, and prouyded bread and water for them. And Ahab ſayd vnto Obadiah: Go into the lande, vnto all fountaynes of water, & vnto all brookes, yf happelye we maye fynde graſſe, to ſaue þe hoſes and the mules, and þe deſtrope not ſome of the beaſtes. And ſo they deuved the lāde betwene the, to walke thozow it. Ahab wente one waye by hym ſelfe, and Obadiah went another waye by hym ſelfe.

And it chaunced þas Obadiah was in the waye, Elia met hym. And Obadiah knewe hym, & fell on his face, & ſayde: art not þy my lord Elia? And he answered hym: I am he. So & tell thy lord: beholde, Elia is here, he ſayde: what haue I ſpenned, that þe woldeſt deliuer thy ſeruaūt into the hande of Ahab, to ſley me? As truly as the Lord thy God lyueth, there is no nacyon or kyngdome, whether my lord hath not ſent, to ſeke the. And when they ſayde: he is not there, he toke an othe of þe kyngdome & nacyon, whā he found he not. And nowe thou ſayeſt: goo and tell thy lord, that Elia is here. And as ſone as I am gone from the, the ſpyete of the Lorde ſhall carpy the into ſome place that I do not knowe, and ſo when I come & tell Ahab, and he can not fynde the, he ſhall ſley me. But I thy ſeruaūt feare the Lorde from my yowth vp. Was it not told my Lorde, what I dyd when Jeza-bel ſue the prophetes of þe Lorde howe I hpd an hundred men of the Lordes prophetes, ſyſty men in one caue, and ſyſtye in another, and prouyded them of bread and water: And nowe thou ſayeſt, go thou now and ſewe thy lord. Beholde, Elia is here, that he maye ſley me.

And Elia ſayde: as truly as the Lorde of hoſtes lyueth, befoze whom I ſtāde, I wyl ſewe my ſelfe vnto hym thys daye. So Obadiah went to mete Ahab, and told hym. And Ahab went to mete Elia. And it fortuned þe whan Ahab ſawe Elia, he ſayde vnto hym art þe þe troubleth Iſrael? He answered: it is not I that haue troubled Iſrael, but þe, and thy fathers houſe, in that ye haue forſaken the cōmaundementes of the Lorde, and þe haſte folowed Baal. Rowe therfoze ſende & gather to me all Iſrael vnto mount Carmel, & the prophetes of Baal & foure hundred & ſyſty, and the prophetes of the Idols groues foure hundred, whyche ate of Jeza-bels table. So Ahab ſent vnto all the chyldren of Iſrael, and gathered the prophetes together vnto mount Carmel.

And Elia came vnto all þe people, & ſayde: howe longe halt ye betwene two opinions? I If the

If þ Lord be God, folowe hym: but yf Baal be þe, then go after hym. And the people answered him not one worde. Then layde Elia vnto the people agayne. I onely remaine a prophete of the Lorde: but Baals prophetes are foure hundred and fyfye. Let them therfore geue vs two oren, & let them chose the one, & cut him in peces, & lape hym on wood, and put no fyre vnder: and I wyll dresse the other ore, & lape him on wood, and wyll put no fyre vnder. And call ye on the name of your God, & I wyll call on the name of the Lorde: and then the God that answered by fyre, let hym be God.

E And all þ people answered & sayd, it is well spoken. And Elia sayd vnto þ prophetes of Baal: chose you an ore, and dresse him fyfye (for ye are many) and call on the name of your goddes, but put no fyre vnder. And they toke the one ore that he dyd geue them and they dresse it, & and called on the name of Baal from morninge to noone, sayenge: O Baal heare vs. But there was no voyce nor one to answer. And they lepte vpon the alter that they had made. And at none it fortuned, that Elia mocked the, and sayd: crye lowde, for he is a God: peradventure he is talkinge or occupied (in folowinge vpon his enemyes) or is in his iourneye, or happelye he slepeth, & must be awaked with your crye. And they cryed lowde, & cut them selues, as they maner was, with knyues & lanners, tyll the bloude folowed on the. And it chaunced, that whē myddaye was passed they prophesied vntyll the tyme of the euenyng sacrifice. But ther was nether voyce ner one to answer, ner any that regarded them.

And Elia sayde vnto all þ folke: come to me. And all the people cam to him. And he repayred þ alter of the Lord, that was broken. And Elia toke xii. stones accordyng to þ nōbre of xii. trybes of þ sonnes of Jacob (vnto whom þ worde of þ Lord came,) sayeng: Israel shall be thy name. And w the stones he made an altare in the name of the Lorde. And he made a dyche rounde about the alter, as brode as two forowes of the corne felde. And he put the wood in order, & hewed the ore in peces, & laped hym on the wood, & sayde: fyl foure barels with water, & powre it on þ burnt sacrifice & on the wood. And he sayd: do so agayne. And they dyd so. þ secōde tyme. And he sayde agayne: do it the thyrde tyme. And they dyd it the thyrde tyme. And the water ranne rounde about the alter, and he fylled the pytte with water also.

And it fortuned when þ tyme cam (wher in the burnt sacrifice of þ euenyng vled to be offered) Elia þ prophete came & sayd: Lorde God of Abraham, Isaac & of Israel, it shall be knowe this daye, that thou art the God in Israel, & þ I am thy seruant, & þ I haue done all these thynges at thy commaundement. Heare me (O Lorde) heare me, & thy people maye knowe, that thou art the Lorde God, & thou hast turned they bert agayne now at last. And the fyre of þ Lord fel, & consumed the burnt sacrifice & the woode, & stones and the duste, & lycked vp the water þ was in the pyte. And when all þ people sawe it, they fell on their faces, & sayde. The Lorde he is God. þ Lorde, he is God. And Elia sayde vnto the. Take the prophetes of Baal, & let not one of them escape. And they toke them, and Elia brought the vnto the broke fyllon, & slue the there. And Elia sayde vnto Ahab: get þ byrate & dyyncke, for there is a sounde of muche rayne. And so Ahab went vp to eate and to dyynck, & Elia went by to þ top of Carmel. And he layde hym selfe flat vpon the earth, & put his face betwene his knees, and sayde to his seruaut: go vp (I praye the) and loke toward the wape of the see. And he went vp & looked, and sayde: there is no thynge. And he sayde: go agayne seuen tymes. And it fortuned, that at the seuenth tyme he saide: beholde there aryleth a lytle cloude of the see, lyke a mannes hande. He sayde: go, and lape vnto Ahab: Make fast thy charer, and gette the downe, that the rayne stoppe the not. And it came to passe, that in the meane whyle, that heauen was blacke with cloudes & wynde, & there was a great rayne. And Ahab got vp and came to Jezreel. And the hand of þ Lord was on Elia, & he gydded vp his loynes, and ranne before Ahab, tyll he come to Jezreel.

The xii. Chapter.

Elia fleinge from Jezabel, is nourished of the Angell of God, and is commaunded to annoynt Ahab, Ihu and eliseus, whom the Hebrewes call Elia.

And Ahab tolde Jezabel, al that Elia had done, and howe he had slayne all the prophetes with þ swerde. Then Jezabel sent a messenger vnto Elia, sayeng: so & so let the goddes do to me, yf I make not thy soule lyke one of theys, by to morowe thys tyme. When he sawe that, he arose & wēt for his lyfe, and came to Beersaba in Iuda, & left his seruaut there. But he hym selfe wente a dayes iourney into the wyldernesse, and came & sat downe vnder a Juniper tree, and despyred for his soule, that he myght dye, and sayd, * it is nowe ynough (O Lorde) take my soule, for I am not better then my fathers.

And as he lape and slepte vnder the Juniper tree: beholde, an Angell touched him, and sayde vnto hym: vp, and eate. And when he looked aboute hym: beholde, there was a loaffe of bzoled breade and a vessel of water at his head. And he dyd eate & dyyncke, and layde hym downe agayne to slepe. And the Angell of the Lorde came agayne the secōde tyme, and touched hym, and sayde: vp, and eate, for thou hast yet a great iourney.

C The. xx. Chapter.

The first and seconde tyme that Samaria was besieged of Benhadad kyng of Syria.

And Benhadad the kyng of Syria gathered all hys host together, hauynge xxxii. kynges with him, and hozles & charrettes: and wet vp & besieged Samaria and warred agaynst it. And he sent messengers to Ahab kyng of Israel into the cytie, and sayd vnto hym: thus sayth Benhadad. Thy syluer & thy golde is myne, and þy faprest of thy wyues, & of thy chyldren be myne. And the kyng of Israel answered and sayd: Whi Lozde kyng accorþyng to thy sayeng, I am thyn & all that I haue.

And whan the messengers came agayne, they sayde, thus sayeth Benhadad. For as much as I haue sent vnto the, sayenge: thou shalt deliuer me thy syluer & thy golde, and thy wyues, & thy chyldren. I wyll therfore send my seruantes vnto þe to morowe thys tyme: & they shall searche thyn house, & the houses of thy seruantes. And whatsoeuer is pleasaunt in thyn eyes, they shall take it in theyr handes, & byrynge it awaye. Then þe kyng of Israel sent for all þe elders of þe land and sayd: take hede I praye pou and se, how thys felowe goeth about myschefe. For he sent vnto me, for my wyues, for my chyldre, for my syluer & for my golde: and I denyed hym not. And all the elders & all the people sayd: herken not vnto hym, nor consent.

Wherfore he sayde vnto the messengers of Benhadad: tell my lozde the kyng, all þe thou dyddest send for to thy seruant at the fyrst tyme, that I wyll do, but thys thynge I maye not do. And þe messengers departed and brought answer agayne. And Benhadad sent vnto hym agayne, and sayde: thus and thus do þe goddes vnto me, yf the dust of Samaria be ynough for all the people þe folowe me, to take euery man an handful. And the kyng of Israel answered, and sayde: tel hym: let not hym þe putteth on hys harness boost hym selfe, as he þe putteth it of. And it fortuneth, that when Benhadad hearde that tydynge, as he was with the kynges dynkyng within þe paupylions, he sayd vnto his seruantes, put on poure harness. And they set them selues in aray agaynst the cytie.

And beholde there came a prophete vnto Ahab kyng of Israel, sayenge: thus sayeth the Lozde. Hast þe sene all this great multitude? beholde, I wyll deliuer it into thyn hand thys daye, and thou shalt knowe, that I am the Lozde. And Ahab sayd: Whi whos he sayde: thus sayeth þe Lozde: euen by the seruantes of the gouernours of the syrces. He sayd agayne: who shal ordeyne þe battayle? And he answered: thou. Then he ordeyned þe seruantes of the gouernours of þe syrces: and they were two hundred and xxxii. And after them

þe iii. also,

And he arose, and dyd eate & dryncke, & walked in the strength of that meate & fourtye dayes & fourtye nyghtes, euen vnto þe mount of God. For whan he came thither vnto a caue, he lodged there in all nyght.

And beholde, the woide of þe Lozde came to hym, & sayde vnto hym: what doest thou here Elia? And he answered. I haue bene gelous for the Lozde God of hostes sake. For the chyldren of Israel haue forsaken thy couenant, & broken downe thynne alters, and slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, & I only am left, and they seke my lyfe to take it awaye. And he sayde: come out & stande vpon the mount, before þe Lozde. And beholde the Lozde went by, and a myghty stronge wynde that rent the mountaynes & brake the rockes before the Lozde. But the Lozde was not in the wynde. And after the wynde came an earthquake. But the Lozde was not in the earthquake: but after the earthquake, came fyre: but the Lozde was not in the fyre. And after the fyre, came a small sylly voyce. And when Elia hearde, he couered hys face wyth his mantle, and wet out and stode in the entering in of the caue. And beholde, there came a voyce vnto him, and sayd: what doest thou here Elia? And he answered. I haue bene gelous for the Lozde God of hostes sake: because the chyldren of Israel haue forsaken thy couenant, cast downe thynne alters, & slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, and I only am left, and they seke my lyfe to take it awaye. And the Lozde sayd vnto hym: go and turne thy waye to the wyldernesse vnto Damascus, that thou mayest annopnte Ahab, kyng ouer Syria. And Jechu sonne of Nimsi, shalt thou annopnte kyng ouer Israel. And Elisa the sonne of Saphat of Abel Beholoth shalt thou annopnte, to be prophete in thy rowme. And it shall come to passe that whoso escapeth the swerde of Ahab, hym shall Jechu slaye: and yf any man scape the swerde of Jechu, hym shall Elisa put to death. And therto I haue left me seuen thousande in Israel, of whych neuer man bowed his knees vnto Baal, nor kyssed him wyth hys mouth.

So he departed thence, & founde Elisa the sone of Saphat plowynge, & hauynge twelue yokes of oxen before him, & he to the twelue. And Elia wet by him, & cast his matell vpon him. And he leste þe oxen, & came after Elia & sayde: let me I praye the, bysse my father & my mother, & the I wyll folow þe. He sayd vnto hym: go backe agayne, for what is it, þe I haue done to þe? And whan he wet backe agayne from hym, he toke a couple of oxen, & slue them, & dyssed the fleshe to the instruments of the oxen, & gaue vnto the people, and they dyd eate. And then he arose, & went after Elia, and mynistrred vnto hym.

also, he nombred all the people, all the chyldren of Israel, euen. vii. 40. And they wente out at none: but Benhadad dyd dyncke tyl he was broncken in the pauplyons both he and 5 kynges: euen. xxii. kynges, that holpe him. And the seruauntes of the gouernours of the cyties went out fyrst.

D And Benhadad sent out, and they shewed hym, sayeng: ther are men come out of Samaria. he sayde: Whether they be come out for peace, take them alyue: or whether they be come out to fyght, take them yet a lyue. And so those pouge men of the gouernours of 5 cyties came out of the cytie, & the host after them, & they slue euery one his enemye that came in his waye. And 5 Syrians fled, and they of Israel folowed after them. And Benhadad the kyng of Syria scaped on a horse, with his horseme. And 5 kyng of Israel went out, & smote 5 horses & charettes, and to a great slaughter slue he 5 Syrians.

And there came a prophete to the kyng of Israel, and sayde vnto hym: go forth and playe the man, be wyse and take hede what thou doest: for wylde the peare is gone about, the kyng of Syria wyll come vp agaynst the. And 5 seruauntes of the kyng of Syria sayd vnto hym. The goddes of 5 hylls are they: goddes, & therfore they had the better of vs: but let vs fyght agaynst them in the playne, and for what ye wyll, we shall haue the better of the. And this do: take 5 kynges awaye euery man out of hys place, and put dukes in they: rowmes. And do thou nobye the an host, lyke the best that thou hast lost, suche horses & suche charettes, and we wyll fyght agaynst them in the playne, and thou shalt be wylde 5 better of them. And he herkened vnto they: voyce, and byd euen so.

C And it fortuned, that after the peare was gone aboute, Benhadad nobyed the Syrians, and wylde vp to Aphek to fyght agaynst Israel. And the chyldren of Israel were nombred, and with they: whole nobye went they agaynst them. and 5 chyldren of Israel ppyched before them, lyke two lytell flockes of kyddes: but 5 Syrians spyled 5 countrepe. And there cam a man of God, and sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: thus sayeth 5 Lorde: Because the Syrians haue sayd: the Lorde is but God of 5 hylls, and not God of 5 valleys: therfore wyll I delyuer all thys greete multitude into thine hand, & ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde. And they ppyched one ouer agaynst 5 other seuen dayes, & it came to passe, 5 in the seuerth daye 5 batayle was toynd. And 5 chyldren of Israel slue of the Syrians an hundred thousand fotemen in one daye. But the rest fled to Aphek into 5 cytie. And there fell a wall vpon. xxvi. thousande of 5 men that were left. And Benhadad fled and cam into 5 cytie, from chabze to habze.

And his seruauntes sayd vnto hym. holde, we haue hearde saye, 5 the kynges of the house of Israel are mercyfull kynges. we will therfore put sackcloth about our loynes & ropes about our neckes, and go out to the kyng of Israel: yf happelpe we wyll saue thy lyte. And so they gyrded sackcloth about they: loynes & put ropes about they: heades, & cam to 5 kyng of Israel, and sayd. Thy seruaut Benhadad sayth, I praye the let me lyue. he sayd: is he yet alyue? he is my brother. And they toke that woide for good lucke & hastily caught it oute of hys mouth & sayd: per thy brother Benhadad. he sayd: go, byng hym hyther. And Benhadad cam out vnto hym, & he caused hym to come vp into 5 charet. And he sayd vnto hym: the cyties whych my father toke from thy father, I wyll restore agayne. And thou shalt make treates for 5 in Damasco, as my father byd in Samaria. And I wyll make an apoyntmet with the, & send 5 a way. And so he made an apoyntmet with him, & sent him a way.

And there was a certen man of 5 chyldren of the prophetes, whych sayd vnto his neyghboure in the worde of the Lorde: sympte I praye the. And 5 man wold not sympte hym: Then sayd he vnto hym. Because thou hast not derkened vnto 5 voyce of the Lorde: beholde as lone as thou art departed from me, a Lyon shall slape the. And it came to passe, that as soone as he was departed from him, a Lyon found hym, and slue hym. Then he founde another man and sayde: sympte me I praye the. And the man smote hym, so that in symptinge he wounded hym. So the prophete went forth, and wayted for the kyng by the waye, and put hym selfe out of knowledge with alshes, whych he laped vpon hys face. And wylde the kyng cam by he cryed vnto the kyng, & sayd: thy seruaut went out in the myddes of the battel. And behold, they went awaye a man, whome another man brought vnto me, and sayd: kepe thys man. And yf he be mylled or lost, thy lyte shall go for his: or els thou shalt paye a talent of syluer. And as thy seruaut had here & there to do, he was gone. And the kyng of Israel sayd vnto hym: euen so shall thy iudgement be, as thou hast defnyed it thy selfe.

And he hasted, and toke the alshes a waye from his face: and the kyng of Israel knewe hym, that he was of the prophetes. And he sayd vnto him: thus sayth 5 Lorde: because thou hast let go a man that is in my curle, thy lyte shall go for hys lyte. and thy people for his people. And the kyng of Israel wylde to his house, way warde, and in displeasure, and came to Samaria.

The. xxi. Chapter.

C Nabab commanndeth to hys Naboth, to the hys pader that he refused to sell to Nabab. Nabab refused.

Am

Ifter these thynges, it chauced, that Naboth the Jezrabelyte had a vyneparde in Jezabel, hard by þe palace of Ahab kyng of Samaria. And Ahab spake vnto Naboth, sayenge. * Geue me thy vyneparde, that I maye make me a garden of yerbes therof, because it lyeth so nye my house: and I wyll geue þe for it a better vyneparde then it is: or rather yf it please the, I wyll geue the, the worthe of it in money. And Naboth sayde to Ahab: the Lorde forbydd þe from me, that I shoulde geue the enheritaunce of my father vnto the.

And Ahab came into his house deupe, and euell apayde, because of the worde whych Naboth þe Jezrabelyte had spoken to hym, for he had sayde: I will not geue the, the enheritaunce of my fathers. And he layde hym downe vpon his bed, & turned awayne his face, (to the wall) and wolde eate no bzead.

But Jezabel his wyfe came to hym, and sayde vnto hym: why is thy sprete so wayward, þe thou eatest no bzead? And he sayd vnto her: for I spake vnto Naboth þe Jezrabelyte, and sayde vnto hym: Geue me thy vyneparde for money: or els yf it please the, I wyll geue the another vyneparde for it. And he answered: I wyll not geue the my vyneparde.

And Jezabel his wyfe sayde vnto hym: Dost thou thus gouerne the kyngdome of Israel: vp, and eate bzeade, & set thynne herte at rest, I wyll geue the, the vyneparde of Naboth the Jezrabelyte. And so she wrote a letter in Ahab's name, and sealed it wryth his seale, and sent the letter vnto the elders, and to the nobles þe were in his cytie dwellinge wryth Naboth. And she wrote in the letter, sayenge: proclayme a fast, & set Naboth on hye amonge the people, and let two vnbayntes befoze him, to beare witness agaynst hym, sayenge: thou dydest blasfeme God and the kyng. And then carpe hym out, and stonede hym to death.

And the men of his cytie: that is to saye, whyche dwelt in his cytie, dyd as Jezabel had sent vnto them, and as it was wrytten in the letter whych she had sent vnto them. They proclaymed fastyng, and set Naboth amonge the chefe of the people, and ther cam in two men (the chyldzen of Belial) and sate befoze hym. And þe two vnbayntie persones wytnessed agaynst Naboth, in þe presence of the people, sayenge: Naboth dyd blasfeme God and the kyng. * And they carped hym out of the cytie, and stoned him wryth stones that he dyed. And then they sent to Jezabel, sayenge: Naboth is stoned to death. And it fortunede when Jezabel heard that Naboth was stoned to death: she sayde to Ahab: vp, and take possession of the vyneparde of Naboth, the Jezrabelyte, whych he demped to geue the for money, for Naboth is not alive but deade. And when Ahab hearde that Naboth was deade, he stode vp to go downe to the vyneparde of Naboth the Jezrabelyte, and to take possession of it.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Elia the Thelbyte, sayeng: vp & go downe to meete Ahab kyng of Israel, whych he is in Samaria. For lo, he is gone downe to the vyneparde of Naboth: to take possession of it. And therfoze walte thou saye vnto hym thus sayeth the Lorde: hast thou kyled, and gotten possession? And thou walte speake vnto hym sayeng: thus sayeth the Lorde * in þe place where dogges lyched þe bloud of Naboth, shall dogges lyche euen thy bloude also. And Ahab sayd to Elia: hast thou soude me, O thou myne enemye? he answered: I haue founde the: for thou arte euen soude to worke wychednes in the syght of the Lorde. Beholde, I wyll byynge euell vpon the, and wyll make cleane cydance of thy posterite & wyll * destroye from Ahab, euen hym that maketh water agaynst the wall, and hym that is shut vp and left behynde in Israel: and wyll make thynne house, lyke the house of Jeroboam the sonne of Ahab, and lyke the house of Baasa þe sonne of Abia, for the prouocation, wherwith thou hast prouoked and made Israel to synne.

And of Jezabel spake the Lorde sayenge: * dogges shall eate Jezabel, in the possession of Jezabel. * And he þe dyeth of Ahab in the towne, him shall dogges eate: and he þe dyeth in the felde, hym shall the foules of the ayre eate. But there was none lyke Ahab whych dyd euen sell him selfe, to worke wychednes in the syght of the Lorde, and that because Jezabel his wyfe pyched hym forwarde. He dyd exccrabyng abhominabyle, in folowynge foule Idoles, accordyng to all thynges: as dyd þe Amozites * whom the Lorde cast out befoze the chyldzen of Israel.

And it fortunede, that when Ahab hearde those wordes, * he rent his clothes, and put sackcloth aboute his flesh, and fasted, & laye in sackcloth and wet bare fote. And þe worde of the Lorde came to Elia, the Thelbyte, sayenge: seest thou how Ahab humbleth hym selfe befoze me? because he so submitteth hym selfe befoze me, I wyll not byynge that euell in his dayes: but in his sonnes dayes wyll I byynge euell vpon his house. And they continued the yere without warre betwene Syria and Israel.

The xxii. Chapter.

¶ Four hundred fiftie prophetes do comert Ahab and Achazbath to warre agaynst Ramoth: and the prophetes of truth, for which he is impetred and put in prison. Of Ahab's other wyfe called Jezebel.

¶ And

Ad in the thirde yere dyd Jehosaphat the kyng of Iuda, come downe to the kyng of Israel. And the kyng of Israel sayd vnto his seruantes, knowe ye not that Ramoth in Gilead is ours: and we syt styll, and take it not out of the hande of the kyng of Syria. And he sayd vnto Jehosaphat: wilt thou come wyth me to batayle, agaynst Ramoth in Gilead? And Jehosaphat sayd vnto the kyng of Israel: * I will be as thou art, & my people shall be as thyne and my horses as thyne.

And Jehosaphat sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: * aske counsell I praye the at the worde of the Lorde to daye. And then the kyng of Israel gathered the prophetes together wth a foure hundred men, and sayd vnto them: what I go agaynst Ramoth in Gilead to batayle, or shall I let it alone? And they sayde go vp: for the Lorde shall deliuer it into the handes of the kyng. And Jehosaphat sayd: is there here neuer a Prophet of the Lorde more, that we myght enquire of hym? And the kyng of Israel sayd vnto Jehosaphat: there is yet one man (Michea the sonne of Jimla), by whom we maye aske counsell of the Lorde. But I hate hym: for he doth not prophesye good vnto me, but euell. And Jehosaphat sayd: let not the kyng saie so. Then the kyng of Israel called a chamberlayne and sayd: fet Michea the sonne of Jimla hither at once.

And the kyng of Israel and Jehosaphat the kyng of Iuda sate eether in his seat, and they apparell on them, in a voyde place besyde the entreynge in of the gate of Samaria and al the Prophetes prophesied befoze the. And zedekia the sonne of Canana made hornes of yron, and sayd: thus sayth the Lorde: wyth these hornes shalt thou pushe the Syrians, vntill thou haue made an ende of the. And all the Prophetes prophesied euen so, sayenge: go vp to Ramoth in Gilead, and prosper, for the Lorde shall deliuer it into the kynges hande.

And the messenger that was gone to call Michea, spake vnto hym, sayenge: beholde, the wordes of the prophetes speake good vnto the kyng wyth one mouth: let thy word therfore (I praye the) be lyke the wordes of euery one of them, to speake that whiche is good. And Michea sayde: as truely as the Lorde lyueth, whatsoeuer the Lorde sayeth vnto me, that will I speake. And so he cam to the kyng, and the kyng sayd vnto hym: Michea, ought we to go agaynst Ramoth in Gilead to batayle, or to be styll? He answered to hym, * go and prosper, the Lorde shall deliuer it into the hande of the kyng. And the kyng sayde vnto hym: So and so many tymes do I charge the, that thou tell me nothyng, but that whiche is true, in the name of the Lorde.

He sayd: I saw al them of Israel scattered vpon the hylls, as shepe that haue not a shep-herde. And the Lorde sayd: these haue no master, let euery man retourne to his house in peace. And the kyng of Israel sayde vnto Jehosaphat: dyd I not tell the, that he wold prophesye no good vnto me, but euell? And he sayde agayne: heare thou therfore the word of the Lorde. I sawe the Lorde syt on his seat, and all the host of heauen stode about hym on his ryght hande and on his left. And the Lorde sayd: * who shall persuaade Ahab, that he maye go and fall at Ramoth in Gilead, & one sayd on this maner, & another on that. And there came forth a certayne spete, and stode befoze the Lorde and sayde: I will persuaade hym. And the Lorde sayde vnto hym: wherwith?

And he sayd: I will go out, and be a false spete in the mouth of all his prophetes. He sayd: thou shalt persuaade hym, and praye go forth thou, and do euen so. Now therfore behold * the Lorde hath put a lyenge spete in the mouth of al these thy prophetes, and the Lorde hath spoken euell towarde the.

But zedekia the sonne of Canana went to & smote Michea on the cheke, and sayde: whan wilt the spete of the Lorde from me, to speake vnto the? And Michea sayde: beholde, thou shalt se in that daye, when thou shalt go from chambze to chambze to hye the. And the kyng of Israel sayd: take Michea and carpe hym vnto Amon the gouernour of the cite, and vnto Ioth the kynges sonne, and saye: thus sayeth the kyng: put this fellow in the prison house, and fede hym wyth bread of affliction, and with water of trouble, vntill I retourne in peace. And Michea sayd: yf thou retourne in peace, the Lorde hath not spoken by me. And he sayd: herken ye people euery one of you.

And so the kyng of Israel and Jehosaphat the kyng of Iuda went vp to Ramoth in Gilead. And the kyng of Israel sayde to Jehosaphat: chaunge the, whan thou goest to warre: and put on thyne apparel. And the kyng of Israel chaunged hym selfe, & went to battel. But the kyng of Syria commaunded the xxxii. captaynes (that had rule ouer his charrettes) sayenge: fyght neyther with small nor greate saue onely agaynst the kyng of Israel. And when the captaynes of the charrettes saw Jehosaphat, they sayd: Surely it is the kyng of Israel, & they turned to fyght agaynst hym. And Jehosaphat cryed. And so it cam to passe, that when the captaynes of the charrettes sawe that he was not the kyng of Israel, they turned backe from hym.

Then sayd Ahazia the sonne of Ahab vnto which made Israel to synne. For he serued

Is there not a God in Israel, that ye go to Wherfoze, thus sayth the Lorde: thou shalt

And whan the messengers turned backe

And the kyng went agayne and sente hym another captayne ouer fyfty with his fyfty. And he answered and sayde vnto hym: O man of God, thus hath the kyng sayde: make haste, and come downe. Elia answered and sayde vnto them: if I be a man of God, fyze come downe from heauen, and consume the and thy fyfty. And there came fyze of God downe from heauen, and consumed him and his fyfty.

And the kyng went agayne and sent the thyrde captayne ouer fyfty w his fyfty men. And the thyrde captayne ouer fyfty went vp and came & fell on his knees before Elia and besought him, and sayde vnto hym: O man of God, let my lyfe and the lyfe of the fyfty thy seruantes be precyouse in thy syght.

D Beholde, there came fyze downe from heauen, and burnt vp the two foze captaynes ouer fyfty with their fyftirs: therfore let my lyfe nowe be precyouse in thy syght. And the Angel of f Lord sayde vnto Elia: go downe with him, and be not afrayde of him. And he arose & went downe w him vnto the kyng.

And he sayde vnto hym, thus sayeth the Lorde: for as much as thou hast sent messengers to aske counsell at Beelzebub the God of Chroom as though there had bene no God in Israel whose woide thou myghtest like after: therfore thou shalt not come downe of the bed on whych thou art gone vp, but shalt dye the death. And so he dyed accordyng to the woide of f Lord which Elia had spoken.

E And Jehozam (his brother) began to repgne in his breade, in the seconde yere of Jehozam the sonne of Jehosaphat kyng of Iuda, because he had no sone. The rest of the wordes that concerne Abazias, what thinges he dyd, are they not wrytten in the boke of the cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

And it chaunced, that when the Lorde wold take vp Elia in to heauen by a whorlewynde, Elia went with Elisa fro Gilgal. And Elia said vnto Elisa tary here I pray f, for f Lord hath sent me to Bethel. Elia sayde vnto him: * as surely as the Lorde lyueth, and as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not leane the. And they came downe to Bethel, & the chyldre of the prophetes that were at Bethel, came to Elia, and sayd vnto hym: knowest thou not, howe that the Lorde wyll take away thy master from thy heade this day? he sayde: I knowe it also holde ye your peace.

And Elia sayd vnto him: Elisa, tary here I pray the, for the Lorde hath sent me to Jericho. He sayd: as surely as f Lord lyueth, and as surely as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not leane the, & so they came to Jericho. And the chyldre of f prophetes f were at Jericho came to Elia & sayde vnto him: knowest thou not, that the Lorde wyll take away thy master from thy heade this day? he answered: I knowe it also holde ye your peace. And Elia sayde vnto him: tary I pray the here, for the Lorde hath sent me to Jorda. He sayd: as surely as the Lorde lyueth, and as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not leane the. And so they two went together. And fyfty men of the sonnes of the prophetes came and stode on the other syde afarre of, and they two stode by Jordan.

And Elia toke his mantel and wyper it together, & smote the waters, and they were deuiped, parte the one way, & parte f other, so that they two went ouer thownde the wylande. And it fortuned, that as sone as they were ouer, Elia sayd vnto Elisa: as the Lord I shall do for the, yet I be taken away from the. And Elia sayde: I pray the let thy syrite be double vpon me. And he sayde: thou hast asked an harde thing. neuertheles, if I se me when I am take away from the thou shalt haue it so: if thou do not, it shal not be. And it fortuned, that as they went walking and talkyng: beholde, there appeared a charet of fyze and hores of fyze, and parted the both asunder. * And Elia went vp thownde the whorlewynde into heauen. And Elia sawe, and cryed: O my father, O my father, the charet of Israel and the horesmen therof, and he sawe him nomore: and he toke his owne clothes, and rent them in two peces.

He toke vp also the mantell of Elia that fell from him, & wente backe agayne & stode by Jordans syde, & toke the mantell of Elia (that fell from hym,) and smote the waters (and they parted not asunder,) and he sayd: where is the Lorde God of Elia, and he hym self? And when he had smytten the waters, they parted parted thys waye and that waye, and Elisa went our. And whan the chyldre of the prophetes which were at Jericho sawe hym fro a farr, they sayde: the spyte of Elisa doth sette on Elisa, and they came to mete hym, and fel to the grounde before him, and sayde vnto hym. We: there be with thy seruantes forty stronge men let them go and seke thy master: haply the spyte of the Lord hath taken hym vp, and cast hym vpon some mountayne or into some valey. And he sayde. Ye shall sende none. And whan they laye vpon him till he was ashamed, he sayde: Sende. They sent therfore forty men, which sought hym thre dayes, but founde hym not. And whan they came agayne to hym, whiche tarried at Jericho, he sayde vnto them: dyd I not saye vnto you, that ye shoulde not go?

And the men of the cytie sayde vnto Elisa beholde, Syr, the dwelling of thys cytie is pleasant as thou thy selfe seest: but the water is naught & the ground barren. He sayde: Bysing me a newe cruse, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him. And he wet vnto the springe of the waters, and cast the salt in thither, & sayd: thus sayth the Lord, I haue healed this water, there shal not come henceforth ether death or barrennes. So the waters were healed vnto this daye, accordyng to the sayng of Eliseus, which he spake.

And he went vp from thence vnto Bethel. And as he was goyng vp the way, there came lytle chyldre out of the cytie, and mocked hym, and sayde vnto hym. Go vp thou balde hed, go vp thou balde hed. And he turned backe, and looked on them, and cursed them in the name of the Lord. And there came two she Beares out of that wood, and tare. xlii. chyldre of them. And he went from thence to mount Carmel, and from thence he turned agayne to Samaria.

The.iii. Chapter.

The kynges of Israel, Iuda and edom la. he water, which they obayne through the prayer of Eliseus. The wyng of Moab syghetys agaynst Israel.

Jehozam the sone of Ahab began to reygne vpon Israel in Samaria the. xliiij. yere of Jehosaphat kyng of Iuda, & reygned twelue yeres. And he wrought euell in the syght of the Lozde: but not lyke his father and lyke his mother, for he put a waye the ymages of Baal, that his father had made. Neuertheles, he cleaued vnto the synnes of Ieroboam the sone of Nabat (whiche made Israel to synne) and departed not there from.

And Elisa kyng of Moab was a Lozde of shepe, and rendered vnto the kyng of Israel an hundred thousande lambes & an hundred thousande rames with the wolle. But whan Ahab was dead, it soytuned, that the kyng of Moab rebelled agaynst the kyng of Israel. And kyng Jehozam went out of Samaria the same reason, and nombred all Israel, and went, and sent to Jehosaphat the kyng of Iuda, sayeng: the kyng of Moab hath offended agaynst me, wylte thou come with me agaynst Moab in battell? He answered: I wyll come vp, for as I am, so arte thou and as my people be, so are thy people, and thy horses as myne. And he sayde: what way shall we go vp? And he answered. The way thozowe the wyldernesse of Edom.

And so the kyng of Israel toke his iorney, and the kyng of Iuda, and the kyng of Edo. And when they had compassed the waye seuen dayes, they had no water for the hooste and for the cattell that folowed them. And the kyng of Israel sayd. Alas, the Lozde hath called these thre kynges together, to deliuer the out into the hand of Moab. But Jehosaphat sayde: *is there not here a prophet of the Lozde, that we may enquire of the Lozde by him? And one of the kynges of Israels seruantes answered and sayde: here is Elisa the sonne of Saphat, which powred water on the bades of Elia. And Jehosaphat sayd. Is not the word of the Lozde with hym? And so the kynges of Israel, and Jehosaphat and the kyng of Edom went downe to him.

And Elisa sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: what haue I to do with the? Get the, to the prophetes of thy father, & to the prophetes of thy mother. And the kyng of Israel sayd vnto him: Oh nape, for the Lozde hath called these thre kynges together to deliuer the into the hande of Moab. And Elisa sayd: as sure as the Lozde of hostes lyueth (in whose sight I stand) and it were not that I regard the presence of Jehosaphat the kyng of Iuda, I wolde not loke towarde the, no: yet le the. But nowe bysng me a mynstrell. And whan the mynstrell played, the hande of the Lozde came vpon him. And he sayde: Thus sayeth the Lozde: Make thys playne grounde full of dyches. For thus sayeth the Lozde: ye shal se nether wynd no: rayne, and yet the brooke shal be filled with water, that ye may drinke both ye, and your bestes, and your cattell. And this is yet but a smal thing in the sight of the Lozde, for asmuche as he wyll geue ouer the Moabites also into your handes. And ye shal smyte euery stronge towne, and euery goodly cytie, and shal sell euery pleasant tree, and stoppe euery well of water, and marre euery good platte of grounde with stones. And in the moynyng, whan the meat offering was offred, it soytuned, that there came water by the way from Edom, and the countrey was fylled with water.

And when all the Moabites hard that the kynges were come vp to fyght agaynst the, they gathered al together, from the yonger

And they were vp early in the morning and the sonne shone vpo the water, that the Moabites sawe the water a farre of as red as blonde, and they sayde. This is the blood of slaughter: the kynges are slayne and one hath smytt another. Nowe therfore Moab get the to the spoyle. And whē they came to the hoost of Israel, the Israelytes stode vp and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them, but they folowed vpon them, and smote Moab. And they ouerthrowe the cities, and on euery good parcell of lande, cast euery man his stone, and fyled it, & they slopte all the welles of water, and felde all the good trees. Onely in the ctyle of Sikk lesse they the stones therof: howbeit they went about it with synges, and smote it.

And when the kynge of Moablawde, that the battell was foze agaynst him, he toke of him seuen hūdred men that drewē & swarde to haue gone thowowe, euen vnto þe kynge of Edom: but they could not. And then he toke his eldest sonne (that shuld haue reppned in his stead), & offered hym foze a burnt offering vpon the wal. And there was great indygnacyon agaynstē Israel, and they departed from him, and returned to theyz owne land.

The. lxxi. Chapter. ✠

¶ God graunt a certain poore woman oyle and fourty by Beissens. Beissens (whom the text callith Misia) is repent of God a childe for; howe doth she: wherby death and is after rapt to life. I herewith sweete the pos-sage, and multiplyth her loues.

3 And there cryed a certayne woman of the wyues of the prophetes vnto Eli sa, sayng: thy seruauit my husband is dead, and thou knowest, that thy seruauit dyd feare the Lorde.

And the creditor is come, to fet my two sonnes, to be his bondmen. Elisa sayde vnto her. Tell me what shall I do for the? What hast thou in thyne house? She sayde, thyne handmayde hath nothing at al in the house save a pitcher with oyle. He sayde vnto her: So & do thoue vessel for the, of them that are without eurn of all thy neyghbours, empty vesselles and that not a fewe. And whē thou arte come in, thou shalt shut þ doze after the and after thy sonnes, and powre out into all those vesselles, and set a lyde þ whi- h is full.

26 And so the woman went from hym, and that the doze after her and after her sonnes.
 And they brought to her, & she powred out.
 And it came to passe, that whē the vessels were full, she sayde vnto her sonne: hyrge me yet a vessel. And he said vnto her: I haue no mo. And the oyle ceased. Then she came, and tolde the man of God. And he sayd: go & sel the oyle, and paye the that thou art in det unto, but lyue þ and thy chyldre of þ rest. ¶

And it fell on a daye that Elifaz came to Sunem, where was a greate woman, she toke him in for to eate bread. And so it came to passe, that from that tyme forth (as often as he came that way) he turned in thither to eate bread. And she sayd vnto her husband, Beholde, I perceiue, that this is a holy meale of God, that cometh so oft by our place.
Let vs make him a chambrer (I praye the) with walles, and let vs set hym there a bed, and a table, a stole & a candlestick: that he may turne in thither when he cometh to vs.

And if foꝛtuned on a day, that he came ther & turned into the chambꝛe, & laye in, and sayde to Gehezi his seruaut: cal the Shunamite. And when he called her, she presented her selfe befoꝛe hym. And againe sayde vnto him: Tell her. Behold, thou hast bene carefull foꝛ vs, and haste made alle pꝛouisiõ. What shal we nowe do foꝛ dest thou be spoken foꝛ to the kyng, oꝛ to the captayne of the host? She answered I haue amonge myne owne people. And he sayde againe, what is to be done foꝛ her? Gehezi swered. Certely she hath no chyld, and her husbnde is olde. And he sayde: call her.
And when he had called her, she stode in the dooꝛ.
And he sayde * by suche a tyme, and as
as the frute can lyue, thou shalt embrace sonne. And she sayd: Whynay my lord, the ma of God, do not lpe vnto thine hand.
And the wyfe conceived, and bare a sonne that same yeaꝛ that Eliscus had sayde to her as sone as the frute coulde bene lyf.

And when the chylde was growen, it fel on a daye, that he went out to his father, and to the reapers. And he sayde vnto his father, my heed, my heed. And he sayde to a laboryer hym to his mother. And when he had taken hym and brought hym to his mother, he sate on her knees till none, and then dyd.
And she went vp, and layde hym on the bed of the man of God, and shut the doore about hym, and went out, and called vnto her husbande, and sayde: sende with me (I praye) one of the ponge men & one of the Ales. For I wyll runne to the man of God, and come agayne. And he sayde: wherfore wyll thou go to hym sayng that to daye is neither sabbath none nor Saboth daye. She answered, I am weake in health. Then he labelled an Ale, & sent her seruant-leade away the Ale, and commanded her not to go slowly (because she was weake) but when she had the Ale, she ran to the man of God, and said vnto him, I have brought thee the Ale, as thou didst bidde me.

✠ And so she went & came vnto the man of God, to mount Carmell. And it fortuned that when the man of God saw her face, he sayde to Gedei his seruante. Behold the virgin is the Sunamite. Rūne therfore vnto her, and saie vnto her: Is all well with the and with thy husbāde, & with the lad? And she answered. All is wel. And when she came to the man of God vp to the hylle, she caught hym by the fete. But Gehezi went to her, to chynst her away. And the man of God sayd: let her alone, for her soule is vexed within her, and the Lorde hath byd it from me, and hath not tolde it me. Then she sayde: byd I desyre a sone of my Lorde: byd I not require the, that thou shouldest not deceyue me?

Then he sayde to Gehezi: * gyde vp thy loppes, and take my staffe in thyne hande, & go thy way. * If thou mete any man salute him not. And if any salute the, answer hym not agayne. And laye my staffe vpon the face of the chyld. And the mother of the chyld sayde: * as sure as the Lorde lyueth, & as thy soule lyueth, I wil not leaue y. And he arose and folowed her. Gehezi went before them, & layed the staffe vpon the face of the chyld. But there was neither voyce nor any feling. Wherefore he went agayne to mete him, and tolde hym, sayeng: the chyld is not awaked.

And when Elisa was come into the house: Beholde, the chyld was dead and layde vpon his bed. He went in therfore, & shut the doore to the lad & hym, and prayed vnto the Lorde.

* And wente vp and laye vpon the lad, and put his mouthe on his mouth, and his eyes vpon his eyes, and handes vpon his handes and when he so lay vpon the chyld, the fleshe of the chyld waxed warme. And he went agayne, and walked once vp and downe in the house, and then went vp, and layed him selfe vpon him agayne. And then the chyld gasped seven times and opened his eyes. And he called Gehezi, and sayde: Call for thyss Sunnamite. So he called her: whiche when she was come in vnto hym, he sayde vnto her: take thy sonne. Therfore she went in, and fel at his fete, & bowed her selfe to the ground and toke vp her sone and went out.

¶ Elisa came agayne to Gilgal, & there was a deth in the lande, and the chyldren of the prophetes dwelt with him. And he sayde vnto his seruants. Set a great pot on the fyre, and make pottage for the chyldren of the prophetes. And one went out into yfælde, to gather herbes, and founde: (as it were) a wilde vyne and gathered therof wilde Coloquintyd as his lappe full, and came, and shred them into the pot of pottage: for they kneweit not. So they powred out for the men to eate. And it fortuneth, that when they tasted of the pottage, they cryed out, and sayde: O thou man of God there is death in the pot: and they coulde not eate therof. But he sayde: bynge meale. And he cast it into the pot, and sayde: hyl for the people, that they may eate, and there was nomore harme in the pot.

¶ There came a man from Baal Salifa, & broughe the man of God bread of fyfist frutes, &c. xx. loaves of barley, and newe corne which was yet in his bagges. And he sayde:

Geue vnto the people, that they maye eate. And his minister answered: why, shall I set this before an hundred men? he sayd again: geue it vnto the people that they maye eate. For thus sayeth the Lorde: * they shall eate, and there shalbe left ouer. And so he set it before them, and they dyde eate, and left ouer accordyng to the worde of the Lorde.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Naaman the Syrian is healed of his leprosy. Gehezi is stricken with a leprosy, because he toke money & rayment of Naaman.

N Naaman, captayne of the hoste of the kyng of Siria, was a great man, and honourable in the syght of his master because that by hym the Lorde had gyuen health vnto Siria. He was also a myghty man, and experte in warre, but he was a leper. And the Sirians had gone out by companies, and had broughe out of the countrey of Israel a lytle mayde, and she was with Naamans wyfe. And she sayd vnto her lady: I wolde to God my lorde were with the prophete that is in Samaria: for he wolde deliuer him of his leprosy. And he went in, and tolde his lorde, sayeng: thus and thus sayde the mayde, that is of the lande of Israel. And the kyng of Siria sayde: Come and entre in, and I will sende a letter vnto the kyng of Israel. And he came, and toke with him ten talentes of syluer and. vi. thousand peces of golde, and ten chaunges of raimentes, and broughe the letter to the kyng of Israel conteynyng thys tenour: Nowe when this letter is come vnto the: Behold, I haue therewith sent Naaman my seruant to the, that thou mayest rydde hym of his leprosy. And it fortuneth, that when the kyng of Israel had redde the letter, he rent his clothes, and sayde: * am I God, that I shoulde slepe, and make alpye? For he dothe sende to me that I shuld deliuer a man from his leprosy. Wherefore consyder (I praye you) & se howe he seeketh a quarel agaynst me. Which when Elisa the man of God had harde, howe that the kyng of Israel had rent his clothes, he sent to y kyng, sayeng. Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes: let him come nowe to me, & he shal knowe, y there is a prophet in Israel.

And so Naama came with his horses and with his charettes, and stode at the doore of y house of Elisa. And Elisa sent a messenger vnto him, sayeng: go & washe the in Jordan seven tymes, & thy fleshe shal come agayne to the, and y shalt be cleansed. But Naama was wroth, & went away, & sayde. Beholde I thought w my selfe: he wolde surely come out, and stand & cal on the name of the Lorde his God, and put his hand on the place that he may heale the leprosy. Are not Abana & Pharpar, riuers of Damasco, better than al the waters of Israel? If I washe me also in them in them, shall I not be cleansed? And so he turned him, and departed with displeasure. And his seruantes came, & comoned with hym and sayd: Rather, if the prophet had byd the do some great thyng, oughtest thou not to haue done it? Howe much rather then, when he sayeth to the: washe, and be cleane? Then went he downe, & washed him selfe seven tymes in Iordan, according to the saying of the man of God, & his fleche chaiged, lyke vnto the fleche of a litle chyld, & he was cleansed.

And he turned agayne to the man of God he and all his company, and stode before hym, and sayd: Behold, I knowe nowe that there is no God in all the world, but in Israel. I knowe therfore take a blessinge of thy seruauit. But he sayde: * as surely as the Lorde lyueth (before whom I stand) I wyl receyue none. And when the other wolde haue constrained him to receyue it, he wolde not. And Naaman sayde: * (Euen as thou wylt, but I desire the). Shall there not be geuen to thy seruauit as muche of thys earth as two mules maye beare? For thy seruauit wyl henceforth offer neither burnt sacrifice nor offering vnto any other God, save vnto the Lorde. But herein the Lorde be merciful to thy seruauit that wher my master goeth into the house of Rimmon, & doth worshipping there, and leaneth on my hand, and I also worshipping in the house of Rimmon. (When I do worshipping I saye) in the house of Rimmon, the Lorde be merciful vnto thy seruauit because of this thing. Vnto whom he sayd: go in peace. And when he was departed from him as it were a fur-longe of grounde, Gehazi the seruauit of Elisa the man of God sayde: beholde, my master hath spared Naama this Syrian, that he wolde not receyue of his hande those thinges that he offered. As surely as the Lorde lyueth, I wyl runne after him, & take some what of hym. And so Gehazi folowed Naaman. And when Naama sawe him running after hym, he lyght downe from the charet, to mete him, and sayde: * is all well? he answered: All is wel. Behold, my master hath sent me, saying: se, there be come to me euen now from mount Ephraim two yong men of the chyldren of the prophetes: geue them I pray the, one talent of siluer & two chaunge of garmentes. And Naaman sayde: With a good wyl. Take two talentes: and he compelled him to bynd two talentes of siluer in two bagges, with two chaunge of garmentes, and layed them vpon two of his seruantes, to beare them before hym. And when he came into a secret place, he toke them from theyr hand, and bestowed it in the house, and the men were let go, and they departed.

But he went in, and stode before his master. And Elisa sayd vnto him: whence comest thou? Gehazi he sayde: thy seruauit went nowherther. But he sayde vnto hym: went not myne herte with the, when the man turned agayne from hys charet to mete the? Is it nowe a tyme to receyue money, to receyue garmentes, olyue trees, vnyepardes, figes, and oxen, men seruantes and mayde seruantes? The leprosy therfore of Naaman shall cleaue vnto the, and vnto thy seed for euer. * And he went out from hys presence, a leper as whyte as snowe.

The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Elisas maketh prou to swymme about the water. The Syrians beseye Israel, so that they would come together to rate theyr owne chyldren.

The chyldren of the prophetes sayd vnto Elisa: Behold, the place where we dwel with the, is to lytle for vs. We wyl therfore go vnto Iordan, & take the eury man a beame, and buyde vs a place, to dwell in. And he answered: go. And he sayde: be content I pray the, and come with thy seruantes. And he answered: I wyl come, and so he went with them.

And when they came to Iordan, they cut downe woode. But it fortunied, that as one was fellyng downe of a tree, the axe head fel into the water. And he cryed, & sayde: Alas master, it was lent me. And the man of God sayde: Where fell it? And he shewed hym the place. And he cut downe a stycke, and cast it in thither, and immediately the prou was swymme. Therfore sayd he: take it vp. And he stretched out his hande, and toke it vp.

But the kyng of Syria warred agaynst Israel, & toke counsell with his seruantes, and sayde: In yonder secret place shalbe my remaynyng. And the man of God sent vnto the kyng of Israel, saying: Beware, for thou go not ouert to such a place, for then the Syrians are luryng. Therfore the kyng of Israel sent to the place whiche the man of God tolde hym, and warned hym of, and saved him selfe from it, not once nor twyse.

And the herte of the kyng of Syria was troubled for this chynge, and he called for his seruantes and sayde vnto them: wyl ye not shewe me, whiche of our men (betrayeth me) to the kyng of Israel? And one of his seruantes sayde: none my lord o kyng. But Elisa the prophet, that is in Israel, telleth the kyng of Israel, yee euen the wordes that thou speakest in thy prey chamber. He sayde: go, and spye where he is, that I maye sende and smite him. And one tolde hym, saying: beholde, he is in Dotha. Therfore sent he thither hostes and charettes, and a myggyr host. And they came by nyght, & compassed the cite about.

And when the seruauit of the man of God rose vpear, y to go out: Beholde, there was an host round about the towne with hostes and charettes. And his seruauit sayde vnto him: Alas master, what shall we do? he answered: feare not, for they that be with vs, are mo then they that be with them. And Elisa prayed and sayde: Lord (I beseech the) open hys eyes, that he may se. And the Lord opened the eyes of the ponge man. And beholde, the mountayne was ful of horses, and charrettes of fyre rounde aboute Elisa. And whē they came downe to hym, Elisa prayed vnto the Lord, and sayde: Smyte this people (I praye the) with blyndnesse. And he smote them with blyndnesse, accordyng to the desyre of Elisa. And Elisa sayde vnto them: this is not the way, neyther is this the towne: folowe me, and I wyll byynge you to the man whome ye seeke. But he led them to Samaria.

And it fortuned, that whē they were come to Samaria, Elisa sayde: Lord, open theyr eyes that they may se. And the Lord opened theyr eyes, and they sawe. And beholde, they were in the myddes of Samaria. And the kyng of Israel sayde vnto Elisa, when he sawe them: Whys father, shall I smyte the? And he answered: Thou shalt not smyte the. But smyte those that thou hast taken with thyn owne swearde, and with thyn owne bowe. But rather let breade and water be set for them, that they may eate and dryncke, and go to theyr master. And he prepared a grete refectyon for them. And when they had eaten and dryncke, he sent them awaye, and they went to theyr master. And so the lordours of Syria came nomore into the lande of Israel.

After thys it chaunced, that Benhadad kyng of Siria gathered all hys hooste and went vp, and besieged Samaria. But there was a grete dearth in Samaria: and beholde, they besieged it, vntyll an Alles head (was solde) for foure scoze syluer pence, and the fourth parte of a Cab of dones dong, for fyve sicles. And as the kyng of Israel was going vpon the wall, there cryed a woman vnto him sayeng: Helpe, my Lord. Wherfor he sayde: if the Lord donot succoure the: wherwith can I helpe the: with the barne, or with the wyne presser? And the kyng sayd vnto her: what wylt thou? She answered: ponder woman sayde vnto me: byynge thy sonne, that we may eate hym to day, and we wyl eate myne to morowe. * And so we dyed my sonne and dyd eate him. And I sayde to her the other day: byynge thy sonne that we may eate hym, and she hath byd her sonne. And it came to passe, that when the kyng harde the wordes of the woman, he rent hys clothes, and went vp on the wall. And the people looked: and beholde, he had a sackcloth vnder, vpon his fleshe. Then he sayd: * God do so and so to me, if the heade of Elisa the sonne of Saphat shall stande on hym thys day. But Elisa sat in hys house and the elders sat by him, and the kyng sent a man before him. But yet the messenger came to hym and sayde to the elders: haue ye not sene howe that the sonne of this murtherer hath sent, to take away myne heade: he cyscumpecte when the messenger cometh, and shut the doze, and holde hym at the doze: is not the sounde of hys masters fete behynde hym? Whyle he yet talked with them: Beholde, the messenger came downe vnto hym, and sayde: beholde, this euell is of the Lord, and what more shall I loke for of the Lord?

The vii. Chapter.

Elisa propheseth plentifulnes of bytapes, and other thinges to Samaria. The Syrians runne away & haue no man folowynge them. The Lord that wolde not de- stroye the worde of Elisa, is troden to death.

When Elisa sayde: heare ye the word of the Lord: thus sayeth the Lord, * to morowe thys tyme shall a busshell of fyne flour be solde for a sycle, and two busshels of barley for a sycle in the gate of Samaria. The a certayne lord (on whose hand the kyng leaned) answered the man of God, and sayde: beholde, if the Lord wolde make wyndowes in heauen, myght thys sayeng come to passe? he sayde: Behold, thou shalt se it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat therof. And there were foure leperous men at the entryng in of the gate. And they sayd one to another, why syt we here vntyll we dye? If we saye: we wyl entre into the cytie, behold: the derth is in the cytie, and we shal dye therein. And if we syt styl here, we dye also. Now therfore come, and let vs fall vpon the hoste of the Syrians: If they saue our lyues we shall lyue: If they kyll vs, then are we dead. And so they arose in the nyght, to go to the hoste of the Syrians. And when they were come to the vtmost parte of the hoste of Siria: beholde, there was no man there.

For the Lord had made the hooste of the Syrians * to hear a noyle of charrettes and a noyle of horses, & the noyle of a grete hoste. In so much that they sayd one to another, lo the kyng of Israel hath byred agaynst vs & kynges of the hethtes, and & kynges of the Egyptians, to come vpo vs. Wherfore they arose and fled in p nyght, and left their tettes, theyr horses, and theyr Alles, and the felde which they had pyched en as it was, & fled for theyr lyues. And whē these lppers, came to the edge of the host, they went into a tent & dyd eat, & drynke, & carped thence syluer, & golde and rayment, and went & dyd it: came agayne and entred into another tente, and carryed thence also, and went and dyd it.

Then sayde one to another: We do not well thys day, for as muche as it is a daye to byynge good tidinges, and we hold our peace. If we tary tyl the day lpyght, some mischefe wyl

C will come vpon vs. Nowe therfore come, that we maie go, and tell the kynges housholde. And so they came, and called vnto the porter of the cytie, and tolde the sayeng: we came to the pavilions of the Syrians: and se, there was no man there, neyther voyce of man, but horses and asses tyed, and the tentes were, euen as they were wont to be.

And so the man called vnto the porters, & they told the kynges house within. And the kyng arose in the nyght, and sayd vnto his seruantes. I will shewe you now, what the Syrians haue done vnto vs. They know that we be hungry, & therfore are they gone out of the pavilions, to hyde them selues in the felde, sayeng: whan they come out of the cytie, we shall catche them alpye, and get in to the cytie. And one of his seruantes answered, & sayde. Let men take (I pray you) fyue of y^e horses that remayne, and are lesse in the multitude. Beholde they are euen as all the multitude of Israel that are lesse in the cytie: beholde (I say) they are euen as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed, and we will sende, and se. They toke therfore the horses of two charrettes, and the kyng sente after the hoste of the Syrians, sayeng: go, and se. And they went after the, euen vnto Iordan: and lo, all the waye was full of clothes and vesselles whiche the Syrians had cast from them in theyr haste.

And the messengers returned, and tolde the kyng. And the people went out, & spoyled the tentes of y^e Syrians. And so it came to passe, that a bushell of fyne flowre was sold for a sycle, and two bushelles of barley for a sycle, * accordyng to the worde of the Lord. And the kyng apoynted that lord (on whose hand he leaned) to be at the gate. And the people trode vpon him in the gate, and he dyed, accordyng to the worde of the man of God whiche he sayde, when the kyng came downe to him. And so came y^e thyng to passe that the man of God had spoken to y^e kyng sayeng: two bushelles of barley for a sycle, & a bushell of fyne flowre for another, shalbe to mozoewe this tyme in the gate of Samaria. Wherunto that lord answered the man of God, and sayde: Pee, and if the Lord made windowes in heauen myght it come to passe! And he sayde: Beholde, thou shalt se it with thyne eyes, and shalte not eate therof. And euen so chauned it vnto him: for the people troade vpon him in the gate, and he dyed.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

¶ Elisa prophesied vnto the Sunamite the death of his yere. After the death of Benhadad reigned Hazael in Syria. Jehoash the sonne of Jehoahaphat reigned in Iuda, whom salued from Iuda, Jehoahab succeeded Jehoash.

Then spake * Elisa vnto the woman (whose sonne he had restored to lyfe agayne) sayeng: vp and go, thou and thyne house, and sojourne wher soeuer thou canst, for the Lord hath called for a death, and the same shall come vpon the land seven yeres. And the woman arose, and dyd after the sayeng of the man of God, & went to her house and her housholde, and sojourned in the lande of the Philistines seven yere. And at the seven yeres ende, it fortuned, that y^e man came agayne out of the lande of y^e Philistines, and went out to call vpon the kyng for her house and for her land. And the kyng talked with Gehezi the seruant of the man of God, sayeng: tell me I praye the all the greates dedes that Elisa hath done. He tolde the kyng, howe he had restored a dead body to lyfe agayne: but in the meane tyme y^e woman (whose sonne he had rapled vp agayne) cryed to the kyng for her house, and for her lande: And Gehezi sayde: O y^e lord, whys is this the woman, and whys is her sonne whom Elisa rapled vp agayne. And when y^e kyng asked the woman, she tolde him. And so the kyng deliuered her a chamberlaine, sayeng: restore thou vnto her all that are hers and all the frutes of the felde, sence the daye that she lefte the lande, vnto this tyme.

And * Elisa came to Damasco, & Benhadad the kyng of Syria was sycke. And one tolde hym sayeng. The man of God is come hithe. And y^e kyng sayd vnto Hazael: take a present in thyne hande, and go myght the man of God, that thou mayest aske the Lord by him, whether I shal recover of this disease. And so Hazael went to mete him and toke the present with hym, and of euery good thyng of Damasco, euen as much as foumy camels coulde beare, and came and presented him selfe before hym, and sayde: Thy sonne Benhadad kyng of Syria hath sent me to the, sayeng: shall I recover of this disease?

And Elisa sayde vnto him: go & say vnto him: thou shalt recover, howbeit the Lord hath shewed me, that he shal surely dye. And he looked asyde, and was ashamed, and the man of God wepte. And Hazael sayde: why wepeth my lord? He answered: for I knowe the euil thynges that thou shalt do vnto the chyldren of Israel: for theyr stronge cyties shalt thou set on fyre, and theyr yonger men shalt thou sleie with y^e swearde & shalt dash out the braynes of theyr such yonge chyldren and all to teare theyr women with chyldre.

But Hazael sayde: what is thy seruant a dogge, that I shoulde do this great thyng? And Elisa answered: the Lord hath shewed me, that thou shalt be kyng of Syria. And so he departed from Elisa, and came to his master, which sayd to him. What sayd Elisa to the? He answered: he told me, that thou shouldest recover. And on the morowe it fortuned, that he toke a thycke cloth, and dyed it in water, and spred it on his face, and dyed, and Hazael reigned in his stead.

The fyfte yere of Joram the sonne of Ahab kyng of Israel, Jeholaphat beyng also kyng of Juda, Jehoza the sonne of Jeholaphat kyng of Juda, begane to raygne. * xxxii. yere olde was he, when he beganne to raygne, and he raygned eynht yere in Jerusalem. And he walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, as they that were of the house of Ahab: for his daughter of Ahab was his wyfe, and he dyd euell in the syght of the Lorde. And the Lorde wolde not destroye Juda, and that because of Dauid his seruaunt, as he promysed hym to geue hym alwaye a lyght amonge his chyldren.

In those dayes Edd dyd wickedly whē he was vnder the hande of Juda. For they made them a kyng of theyr owne. So Jehoram went to zair, he and all his charettes wyth hym. And he rose by nyght, and smote the Edomites, which compassed hym in, wyth the captaynes of his charettes, & the people fled into theyr tentes. But Edom rebelled, so that he wold not be vnder the hāde of Juda vnto this daye. And then Lobnah began to be disobedient euen that same tyme.

The rest of the wordes that concerne Joram and al that he dyd, are they not wyrtē in the boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Juda: And Joram rested wyth his father, and was buried besyde his father in the cytye of Dauid. And * Ahaziah his sone raygned in his steade. In the. xii. yere of Joram the sonne of Ahab kyng of Israel, dyd Ahaziah the sonne of Jehoram kyng of Juda begynne to raygne. Two and twenty yere olde was Ahaziah whē he beganne to raygne, and he raygned one yere in Jerusalem and his mothers name was Athaliah the daughter of Omri kyng of Israel. But he walked in the waye of the house of Ahab, & dyd euell in the syght of the Lorde, euen as dyd the house of Ahab. For he was the sone in lawe of the house of Ahab.

And he went with Joram the sonne of Ahab to warre agaynst Hazael kyng of Syria, in Ramoth Gilead, & the Syrians wounded Joram. And * kyng Joram went back agayne to be healed in Jezabel of the woundes which the Syrians had geue hym at Ramoth, when he fought agaynst Hazael kyng of Syria. And Ahaziah the sonne of Jehoram kyng of Juda went downe to se Joram the sone of Ahab in Jezabel, because he was syche there.

The. ix. Chapter.

Jehu in made kyng of Israel, and kyllerh Jehoza & his therof, & Ahaziah, otherwyse called Ochozias, the kyng of Juda also, and cauterh Jezabel to be caste downe out of a wyndowe, and the dogges eat her.

And Elia the prophete called one of the chyldren of the prophetes, and sayd vnto him: * ggyde vp thy loynes, and take thys boxe of oyle in thyne hande, and get the to Ramoth in Gilead. And when thou comest thither, loke where is Jehu the sonne of Jeholaphat, the sone of Nimsi, and go to him, and make him arysen vp from amonge his bretheren, & carrie him to a secret chambze. Then take the bore of oyle, and powze it on his head, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde: I haue anoynted the to be kyng ouer Israel. And then open the doze, and flee without any tarpenge. And so the seruaunt of the prophete gat him to Ramoth Gilead: and when he came in, beholde, the captaynes of the host were sytting together. And he sayde: I haue an errand to y^e, o captayne. And Jehu sayd: vnto wyche of all vs: he sayde: to the, o captayne. And he arose, and went into the house.

And he powzed the oyle on his head, and sayde vnto hym: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: * I haue anoynted the to be kyng ouer the people of the Lorde, euen ouer Israel. Thou shalt smyte his house of Ahab thy master, that I maye aduege the bloud of my seruauntes the prophetes, and the bloude of all the seruauntes of the Lorde, of the hande of Jezabel, for the whole house of Ahab shall be destroyed, and * I wyll destruye from Ahab, euen hym y^e maketh water agaynst the wall, and him that is p^resoned and forsaken in Israel: and I wyll make the house of Ahaziahke the house of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, and lyke the house of Baasa his sonne of Ahia. And as for Jezabel * the dogges shall eat her in the felde of Jezabel, and ther shall be none to burie her. And he opened the doze, and fled.

Jehu came oute to the seruauntes of his lozde, and one sayde vnto hym, is all well? Wherfore came thys madde felowe to the? And he sayde vnto the: ye knowe what manner of man it is, and what his comuniacio is. They sayde vnto hym agayne: it is not so, tel vs. he sayd: thus and thus spake he to me, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde: I haue anoynted the to be kyng ouer Israel. Then they besyde the h^ozologge halld, and toke euery man his garmēt, and put it vnder him and blew with trompettes, sayinge: Jehu is kyng. And so, Jehu the sonne of Jeholaphat the sonne of Nimsi: onspred agaynst Joram. Joram kepte Ramoth Gilead, he and all Israel because of Hazael kyng of Syria: and * kyng Joram returned to be healed in Jezabel, of the woundes which the Syrians had geue hym, whē he fought w^{it} Hazael kyng of Syria.

And Jehu sayde: If it be your myndes, then let no man departe and scape out of the cytie, to go, & tell in Jezabel. So Jehu gate vp into a charette, and wente to Jezabel, where Joram laye, & Ahaziah kyng of Juda was come downe thither to se Joram. And the watchman that stode on þe towre in Jezrael, spyed the company of Jehu as he came, and sayde: I se a companye. And Jehozam sayd: take an horsma, and sende to mete the, that he maye ask whether it be peace. And so there wente one on horsbacke to mete hym, & sayde: thus sayeth the kyng: is it peace? and Jehu sayd: what hast thou to do with peace? turne the behynde me. And the watchman tolde, sayinge: the messenger came to them, but he cometh not agayne.

E Then he sent oute another on horsbacke, which came to them, and sayde: thus sayeth the kyng: is it peace? Jehu answered: what hast thou to do with peace? turne the behynde me. And the watchman tolde, sayinge: he cam to them also, and cometh not agayne, and the dryyngge is lyke the dryyngge of Jehu þe sonne of Nimshi: for he dryueth the charet as he were mad. And Jehozam sayd: make ready. And the charet was made ready. And Jehozam kyng of Israel, and Ahaziah kyng of Juda went out ether of them in his charet agaynst Jehu, and met hym in the furlonge of Naboth the Jezraelite. And it fortuned, þ when Jehozah sawe Jehu, he sayd: is it peace Jehu? he answered: What peace shulde there be, so longe as the whozdoms of thy mother Jezabel, and her wytecraftes are so great? And Jehozam turned his handes, and fled, & sayd to Ahaziah: ther is falschod, o Ahaziah. And Jehu toke a bowe in hys handes, and smote Jehozam betwene the armes, and the arowe went thowowe hys heart. And he fell downe flat in hys charet. Then sayd Jehu to Bidkar a captayne: take hym, and cast hym in the plat of the ground of Naboth the Jezraelite. For I remembre that whan I and þe roade together in a charet after Ahab his father, the Lorde layed thys heuy burthen vpon hym. I haue sene yesterdape þe bloud of Naboth, and the bloude of his sonnes, sayde the Lorde: and I wyll quyte it the in this ground sayth the Lorde. Nowe therfore take hym, & cast hym in the plat of ground, accordyng to the woide of the Lorde. But whē Ahaziah the kyng of Juda sawe thys, he fled by the waye of the g. rde house. And Jehu folowed after hym, & sayde: smyte hym also in the charet: (and they smote hym) in hys charet, at þe going vpon to Gur by Ibelha, & he fled to Wagiddo, & ther dyed. And his seruantes carped hym in a charet to Jerusalem, & buryed hym there in his sepulchre, w his fathers, in þe cite of Dauid. And in the xi. yere of Joza þe sonne of Ahab, beganne Ahaziah to raygne ouer Juda. And whē Jehu was come to Jezabel

G Jezabel hearde of it, and starched her face, & fired her head, and looked out at a wyndowe. And as Jehu entred at þe gate, she sayde: had simri peace wythe the lue hys master? And he lyft vp hys eyes to the wyndowe, and sayd:

who is of my syde, who? And ther looked out to hym two or thre chamberlaynes. And he sayde: thowe her downe. So they threwe her downe, and her bloude dashed towarde the wall, & towarde the horsles, and he trode her vnder fote.

And when he was come in, he dyd eat and drinke, & sayde: go & vylet I praye you vnder curled creature, and bury her: for she is a kynges daughter. And so when they came to burye her, they founde nomore of her than the skulle, and the fete, and the palmes of her handes. Wherefore they came agayne, & tolde hym. And he sayde: thys is the woide of the Lorde, which he spake by the hāde of his seruant Elia the Thesbyte, sayinge: in the felde of Jezabel shall dogges eate the fleshe of Jezabel. And so þe carkas of Jezabel was euen as donge vpon the earth, in the felde of Jezabel: so that no man myght saye: Thys was Jezabel.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ Jehu causeth the .lxx. sonnes of Ahab to be slayne after that. xlii. of hys chylzen. He smyth a meane way to kyll all the prestes of Baal. After hys deeth, his floure raggeth in hys reade.

Ahab had .lxx. sonnes in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria vnto þe rulers of Israel, to the elders, and to the that brought vp Ahabs chylzen, sayinge: nowe whan this letter cometh to you, ye þe with you your masters sonnes, ye haue with you both charettes and horsles: a strong cite haue ye also: and harnes, loke which of your masters sonnes is best and moste mete, and let him on his fathers seat, and fyght for your lordes house. But they were exceedingly afrayde, & sayd: se, two kynges were not able to stande before hym, howe shall we then be able to stande? And he that was gouernour of Ahabs house, and he that ruled the cite, the elders also, & the tutors sent to Jehu, sayeng: we are thy seruantes, & wyl do al that shalt byd vs: we wyl make no man kyng: therfore do þe what semeth good i thine eyes.

Then he wrote another letter to the layenge: Of þe be myne, and wyl hearken vnto my voyce, then take the heddes of the me that are your masters sonnes, and come to me to Jezabel by to morowe thys tyme. And the kynges sonnes were .lxx. persones, and they were with the great men of the cite, which brought them vp. And when the letter came to them, they toke the kynges chylzen, and slue them, euen .lxx. persones, & layed theyr heades in baskettes, and sent them to him to Jezabel. And there came a messenger, and tolde hym, sayinge: they haue brought the heades of the kynges sonnes. And he layde let them laye them on two heapes in the terynge in of the gate, vntyll the morning. And

And when it was daye, he went out, and rode, & sayd to al the folke: ye be ryghteous. Behold, I conspired agaynst my master, and slayd him. But who slue all these? Lerne here, & ther shall fall vnto the erth nothyng of the worde of the Lorde, which he spake concerning the house of Ahab. For the Lorde hath brought to passe the thynges that he spake by the hande of his seruant * Elia. And so Jehu slue all the remayned of the house of Ahab, in Jezrebel: and all that were great vnto him, & his kynfolkes and his preachers, so that he let nothyng of him remayne. And he arose, & departed, & cam to Samaria. And whā Jehu was in the waye to the house where the shepherdes dyd there then slepe, he met wth the brethren of Ahaziah kyng of Iuda, & sayd: what are ye? They answered: the brethren of Ahaziah are we, and go downe to salute the chyldren of the kyng and of the quene. And he sayde: take the alpye. Whā then they had taken them alpye, they slue them at the well whych was besyde the house where the shepe are shopen, euen two and fourty men, nether left he any of them.

And when he was departed thence, he met Jehonadab the sonne of Rechab comynge agaynst him. And he blessed him, and sayd to him: is thine hert right, as myne hert is true wth the Lorde? And Jehonadab answered: yea that it is. (For it is the Lorde that he speaketh) then geue me thine hand. And whā he had geuen him his hand, he toke him vp to him into the charet, & sayde: come wth me, & se the zeale that I haue for the Lorde: so they made him ryde in his charet. And when he came to Samaria, he slue all the remayned vnto Ahab in Samaria, tyll he had slayd hym out, according to the saying of the Lorde which he spake to Elia.

And Jehu gathered all the people together and sayd vnto the: Ahab serued Baal alpye. But Jehu shall serue hym more. Nowe therefore call vnto me all the prophetes of Baal, al such as serue him, & al his prestes, and let none be lackyng. For I haue a greatesa- crifice to do to Baal: & therefore, whosoener is myfled, he shall not lye. But Jehu dyd it for a surteity, to the intēt that he myght de- stroye the seruantes of Baal. And Jehu sayd: Proclayme an holy conuocacyon for Baal, and Jehu sent vnto all Israel. And all the seruantes of Baal came, & ther was not a mā left behynde that came not. And they came into the house of Baal, & the house of Baal was full from one ende to another.

And he sayd vnto hym that was the keeper of the vestrye, bringe forth garmentes for all the seruantes of Baal. And he brought them out garmentes. And when Jehu went wth Jehonadab the sonne of Rechab into the house of Baal, he sayde vnto the seruantes of Baal: stande, and loke, that there be here wth you none of the seruantes of the Lorde but the seruantes of Baal only. And when they wēt in to offer sacrifice, & burnt offering: Jehu appoynted lxxx. men without, & sayd: If any of the mē whom I haue brought vnder your handes escape, he that letteth him go, shall dye for hym.

And it fortunēd, & allone as he had made an ende of offeringe the burnt sacrifice, Jehu sayde to the men of warre, and to the captaynes: go in, and slepe them, let none come out. And they smote them wth the edge of the swearde. And the men of warre and the captaynes cast them out, and went vnto the cytie of the temple of Baal, and set the ymages out of the temple of Baal, and burnt them. And they brake the ymage of Baal, & brake the house of Baal, and made a drafft house of it vnto this daye. And so Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel. But fro the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, which made Israel to synne: Jehu departed not, nether from followinge of them (nether for sake he) the golde calves that were in Bethel and in Dan.

And the Lorde sayde vnto Jehu: because thou hast done ryght well, in bringyng to passe the thyng that is ryght in myne eyes, and hast done vnto the house of Ahab according to al thinges that are in myne hert, therefore shall thy chyldren vnto the fourth generation lye on the seate of Israel. But Jehu cared not for this, to walke in the lawe of the Lorde God of Israel wth al his hert: for he departed not from the synnes of Jeroboam which made Israel to synne.

In those dayes the Lorde began to cut Israel short: and Hazael smote them in all the coastes of Israel, fro Jordan eastwarde: euen all the land of Gilead, the Gadites, the Rubenites, and the Gersonites of Manasse, fro Aroer vnto the ryuer of Arnon: euen Gilead & Basan. The rest of the wordes that concerne Jehu, & all that he dyd, and al his power, are they not w^{ritten} in the booke of the Chronycles of the kynges of Israel? And Jehu slept wth his fathers, & they buryed him in Samaria, and Jehoahaz his sonne raygned in his steade. And the tyme that Jehu raygned vpon Israel in Samaria, is xxviii. yeres.

The xi. Chapter.

¶ Athalia puteth to death all the kynges sonnes except Jehoash the sonne of Jehoiah, which is hidden after her death is made kyng.

And Athalia the mother of Ahaziah when she sawe that her sonne was dead, she arose, and destroyed all the kynges seed. But Jeholaba the daughter of kyng Joaz, and syster of Ahaziah, toke Joas the sonne of Ahaziah, and scale hym from amonge the kynges sonnes that were slayne, and his nource with him, out of a slepyng chambrer, and byd hym from Athalia that he was not slayne. And he was wth her byd in the house of the Lorde. vi. yeres.

¶ Athalia

Athalia byd raygne ouer the lande.

And the vii. yere Jehoiada sent and fet þe rulers oare hundredes, w the captaynes, & the of the garde, and toke them to hym into the house of the Lozde, and made a bonde w the, and toke an othe of them in the house of the Lozde, and shewed them the kynges sonne. And he comaunded the saying: thys is it þe must do: one thyd parte of you, whose dewty is to come on þe Sabbath dape, shall kepe the watch of the kynges house. And another thyd parte shall kepe the gate of Sur: and another thyd parte shall kepe þe gate which is behynde them of the garde: and so shall ye kepe the warche of the house of Weftab, and two partes of you, that is, all that go out on the Sabbath dape, shall kepe the warche of the house of the Lozde about the kyng, and ye shall cōpasse the kyng rounde about, and euery mā shall haue his weapen in his hāde. And whosoener cometh wythin the ranges, let hym be slayne. And se that ye be with the kyng as he goeth out and in.

fl. par. xxi. a

And the captaynes ouer þe hundredes byd, accordyng to al thinges that * Jehoiada the preast comaunded: and they toke euery man hys mē, that were to come in on þe Sabbath dape with the that shuld go out on the Sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the preast. And to the captaynes ouer hundredes, byd the preast geue kyng Dauids speares & wyldes that were in the tēple. And they of the garde stode, and euery man had his weapen in hys hande round about the kyng, sed the ryght cozner of the temple to the left, alōge by the aultar and the tēple. And he brought out the kynges sonne, & put the crowne vpon him: & deliuered hym * the witnesse, and made him kyng, & anoynted him. And they clapt theyr bandes, and sayd: God saue the kyng:

* And when Athalia heard the noyse of the ruyng of the people, she came to the people into the tēple of the Lozde. And when she looked, behold, the kyng stode by a pillar as the maner was, and the syngers & the troyettes by the kyng, and all the people of the lande reioysed, and blew w troyettes. And Athalia rent her clothes and cryed: treason, treason. But Jehoiada the preast comaunded the captaynes of the hundredes that had the rule of the hoost, and sayd vnto the: haue her out without the tēple, & she maye be within the ranges, and yf any folowe her, kill hym wyth the sweard: for the preast had sayd she maye not be slayne in the house of the Lozde. And they layde hādes on her tyll she cam in to the waye, by the which the hoyses wēt in to the kynges palace: & there was she slayne.

* And Jehoiada made a bonde betwene þe Lozde & the kyng, and the people, that they shulde be the Lozdes people, & also betwene the kyng and the people. And al the people of the lāde wēt into þe house of Baal, and destroyed it, his aultars also, and bys ymages bzake they downe lustely, & slue Mathan þe preast of Baal before the aultars. And the preast set watch ouer the house of the Lozde, and toke the rulers ouer hundredes, the captaynes & the of the garde, and all the people of the lande. And they bzought the kyng in the house of the Lozde: and came by þe waye of the gate of the of the garde to the kynges palace. And he sat hym downe on the lea of the kynges. And all the people of the lande reioysed, & the cytie was in quyet. And they slue Athalia wyth the sweard before the kynges palace. Seue yere old was Jehos, when he beganne to raygne.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

¶ Jehos maketh prouyde on for the reparayng of the temple, he is kylled by two of hys seruantes, and thus slayn raygneth in hys drede.

And he beganne to raygne in the vii. yere of Jehu. xi. yere raygned he in Jerusalem: & his mothers name was Zebiah of Beersaba. And he did þe which was good in the syght of þe Lozde, as longe as Jehoiada the preast enfourmed hym. But the hylaulars were not takē awaye, for þe people offred & burnt incense yet vpon the hylaulars. And Jehos sayd to the prestes: al the syluer of þe dedicat thynges þe bzought to the house of the Lozde in currant monye that is to saye, the monye that euery man is set at, and all the monye þe euery man with a wyllyng hert geueth & bringeth into þe house of the Lozde, let the prestes take it to thys euery man of his aquayntaūce, to repaye þe broken places of the house, wheresoener decaye is fōūde. And so it came to passe, that vnto þe. xxi. yere of king Jehos, þe prestes had mended nothing, that was decayed in the temple. Then kyng Jehos called for Jehoiada the byshop, and the prestes, and sayd vnto the: why repaye ye not the broken places of the tēple? Howe therfore, se that ye ceasse nomore monye of your aquayntaūce except ye deliuer it to repaye the tēple with all. And the prestes consented to receaue nomore monye of the people: except to repaye the decayed places of the temple.

But Jehoiada the p̄eas̄t toke a chest and boord an hole in the lyd of it, & set it beyde þ̄ altar on the ryght syde, as euery man cometh into the temple of the Lorde. And the p̄eas̄t kepte the vessels, put therein al the moneye þ̄ was brought into the house of the Lorde. And it fortuneth, that when they saw there was much money in the chest, * þ̄ kyn- ges scr̄yde and the h̄ye p̄eas̄t came vp, and tolde the money that was foude in the house of the Lorde, and put it into a bagge.

And they gaue the money sealed into the bondes of the that executed the worke, and that had þ̄ ouersyght of the house of þ̄ Lorde: and they brought it oute to the carpenters & builders (that wrought vpon the house of the Lorde) and to masons & hewers of stone: And they bought tymbre and fre stone, to repayre the decaye in the house of the Lorde, and to al that went out to mende the temple: howbeit there was not made for the house of the Lorde, bowles of syluer, instrumentes of musycke, basens, trumpettes or any vessels of golde, or vessels of syluer, of the money that was brought into the house of þ̄ Lorde: But they gaue that to the workmen, and repayed therewith the house of the Lorde. Moreover, they reckened not wyth the m̄ into whose handes they deliuered that money to be bestowed on workemen: for they dyd theyr payntfullpe. Howbeit treasurie money and synne money was not brought into the house of the Lorde, for it was the p̄eas̄t's.

Then came Hazael kyng of Siria vp, and fought agaynst Geth and toke it, & Hazael set his face to go vp to Ierusalem. And Jehoaas kyng of Iuda toke all the halowed thynges that Jehosaphat, Jehoram and Haziah his fathers kynges of Iuda, had dedicated, and that he hym selfe had dedicated, and all the golde that was found in the treasures of the house of the Lorde and in the kynges house, and sent it to Hazael kyng of Siria: and so he departed from Ierusalem.

The remnaunt of the wordes that concerne Jehoaas and all that he dyd, are they not written in the boke of the Chronycles of the kynges of Iuda: And his owne seruantes arose, and wrought treason, and slue Jehoaas in the house of Hillo, whā he cam downe to Hilla. Jozabar the sonne of Semcath and Jehoabad the sonne of Somer his seruantes, smote hym, and he dyed. And they buried hym wyth hys fathers in the cytie of David. And Amaziah hys sonne raygned in hys steade.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ Jehoaas the sonne of Jehu is deliuered into the handes of the Syrians, and dyed. Joas hys sonne raygned in hys steade. Elisa dyed.

At the. xliii. yere of Joas the sonne of Ahaziah kyng of Iuda, Jehoaas the sonne of Jehu beganne to raygne ouer Israel in Samaria seuentene yere. And he wrought that which was euell in the syght of the Lorde, and followed the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat whych made Israel to synne, and departed not ther frō. And the Lorde was angry wyth Israel, and deliuered them into the hand of Hazael kyng of Siria, and into the hande of Benhadad the sonne of Hazael all theyr dayes.

And Jehoaas besought the Lorde, & the Lorde heard him. For he considred the trouble of Israel, wherewith the kyng of Siria troubled them. And the Lorde gaue Israel a deliuerer, so that they went out frō vnder the subiection of the Syrians. And the chyldre of Israel dwelt in theyr tentes as before tyme. Neuerthelesse they departed not frō the synnes of the house of Jeroboam, whych made Israel synne, but walked in them. And there remayned an Idols groue still also in Samaria. Nether dyd he leaue of the people to Jehoaas, but fyfye horsemen ten charettes and ten thousande fotemen: for the kyng of Siria destroyed them, and made them lyke chylshed dust. The rest of the wordes that concerne Jehoaas, and all that he dyd, and hys power, are they not wyrtten in the boke of the Chronycles of the kynges of Israel? And Jehoaas slepte wyth his fathers, and they buried him in Samaria, and Joas his sonne raygned in hys steade. In the. xxxvii. yere of Joas kyng of Iuda, beganne Jehoaas the sonne of Jehoaas to raygne ouer Israel in Samaria syxtene yere, and dyd that whych is euell in the syght of the Lorde, and departed not from all the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, (that made Israel synne) for he walked therein.

The remnaunt of the wordes that cōcerne Joas & all þ̄ he dyd, & hys power wherwyth he fought agaynst Amaziah kyng of Iuda are they not wyrtten in the chronycle boke of the kynges of Israel: And Joas slepte wyth his fathers, and Jeroboam sat vpon his seat. And Joas was buried in Samaria amōge the kynges of Israel.

¶ When Elisa was fallen sycke of hys synnelle (wherof he dyed) Joas the kyng of Israel came downe vnto hym, & wepte before him, and sayd: * O my father, my father, the charet of Israel, & the horsemen of the same. Elisa sayde vnto hym: take bowe & arrowes. And he toke vnto hym bowe & arrowes. And he sayd to the kyng of Israel: put thine hāde vpo the bowe, & he put hys hāde vpo it. And Elisa put his hādes vpo the kynges hādes, & sayd: open a window eastward, & whan he had opened it, Elisa sayde: Hott, & he hotted.

¶ And

And he sayd: the arrowe of helth of the Lord: and the arrowe of helth agaynst Siria: for þu shalt smyte Siria in Apph. tþil thou haue made an ende of them.

And he sayd: take þe arrowes: & he toke the. And he sayd vnto the kyng of Israel: smyte the ground: & he smote thyle and ceased. And the man of God was angrie wþ hym, & sayd: thou shuldest haue smyte tþur oþer tymes ^(or seven tymes) & then thou haddest smytten Siria tþil thou haddest made an ende of the: where nowe þu shalt smyte Siria but thyle. And so Elisa dyed and they buried him, and the souldiers of the Moabites came into the lād, the same yere. And it chaunced as some of them were burienge a man, and spied the souldiers, they cast the mā into the sepulchre of Elisa. And whā þu mā was rolled downe, and touched the body of Elisa * he reuured, and stode vpon hys fete.

E But Hazael bered Israel, al the dayes of Jehoahaz. And þu Lord had mercye on them & ppyed the, & had respecte vnto the, because of his appoyntmēt made wþ Abrahā, Israhel and Jacob, & wolde not destroye the, nether cast he them frō hym as yet. So Hazael, the kyng of Siria dyed & Benhadad his sonne raygned in hys steade. And Jehoas þu sonne of Jehoahaz went agayne, and toke out of þu hande of Benhadad the sonne of Hazael, the cyties whych he had taken a waye out of the hande of Jehoahaz hys father, in warre: for thre tymes dyd Joas beate him, and restoyed the cyties vnto Israel agayne.

But Amaziah wolde not heare. And Jehoas kyng of Israel wote vp, and he and Amaziah kyng of Juda saue ether other at Bethlames which is in Juda. Nether turned he awaye from al the synnes of Jeroboam the sone of Nabat which made Israel to synne. He restored the coast of Israel fro the enterpryse of Hemath vnto the see of þ wyl-dernes, accordyng to the worde of the Lozde God of Israel, which he spake by the hande of his sernant * Jonas the sonne of Amithai the prophete, which was of Seth hepher. For the Lozde sawe howe that the affliction of Israel was excreadyng bytter, in so much that the psoned and the forsaken were at an ende. And ther was none to helpe Israel. And the Lozde sayd not, that he wolde put oute the name of Israel from vnder heauen, but he helped them by the hande of Jeroboas the sonne of Joas.

The rest of the wordes þ concerne Jeroboam, and all that he dyd, and hys strength, whiche he executed in the warres, and howe he restored Damasco, and Hemath to Juda in Israel, are they not written in the boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Israel: And Jeroboas slepte wyth his fathers, euen with the kynges of Israel, and zacharia his sonne ragyned in hys steade.

¶ The .xxv. Chapter.

¶ Azaria the kyng of Juda becommeth a leper. Of Joatham, Shallum, Azariah, Zecharia, Azariah, Joatham, and Azaz.

In the .xxvii. yere of Jeroboam kyng of Israel, beganne Azaria sonne of Amazia kyng of Juda to ragyne. Myxtene yere old was he whē he was made kyng, and he ragyned two & fyftye yere in Jerusalem, & hys mothers name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem. And he dyd þ whiche was ryght in the syght of þ Lozde, accordyng to al thynges as dyd hys father Amaziah: saue þ the hylaltars, were not put awaye: for the people offered, and burned incense styll on the hylaltars.

And the Lozde smote the kyng, and he was a leper vnto þ daye of his death, * and dwelt in a leuerall house at libertye, and Jothā the kynges sonne gouerned the palace, and iudged the people of the lande. The reste of the wordes þ concerne Azaria and all þ he dyd, are they not written in the boke of þ chronicles of the kynges of Juda: And so Azaria slepte with his fathers, and they buryed him with hys fathers in the cytie of Dauid, and Joatham his sonne ragyned in hys steade.

In the .xxviii. yere of Azaria kyng of Juda dyd zacharia þ sonne of Jeroboas ragyne vpon Israel in Samaria. vi. monethes: and wrought þ whiche was euell in þ syght of the Lozde, as dyd hys fathers: and turned not awaye from the synnes of Jeroboas the sonne of Nabat, which made Israel to synne. And Shallum the sonne of Iabes conspyred agaynst hym, & smote hym in the syght of þ people, & kyllled him, & ragyned in his stead.

The rest of the wordes that concerne zacharia, beholde, they are wyrtten in the boke of the Chronycles of the kynges of Israel. Thys is also the worde of the Lozde, which he spake vnto Jehu, sayinge: * thy sonnes shal syt on the seate of Israel in þ fourth generation after the. And it came so to passe.

Shallum the sonne of Iabes beganne to ragyne in the .xxix. yere of Azaria kyng of Juda: & he ragyned a moneth in Samaria. For Menahē the sonne of Gadi went by fro Thirza, & came to Samaria, & smote Shallum the sonne of Iabes in Samaria, & slue him, & ragyned in hys steade. The rest of the wordes that concerne Shallum, & the treason which he conspyred, beholde, they are wyrtten in the boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Israel. The same tyme Menahem destroyed Thippalah, & all þ were therein, & the coastes therof fro Thirzab. And because they opened not to hym he smote it, and rpyte by all theyr women with chylde.

The .xxix. yere of Azaria kyng of Juda began Menahē the sonne of Gadi to ragyne vpon Israel ten yere in Samaria. And he dyd euell in the syght of the Lozde, & turned not awaye all his dayes fro the synne of Jeroboas the sonne of Nabat, whiche made Israel to synne. And Phul the kyng of Assiria cam vpon þ lāde. And Menahē gaue Phul a .v. talentes of syluer that his had myght be with him and stablyshe the kyngdome in his hande. And Menahem made a proclamacion for the money in Israel, that all men of substance shulde geue the kyng of Assiria fyf-tye cycles of siluer a pece. And so the kyng of Assiria turned back agayne, and tarped not there in the lande. The rest of the wordes þ concerne Menahem, and all that he dyd, are they not wyrtten in the boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Israel: And Menahē slepte with his fathers, & Zecharia his sone dyd in his steade succede him in the kyngdome.

In the .lxxv. yere of Azaria kyng of Juda, beganne Zecharia the sonne of Menahem to ragyne ouer Israel in Samaria two yere, & dyd that which was euell in the syght of the Lozde: and lefte not of fro the synnes of Jeroboas the sonne of Nabat, which made Israel synne. But Zechah the sonne of Remaliahu, whiche was a capytayne of his conspyred agaynst hym, and smote hym in Samaria, eue in the palace of the kynges house with Argob and Aria: and wyth hym were fyftye men of the Gileadites: and he kyllled hym, & ragyned in hys rowme. In the lii. yere of Azaria kyng of Iuda, beganne Pekah the sonne of Remaliabu, to raygne ouer Israel in Samaria .xx. yere, & dyd euell in the syght of the Lorde, and turned not away fro the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nabat, that made Israel synne. In the dayes of Pekah kyng of Israel, cam Thiglah Pileser king of Assiria, and toke Tion, Abel, Bethmaacha, Janoah, Kedes, Hazor, Gilead, Galile, and all the lande of Rephehail, and carped the away to Assiria.

6 And Hosca f sonne of Ela cōspired treason agaynst Pekah the sonne of Remaliabu and smote him, and slue him: and raygned in hys steade in the .xx. yere of Jothā the sōne of Uziabū. The rest of the wordes that concerne Pekah and all þ he dyd, beholde, they are wyrtten in the boke of the chronycles of the kynges of Israel.

The iij. yere of Pekah the sonne of Remaliabu kyng of Israel, beganne Jothā the sōne of Uziabū kyng of Iuda to raygne. Hys name and tētye yere olde was he when he began to raygne: and he raygned sytē yere in Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ierusa the daughter of Zadok. And he dyd þ which is ryght in the syght of the Lorde: eue accordyng to all as dyd his father Uziabū, so dyd he. But the hylaulters were not put away: for the people offered & burnt incense still in the hylaulters: he buyt the hyther doze of the house of the Lord. The rest of the wordes that concerne Jotham, and all that he dyd, are they not wyrtten in the boke of þ chronycles of the kynges of Iuda. In those dayes the Lorde beganne to sende into Iuda, Rezin the kyng of Siria, and Pekah the sonne of Remaliabu. And Jotham slepe w his fathers, & was buryed with hys fathers in the cytie of Dauid hys father, and Ahaz hys sonne raygned his steade.

¶ The .xvi. Chapter.

¶ Ahaz kyng of Iuda consecrated hys sonne in fyre, and had many battayles agaynst the kyng of Israel. In the steade of Ahaz raygned Hezekia his sonne.

7 The .xvii. yere of Pekah f sonne of Remaliabu kyng of Israel, Ahaz the sonne of Jotham kyng of Iuda, beganne to raygne. Twentye yere olde was he, whē he was made kyng:

and raygned sytē yere in Ierusalem, and dyd not that which was ryght in the eyes of the Lorde hys God, lyke Dauid his father. But walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, yee, and made * hys sonne to go to rowe the fyre, after the abhomyneacions of the heythē, whom the Lorde cast out before the chyldzen of Israel. And he offered & burnt incense in the hylaulters, and on the hylls, & vnder euery thyck tree. * The Rezin kyng of Siria, and Pekah sonne of Remaliabu kyng of Israel came vp to Ierusalem to fyght. And they fought agaynst Ahaz, but could not ouercome hym. At the same tyme Rezin kyng of Siria brought Elath agaynst to Siria, and ryd the Jewes thēre. And the Sirians * came to Elath, and dwelt thēre in vnto this daye.

So Ahaz sent messengers to Thiglah Pileser kyng of Assiria, sayinge: I am thy seruauit and thy sonne, come vp and deliuer me out of the hande of the kyng of Siria, & out of the hande of the kyng of Israel, which ryse vp agaynst me. And Ahaz toke the syuer and the golde þ was founde in the house of the Lorde, and in the treasures of the kynges house, and sent a rewarde to the kyng of Assiria. * And the kyng of Assiria contented vnto hym. For the kyng of Assiria wē vp agaynst Damasco. And when he had taken it, he carped the people awaye to Ryz, and slue Rezin.

And kyng Ahaz went to Damasco, to mete Thiglah Pileser king of Assiria. And when kyng Ahaz sawe an autler that was at Damasco, he sent to Uria the preaste the paterne of the autler, & the fassyon of it, and all the woorkmanshyyp therof. And Uria the preast made an autler in all poyntes lyke to the paterne which kyng Ahaz had sent from Damasco: euen so dyd Uria the preast make it, agaynst kyng Ahaz cam from Damasco. And so, when the kyng was come from Damasco, he sawe the autler, and the kyng wēt to it, & offered therō. And he burnt his burnt offryng, and hys meat offryng, and powdered hys bynck offryng: and spynckled the bloude of hys peace offrynges besyde þ autler, þ was by þ brasen autler which was before the Lorde, and set it wout the temple betwene the alter and the temple of the Lorde: and put it on the northsyde of the altare.

And kyng Ahaz commaunded Uria the preaste, and sayd: vpon the greete autler sit on fyre in the moynyng the burnt offryng, & in the euen the meat offryng, and the kyngs burnt sacrifice & his meat offryng, wyth the burnt offryng of all the people of the lande, and they meat offryng, & they bynck offrynges: & powze therby all the blond of the sacrifice offrynges. But þ brasen autler wē I come and se. And Uria the preast dyd as he sayd.

And conyng to all thynges as kyng Ahas conmaunded him. * And kyng Ahas brake the fydes of the botomes, and toke the lauer fro of them, and toke downe the lauatoz from of the brysen oren that were vnder it, & put it vpon a pauemēt of stoness. And the weyle for the dabboth (that they had made in the house) & the kynges entrey without turned be to the house of the Lorde for (fear of) the kyng of Assyria. The reste of the wordes y concerne Ahas, what he dyd, are they not wyttyn in the boke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda? And Ahas slepte wyth his fathers, and was buryed wyth his fathers in the cytye of Dauid: and heze kiah his sonne raygned in his steade.

The .xvii. Chapter.

Holsea kyng of Israel is taken. And he and all his familie brought to the Assyrians.

In the .xii. yere of Ahas kyng of Iuda, began holsea the sonne of Eglia to raygne in Samaria vpo Israel. ix. yere, and dyd y whych was euell in y syght of the Lord, but not as the kynges of Israel that were before him. And Salmanasar kyng of Assiria came vp agaynst him, and holsea became his seruauant, and gaue hym presentes. And the kyng of Assyria founde treason in hosea: for he had sent messengers to So kyng of Egypte, and brought no presente vnto y kyng of Assyria, from yere to yere: and therfore the kyng of Assyria toke hym: and put hym in pylson. * And then the kyng of Assyria came vp thowow out all the lande, & gat vp agaynst Samarya, & beseged it thre yere. In the nyth yere of holsea, the kyng of Assyria toke Samaria, and carped Israel away vnto Assyria, and put them in bala, in haboz by the ryuer of Goza, and in cyties of the Medes. For it came to passe, that the chyldzen of Israel synned agaynst the Lorde theyr God, whyche had brought them out of the lande of Egypt, from vnder the hande of pharao kyng of Egypte and fired other goddes. And they walked in the ceremonies of the heathen, whom the Lorde cast out before the chyldzen of Israel, & in the ceremonies which the kynges of Israel had made. And the chyldze of Israel went about to hyde those thynges that were not well, fro the Lorde theyr God. And they buylte them hyll autters in all theyr cyties, bothe in the townes where they kept watche, and also in the strong townes. And they made the ymages and groues in euery hye hyll, and vnder euery thych tree. And ther they burnt incense in all the hyll autters as dyd y hetthen: whom the Lorde carped awaye before them, and wrought wyched thynges to angre y Lorde withall: for they serued moost vyle ydolles, whereof the Lorde had sayd vnto them.

* Yet shall dono suche thyng.

And the Lorde testifed in Israel and in Iuda by all the prophetes and by all y sears sayinge: * Turne from your wyched wayes and kepe my commaundementes and my statures, accordyng to all the lawe which I comaunded your fathers, and whiche I sent to you by my seruantes the prophetes. Not-withstandyng, they wolde not heare, * but rather hardened theyr neckes lyke to y stubburnesse of their fathers that dyd not vplene in the Lorde their God. For they refused his statutes, and his appoyntmēt that he made with theyr fathers, and the witnesses (wder with he wytnessed vnto the) & they folowed vanyte, and became vayne, and went after the hethe that were rounde about them: concerning whom the Lorde had charged them, that they shulde not do like them. But they left the comaundementes of the Lorde theyr God, and made them ymages of metal: euen two calves: and made ydol groues, and worshypped all the hoste of heauen, and serued Baal. * And they sacrificed theyr sonnes & theyr daughters in fyre, and used witchcraft and enchauntmentes, euen sellyng them sel-ues to worke wychednesse in the sight of the Lorde, and to angre hym.

And the Lorde was creadyge wroth w Israel and put them out of his syght, * that there was left but the trybe of Iuda onelye.
Neuerthelesse, Iuda also kept not the commaundementes of the Lorde theyr God, but walked in the ceremonies of Israel, whiche they made. And the Lorde cast vp all the seed of Israel, and vered them, and deliuered the into the handes of spoylers, vntill he had cast them out of his syght. For Israel cryped them selues from the house of Dauid, & made them a kyng, euen Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat. And Jeroboam drewe Israel awaye, (that they shulde not folowe the Lorde) and made them synne a great synne. For the childzen of Israel walked in all the synnes of Jeroboam which he did, and departed not ther from, vntyll the Lorde put Israel away out of his syght, as he had sayd by all his seruau-tes the prophetes. And so was Israel carped awaye out of theyr owne lande to Assyria, euen vnto this daye.

And the kyng of Assyria brought men from Babylon, from Cutha, from Aua, fro hanath, and fro Sepharname, and put the in the cyties of Samaria, in steede of y chyl-dzen of Israel. And they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cyties therof. And it fortun-ed, that at the begynnyng of theyr dwellyng there, they feared not the Lorde. And y Lorde sent ypons amonge them, whiche slue them. Wherefore, men sayde to the kyng of Assyria. The nations whiche thou hast trasnot the lawe of the God of the land, therfore he hath sent Lyons vpon them: and beholde they slep them, because they knowe not the maner of worshipping of God of the lande.

Then the kyng of Assyria commaunded sayeng: cary thither one or twayne of the preastes, whom ye brought thence, and let them go, and dwell there, and teache them the sayyon howe to serue the God of the cōtre. And then one of the preastes whiche they had carped thence came, and dwelte in Bethel, and taught them howe they shulde feare the Lord. Howbeit euery nacion made them Gods of theyr owne and put them in the houses of the hylaulters which the Samaritans had made, euery nacyon in theyr cyties wherin they dwelt. The men of Babylon made Socoth Benoth: and the men of Euth made Aergal: and the me of Hamath made Asima. The Auites made Abbaz, and Tharthak. And the Sepharmites burnt theyr chyldren in fyre for Adramelech and Anamelech, the Gods of Sepharuaim. And so they feared the Lord, and made the preastes of the hylaulters, whiche sacrificed for them in the houses of the hylaulters. And so they feared the Lord, and serued theyr owne Gods after the maner of the people, whom they carped thence.

And vnto this day they do after the olde maner, and nether fear God, nether do after theyr ordynaunces and customes, and after the lawe and commaundement whiche the Lord commaunded the chyldren of Jacob, who be called Israel. And the Lord made an appoyntment wyth them and charged them, sayeng: * feare none other Gods, nor howe your selues to them, nor serue the nor sacrifice to them: but feare the Lord which brought you out of the land of Egypte with greate power and a stretched out arme: hym feare, and to him bowe, and to hym do sacrifice. The statutes, ordynaunces, lawe and commaundement which he wrote for you, se that ye be diligent to do for euermore, & fear not any other goddes. And the appoyntment that I haue made with you, se ye forget not and feare none other goddes: but the Lord your God ye shall feare, and he shall deliuer you out of the handes of all your enemyes. Howbeit, they dyd not herken, but dyd after theyr olde custome. And so these nacions feared the Lord, and serued theyr ymages also lyke as dyd theyr chyldren and theyr chyldrens chyldren. Euen as dyd theyr fathers, so do they vnto this day.

The xviii. Chapter.

¶ Hezekia kyng of Iuda putted downe the brasen serpent, and destroyed the ydolls. Salmanafer dyngeth Israel to the Assyrians. The diasperryng of Sennacherib or Sennacherib.

In the thyrde yere of Hosea sonne of Ela kyng of Israel it came to passe, that Hezekia the sonne of Abaz kyng of Iuda dyd reygne. * He was and fyue yere olde was he, when he began to reygne, and reigned xxix. yere in Ierusalem. His mothers name also was Abi the daughter of zacharia, & he dyd that which is right in the syght of the Lord accordyng to al that dyd Dauid his father. * He put away the hylaulters, and brake the ymages & cut downe the groues, and all to brake the ydols as he sawe that Moses had made. For vnto those dayes the chyldren of Israel dyd burne sacrifice to it, and he called it Ahabas. He trusted in the Lord God of Israel, so that after hym was none lyke hym amonge all the kynges of Iuda, nether were there any lyke before hym. For he claue to the Lord, and departed not from hym, but kepte hys commaundementes, whiche the Lord commaunded Moses. And the Lord was with him, so that he prospered in all thynges whiche he toke in hande. And he rebelled agaynst the kyng of Assyria, and serued hym not. He smote the Philistines euen vnto Gaza and the coastes therof, both castelles where they kepte watches, and stronge cyties.

* And in the fourth yere of kyng Hezekia, (which was the seuenth yere of Hosea sonne of Ela kyng of Israel) it fortuned that Salmanazar kyng of Assyria came vp agaynst Samaria, and beleged it. And after thre yeres they toke it eue in the fyfte yere of Hezekia: that is to saye, the fyfte yere of Hosea kyng of Israel. And Samaria was wonne. And the kyng of Assyria, dyd cary away Israel vnto Assyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the ryuer of Gozan, and in the cyties of the Medes: because they wolde not herken vnto the voyce of the Lord theyr God: but transgressed hys appoyntment, and all that Moses the seruaunte of the Lord commaunded, and wolde nether heare them nor do them.

* Therefore in the xliii. yere of kyng Hezekia dyd Sennacherib kyng of Assyria come vp agaynst all the stronge cyties of Iuda, and toke them. And Hezekia kyng of Iuda sent to the kyng of Assyria to Lachis, sayeng: I haue offended: departte from me, and me, and all that I puttest on me, that wyl I beare. And the kyng of Assyria appoynted vnto Hezekia kyng of Iuda thre hundred talentes of syluer, & thyrty talentes of gold

* And Hezekia gaue hym all the syluer that was founde in the house of the Lorde, & in the treasures of the kynges house. At the same season dyd Hezekia rente of the doores of the temple of the Lorde and the pylers (which the sayde Hezekia kyng of Iuda had couered ouer) & gaue the to the kyng of Assyria

And the kyng of Assyria sente Tharthan and Rablaris and Rablake fro Lachis to kyng Hezekia with a great hoste agaynst Jerusalem. And they went vp, and came to Jerusalem, and gat the vp, and stode by the conduyte of the vpper poole which is in the way of the fullers felde. And whan they had called to the kyng, there came out to them.

* Eliakim the sonne of Elia whiche was swarder of household, and Sobna the scribe, and Joab the sonne of Asaph, the recorder. And Rablake sayde vnto them: Tel ye Hezekia I pray you: thus sayeth the great kyng euen the kyng of Assyria: what confidence is this that thou hast? Dost thou speake suche a lyght worde in dede? By counceill & power I wyl be ready to make warre. On whom then dost thou trust, that thou rebellest agaynst me? Dost thou trust to the staffe of this broken reede Egypte, on which if a man leane, it wyl go into his hande, and pearce it? Euen so is Pharao kyng of Egypte vnto al that truste on hym. * If ye saye vnto me, we truste in the Lorde our God: Is not that he whose pylalters and his other alters Hezekia hath put downe, and hath sayde to Iuda and Jerusalem, ye shall worshyp befoze this altar here in Jerusalem.

Howe therfore deliuer the wardes to my lorde & kyng of Assyria, & ye rebell not, and I wyl deliuer the two thousande hoyses, if thou be able to set ryders vpon them: why thynkest thou scozne at the presence of one of the least Dukes of my masters seruantes, and trustest to Egypt for charettes and horsemen? Doreouer, am I come nowe with out the bydding of the Lorde to thys place, to destroy it? the Lorde sayd to me: go vp to this lande, and destroy it. And Eliakim the sonne of Helkia and Sobna, and Joab sayd vnto Rablake: speake (I praye the) to thy seruantes in the Assyrians language, for we vnderstande it: and talke not with vs in the Iewes tonge, in feares of thys people that are on the wall. An Rablake sayd vnto the: hath my master sente me to thy master and the, to speake these wordes? hath he not set me because of the men which spt on the wal, that they maye eate theyr owne donge, and synche theyr owne pylle with you?

And so Rablake stode, and cryed with a lowde voyce in the Iewes language, and spake sayeng: heare the sayeng of the greate kyng of Assyria. Thus sayeth the kyng: let not Hezekia begyle you, for he shall not be able to deliuer you out of myne hand: nether let Hezekia make you to trust in the Lorde, sayeng: the Lorde shall surely deliuer vs, and this cytie shall not be geue ouer into my hande of the kyng of Assyria. Herken not vnto Hezekia, for thus sayeth the kyng of Assyria.

Deale kyndely with me, and come out to me. And then eate euery man of hys owne vyne, and of hys owne fygge tree, & synche euery man of the water of his owne wel, tyll I come, and sette you to as good a lande as youres is: a lande of corne and wyne, a land of breade and vyneyardes, a lande of oyle, of olyue trees, and of honny: that ye maye lyue, and not dye. And herken not vnto Hezekia, for he begyleth you, sayeng: the Lorde shall deliuer vs. * Hath euery one of the Gods of the nations deliuered his lande, out of the hande of the kyng of Assyria? where is the God of Hamath, & of Arphad? and where is the God of Sepharnaim, Hena & Iua? dyd they deliuer Samaria out of myne hande, and what God is amonge all the goddes of the nacyns, that hath deliuered hys lande out of myne hande. Shall the Lorde deliuer Jerusalem out of myne hande?

But they that were of the people healde theyr peace, and answered not him a worde: for the kyng had comaunded, sayeng: and were him not. Then Eliakim which was the swarder of household, and Sobna the scribe, and Joab the sonne of Asaph the recorder, came to Hezekia with theyr clothes rent, and tolde him the wordes of Rablake.

The xix. Chapter.

The Angel of the Lorde kylled an hundred fourty scoze & foure thousande men of the Assyrians, Sen: necherib is kylled of hys owne sonnes.

So it came to passe, & when kyng Hezekia hearde it, he rent his clothes, and put on sacke, and came into the house of the Lorde, and sent Eliakim whiche was the swarder of household, and Sobna the scribe, and the elders of the prestes clothed in sacke, to Ilay the prophete the sonne of Amoz. And they sayde vnto hym, thus sayeth Hezekia thys dape is a dape of trybulacion and of rebuke and blasphemie. For the chyliden are come to the byrd, and there is no strenght to be deliuered. Peraduenture the Lorde thy God wyl heare al the wordes of Rablake, whom the kyng of Assyria his master hath sent, to rayle on the luyng God, and to rebuke him with wordes, whiche the Lorde thy God hath hearde: And lyfte thou vp thy prayer for the remnaunt that are left. So the seruantes of kyng Hezekia came to Ilay: And Ilay woypppyng Aisroch hys God, Abimelech and Sarelar hys owne sonnes smote him with the swearde. And they escaped into the lande of Armenia: and Aisrochaddon his sonne reygned in his steade.

The. xx. Chapter.

Hezekia is sycke, and receyvethe the sygne of his healeth. He receyvethe rewardes of Benodach, and is reprehended of Ilay because he shewed hym the treasure. He dyeth and Manasse hys sonne reygnech in hys steade.

ABout that tyme * was Hezekia sycke vnto þe death. And the prophete Ilay þe sonne of Amos came to him, and sayd vnto him. Thus sayeth the Lorde: put thyne housholde in an ordre, for thou shalt dye, and not lyue. And Hezekia turned his face to the wal, & prayd vnto the Lorde, sayeng: I beseeche the nowe, O Lorde, remembre howe I haue walked before the in trueth and wyth a perfect hert, and haue done that whiche is good in thy syght, and Hezekia wepte sore.

And it fortuneth that afore Ilay was gone out into the myddle of the courte, the worde of the Lorde came to hym, sayeng: turne agayne, and tell Hezekia the captayne of my people: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Dauid thy father: I haue herde thy prayer, and sene thy teares. And beholde, I will heale the, so that on the thyrde day thou shalt go vp into the house of the Lorde. And I will adde vnto thy dayes yet fyftene yere, and will deliuer the & this cytie out of the hand of the kyng of Assyria, and wyl defende this cytie for mine owne sake, and for Dauid my seruauntes sake. And Ilay sayde. Take a lompe of fygges. And they toke and layed it on the soze, and he recovered.

And Hezekia sayd vnto Ilay. What shall be the sygne, that the Lorde wyl heale me, & that I shall go vp into the house of the Lorde the thyrde daye? Ilay answered: thyne sygne shall thou haue of the Lorde, that the Lorde wyl do that he hath spoken. * Shall the shadowe go forwarde ten degrees, or go backe agayne ten degrees? Hezekia answered: it is a lyght thyng for the shadowe to go downe ten degrees. (neither is that my desyre.) but if the shadowe go backwarde ten degrees, it is no lyght thyng. And Ilay the prophete called vnto the Lorde, * and he brought þe shadowe ten degrees backwarde by whiche it had gone downe in the dyall of Ahas.

The same season Berodach Baladan the sonne of Baladach kyng of Babilon sent letters and a preser vnto Hezekia, for he had hearde howe that Hezekia was sycke. And Hezekia was glad of them, and shewed the all his treasure house spuler, golde, odoures, precious opynente, all the house of hys armour, and all that was founde in hys treasures: there was nothyng in hys house, & in al his realme, that Hezekia shewed the not.

And Ilay the prophete came vnto kyng Hezekia, and sayde vnto him. What sayde thele men, and from where came they to the? And Hezekia sayde: they be come from a far country, euen from Babilon. And he sayde agayne: what haue they sene in thy house? Hezekia answered: all the thynges that are in my house haue they sene: there is nothyng among my treasures, that I haue not shewed them. And Ilay sayde vnto Hezekia: heare the worde of the Lorde: Beholde, the dayes come, that all that is in thy house, and what soeuer thy fathers haue layd vp in store vnto this daye * shall be carryed into Babilon, and nothyng shall be left sayeth the Lorde. And of thy sonnes (that shall procede out of the, and whiche thou shalt beget) shall they take away, and they shall be chambelaynes in the palace of the kyng of Babilon. And Hezekia sayde vnto Ilay: welcome be the worde of the Lorde which thou hast spoken: And he sayde: shall there not be peace and truth in my dayes?

The remnaunte of the wordes that concerneth Hezekia, and all hys power, and howe he made a pole and a conduyte, and brought water into the cytie, are they not wyrtten in the booke of the chronicles of the kynges of Iuda: * And Hezekia slepte with hys fathers, * and Manasse hys sonne reygned in hys steade.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Manasse reioyced agayne the idollers and after dyeth, in whose steade hys sonne Sennacherib, which is called of hys owne seruauntes, after hym reygnech sayethfull Josia, whom we bise to call Josias, or Josiab.

Manasse * was twelue yere olde, I when he began to reygne and reygned fyfte and fyue yere in Ierusalem: hys mothers name also was Hephziba. And he dyd euell in the syght of the Lorde, euen after the abhominacions of the hethen whom the * Lord cast out before the children of Israel. For he wote and buyt vp the hylaulcers, * whiche Hezekia his father had destroyed. And he reared vp alters for Baal, and made Idolgroues (as dyd Ahas kyng of Israel,) and worshipped all the hoste of heauen, and serued them. And he buyt alters in the house of the Lorde of whiche the Lorde sayde: * in Ierusalem wyl I put my name. And he buyt alters for all the hoste of heauen, euen in two courttes of the house of the Lorde. * And he offered hys sonnes in fyre, and gaue hede vnto wychecraftre and sozcery, and maynteyned workmen with spyetes, and trillers of fortynes: and brought muche wychednesse in the syght of the Lorde to angre hym.

And he put an ymage of a grone (that he had made) euen in the temple, of whiche the Lorde had sayde to Dauid and Salomon his sonne, * in this house and in Ierusalem (which (whiche I haue chosen out of all trybes of Israel) Wyl I put my name for euer. Neither wyl I make the fete of Israel moue any moare out of the lande, whiche I gaue theyr fathers: so that they wyl obserue and do all that I haue commaunded them, and accordyng to all the lawe that my seruaunt Moses commaunded them. But they herkened not: and Manasse led them out of the waye to do moze wyckedly then dyd the heathen people, whom the Lord destroyed befoze the chyldren of Israel.

And the Lord spake by his seruantes the prophetes, sayeng: because Manasse kyng of Iuda hath done suche abominacions, and hath wrought moze wyckedly then all that the Amoytes (which were befoze hym) dyd: I hath made Iuda synne also with hys ydols. Therfoze thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel. Beholde, I wyl bringe suche euyl vpon Ierusalem and Iuda, that whoso heareth of it both his eares shall tynge. And I wyl stretche ouer Ierusalem the squarenglynne of Samaria, and the plummet of the house of Ihab. And I wyl wypp out Ierusalem, as a man wyppeth a dish, and when he hath wypped it, touneth it vpon syde downe. And I wyl leaue the remnaunt of myne inheritaunce, and deliuer them into the hand of theyr enemies, and they shalbe robbed & spoyled of al theyr aduersaries: euen because they haue done euell in my syght, and haue angered me, sence I tyme theyr fathers came out of Egypte vnto this day.

And Manasse shed innocent bloude excedyng muche, tyll he replenished Ierusalem from corner to corner, beside his synne wherewith he made Iuda to synne, and to do euell in the syght of the Lord.

The rest of the wordes that concerne Manasse, and all that he dyd, and his synne that he synned, are they not wyrtten in the boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Iuda? And Manasse slepte with hys fathers, and was buried in his owne house, euē in the garden of Elza: & Amon his sone reygned in his steade.

* Amon was. xii. yere olde when he began to reygne, and he reygned two yere in Ierusalem. Hys mothers name also was Hesulmeth the daughter of Harum of Iotba. And he dyd euell in the syght of the Lord (as his father Manasse dyd,) and walked in all the waye & his father walked in: & serued the ydols & hys father serued, & worshipped the. And he forsoke the Lord God of his fathers, & walked not in the waye of the Lord.

And the seruantes of Amon conspyred agaynst hym, and slue the kyng in hys owne house. And the people of the lande slue all the that had conspyred agaynst kyng Amon, and the people made Iolia hys sone kyng, in hys steade. The rest of the wordes that concerne Amon, what thynges he dyd, are they not wyrtten in the boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Iuda? And they buried hym in hys sepulchre, in the garden of Elza: and Iolia his sone reygned in his steade.

The. xxi. Chapter.

After Iolia hearde of the boke of the lawe that was founde in the temple, he sendeth to Shaphan the prophete for counsell.

Iolia was * eyght yere olde when he began to reygne, and he reygned. xxi. yere in Ierusalem. Hys mothers name also was Iehia the daughter of Adia of Bozath. He dyd that which is ryght in the syght of the Lord and walked in all the wayes of Daud hys father, and bowed nether to the ryght hande nor to the left.

* And it came to passe, that in the. xxi. yere of the reygne of kyng Iolia, the kyng sent Shaphan the sone of Azalia the sone of Mesulā the scribe, to the house of the Lord, sayeng: * go vp to Helkia the prest, that he may summe the syluer which is brought into the house of the Lord, which the keepers of the porte haue gathered of the people, and let them deliuer it into the hande of them that do the worke, and that haue the ouersyght of the house of the Lord: and let them geue it to them that worke in the house of the Lord (to repaie the decayed places of the temple,) euen vnto carpenters and masons, and workers vpon the walles, and for to buy tymber and free stone to repaie the temple howbeit, let no rekenyng be made with the of the money that is deliuered into theyr hande, for theyr vse is to deale faythfully.

* And Helkia the prest prest layde vnto Shaphan the scribe: I haue founde the boke of the lawe in the house of the Lord, and Helkia gaue the boke to Shaphan, and he read it. And Shaphan the scribe came to the kyng, and brought hym worde agayne, and sayde: thy seruantes haue bestowed money (that was founde in the temple) & haue deliuered it vnto them that do the worke, and that haue the ouersyght of the house of the Lord. And Shaphan the scribe shewed the kyng, sayeng: Helkia the prest hath deliuered me a boke. And Shaphan red in it befoze the kyng.

And it fortuned, that when the kyng had harde the wordes of the boke of the lawe, he rent his clothes. And the kyng commaunded Helkia the prest, & Ahikam the sone of Shaphan, and Achboz the sone of Michaia, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asabia a seruante of the kynges, sayeng: * go ye and enquire of the Lord for me and for the people, and for all Iuda, concernyng the wordes of this boke that is founde. So helkia the hie preaste and Ahikam, Achbor, and Saphan, and Asaphia went vnto Hulda the prophetesse the wyfe of Sullā the sonne of Chikua the sonne of Barkam keeper of the wardrobe: whyche prophetesse dwelt in Jerusalem in the house of the doctrine, and they communed with her. And she answered them: thus sayth the Lord God of Israel. Tell the man that sent you to me: thus sayth the Lord: beholde, I wyl bypnyng euell vpon thys place, and on the inhabitants thereof: (euell al the wordes of the booke which I kyng of Iuda hath red) because they haue forsaken me, and haue burnt incense vnto other gods, to angre me with al the workes of theyr handes: My wrath also shalbe kindled agaynst thys place, and shall not be quenched.

But to the kyng of Iuda (whiche sente you to aske counsell of the Lord,) so shal ye say: thus saith the Lord God of Israel, as touchyng the wordes whiche ye haue heard: Because thynne herte dyd melle, and because thou hast humbled thy self before me the Lord when thou heardest what I spake agaynst thys place, and agaynst the inhabitants of the same (howe that they shuld be destroyed and accursed:) and hast rent thy clothes and wepte before me: of that also haue I heard, sayth the Lord. Beholde therfore, I wyl receyue the vnto thy fathers, and thou shalt be put into thy graue in peace, & thynne eale shall not se all the euell, which I wyl bypnyng vpon thys place. And they brought the king home agayne.

¶ Josia readeth Deuteronomie before the people. He putte downe the ydols, after he had killed the preastes therof. He kepte passouer. He was killed in the agedde, and his sonne Jehoahaz reigned in his stede. After he was takē, his sonne Jehoiakim was made kyng.

¶ And then the kyng sent, and there gathered vnto him al the elders of Iuda and of Jerusalem. And the kyng went vnto the house of the Lord, with all the men of Iuda and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, with the preastes, and prophetes and all the people bothe small and greete. And he red in the eares of them all the wordes of the booke of the couenaunt, which was founde in the house of the Lord. And the kyng stode by a pyller * and made a couenaunt before the Lord, that they shulde walke after the Lord, and kepe his commaundmentes, his wytnesses, & his statutes with all theyr herte, and al theyr soule, and make good the wordes of the sayde appoyntment that were wrytten in the forsayd booke. And al the people consented to the appoyntment.

And the kyng commaunded helkia the hie preaste, and the inferiour preastes and the keepers of the ornaments, to bypnyng out of the temple of the Lord, all the vessels that were made for Baal, for the ydole groues & for al the holte of heauē. And he burnt them without Jerusalem in the felde of Cedron, and carped the ashes of them into Bethel. And he put downe & ministers of Baal whom the kynges of Iuda had founded to burne incense in the * hylaulteres and cyties of Iuda, that were rounde aboute Jerusalem, and also them that burnt incense vnto Baal, to the sonne, to the mone, to the planetes, and to all the holte of heauen. And he brought out the groue from the temple of the Lord without Jerusalem vnto the broke Cedron, and burnt it there at the broke Cedron, and stampte it to poudre, and cast the dust thereof vpon the graues of the chyldren of the people. And he brake downe the celles of the male stues which were by the house of the Lord, where the women wou hangynges for the ydole groue.

And he brought all the preastes out of the cyties of Iuda, and despoiled the hylaulteres, where the preastes had burnt incense: euen from Geba to Beerseba, and destroyed the aulteres of the gates, that were in the enterpyng in of the gate of Josua the gouernour of the cytie which were (as a man goeth in) on the left hande of the gate of the cytie. Neuertheles the preastes of the hylaulteres came not vp to the aulter of the Lord in Jerusalem, saue onely they dyd eate of the swete breade amonge theyr brethren.

And he despoiled * Topheth, which is in the valey of the chyldren of Hinnom, because no man shulde offere hys sonne or hys daughter in fyre to Moloch: he put downe the hozles that the kynges of Iuda had geuen to the sonne at the enterpyng in of the house of the Lord, by the chambre of Nathanmelech the chamberlayne which was ruler of the suburbes, and burnt the charettes of the sone with fyre. And the aulter that were on the toppe of the parlour of Ahaz (which the kynges of Iuda had made) and the * aulter which Nabasse had made in the two courtes of the house of the Lord, dyd the kyng breake downe, and ranne thence, and caste the dust of them into the broke Cedron.

And the hylaulteres that were before Jerusalem on the right hande of the mount Olivete * (which Salomon the kyng of Israel had buylded for Asarothe the ydol of the zydons, and for Chamos the ydol of the Moabites, and for Milchom the abhominable ydoll of the chyldren of Ammon) those the kyng despoiled: and brake the ymages, and cut downe the ydol groues, and fylled theyr places with the bones of men.

And as Josia turned him selfe, he spied the graues that were in the mount, and sent and fet the bones out of the graues, and burnt them vpon the aluter, to polute it, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde that the man of God proclaimed * which tolde the same wordes.

Then he sayde: what graue stone is ponder that I se? And the men of the cytie tolde hym, it is the sepulchre of the man of God, whiche came from Iuda, and tolde the selfe same thynges that thou hast done to the aluter of Bethel. And he sayd let him be: se that no man moue his bones. And so hys bones were laued with the bones of a prophet that came out of Samaria.

And all the houses of the hylaulters in the cyties of Samaria whiche the kyng of Israel had made, to angre ^{on} (the Lorde) with all: those Josia put out of the waye, and dyd to them accordyng to al the actes that he had done in Bethel. The rest of the wordes that concerne Josia and all that he dyd, are they not written in the boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Iuda?

And Pharaos Aecho put hym in bandes at Ribla in the lande of Hamath, that he shulde not raygne in Ierusalem, and put the lande to a trybut of an hundred talents of syluer and a talent of golde. And Pharaos Aecho made Eliakim the sonne of Josia kyng in the rowme of Josia his father, and chaunged hys name to Jehoakim, and toke Jehoahaz awaye, whiche when he came to Egypte dide there.

And Jehoakim gaue the syluer and the golde to Pharaos: & taxed the lande, to geue the money accordyng to the request of Pharaos: requyrynge of euery man (accordyng to theyr habilitie) syluer and golde: euen of the people of the lande, to geue vnto Pharaos Aecho. And of the same fasson was the seconde pyller, wyth a wyethen woike.

E And the chiefe captayne of f men of warre toke Saraiā the chiefe preast, and zephoniah the hyest preast saue one, and the thre keepers of the holy thynghes. And oute of the cytie he toke a chamberlayne, that had the ouersight of the men of warre, and. v. men of the that were euer in f kynges ptesence, whych were founde in the cytie: and him that was scribe to the captayne of the hoost, which brought out the people of the lāde to warre, and thre skore men of the people of the lande, f were founde in the cytie. And Gedalia swore to them and to the men whome they had wyth them, and sayd vnto the: feare not ye because ye are the seruauntes of the Caldees, dwell in the lande, and serue the kyng of Babilon and ye shalbe well.

G But it chaunced in the seuenth moneth, that Imael f sonne of Netania the sonne of Elisama, of the kynges bloude, came, and ten men wyth hym, and smote Gedalia, that he dyed: and so dyd he the Jewes and f Chaldees that were wyth hym at Mizpa. And al the people, both small and great, and the captaynes of warre arose, and came to Egypte, for they were afrayed of the Chaldees. Now wythstandynge yet in the seuen and thyrtye peare after Jehoachin kyng of Juda was carped awaye the seuen and twenty daye of the twelue moneth, Eulmerodach kyng of Babylon, the same yere that he beganne to rapgne, dyd lyfte vp the heade of Jehoachin kyng of Juda out of the pteson, and spake kyndelpe to hym, and let hym seate aboue the seate of the kynges that were wyth

Saul, & the archers founde him, and he was wounded of quaters. Then sayd Saul to hys wepō bearer * Dye the sword, and thrust me therowē therewith, that these vncircūcised come not & dye me shame. But his wepō bearer wolde not, for he feared exceedingly. So Saul caught a sword, and fel vpon it. And whē his harnes bearer sawe that Saul was deade, he fel on a sword also and dyed.

and with leftte & shote arrowes out of a bowe and were of Sauls brethren, euen of Beniamin. The chiefeest were Abiezer, and Joas the sonnes of Sima a Gibeonite, and Jeziel and Pelet the sonnes of Asmaneth. Be-

And of the Gadites there separated them selues, some vnto Dauid into the howles of the wyldernes, men of myght, and men apt for warre, and that could handle shylde and speare, whose faces were lyke the faces of Lions, and they were as swyfte as fflye in the mountaynes. Ezer the fyrst, Odias the seconde, and Eliab the thyrde, Walsmana the fourth, Jeremia the fyfth, Athai the syxth, Eliel the seuenth, Iohanan the eght, Eli bath the nyynth, Jeremia the tenth, and men of warre, the smale pursued an hundred, and the great a thousande. These are they that went ouer Iordan in the fyrst moneth whan he had fylled ouer all his banches. And they put to flyght all them of the valley both warde the East and weste.

And there came of the chyldren of Beniamin and Iuda to ſholde vnto Dauid. And Dauid went out to mete the and auerſed, and ſayd vnto them, if ye be come reaſonably vnto me, to helpe me, myne hert ſhalbe happy vnto you. But and yf you come to betraye me to myne aduerſaries (ſeyng there is no wickednes in myne handes) the God of our fathers loke theron and rebuke it. And the ſpirite came vpon Amasai whiche waſt chefe amonge thyzte, and he ſayde, thou art we Dauid, and on thy ſyde thou ſonne of Jeſai: Peace, peace be vnto the, and peace be to thyne healpers, for thy God is thy dealep. Then Dauid receyued them, and made them heades of companies of the men of warre.

And there fel some of Manasse to Dauid
When he came with the Philistines agaynst Saul to battell, * but they helped them not.
For the Lordes of the Philistines take visement and sent him away agayne saying he wyl fall to his mayster Saul to their pardon of our heades. As he went to philis-tine there fell to him of Manasse: Iona Ionidad, Jediel, Michael, Jozabad, Eliah and Jilthai, heades of the thousandes that were of Manasse. And they holpe Dauid agaynst the touners, for they were al myghty men of warre, and captaynes in the hoste. For that tyme there came one of hoste to Dauid daye by daye to deauple him: vntyll it was a greate hoste lyke the hoste of God.

And this is the nobze of the chefe captaynes that were prepared to battell, and came to Dauid to Hebzon, to turne þe hyng of Saul to hym, accordyng to the worde of the Lozde.

The chyldren of Iuda that bare swyrd & speare were fyve thousande and eynghundred ready prepared to f warre. Of the chyldren of Simeon, men of myght to warre, seven thousande and one hundred. Of the chyldren of Levi, foure thousande and fyve hundred. And Jehoiada was the chefe of them of Aaron, and with hym thre thousande and seven hundred. And Zadock a poyng man strong and valeaunt & of his fathers housholde. xxi. captaynes. And of the chyldren of Ben Jamin the brethren of Saul, thre thousande. And a grete parte of them dyd (vnto that tyme) followe the house of Saul.

And of the chyldren of Ephraim. xx. thousand and eynghundred myghty men of warre and famous men in the housholde of theyr fathers. And of the halfe trybe of Manasse xvi. thousande whiche were appoynted by name to come and make Dauid kynge. And of the chyldren of Issacar, whiche were men of had vnderstandyng in the eynghete tyme, to knowe what to commaunde: what Israel ought to do. The herdes of them were two hundred and all they brethren were at theyr wyl. And of Zabul that went out to the battayle and proceeded forth to the warre, with all maner of instrumentes of warre, fifty thousand that were prepared to the warre, withoute any doubte of hert. And of Repphali a thousand captaynes, and with them (with whyle & speare) xxxvii. thousand. And of Dan prepared to battayle. xxviii. thousand & fyve hundred. And of Aser that went out to the war, and kept the forefront of the battayle fourtie thousand. And of fother trybe of Jordan, of Rubenites and Gadites, & of the halfe trybe of Manasse, with all maner of instrumentes of warre, an hundred & twenty thousande.

All these were men of warre keepyng the forefront of the battayle with perfect hert, & came to Hebron to make Dauid kynge ouer all Israel. And all the reste of Israel was of one accord, to make Dauid king. And there they were with Dauid thre dayes, eatyng & drynkynge: for they brethren had prepared for them. Moreover, they that were nye the, vnto Issacar, Zabul & Repphali, broughte byed on asses, camels: mules and oren, and meate, flour, fygges, reaspynges, wyne, and oyle, oren and shepe a boundauntly. For ther was lope in Israel.

¶ The. xlii. Chapter.

The arke is brought agayne from Kiriath Jarim to Jerusalem. Uza (whiche was called Uza) dyeth.

Ad Dauid counsayled with the captaynes of thousandes and hundredes, and with all the Lozdes, and sayde vnto all the congregacion of Israel, If it seme you good and to be of the Lozde our God, we wyll take and sende vnto our brethren that are left in all the lande of Israel, & with them also, to pierces and Leuites which are in theyr cyties and suburbs, to gather them togyther vnto vs. And we wyll byngne agayne the arke of the Lozde to vs: for we regarded it not in dayes of Saul. And al the congregaciō was content that he shulde do so, for the thyng seemed good in the eyes of all the people.

So Dauid gathered all Israel togyther from Sihor in Egypt, vnto the entrynge of Hemath, to byngne the arke of the Lozde fro Kiriath Jarim. And Dauid went by and all Israel to an hye place towarde Kiriath Jarim, that was in Iuda, to set thence the arke of the Lozde God, that dwelleth betwene the Cherubes: where his name is called on. And they carped the arke of God in a newe carte, out of the house of Abinadab. And Uza and his brother guided the carte. And Dauid and all Israel, played befoze the arke of God w al theyr myght, with synng and harpes, psalteries, and tymbrels, and trompettes. And when they came vnto the chersyngne flooze of Chidon, Uza put forth his hande to holde the arke, for the oxen were a litle wyde from bled. And the Lozde was wroth with Uza, and smote hym, because he put his hande to the arke. And there he dyed befoze God. And Dauid was out of quyet, because the Lozde had rent a rent in Uza, & he called the name of that place: fletyng of Uza vnto this daye. And Dauid was afrayed of God that daye, sayyng: howe shal I bynge the arke of God home to me? And so Dauid brought not the arke home to him to the cite of Dauid: But caried it into the house of Obed Edom a Gethite. And the arke of God remayned with Obed Edom, euen in his house, thre moones. And f Lozde blessed the house of Obed Edom, and all that he had.

¶ The. xlii. Chapter.

Uziam sendeth worde and workemen to Dauid which hath two bytters of the Philistines.

Uziam the kynge of Tyze sent messengers to Dauid, and tymbre of Cedze trees, with masons and carpenters, to buylde hym an house. And Dauid perceyued that the Lozde had confirmed hym kynge vpon Israel, and that his kyngdome was lft vp on hye, because of his people Israel. And Dauid toke yet moo wyues at Jerusalem, and begat mo sonnes and daughters. These are the names of his chyldren, which were borne vnto hym at Jerusalem: Samua, Sobab, Nathan and Salomo Jibhar, Elisua, and Eliphalet, Hoga, Reppheg, and Japhia, Elisama, Beeliada, and Eliphalet.

And when the Philistines heard f Dauid was annoynted kynge vpon all Israel, al the Philistines

Philistines went up to seeke Dauid. And Dauid heard of it, and went out agaynst them. And the Philistines came in, & prauised thowre the valey of Rephaim. And Dauid asked counsaile at God, sayinge: Shall I go agaynst the Philistines, and wylte thou deliuer them into myne hande? And the Lord sayd vnto him: go vp, for I wyll deliuer them into thyne hand. And so they came vp to Baal Perazim, and Dauid smote them there. And Dauid sayde: God hath deuyded myne enemies w myne hande, as a man wolde deuyde water. And therfore they called the name of that place Baal Perazim. And whē they had lefte thei goddes there, Dauid gaue a commaundement, and they were burnt w fyre.

D And the Philistines came togyther agayne and rushted into the valley. And Dauid asked agayne at God. And God sayde to hym: go not vp after them, but turne away fro them that thou mayeste come vpon them, ouer agaynst the peretrees. And when thou hearest a sound go in the toppes of the peretrees, the go out to battayle: for God is gone forth before the, to smyte the host of the Philistines. Dauid therfore dyd as God commaunded him and they smote the hoste of the Philistines, from Gibeon to Gazer. And the fame of Dauid went out into all landes, and the Lord made all nations feare hym.

¶ The .xv. Chapter.

¶ The Leuites bringe the Arke agayne. Dauid dauncyng, before it is deliuered of his wyfe Michol.

AND Dauid made him houses in the cytie of Dauid, and prepared a place for the arke of God, spitched for it a tent. Then Dauid sayde: The arke of God ought not to be caried but of the Leuites. For them hath the Lord chosen to beare the arke of the Lord, and to compynstre vnto hym for euer. And Dauid gathered all Israel togyther to Jerusalem, to fetch the arke of the Lord, vnto his place which he had ordeyned for it. And Dauid brought togyther the chyldren of Aaron and the Leuites. Of the sonnes of Cahath was Uzziel the chefe, and of hys brethren there were an hundred and .xx. Of the chyldren of Merari, Asaia the chefe: and of his brethren two hundred and .xx. Of the sonnes of Gerson, Joel the chefe: and of his brethren an hundred and thyrtye. Of the chyldren of Elizapan, Semmaia the chefe: and of his brethren, two hundred. Of the sonnes of Merion, Eliel the chefe: and of his brethren, xxxij. Of the sonnes of Uzziel, Aminadab the chefe: and of his brethren an hundred and twelue.

B And Dauid called Zadock and Abiathar the preestes, and the Leuytes, Uzziel, Asaia, Joel, Semmaia: Eliel and Aminadab: & sayde vnto them: ye that are the principall fathers of the Leuites, se that ye be holy with poure brethren: that ye maye bringe in the arke of the Lord God of Israel, vnto the place that I haue prepared for it. For because ye were not there at the first, the Lord our God made a rent among vs, for that we sought him not as the fasson ought to be. So the preestes & the Leuites sanctified them selues: to set the arke of the Lord God of Israel. And the chyldren of the Leuites bare the arke of God vpon thei shoulters with stauces thereon, as Moyses commaunded, accordyng to the wyse of the Lord.

And Dauid spake to the chefe herdes of the Leuites, that they shuld appoynt certayn of thei brethren to syng with instruments of mulicke, psalteres, harpes and symbales that they myght make a sound, and to syng on hye with ioyfulnesse: And the Leuites appoynted heman the sonne of Joel: and (of thei brethren) Asaph the sonne of Berechia: and of the sonnes of Merari and of thei brethren, Ethan the sonne of Cusaihu. And with thei brethren of the second degree: zacharia Ben Jaziel: Semiramoth, Jehiel, Ammi, Eliab, Benaiahu, Maasiah, Mathathiah, Eliphalehu, Wikniahu, Obed Edd, & Jehi, porters. So heman, Asaph & Ethan the syngers made a sounde with symbales of hysh. And zacharia, Jziel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Ammi, Eliab, Maasiah & Banaiahu played with psalteres on an alamothe. Mathathiah, Eliphalehu, Wikniahu, Obed Edd, Jehiel and Azazah, played vpon harpes, as theyght aboue with courage. And Chenaniahu the chefe of the Leuites, was master of the songe, for he taught other to syng, because he was a man of vnderstandyng.

Berechia and Elcana kept the doore of the arke. And Decaniahu, Jehosaphat, Ammael, Amasai, zachariahu, Banaiahu & Ezer the preestes dyd blowe with trumpets before the arke of God. And Obed Edd & Jehia were keepers of the doore of the arke.

 And Dauid and the elders of Israel, and the capytaynes ouer thousandes went to fet the arke of the appoyntment of the Lord out of the house of Obed Edd with gladnes. And when God helped the Leuites that bare the arke of the appoyntment of the Lord, they offered seuen oxen, and seuen rammes. And Dauid had on hym a linnen garment, lyke as had also al the Leuites that bare the arke, and so had the syngers, and Chenaniah the ruler of the songe, with the syngers. And Dauid had vpon hym an Ephod of linnen. And all they of Israel brought the arke of the Lordes couenaunt with ioyfulnesse: and blowing of the spaume and trumpets, and kynging a noyse with symbales, psalteries and harpes.

And as the arke of the appoyntment of the Lord came into the cytie of Dauid, chol the daughter of Saul, lohyng out at a pyndowe, sa to hyng David daunsyng and playeng, and she delysed hym in her herte.

The xvi. Chapter.

David ordeyneth Asaph and his brethren, to minister befoze the Lorde. He hym selfe prayseth the Lorde God of Israel.

So they brought in the arke of God and set it in the myddes of the tent that David pyched for it. And they offered burnte sacrifices and peace offeringes befoze God. And whē Da-uid had made an ende of offering the burnte offeringes and peaceofferinges, he blessed the people in the name of the Lorde. And he deale to all Israel (both man and woman) a crachenel of breade, & a good pece of fleshe, and a flacker of wyne.

And he appoynted certeyn of the Levites to minister befoze the Lorde, & to repete, & to thanke and prayse the Lorde God of Israel.
And Asaph was the chiefe, & nexte to him Zacharia, Jehiel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Mattha-thia, Eliab, Benaia, * Obed Edom, & Jehiel with psalteries & harpes. But Asaph made a sonnde with symbales. Banaiah & Jabaziel pikes blew w trompettes continually befoze the Arke of the couenaunt of God.

And that same tyme David byd appoynt schely to thanke the Lorde, by Asaph and his brethren. * O geue thanks vnto the Lorde, call vpon his name, make his actes knowne amonge the people.

Syng vnto hym and playe vnto hym: take of all his wonderfull dedes. Reioyce in his holy name: let the hertes of them that see the Lorde, be glad. Seke the Lorde and his strength: seke his presence alway.

Remember his maruelles which he byd, and his wonders, & the Judgementes of his mouth. The sede of Israel are his seruauntes: the chyldren of Jacob are his chosen. He is the Lorde our God: in all landes are his judgementes. Thynde on his appoyntment for ever, (and on the woꝛde whiche he commaunded to a thousande generacions,) which he made with Abraham, and of his othe to Isaac: whiche he set befoze Jacob for a decre, and to Israel for an everlastyng con-uaunt, sayeng: to the wyl I geue the land of Canaan, to be the porcyon of your inheritaunce. When you were fewe and smalle in nombꝛe, and sojourners therein. And they walked from nacyon to nacyon, and fro one kyngdome to another people. He suffred no man to do them wronge: but rebuked, even kynges for theyꝛ sakes. Touche not myne a noynted, and do my prophetes no harme.

* Syng vnto the Lorde all the earth: and the we from day to day his saluacion.

* 10 Cal. Feb. 87

Tell of his glory amonge the brethren: his wonderfull dedes amonge all nacjons.

For greute is the Lorde, and woꝛthy to be prayled excreadyngly: he is to be feared aboue all Gods.

For all the Gods of the people are of no value: But the Lorde made heauen.

Prayle and honoure are in his presence:
strength and gladnes are in his place.

Ascribe vnto the Lorde ye kynredes of people, Ascribe to the Lorde, glory and dominion. Ascribe vnto the Lorde, the glory due vnto his name: byngne sacrifices, and come befoze hym, and woꝛshyp the Lorde with holy honour.

Let all the earth feare him, all though the compase of the earth be so stablyshed that it cannot be moued: let the heauens reioyce, and let the earth be glad, and let men tel among the nacjons, that the Lorde is kyng.

Let the see thunder and the fulnes therof let the felde reioyce, and all that is therein.

Then shall the trees of the wood reioyce at the presence of the Lorde, because he commeth to iudge the earth. O geue thanks vnto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercye endureth ever: and saye ye: saue vs (O God) of our saluacion, gather vs together, and deli-uer vs from amonge the heathen, that we may geue thanks to thy holy name, & triumphe in the praise of the. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for ever and ever, and let all people say Amen, and prayse the Lorde.

And so he sette there befoze the arke of the Lordes couenaunt, Asaph & his brethren, to minister befoze the arke continually, in such thynges as were to be done daye by daye, (and that by theyꝛ courses.) And Obed Edom & his brethren, the scoꝛe and eynge, and Obed Edom the sone of Jeduthun, and Hosa were apoynted to be porters. And Zadoch & yuell and his brethren & yuell, were befoze the tabernacle of the Lord, in the hye place & was at Gibeon, to offer burntofferinges vnto the Lord, vpon the burnt offering altare perpetually, in the moꝛnyng and euenyng, accor-dyng to all & which is wrytten in the lawe of the Lorde, which he commaunded Israel. And with them were Heman & Jeduthun, & other that were chose (whose names were expꝛessed) to geue thanks to the Lord, & his mercye lasteth ever. And with them did Heman and Jeduthun, syng wth the trumpettes and symbales symbales making a swete melody with instruments of Musycke and godly songes. And the sonnes of Jeduthun were porters. And all þe people departed, every man to hys house: & David returned to blesse hys house.

The. xviii. Chapter.

David is forbidden to buy an house unto the Lord. Which is prompted under the figure of Salomon.

¶ il. lxx. vii. a

And it fortuned that when David dwelt in hys house, he sayde to Nathan the prophete: lo, I dwell in an house of Cedar tree: but the Arke of the Lordes couenaunt remaineth vnder curtaynes. And Nathan sayd vnto David: do al that is thynne herte, for God is with the.

And the same nyght it fortuned that the worde of God came to Nathan, sayeng: go and tel David my seruauant, thus sayeth the Lord, thou shalt not buyde me an house to dwell in. For I haue dwelt in no house since the daye that I brought out the chyldren of Israel vnto thys daye: but haue gone from tent to tent, and from one habitacon to another. And whersoeuer I haue walked with all Israel, spake I neuer one worde to any of the iudges of Israel (whom I commaunded to fede my people,) sayeng: why haue ye not buyde me an house of Cedar tree? Nowether for, thus shalt thou saye vnto my seruauant David: thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: I toke the out of the pastures whan thou wast after shepe, that þu shouldest be capteyne ouer my peple Israel. And I haue bene with the whether foruer thou hast walked, & haue wedded out al thynne enemyes out of thy sight and haue made the a name, lyke the name of (of one) of the greatest men that are in the earth. And I haue ordeyned a place for my people Israel and made it faste, so that now they may dwell in theyr place, and moue no more. Afterward shall the chyldren of wychednes bere them any moare as at the begynnyng. And sence the tyme that I commaunded Iudges to be ouer my people Israel, I haue subdued all thynne enemyes, and I told the, that þe Lord wolde buyde the an house.

Chys also shall come to passe: when thy dayes be expired, that thou must go vnto thy fathers, I will raise vp thy seade after the whiche shalbe of thy sonnes, and I will prepare for him the kyngdome. He shall buyde me an house, and I will stablye hys seate for euer. I will be his father, and he shalbe my sonne, and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I toke it from him that was before the. But I will set hym in myne house and in my kyngdome for euer, and hys seate shalbe sure for euermore.

Accordyng to all these wordes, and accordyng to al this vision, dyd Nathan tel kyng David. And David the kyng came & sat before the Lord, & sayde: what am I (O Lord God,) and what is mine household, that thou hast promoted me thus farre? And yet thou seemest lytle in thynne eyes, O God: But thou hast also spoken of thy seruantes house in a greate whyple to come: and hast looked vpon me as vpon a man of hys degree (O Lord God.) What shal David desyre more of the for the honour of thy seruante? For thou hast known thy seruante: O Lord for thy seruantes sake, euen accordyng to thynne word, thou hast thou done all this magnificence to shewe all great thinges. Lord, there is none lyke the, neither is there any God sauethe, accordyng to al that we haue hard with our eares. Whereouer, what nation on the earth is lyke thy people Israel, to whome God hath vouchsafed to come and redeme the to be his owne people, and to make the a name of excellency and terribleness, with castyng out nacionys from before the people, whom thou hast deliuered out of Egypte?

Thy people of Israel dydest thou make thynne owne people for euer, and thou becomest theyr God. Therefore now Lord, in the thyng that thou hast spoken concernyng thy seruante and hys house, be true for ever, that thou do as thou hast sayd: let it come to passe, that thy name may be magnified for euer, that it may be sayde: the Lord of hostes is the God of Israel (eue the God of Israel) and the house of David thy seruante endureth stable before the. For thou (O Lord God) hast tolde thy seruante, that thou shouldest buyde him an house. And therefore thy seruante hath found in his herte to pray vnto the. And now Lord, thou art God, and hast promised this goodnes vnto thy seruante. Now therefore, let it be thy pleasure to build the house of thy seruante, that it may continue before the for euer. For who thou behest (O Lord) the same is blessed for ever.

The. xix. Chapter.

The Battell of David agaynst the Philistines.

And after thys it fortuned, that David smote the Philistines, subdued the, and toke Gethse to the towne that longed to the Philistines. And he smote Moab, and þe Moabites became Davids seruantes, and payed him tribute. And David smote Hadarezer kynge of zoba vnto hanath, as he wet to stablye hys dominion by the ryuer Euphrates. And David toke from hym a thousand chariotes, and seuen thousande horse men, & a thousande foremen, & lamed al þe chariotes, & refered of them an hundred chariotes. And whē the Syryens of Damascus came to helpe Hadarezer kynge of zoba, David helpe of the Syryens. xxii. thousande, and David subdued Siria Damasco: And the Syrians became Dauids seruantes, & brought hym tribute. And the Lorde preserved Dauid in all that he went to.

And Dauid toke the chyldes of gold that were on the seruantes of Hadarezer, and brought them to Ierusalē. And from Tephath, and from Chun (cyties of Hadarezer) brought Dauid exceeding moche brasie.

Wherewith Salomon made the brasen lattice: the pylers, and vessels of brasie.

And when Cou kynge of Hemph, heard that Dauid had beaten all the strengthe of Hadarezer kynge of zoba: he set Hadurā his sonne to kynge Dauid, to make peace with hym and to blesse him, because he had fought agaynst Hadarezer, and beate hym (for Cou had war w Hadarezer) and Dauid brought all maner of iewels of golde, syluer, & brasie, with hym. And kynge Dauid dedicated them vnto the Lorde, with the syluer and golde that he brought from all nacjons: from Edom, from Moab, from the chyldren of Ammon, from the Philistines and from Amelec. And Abisai the sonne of zeruia sue of the Edomites in the salt valley. xviij. thousande, & put southers in Edom, and all the Edomites became Dauids seruantes. Thus the Lorde kept Dauid in all that he toke in hande.

And Dauid ragged ouer Israel, and executed iudgement and rightousnesse amonge all his people. And Joab the sonne of zaruia was ouer the host, and Jeholaphat the sonne of Ahisud recorder: & zadok the sonne of Abiathar & Abimelech the sonne of Abiathar were the priestes: and Bauesa was scribe, & Bauesa the sonne of Jehoiaada was ouer the eunuchs, and the Shelethites: & the eldest sonnes of Dauid were next vnto the kynge.

CC. xix. Chapter.

Charon kynge of the sonnes of Ammon doeth great iniury to the seruantes of Dauid.

After this, it chaunced that Nabal the kynge of the chyldren of Ammon dyed, and his son ragged in his breade. And Dauid sayde: I wyll shewe kynnesse vnto Hanon the daughter of Nabal: because his father dealede kindly with me. And Dauid sent messengers to comfort hym ouer the death of his father. And the seruantes of Dauid came into the lande of the chyldren of Ammon to Hanon, to comfort hym. But the lordes of the chyldren of Ammon sayde to Hanon: thyngest thou that Dauid doeth honour thy father in thy lyfte: & he hath sent comforters vnto thee? And are his seruantes come to search, to loke and spy out the lande?

Wherfore Hanon toke Dauids seruantes, & gaue them, and entred they: cotes harde by theyr buttockes, and sent them a waye. And there went certayne and tolde Dauid, how the men were serued. And the kynge sent to mete them (for the men were exceedingly ashamed) and the kynge sayde: tarpe at Jericho, vntill poure beerdes be growen: and then retorne.

And when the chyldren of Ammon sawe that they stanke in the syght of Dauid: Hanon, and the chyldren of Ammon sent a thousande talentes of syluer to hye them charrettes and horsemen, out of Mesopotamia, and out of Siria Maacha and out of zoba. And they byed. xxiiij. thousande charrettes, and the kynge of Maacha & his people, which came and pitched before Moaba. And the chyldren of Ammon gathered them selues together from theyr cyties, and came to battayl. And when Dauid hearde of it, he sente Joab and all the host of stronge men. And the chyldren of Ammon came out, and put them selues in aray to battayle before the gate of the cite. And the kynges that were come: kept them by them selues backe in the felde.

When Joab also sawe that the front of the battayl was agaynst him before & behynde: he chole out of all the chosen men of Israel, & put them in aray agaynst the Syrians. And the rest of the people he deliuered vnto the hand of Abisai his brother, and they put them selues in aray agaynst the chyldren of Ammon. And he sayde: If the Syrians be to stronge for me, thou shalt succour me: & if the chyldren of Ammon preuaile agaynst the: I wil help the. Blucke by thynne herte, and let vs playe the men: for our peoples sake, & for the cyties of our God, & the Lorde shall do that whiche is good in his owne syght. So Joab and the people that were with hym, dyne nye before the Syrians vnto the battayle, and they fled before hym. And when the chyldren of Ammon sawe that the Syrians were fled, they ran a waye lykewise before Abisai his brother, and gat them into the cytie. And Joab came to Ierusalem.

And when the Syrians sawe that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers & fet out the Syrians that were beyond the riuier, & Sopbach the captaine of the host of Hadarezer went before the. And it was tolde Dauid: and he gathered all Israel, & went to gyther ouer Jordan, and came and set vpon them. And when Dauid had put hym selfe in aray agaynst the Syrians: they fought with hym. But the Syrians fled before Israel. And Dauid destroyed of the Syrians seven thousand charrettes, & xl. thousand footmen, and killed Sopbach the captayne of the host. And whē the seruantes of Hadarezer sawe that they were put to the worse before them of Israel: they made peace w Dauid: and became his seruantes. Neither wolde the Syrians helpe the chyldren of Ammon any moze.

The .xx. Chapter.

The thir most victorious battayles of Dauid.

And it came to passe, that after the yere was expyed (* aboute the tyme that kynges go out a warrefare.) Joab carryed out the armie of þe hoost: and * destroyed the countrey of the chyldren of Ammon, and came and besieged Rabba, and destroyed it. But Dauid taried at Ierusalem whyle Joab smote Rabba and destroyed it. * And Dauid toke the crowne of theyr kyng, from of his heed, and founde that it had the waghte of a talent of golde, and there were pteuous stones in it: and it was ordeyned for Dauids heed. And he brought also readyng moche spoyle out of the cite. And he brought out the people that were in it: and tormented the with sawes and harowes of yron, and with other sharpe instrumentes, and so dealt Dauid with all the cyties of the chyldren of Ammon. And Dauid and all the people came agayne to Ierusalem. * After this it fortuned that there arose warre at Gazer with þe Philistines. At which tyme Sobokai the Gushathite slue Sippai, that was of the chyldren of * Rephaim: and they were subdued.

* Gen. xliii. 1.

And there was battayle agayne with the Philistines: and Elhanan the sonne of Jai, slue Lahemi: the brother of Goliath the Gethite, whose speare was like a weavers beeme. And there chaunced yet agayne war at Geth where as was a man of a great stature, with xliiii. fygnges and toos, syce on euery hãde and syce on euery fote, and was the sonne of Raphah. But when he defyed Israel, Jehonathan the sonne of Simra Dauids brother slue him. These were bozne vnto Raphah at Geth, and were overthrowen in the hande of Dauid: and in the hande of his seruantes.

The .xxi. Chapter.

Dauid counselled the people to be nombred: and there dyed .lxx. thousande men of the pestilence.

And Satan stode by agaynst Israel, and prouoked Dauid to nombr Israel. And Dauid sayde to Joab, and to the rulers of þe people: Goe and nombr Israel from Beer Seba to Dan, and byngge it to me that I maye knowe the nombze of them. And Joab answered: the Lorde make his people an hundred tymes so many mo as they be. But my lord, O kyng, are they not all my lordes seruantes? why then both my lord requyre this thyng: why wyl my lord be a cause of trespassse to Israel?

Reuerthelesse, the kynges worde preuailed agaynst Joab. And Joab departed and walked thorow out all them of Israel, and came to Ierusalem agayne, and gaue the nombze of the countrey of the people vnto Dauid. And all they of Israel were a thousand thou sande, and an hundred thousande men þe swerde: and Juda was .cccc. lxx. thousande men that dyed swerde: But the Levites and Ben Jamin counted he not amonge them. For the kynges worde was abhominable to Joab. And the Lorde was displeased wth this thyng: and smote Israel. And Dauid sayd vnto God: I haue synned excedyngly in doinge this thyng. And now (I beseech the) do awaye the wyckednesse of thy seruants, for I haue done very foolisly.

And the Lorde spake vnto Gad Dauids sear, sayinge: goo, and tell Dauid, sayinge. Thus sayth the Lorde: I gyue the the choyse of the thynges: chole the one of them, that I maye do vnto the. And Gad came to Dauid, and sayde vnto hym: Thus sayth the Lorde: Chole the, eyther the yeres samythment, or the monethes to be destroyed before thy aduersaryes, & that the swerde of thy enemyes maye ouertake the, or elles the wrath of the Lorde and pestilence in the lande the dayes: and the Angell of the Lorde destroyng thorow out all the coostes of Israel.

And nowe aduyle thy selfe, what wylst thou shall byngge agayne to hym that sent me. And Dauid sayde vnto Gad. I am in a readyng: Let me fall nowe into the hande of the Lorde, for passyng great are his mercyes: but let me not fall into the hand of men.

So the Lorde sent pestilence vpon Israel, and there were overthrowen of Israel .lxx. thousande men. And God sent the angell to Ierusalem to destroy in it. And as he was about to destroy, the Lorde behelde, and had compassyon on the cupill, and sayd to the angell that destroyed: it is ynough, letteth thyng hande ceasse. And the angell of the Lorde stode by the thesbyngge flooze of Dynan the Jebusite. And Dauid lyft vp his eyes, & saw the angell of the Lorde stande betwixt the earth and heauen, haupnge a drawen sword in his hande, stretched out towarde Ierusalem. Then Dauid and the elders of Israel were clothed in sacke, fell vpon theyr faces. And Dauid sayde vnto God: is it not I that commaunded the people to be nombred? Is it I that haue synned and done euill in this, and what haue these thepe done? let thyng be on me and on my fethers house, but not on thy people, that they shoulde be punished.

And the angell of the Lorde commaunded Gad to saye to Dauid, that Dauid shoulde goo vp, and set vp an autler vnto the Lorde in the thesbyngge flooze of Dynan the Jebusite. And Dauid wente vp, accordyng to the sayyng of Gad, whiche he spake in the name of the Lorde. And Dynan turned backe and sawe the Angell, and his fourte seruantes were with hym, and byd them seyn: And Ozman, was threshyng wheate. And as Dauid came to Ozman, Ozman looked and sawe Dauid, and went out of the threshyng flooze and bowed hym self to Dauid, with his face to the grounde.

And Dauid sayde to Ozman: gyue me the place of the threshyng flooze, that I maye buyde an autler therin vnto the Lord. Thou shalt gyue it me for as moche moneye as it is worth, that the plage maye cease from the people. And Ozman sayd vnto Dauid: take it to the, & let my lord the kynge do þ which semeth good in his eyes: Lo, I gyue the oren also for burnt-offrynges, & the threshyng sheaf for wood, and wheate for meate offryng: I gyue it all. And kynge Dauid sayd to Ozman: not so, but I wyl bpe it for as moche moneye as it is worth. For I wyl not take that which is thine for the Lord, nor offre burnt-offrynges without cost.

And so Dauid gaue to Ozman for þ place vi. syles of golde. vi. hundred by wayght. And Dauid buyde there an autler vnto the Lord and offred burnt-offrynges and peace-offrynges, and called vpon the Lord, and he herde hym from heauen in fyre vpon the autler of burnt-offrynges. And when the Lord had spoken to the angel, he put vp his sword agayne into þ sheath of it. At that tyme when Dauid sawe that the Lord had hearde hym in the threshyng flooze of Ozman the Jebusite, he bled to offre there. For the tabernacle of the Lord which Moses made in the wyldernes, and the autler of burnt-offryng were at that season in the hyll of Gibeon. And Dauid coulde not goo before it, to aske counsayl at God, for he was afrayde of the swerde of the angell of the Lord.

¶ The. xxij. Chapter.

Dauid wylled his sonne Salomon to buyde the temple of the Lord: which thyng he hym self was forbydden to do.

And Dauid sayde: this is the house of the Lord God, and this is the autler for the burnt-offryng of Israel: And Dauid commaunded to gather togyther the framgers that were in the lande of Israel, and he let masons to hewe free stone for the buydyng of the house of God. And Dauid prepared plenty of pzon for nayls: and dozes of the gates, and to ioyne withall, and abouidance of brasse without wayght, and Cedre trees withoute nombze: For the zidons and they of Tze brought moch Cedze wood to Dauid. And Dauid sayde: Salomon my sonne is yong and tender, and the house that is to be buyde for the Lord, must excede in gratefullnes, that it may be spoken of and prayed in all landes. I wyl therfore make ordynance for it. And so Dauid prepared many thynges before his death.

And he called Salomon his sonne, & charged hym to buyde an house for the Lord God of Israel. And Dauid sayde to Salomon: B

* my sonne, I thoughte (as it was in myne herte) to buyde an house vnto the name of þ Lord my God. But the worde of the Lord came to me saying: thou hast shed moch bloud and hast made greete battayles: thou shalt therfore not buyde an house vnto my name: for thou hast shed moch bloude vpon the erth in my syght. Beholde, a sonne is borne to the and he shall be a man of rest, for I wyl gyue hym rest from all his enemyes rounde about. For his name is Salomon, and I wyl sende rest and peace vpon Israel in his dayes.

He shall buyde an house for my name, and he shall be my sonne, and I wyl be his father, and wyl prepare the seate of his kyngdome vpon Israel for euer. Now therfore my sonne, the Lord be with the, & prosper the, & thou shalt buyde þ house to the name of the Lord thy God, as he hath sayd of the. And þ Lord shall gyue the wysdom & vnderstanding, and shall gyue the commaundementes for Israel that ye maye kepe the lawe of the Lord thy God. For then thou shalt prosper: euen when thou takest hede & fulfyllest the statutes and lawes whiche the Lord charged Moses w for Israel. Plucke vp thyne herte therfore, & be stronge, dreade not, nor be discouraged.

Beholde, in myne aduersitie haue I also prepared for the house of the Lord, an hundred thousande talentes of golde, and a thousand thousande talentes of syluer, & as for brasse and pzon, it cannot be nombzed: for it is very moche. And I haue prepared tymbre & stone, and thou mayest prouyde moze thereto. Moze ouer, thou hast workemen with the ynowe, & masons and carpenters to worke in stone and tymbre, and many me that be actyue for euery worke. And of golde, syluer, brasse & pzon, there is no nombze. Up therfore, and be doinge, and the Lord shall be with the.

And Dauid comaunded all þ lordes of Israel to helpe Salomon his sonne, saying: Is not the Lord your God with you: & hath he not gyuen you rest on euery syde: for he hath gyuen the inhabytours of the lande into my hande, & the land is subdued before the Lord, and before his people. Now therfore let your hertes & youre soules to seke the Lord your God. Up, & buyde ye the temple of the Lord God, to bypnyng the arke of the couenaunt of the Lord and the holy vessels of God into þ house so buyde for the name of the Lord.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

¶ Because David was so bydden to buyde the temple, he exhorted Salomon and the people to perseuere it.

AND David gathered together all the lordes of Israel: the lordes of the trybes, the lordes of the companies that mynystred to the kynge by course, the captaynes ouer the thousandes, and ouer the hun-dredes, and the lordes that had ouerspyght ouer al the substance and possession of Da-uid, his sonnes, with the chamberlaynes: al the myghtye and valeaunt & all actyue men vnto Jerusalem. And kynge David stode vp vpon his fete, and sayde:

Hear me my bethzen and my people. * I had in myne herte to buyde an house of rest for the arke of the couenaunt of the Lorde, & for the lote stole of oure God, and had made redye for the buyldyng. But God sayde vnto me: * thou shalt not buyd an house for my name, because thou hast bene a man of warre, & hast shed bloude. Whereouer the Lorde God of Israel * chose me before all the house of my father to be kynge ouer Israel for ever, for in Juda wold he chose a captaine: & of the houshold of Juda is the house of my father, and amonge the sonnes of my father he had a lust to me, to make me kynge ouer al Israel. And of al my sonnes (for the Lorde hath geue me many sonnes) he hath chosen Salomon my sonne, to sit vpon the seat of the kyngdom of the Lorde in Israel. And he sayde vnto me:
* Salomon thy sonne, he shal buyde me an house & courtes, I haue chosen hym to be my sonne, and I wil be his father. I wyl stablysh his kyngdom for ever. Of he wyl be strong to do my comaundementes, & my lawes, as it goeth this daye. Now therfore, in the syght of al Israel the congregacyō of the Lorde, & in the audyce of oure God: kepe and seke for all the comaundementes of the Lorde your God, that ye maye enioye a good land, & leaue inheritaunce for your chyldren after you for euer.

ever. And thou Salomon my sonne, knowe the god of thy father & serue him with a pure heart, & with a swete courage. * For if thou sercheth all hertes and vnderstandeth al the ymaginacions of thoughtes. And yf thou hym, he wyl be founde of the: But yf thou forsake hym, he wyl cast of for ever. Take hede now, for the Lorde hath chosen the, to builde hym an house of a Sanctuarie. Be stronge therfore, and playe the man.

C And David gaue Salomon his sonne the patene of the porche (of the temple also) and of the houses & longed thereto, of the store houses, upper chambres, ynnere parlours, and of the house of the mercysseate: & the example of all that he had in his mynde, for the courtes of the house of the Lorde, and for al the celles rounde aboute, for the treasures of the house of God, and for the treasures of the dedycate thynges, & for the dyuisions of the prestes and Leuites that wayted by course, & for all the workmanshyppe, & shulde serue for the house of the Lorde, & for all the vessels that shulde serue in the house of the Lorde. For gold and for the wayght of gold, for all vessels of sondrye mynistracions: for all maner of vessels of syluer in weyght, & for al vessels, whatsoeuer purpose they serued vnto.
The weyght of golde for the candelltyches, and the gold for theyr lampes, & the weight for euery candelltycke, and for the lampes thereof. And for the candelltyches of syluer by wayght, both for the candelltycke and also for her lampes accordyng to the dyuersite of the vse of euery candelltycke. And by wayght of golde for the tables of the webzead euen for euery table: and lyke wyse syluer for the tables of syluer. And gold for steechokes cuppes and dynkynge pottes: And pure golde in wayght for basons, euen for euery basen. And lyke wyse syluer by wayght, for euery basen of syluer. And for the aulter of incense, pure gold by wayght. And golde for the patene of the charette of the Cherubes & stretcheth out theyr winges, and couered the Arche of the couenant of the Lorde. Al (sayd he) was geuen me by wytyng of the hande of the Lorde, which made me vnderstande al the workmanshyp of the patene.

And David sayd to Salomon his sonne: be stronge, and do manfully, feare not, nor be faynte hearted. For the Lorde God, euen my God, is with the, and he shall not faile the,
nor forsake the, vntill thou haste fynished all the worke that must serue for the house of the Lorde. Beholde the prestes and Leui-tes are deuyded in companyes, for all maner of seruyce & pertaineth to the house of God: they are with the for al maner of workman-shyp, and so are al that excel in wysdome for any maner of seruyce. Thou halte also the toyes and all the people for euery thyng that thou hast nede of.

The xxx. Chapter.

The offerings of Dauid and of the ppyetes in the builidng of the temple. Dauid dyeth: and Salomon his sonne raggeth in his stradd.

And David the kynge sayde vnto to all the congregation: * God hath specially chosen Salomon my sonne whiche is yet yonge & tender & the worke is great for the house shall not be for me but for the Lorde God. Whereouer I haue prepared with al my myght for the house of God, golde for vessels of gold, syluer for the of syluer, brasse for thynges of brasse, & for the ges of yron, and wood for thynges of wood and onix stones, & stones to be set, glasse stones and of dyuerse coloure, and all maner of ptepyouse stones, & marble stones in great aboundaunce. And because I haue lust to the house of my God: I haue of myne owne popys good, of golde and syluer whiche I haue seuerally geuen to the house of my God, besyde all that I haue prepared for the holy house euen the thousand talentes of gold of Ophir and seuen thousande talentes of tryed syluer to ouerlape the walles of the house wythall the golde for thynges of golde, syluer for the of syluer, and for all maner of worke by the handes of artificers. And whosoever is wyll-yng, maye this daye consecrate his hande vnto the Lorde.

And so the auncyent fathers and the la-des of the trybes of Israel, the captaynes of thousandes and hundredes, wyth the lordes that were rulers ouer the kynges worke, were wylling and gaue for the seruyce of the house of God, fyue thousand talentes of gold and ten thousande peces of golde, & ten thousande talentes of syluer, and xviij. thousand talentes of brasse, and one hundred thousand talentes of yron. And they wyth whom pri-ous stones were founde, gaue the to the treasure of the house of the Lorde, by the hand of Jehiel the Gerlomite.

And the people reioysed, when they were to wyllinge to geue theyr goodes, and wyth a perfecte herte they offered vnto the Lorde.
And David the kynge reioysed wyth great gladnesse. And David blessed the Lorde before all the congregacyon, and sayde: * Ble-sed be thou Lorde God of Israel oure father from euer and for euer. Thyne (O Lorde) is greatnesse, and power, glorie, victorie, and praise: for al that is in heauyn and in earth is thyne, and thyne is the kyngdom (O Lorde) and thou excellest aboue all, euen as the heuyn of all. And rycheesse and honoure come of the and thou raggest ouer al, and in thine hand is power and strengthe, and in thine hand it is to make great and to geue strengthe vnto to all.

And nowe our God, we thanke the, and praye thy glorious name. But who am I, and what is my people? that we shulde en-foyce our selues to geue these thynges so wil-lyngly? But all thynges come of the: and of that whiche we receyued at thyne hande, we haue geuen the. * For we be but straungers before the: and sojourners as were al our fa-thers. Our dayes on the earth also are but as a shadowe, and there is none abydinge. O Lord our God, al this stuffe that we haue prepared to buyde the an house for thy holy name cometh of thyne hand, and is al thine. (I wrote also my God) that thou tryest the hertes, and haste pleasure in vnsaynednesse. And in the vnsaynednesse of myne herte: I haue wyllyngly offered al these thynges. And nowe haue I lenethy people which are soude-her, to offre vnto the wyllyngly, and wyth gladnes. O Lord God of Abraham, Isahar, and of Israel our fathers, kepe this for euer, as the begynnyng of the thoughtes of the herte of the people, and prepare theyr hertes vnto the. And geue vnto Salomon my sone, a perfecte herte to kepe thy commaundemen-tes, thy testimonies and thy statutes, and to do all, and buyde the house for the whiche I haue made prouision.

And dauid sayde to all the congregacyon: Howe bleste the Lord your God. And al the congregacion blessed the Lord God of theyr fathers, and bowed downe their heades, and worshipped the Lord and the kynge. And they offered offerynges vnto the Lord. And on the morowe after the sayde day, they of-fered burnt offerynges vnto the Lord, euen a thousande ponge oxen, a thousande rames, and a thousande shepe, with theyr dyyncke-offerynges. Many sacrifices offered they for al Israel, and dyd eate and dyyncke before the Lord the same day: with great gladnes. And they made Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge the seconde tyme, and annointed him prince before the Lord, and zadoch to be the hygh preast. * And Salomon sat on the seate of the Lord, and was kynge in stede of Dauid his father, and prospered: and all they of Israel obeyed him. And al the lordes and men of power, and al the sonnes of kynge Dauid submitted them selues: and were vnder kynge Salomon. * And the Lord mag-nified Salomon in dignitie, in the syght of all them of Israel, and gaue him so glorious a kynge dome as no kynge had before hym in Israel.

And so Dauid the sonne of Isay reygued ouer al Israel. And the space that he reigned ouer Israel, was fourty yere, seuen yere reig-ned he in Hebron, and xxiii. yere reigned he in Jerusalem. And he dyed in a good age: ful of dayes, ryches and honour. And Salomon his sonne reygued in his stede. The actes of

The fyrst Chapter.

The storyng of Salomon in the hyalter at Sibeon, where he receyued an answer of God, what wor-dome shulde he geuen hym, with the nombes of his charrettes and horsmen.

Ad Salomon the sonne of Dauid waxed stronge in his kynge dome: and the Lord his god was wyth hym, & magnified him in þ dignitie. And Salomon spake vnto all Israel, to þ captaynes ouer thousandes, to the captaynes ouer hundredes, to the iudges, and to euery offyccer in all Israel, and to the aunccnt fathers. And so Salomon and all the cōgregacyon with him went to the hye place that was at Sibeon: for there was the tabernacle of wytnesse of God, whiche Moses the seruaunte of the Lord made in the wyldernesse. But the Arke of God had Dauid broughte from Kiriath Jearim, into the place whiche Dauid had prepared there-fore. For he had pyched a tente for it at Je-ruusalem. Moreover, the brasen aulter that Bezaleel the sonne of Uri, the sonne of Hur had made was there, before the tabernacle of the Lord. And Salomon and the congre-gacyon went to visite it. And Salomon gat vp there before the Lord to the brasen aul-ter that was before the tabernacle of wytnesse, Salomon ii. Chronicles.

* iii. reg. iii. c nelle, & * offered a thousande burnt sacrifice vpon it. And the same nyght did God appere vnto Salomon, and sayde vnto hym: Aske what I shall gyue the. And Salomon sayde vnto God: thou hast shewed greates mercye vnto Dauid my father, and * hast made me to raygne in his steade. * Nowe therfore, O Lord God, let thy promysse which thou madest vnto Dauid my father, be true. * For I have made me kynge ouer a people, whiche is lyke dust of the earth in multitude. Wherefore, gyue me nowe wysdome & knowledge, that I maye be able to go in and out before this people: for who els (wo) can iudge this people that is so great?

* iii. reg. iii. d C And God sayde to Salomon: because this was in thine hert, and because thou hast not asked treasure and rychesse, and honour and the lynes of thine enemyes, neyther yet longe lyfe: but hast asked wysdome & knowledge for thy selfe, to iudge my people, ouer which I haue made the kynge: wysdome and knowledge is graunted vnto the, and I wyl gyue the treasure and rychesse, and gloze: so that amonge the kynges that haue bene before the or after the, none was or shalbe like the. And so Salomon came from the hylaulter (that was at Gibeon) to Jerusalem, fro the tabernacle of witness, and raygned ouer Israel. * And Salomon gathered charrettes and horsmen: and he had a thousande & foure hundred charrettes: and twelue thousand horsmen, whom he bestowed in the charret cyties, and with the kynge at Jerusalem. And * the kynge made syluer and golde at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones: and Cedre trees made he as plenty as the mulberry trees, & growe in the valleyes, and the horses which Salomon had, were brought him out of Egypt by the kynges marchantes that were togyther whiche beinge of one compaignye, toke them out at a price. They came also and brought out of Egypt a charret for syx hundred peces of syluer: enen an horse for an hundred and fyty. And so brought they horses for all the kynges of the heathen, and for the kynges of Syria, by theyr owne hande.

The ii. Chapter.

Salomon sendeth to Tyre the kynge of Tyre for wood and workemen.

A And Salomon determyned to buylde an house for the name of the Lord, and an house for his kyngdome: and Salomon tolde out threescore and ten thousand men to beare burthens, and fourescore thousande men to beare stones in the mountayne: and thre thousande and fyty hundred to ouersee them.

* iii. reg. v. a * And Salomon sent to Hiram the kynge of Tyre, saying: As thou dydest deale with Dauid my father, and * diddest send him Cedar wood, to buylde hym an house to dwell in, euen so deale with me. For I am about to buylde an house for the name of the Lord my God, to offere vnto hym holy thinges, and to burne swete incense, and to let the which before hym continually: to offere burnt sacrifice of the morning and eveninge: on the Sabbath dayes, in the fyfte daye of everye moone, & in the solempne feastes of the Lord our God: for it is an ordinance to be continually kept of Israel. And the house which I buylde shalbe great: for great is our God aboue al goddes. But who is habile to buylde hym an house: when that heauen, and heauen aboue al heauens is not habile to receyue what am I then that shalde buylde hym an house: nay, but euen to burne sacrifice vnto hym, shal this buyldynge be: sende me therfore a connyng man, that can worke in gold and syluer, in brasse and yron, in purple, cremolyn & pelowe sylke, and that can sty to graue, with connyng men, that are with me in Iuda and Ierusalem, whom Dauid my father dyd prepare. Sende me also Cedar trees, Wyne trees, and Algume trees, out of Libanon. For I wot that thy seruantes can shyll to be with tymbre in Libanon. And behold my men shalbe with thyne, that they may prepare me tymbre ynough. For the house whiche I am determyned to buylde, shalbe wonderfull greates. And behold, for the use of thy seruantes the cutters and bechers of tymbre: I haue geuen. xx. thousand quarters of beaten wheat, and. xx. thousand quarters of barley, and. xx. thousande bates of wyne, and. xx. thousande bates of oyle. And Hiram the kynge of Tyre answered in saytyng, whiche he sente to Salomon: Because the Lord hath loued his people, therefore hath he made the kynge ouer them. And Hiram sayde mozeouer: blessed be the Lord God of Israel which made heauen & earth, and hath geuen Dauid the kynge a wyfe, and one that hath discrecion, prudence and vnderstandyng, to buylde an house for the Lord, and a palace for hym selfe. And nowe I haue sent a wyse man, and a man of vnderstandyng (whom my father Hiram dyd vse) * the son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, and his father was a man of Tyre, and he can sty to worke in golde and syluer, in brasse, and yron, in stone and tymbre, in purple, and pelowe sylke, in fyne whyte, and cremolyn: and can graue sondry maner of grauynges, and to fynde out dyuerse maner of subtyll workes that shalbe set before hym, with the connyng men, and with the connyng men of my lord Dauid thy father. Nowe therefore, Hiram, as my lord Dauid thy father, shalbe spoken of, let hym send to thy seruantes. And we wyl cut wood in Libanon, as muche as thou shalt neede, and wil bring it to the, in shippes by sea to Iope from whence thou mayste cary them to Jerusalem. And Salomon nombred all the strangers that were in the lande of Israel, after the nombre of the whom his father Dauid had nombred. And they were founde an hundred and. liii. thousand and fyve hundred. And he set. lxx. thousande to beare burthens and. lxxx. thousande to be the stooners in the mountayne: and thre thousande, fyve hundred officers, to set the people a worke.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The temple of the Lorde and the porche are builded, with other thynges thereto belongynge.

Ad Salomō began to builde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem in mount Moria: where (the Lord) appeared vnto Dauid his father euen in the place that Dauid prepared in the threshyng floure of Oman the Iebulite. And he began to buyde in the secōde day of the seconde moneth* the fourth yere of his reigne. And these are the paternes wher by Salomon was instructe to buyd the house of God. The lengthe was thre scoze cubites after the olde measure, and the breadyth. xx. cubites. The porche, that was in breadyth as large as the temple, had. xx. cubites: and the heigth was an hundred and. xx. cubites: And he overlaped it on the inner syde with pure golde.

And the greater house he syled with fyre tre, which he overlaped with the best golde and graued therto palme trees and cheynes. And he overlaped the house wyth precious stonē beautifullly. And the golde was golde of Paruatin. The house (I say) the beames, pottes, walles and doores therof, overlaped he with golde, and made grauen worke vpon the walles.

And he made the house moste holy, whose length was twenty cubites lyke to the breadyth of the house, and the breadyth therof was also twenty cubites. And he overlaid it with good golde, euen with. vi. hundred talentes. And the weygth of the naples of golde was forty lyces. And he overlaped the upper chambers with golde.

And in the house most holy, he made two Cherubyns of ymage worke, lyke chylidren, and overlaped them with golde. And the wynges of the Cherubs were. xx. cubytes longe. The one wyng was fyue cubites, reachyng to the wall of the house, and the other wyng was lyke wyse fyue cubites reachyng to the wyng of the other Cherub. And euen so the one wyng of the other Cherub was fyue cubites, reachyng to the wall of the house, and the other wyng was fyue cubytes also, and reached to the wyng of the other Cherub. So that the wynges of the sayd Cherubbes were stretched out twenty cubytes. And they stode on theyr fete, and looked in wardes. And he made a foze hangyng of pelowe lyke put ple, cremosyn, and fyne whyte, and caused the pyctures of cherubs to be brodyed thereon. And he made before the house, two pylers of. xxxv. cubytes hyghe. And the heade that was aboue on the toppe of euery one of them was fyue cubytes, and he made chaynes of wythen worke for the quere, and put them on the heades of the pylers, and made an hundred pomegranates, and put the on the chaynes. And he reared vp the pylers before the temple: one on the right hande, and the other on the left: and called the right, Jacin: and the left, Boaz.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The altar of brasse, the Lauatoz, the bestelles to washe with, the candelltyches, &c.

And he made an alter of brasse. xx. cubites long, and. xx. cubites bryde, and. xl. cubites hye. And he cast a brasse Lauatoz of. x. cubites from bym to bym, rounde in compasse, and fyue cubites hye: and a lyne of threty cubites byd compasse it rounde about. And vnder it was the fashyon of oren which byd compasse it rounde about: with ten cubites byd they compasse the Lauatoz rounde about, and there were two rowes of oren which were cast of lyke molten worke. And it stode also vpon twelue oren: thre looked towarde the North, thre towarde the West, thre towarde the South, and thre towarde the East: and the Lauatoz was set vpon them, and al theyr backes were towarde the Lauatoz. And the thickest of it was an hand bryde, and the bym lyke the bym of a cuppe with floures of lilyes. And it receyued and helde thre thousande bates.

And he made ten lauens, and put fyue on the ryght hand, and fyue on the left, to washe and clesne in them, suche thynges as they offered for a burnt offryng. And the great Lauatoz was for the prestes to washe in. And he made ten candelltyches of golde (according to the paterne that was givyn of them) and put the in the temple: fyue on the ryght hande, and fyue on the left. And he made also ten tables, and put the in the temple: fyue on the ryght syde, and fyue on the left. And he made an hundred basens of golde. And he made the courte of the prestes, and the greater courte and doores to it: and overlaped the doores of them with brasse. And he set the great Lauatoz on the ryght syde of the East ende, ouer agaynst the South. And Hiram made pottes, shouelles, and basens, and synclawes the worke that he was appoynted to make; for kynge Salomō in the house of God. The two pylers, the couerpynges, or two heades, on the toppes of the pylers: and the two wynges to couer the two scalpes, or heades that were on the toppes of the pylers: and foure hundred hundred pomgranates on the two wythes, two rowes of pomgranates on one wythe, to couer the two toppes, or heades that were on the pylers. And he made two botomes, and lauers made he vpon the bottomes: the greates Lanatoy, and twelue oren vnder it. Pottes also and Houels, fleshokes, and all these vesselles byd Hiram (his father) make to kynge Salomon for the house of the Lord of wyght brasse. In the playne of Jordan byd the kynge caste them, euen in the clape grounde that is betwene Sodoch and Zaredatha. And Salomon made all these vesselles in greates aboundance, for the weyght of brasse coulde not be rekened.

And Salomon made all the vesselles that were for the house of God: the golden alter also and the tables to set the shewbread vpon. Moreover, the candlestykkes with their lampes (to burne after þe maner before þe quere) and that of prepcious golde: and the floures and the lampes, and the snuffers made he of golde, and that perfect gold: and the besling knyues, basens, spones, and censers of pure golde. And (he made) the doze of the temple, and þe inner dozes within the place most holy and the inner dozes of the temple were gylted. And so was all the worke that Salomon made for the house of the Lord synished.

The. v. Chapter.

The arke is brought into the temple, whiche is fylled with the glory of the Lord.

And so all the worke that Salomon made in the house of the Lord was synished, and Salomon brought in all the thynges that Dauid hys father had dedicated, with the syluer and golde, and all the iewelless, and put them amonge the treasures of the house of God.

Then Salomon gathered the ealders of Israel together, and all the heades of the trybes and auncient fathers of the chyldren of Israel, vnto Jerusalem: to bypunge þe arke of the couenaunt of the Lord out of the cytie of Dauid: whiche is in zion. Wherefore, al the men of Israel resoyted vnto the kynge in the feast, euen in the seuenth moneth. And al the ealders of Israel came, and the Leuites toke vpon the arke. And the preastes and the Leuites brought away the arke of the tabernacle of wynter, and all the holy vesselles that were in the tabernacle, and they bare them. And kynge Salomon and all the congregacion of Israel that were assembled vnto him before the Arke, offered shepe and oxen, so many, that they could not be tolde no; nombred for multitude.

And the preastes brought the arke of the appoyntment of the Lord vnto hys place, euen into the quere of the temple, within the place most holy, and set it vnder the wynges of the Cherubs, that the Cherubs stretch out the wynges ouer the place of the arke, and the Cherubs couered bothe the arke and her barres aboue on hye. And þe barres of the arke were so long, that the heades of the oxen were sene without the Arke within the quere, but not without. And there the Arke remayned vnto this day. But there was nothing in the arke, save þe two tables which Moyses put therein at Horeb, when the Lord made a couenaunt with the chyldren of Israel after they were come out of Egypt. And it was so tuned, that when the preastes were come out of the holy place (the sanctuary was fylled with the smoke) for all the preastes that were presente, were sanctified, and vnder then wayte by course, that both the Leuites and the syngers vnder Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun were appoynted to sonde hym with the chyldren and byethen, and were arrayed in fyne whyte, haungng symboles, psalteries, and harpes, and stode at the ende of the aulter: and by them an hundred and twenty preastes blowing with trompettes. And the trompett blowers and the syngers so agreed, þe it lemed but one voyce in praysyng and thankyng the Lord. And when they lyfte vpon the voyce with the trompettes symboles, and other instrumentes of musike: and when they prayed the Lord, (and sayde:) howe that he is good, and that his mercy lasteth euer: the house of God was fylled with a cloude: so that the preastes coulde not endure to minister, by the reyn of the cloude. For the maiesty of the Lord had fylled the house of God.

The. vi. Chapter.

The wordes of Salomon to the people, and the prayer that he made vnto God.

Then Salomon sayde: the Lord hath spoken, howe that he will dwell in the cloude. And I have builde an habitacyon for the, and a place for thy dwelling for euer. And the kynge turned his face and blessed the hole congregacion of Israel: al the congregacion of Israel stode. And he sayde: blessed be the Lord God of Israel, whiche hath with his handes fulfilled it, that he spake with my mouth to my father Dauid, sayeng: I saw the day that I brought my people out of the lande of Egypt, I chose no cytie amonge al the trybes of Israel to buyde an house in, that my name myght be there, neyther chaunge I any man to be a ruler ouer my people Israel: sayeng that I have chosen Jerusalem, that my name myght be there, and I have chosen Dauid to be ouer my people Israel.

And whan it was in the dety of Dauid my father to buyde an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel: the Lord sayde to Dauid my father: forasmuch as it was in thy berte to buyld an house for myne name, thou bydest well that thou thoughtest in thyne berte. For withstanding, I shalt not buyld the house, but thy sonne whiche is proceeded out of thy loynes, he shal buyld an house for my name. The Lorde therfore hath made good his sayeng that he hath spoken, and I am ryfen vp in the roume of Dauid my father, and am set on the seate of Israel, as the Lorde promised, and haue buyld an house for the name of the Lorde God of Israel. And in it haue I put the Arke, wherein is the couenant of the Lorde that he made with the chyldren of Israel. And the kyng stode before the altar of the Lorde, in the presence of all the congregacion of Israel, and stretched out his handes. For nowe Salomon had made a basen pulpyt of syue cubytes longe, and syue cubytes broade, and thre of heygth, and had set it in the myddes of the greates court, and vpon it he stode and kneeled downe, vpo his knees, before all the congregacion of Israel, and stretched out his handes toward heauen, and sayde: * O Lorde God of Israel there is no god lyke the in heauen and earth which kepest couenaunt and shewest mercy vnto thy seruantes that walke before the with al theyr bertes. Thou which hast kept with thy seruant Dauid my father, the thin-ges that thou promisedest him: thou saydest it with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thyne handes, as it is to se this day.

And nowe Lord God of Israel, kepe with thy seruant Dauid my father, the thynges that thou promisedest hym, sayeng: * thou shalt in my syghe not be without a ma: that shall sye vpon the seate of Israel: so that thy chyldren take hede to theyr wayes, to walke in my lawe, as thou hast walked before me.
 And nowe Lorde God of Israel, let thy say-eng be true which thou spakest vnto thy seruant Dauid. And wyll God in very dede, dwell with men on earth? Beholde, * heauen and heauen aboue all heauens doo not con-tayne the: howe muche lesse the house which I haue buylded. Let it be thy pleasure therfore to tourne to the prayer of thy seruant, and to his supplicacion (O Lorde my God) to hearken vnto the voyce and prayer whiche thy seruant prayeth before the, and let thine eyes be open toward this house day & night ouer this place, wherin thou hast sayde: that thou woldest put thy name, to harken vnto the prayer which thy seruant prayeth in this place: heke vnto the prayers of thy seruant and of thy people Israel, which they pray in this place: heare thou, (I saye) out of thy dwelling place, euen out of heauē: heare, and be mercyfull. * If a man synne agaynst his neyghbour, and take an oeb agaynst hym and make him to swear, and they both come before thyne altar in this house: then heare thou from heauē, and worke, and iudge thy seruantes, that thou rewarde the vngodly and recompence hym his way vpon his head and iustify the ryghteous, and geue him ac-cordyng to his ryghteousnes.

And if thy people Israel be put to þ worse before the enemy, because they haue synned agaynst the. Yet yf they tourne and gene thanks vnto thy name, and make intercession, and praye before the in this house, then heare thou from heauen, and be merciful vnto the synne of thy people Israel, and byng them agayne vnto the lande which thou gauest to them and to theyr fathers.

* When heauen is shut vp, and there be no rayne, because they haue synned agaynst the: yet if they praye in this place, and con-fesse thy name, and repent from theyr synne, for the which thou chastenest the: then heare thou in heauen, and be mercyfull vnto the synne of thy seruantes, and of thy people Israel, and geue thou them into the good waye, to walke in, and sende rayne vpon thy lande, whiche thou hast geuen vnto thy people, for an encreptaunce.

And if there be dearth in the lande, or pestilence, corrupcion, or blastynge, of cozne, grethoppers, or caterpillers, or that theyr enemies besege the in the cities of theyr land (and destroy the countreys) or whatsoeuer plague or sicknesse it be. Then what supplications and prayers soeuer shalbe made of any man and of all thy people Israel, wherby shal knowe euery man his owne soze, and his owne grefe, and shall stretch out theyr han-des toward this house, thou shalt hear from heauen, euen from thy dwelling place, and shalt be mercyfull, and geue euery man ac-cordyng vnto all his wayes, euen as thou doest knowe euery mannes berte: for thou onely knowest the bertes of the chyldren of men: that they maye feare the, and walke in thy wayes as longe as they liue in the lande which thou gavest vnto our fathers.

* Moreover, the straunger whiche is not of thy people Israel, yf he come from a farre lande for thy greates names sake, and thy myghty hande, and thy stretched out arme.
 If they come (I say) and pray in this house:
 thou shalt heare from heauē, euen from thy dwelling place, and shalt do accordyng to all that the straunger calleth to the for. That all people of the earth may knowe thy name and feare the, as doeth thy people Israel, and that they maye knowe, howe that in this house which I haue buylded, thy name is called vpon.

If thy people go out to warre agaynst theyr enemies, by the way that thou shalt sende them, and they pray to the, in the way

The fyre consumed the sacrifice. The Lorde appeared to Salomon the seconde tyme.

* III. re. vii. c.

AND* when Salomon had made an ende of prayeng, there came downe fyre from heauen, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices. And the house was fylled with the glozpy of the Lorde, and the prestes coulde not go into the house of the Lord, because the glozpy of the Lord had fylled the Lordes house. And when all the chyldzen of Israel sawe howe the fyre, and the glozpy of the Lorde came downe vpon the house, they fel downe flat vpon theyr faces to the earth vpon the pauement, and worshypped and confessed vnto the Lord, that he is gracious and that his mercy lasteth euer.

AND the kynge and all the people offered sacrifices befoze the Lorde. And kynge Salomon offered a sacrifice of. xxi. thousande oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousande shepe. And so the kynge and all the people dedicated the house of God. And the prestes waited on theyr offices, and the Leuites had the instrumetes of musyke of þe Lord, which kynge Dauid had made to confesse vnto the Lorde, that his mercy lasteth euer: playeng a psalme of Dauid with theyr bande. And the prestes blew with trompettes before them: and all they of Israel stode.

Moreouer, Salomon halowed the middle of the courte, that was befoze the Lorde, and there he offered burnt offerings and the of the peace offerings, because the brasen alter which Salomon had made, was not hable to receyue the burnt offerings and the meate offerings and the fat.

So at the same tyme, Salomon kepte a feast of seuen dayes, and all they of Israel with him, an exceedyng great congregacion, euen from the entryng in of Hamath: vnto the ryuer of Egypte. And in the eighth daye they made a gathering. For they kepte the dedication of the alter seuen dayes, and the feast seuen dayes. And the xxiii. day of the seuenth moneth, he let the people departe to theyr tentes glad & mery in herte: for the goodnesse that the Lorde had shewed to Dauid & to Salomon, and to Israel his people. * And so Salomon finished the house of the Lorde, and the kynges house: and all that came in his herte to make in the house of the Lorde, and in his owne house, wente proudly forwarde.

And the Lorde appeared to Salomon by nyght, and sayde to hym: I haue hearde thy petition, and haue cholen this place for my selfe to be an house of sacrifice. If thou in heauen that there be no rayne: oꝛ if I commaunde the locustes to deuoure the lande: if I sende pestilence amonge my people: and if they that are of my people, amonge whom my name is called vpon, do humble them selues and make intercessyon and seke my presence, and turne from theyr wycked wayes: then wyll I heare from heauẽ, and be merciful to theyr synne: and wyll deale theyr land.

And from hence forth myne eyes shalbe open, and myne eares attente vnto the prayer that is made in this place. And therefore nowe I haue cholen & sanctified this house, that my name may be there for euer: and myne eyes and myne herte shalbe there perpetually.

And if thou wyll walke befoze me, as Dauid thy father walked, to do all that I haue commaunded the, and shalt obserue my statutes and my lawes: then wyll I stablysh the seat of thy kyngdome, accordyng as I made the conuenaunt with Dauid thy father, sayeng: *thou shalt not be without a ma to be ruler in Israel. But and if thou turne away, and forsake my statutes, and my commaundementes which I haue set befoze you, and shalt go, and serue other goddes, and worshypp them: then wyll I plucke them vp by the roots, out of my lande whiche I haue gyven them, and this house, whiche I haue sanctified for my name wyll I cast out of my syght, and wyll make it to be a prouerbe and a feast amonge all nations.

all nacyns. And every one that passeth by shal be astonied at this house, whiche belongeth to the most hye God, and shal say: * why hath the Lorde deale of this fashion with this lande, & with this house? And they shall answere: because they forsoke the Lord God of theyr fathers, whiche brought them out of the lande of Egypte, and caught holde on other goddes, and worshypped them, and ser-ued them: even therfore hath he brought all this euyl vpon them.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

¶ The cyties that Salomon buylded after that the house of God was synghed.

AD * it fortuneth, that after twenty yere when Salomon had buylte the house of the Lorde and his owne house he buylte the cyties that Hiram gaue hym, and put of the chyldren of Israel in them.
And Salomon went to Hamath zoba, and strengthened it. And he buylte Chadmo: in the wyldernesse, and reparyed al the stozz cyties which were in Hamath. And he buylte Bethhozon the vpper, and Bethhozon the nether, stronge cyties, hauyng walles, gates, and barres. And Baalah, and all the stozz cyties that Salomon had and all the charet cyties, and the cyties of the hoysmen, and euery pleasant place that Salomon had lust to buyld in Ierusalem and Libanon, and thozowout all the lande of his dominion.

B And all the people that were left of the hetites, Amozites, Ihercsites, Heuites & Iebusites, which were not of the chyldren of Israel: but were the chyldren of them which were left after them in the lande, and were not consumed of the chyldre of Israel, them dyd Salomon make to paye trybute, vntyll this daye. But of the chyldren of Israel dyd Salomon make no bondmen for his worke:
but they were men of warre, and rulers, and greate lordes with him, and captaynes ouer his charettes and hoysmen. And kynge Salomons officers that ouersawe and ruled the people, were two hundred and ffty.

C And Salomon brought the daughter of Pharaon out of the cytie of Dauid, into the house that he had buylded for her. For he sayde: my wyfe shal not dwel in the house of Dauid kynge of Israel, for it is holy: because that the arke of the Lorde is come vnto it.

Then Salomon offred burnt offrynges into the Lorde, on the autler of the Lorde, which he had buylt before the porche, doyng euery thyng in his due tyme, and offerynge accordyng to the commaundement of Moses, in the Sabdorthes, newe moones, and solemne feastes, * the tymes in the yere, that is to saye: in the feaste of swete breade, in the feaste of weekes, and in the feaste of Tabernacles.

And Salomon set the sortes of preastes to theyr offyces, as Dauid his father had ordered the, and the Leuites in theyr watches, for to praye and minister before the prea-stes day by day, and the porters by course, at euery gate. * For so had Dauid the man of God commaunded. And they omitted not the commaundement of the kynge vnto the preastes and the Leuites, concernyng any maner of thyng, and concernyng the treasures. For Salomon made prouysion for the charges, from the fyrst day that the foundacion of the house of the Lorde was layed: tyl it was synghed, that the house of the Lorde was perfecte. Then wente kynge Salomon to Ezion Gaber, and to Elath at the see (red) see syde in the lande of Edom. And Hiram sent hym by the handes of hys seruauntes, shyppes, and seruauntes that had knowledge of the see: and they came with the seruauntes of Salomon to Ophir, and carped thence four hundred and ffty talentes of golde, and brought it to kynge Salomon.

¶ The ix. Chapter.

¶ The communication of Salomon with the queene of Saba: and the cyties that she gaue the other. The death of Salomon: after whom succradeth Achasab.

AD * when the Quene of Saba hard of the fame of Salomon, she came to proue hym in harde questions at Jerusalem, with a very greate company with camellies that bare spycer & plenty of golde, and prycious stones. And when she was come to Salomon, she communed with hym of al that she had in her herte. And Salomon soy-led her all her questyons, and there was not one worde hyd from Salomon, whiche he tolde her not.

And when the Quene of Saba had sene the wysdome of Salomon, and the house that he had buylt, and the meate of hys table, the sytyng of hys seruauntes, and the standing of his wayters, theyr apparell, his butlars, theyr apparell, his goyng vp, by the whiche he wente into the house of the Lorde, there was no more spire in her.

And she sayde to the kynge: the sayeng which I hearde in myne owne land, of thyne actes, and of thy wysdome, is true. I beleued not the wordes of them, vntyll I came, and myne eyes had sene it. And beholde, the one halfe of thy wysdome was not tolde me: for thou exceedest the fame that I hard. Happy are thy men, and happy are the seruauntes which stande before the alway, and hear thy wysdome. Blessed be the Lord thy God, which had lust to the, to set the kynge on his seat, that thou myghtest be kynge: ordeyned by the Lord thy God. Because thy God lo-ueth Israel, and hath deuynt to make them contynue euer: therfore made he the kynge ouer them: to do ryght and equitie.

And

And she gaue the kyng an hundred & xx talentes of golde, and of sypres exceeding great aboundaunce and precious stones, neither was there any moze luche sypre, as the Quene of Saba gaue king Salomon. And the seruauntes of hyz am and the seruauntes of Salomon which brought golde from Ophir, brought also algume wood and precious stones. And the kyng made of the Algume wood steyres in the house of the Lord, & in the kynges palace, and harpes and psalteries for syngers. In there was none luche wood lene before in the lande of Iuda. And kyng Salomon gaue to the Quene of Saba euery pleasaunte thyng that she asked, but not so much as she brought vnto þe kyng. And so she turned & went away to her owne lande with her seruauntes.

D The weyght of golde that came to Salomon in one yere, was syxe hundred. lxxvi. talentes of golde, besydes that which chapmen and marchauntes brought, and all the kynges of Arabia & rulers of that countrey brought golde and syluer to Salomon. And kyng Salomon made two hundred bucklers of beaten golde, and syxe hundred scies of beaten golde were spent vpon one buckler, and thre hundred shylles made be of beaten gold, and one shylle cost thre hundred peces of gold: and the kyng put them in the house that was in the forest of Libanon.

And the kyng made a great seat of Iuor, & ouerlaid it with pure gold. And there were syxe steyres to the seate, with a fote-stole of golde fastened to the seate: and pomelles on eche syde of the sytting place, and two Lyons standyng by the pomels. And xii. lions stode on the one syde & on the other vpon the syxe steyres, so that there was no luche worke made in any kyngdome.

And all the drynkyng vessels of kyng Salomon were of golde, and all the vessels of the house that was in the forest of Libanon were of precious golde: for syluer was counted nothyng worth, in the dayes of Salomon. For the kynges shippes went to Tharsis with the seruauntes of hyz am: euery thre yeres ones came the shippes to Tharsis, and brought golde, syluer, Iuor, and apes, and peccokes.

F * And kyng Salomon passed all the kynges of the earth in riches and wysdome. And all the kynges of the earth sought the presence of Salomon, to heare his wysdome that God had put in his herte. And they brought euery man his present, vessels of syluer, and vessels of golde, rayment, harnesses, sypres, horses and mules, and whatsoeuer might be gotten yere by yere.

* And Salomon had foure thousand stables for horses, and charrettes, & twelue thousand portemen, whome he bestowed in the charret cyties, & some were with the kyng in Jerusalem. And he raygned ouer all the kynges that were fro Euphrates vnto the lande of the Philistines: & to the border of Egypt.

* And the kyng made siluer in Jerusalem as plenteous as stones, and Cedar trees as plenteous as the mulberre trees that growe in the valleyes: and they brought vnto Salomon horses out of Egypt, & out of all landes.

* The rest of the actes of kyng Salomon, first and last, are they not written in the saynges of Nathan the prophet, and in the prophete of Ahiah the Silonite, and in the saynges of Iddo the sear of byssis agayne. Jeroboam the sone of Nabat: And Salomon reygned in Jerusalem vpon all Israel thre yeres. And Salomon slept with his fathers, and they buried hym in the cytie of Dauid his father: and Rehoboam his sone reygned in hys steade.

The .x. Chapter.

The folowynge of Rehoboam, and the begynnyng of hys realme.

And Rehoboam went to Sichem: for to Sichem were all Israel come together to make him kyng. And when Jeroboam the sone of Nabat (which was fled into Egypt) from the presence of Salomon kyng, saw it, he returned out of Egypt. And they of Israel came and comuned with Rehoboam, sayeng: Thy father layde a greuous pocke vpon vs: nowwe therefore, reuenge somewhat of the greuous seruer of thy father, and of his heuy pocke that he put vpon vs: and we will serue the. And he sayde to them: come agayne vnto me after thre dayes. And the people departed.

And kyng Rehoboam consulted with the elders that had stande before Salomon his father, while he yet lyued, and he sayde: what counsaile geue ye me, to answer the people agayne? And they tolde him, sayng: If thou be kynde to thys people, and shew thy selfe lowely to them, and speake lowe wordes to them, they wyl be thy seruantes for euer. But he leste the counsaile which the elders gaue hym, and toke counsaile with the yonge men that were growen up with him, & that stode in his presence. And he sayde vnto them: what aduys geue ye, that I may answer this people, which haue comened with me, sayeng: A bate somewhat of the pocke which thy father dyd put vpon vs.

And the yonge men that were growen up with hym, spake vnto hym, sayeng: Thou shalt thou answer the people that shal come to the, sayeng: Thy father made our heuy: but make thou it somewhat leysse for vs. Thus shalt thou say vnto them: my lytle synger shall be heuier then my fathers

Then came Semia, the prophete to Rehoboam and to the Lordes of Juda, that were gathered together wythin Jerusalem. B For Sefac, and sayde vnto them: thus sayde the Lord, ye haue left me, & therfore haue I also left you in the handes of Sefac. But I wyl deliuer them somewhat, and my wrath shal not burne vpon Jerusalem by the hande of Sefac. Neuerthelesse, they shal be bys seruantes, to knowe what byfference is betwene my seruyce, and the seruyce of the kyngdomes of the worlde.

And it cam to passe, that when the kyng entered into the house of the Lord, the garde cam & fet them, and broughte them agayne vnto the garde chambze. And when he humbled hym selfe, the wrath of the Lord turned fro hym, that he wolde not destroye altogether. And in Juda all was well.

The. xviii. yere of kyng Jeroboam & I began Abia to raygne ouer Iuda, & he raygned thre yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name also was Michaiaba, daughter of Uriel of Gubia. And there was warre betwene Abia & Jeroboam. And Abia made prouysion for warre, hauyng beleant & expert men of warre, ent. iiii. C. chosen men. And Jeroboam set hym selfe in aray to fyght agaynst hym, w. viii. C. pict men whych were strong & men of armes.

And Abia stode vp vpon zemaraim an hyl whych is in mounte Ephraim, and sayde heare me O Jeroboam and al Israel. Do not you knowe howe the Lord God of Israel gaue the kyngdome, ouer them of Israel, in Dauid for euer, euen to him & to his synes wyth a salted couenaunte? And Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat the seruaunte of Salomon the sonne of Dauid is clyen vp, & hath rebelled agaynst his Lord. And there gathered to hym lewde men & chyldren of Belial, and preapled agaynst Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon: when Rehoboam was yonge & tendze berted & could not stond before them.

And now ye saye, & ye be able to puaile agaynst the kyngdome of the Lord, whyche is in the hande of the sonnes of Dauid, & ye be a great myltitude, & haue golden calues & whych Jeroboam made you for godds. And haue ye not cast out the prestes of the Lord the sonnes of Aaron, & the Levites, & haue made you prestes after the maner of the nacyns of other lades? so & who soeuer cometh, & consecrateth his hand w a ponge ore & seven rammes, the same may be a preste of them that are no goddes.

But we belonge vnto the Lord our God whom we haue not forsaken, & the prestes are the sonnes of Aaron which ministre vnto the Lord, & the Leuytes wayte vpon theyr offyce. They burne vnto the Lord caryng moynynge & euenynge, burne sacrifice & swete encense: the wherbyad set they in alye vpon a pure table: & prepare the candellshylde of golde w the lampes of the same to burne euer at euen. And truly we kepe the watch of the Lord our God, but ye haue forsaken hym. And beholde, God him selfe is our captayne & his prestes blow w the trompettes, & crye alarum agaynst you. O ye chyldren of Israel, fyght not agaynst the Lord God of your fathers: for it wyl not prosper wyth you.

But for al the Jeroboam couayned men nyely aboute, to come behynde them, & so they were before Iuda, & slayd in warre wth behynde them. And whē they of Iuda lokyd aboute, beholde the battell was before & behynde, & they cryed vnto the Lord & the prestes blew w the trompettes, & the men of Iuda gaue

And as the men of Juda howted, it came to passe, that God smote Jeroboam, & all Israel before Abia & Juda. And the chyl dren of Israel fled before Juda, & God deli uered them into theyr hand. And Abia & his people slue a great slaughter of the: there fell downe wounded of Israel. v. hundred thou sande chosmen. And so the chyl dren of Isra el were broughte vnder at þ tyme, & the chyl dren of Juda preuapled: because they leane d vnto the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And Abia folowed after Jeroboam & toke cities from hym, Bethel, w the townes beloginge therto. Jesena wyth the townes þ belonged therto, & Ephraim w her townes. And Jerobo am reconered no strengthe agayne in þ dayes of Abia. And þ Lord plagued hym, & he dyed.

But Abia waked myghtie, & marped. xliii. wyues, and begat xxii. sones, and. xvi. daughters. The rest of the actes of Abia, his customes & hys sayenges are wypten in the booke of the prophet Iddo.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Of Asa kynge of Juda.

As Abia slepte w hys fathers, ad they buryed hym in þ citie of Da uid, & Asa his sonne raygned in hys steade. In whose dayes þ lan de was in quyetnes ten yeres.

And Asa dyd that was good & ryght in the eyes of the Lorde hys God: for he toke a waye straunge aulters and the hylaulters, and brake downe the ymages, and cut dow ne the groues, & commaunded Juda to seke the Lord God of theyr fathers, and to do ac coidynge to the lawe and commaundement. And he put awaye out al the ctyes of Juda the hylaulters & the ymages: and the kyng dome was quyet before hym. And he buylte stronge cities in Juda: because þ lande was in rest, and he had no warre in those yeres. For the Lorde had geuen hym reste.

Therefore he sayd vnto Juda: let vs build these cities, and make aboute them walles, towars, gates, & barres, for the lande is yet in reste before vs, because we haue sought þ Lorde oure God: we haue soughte hym, and he hath geuen vs rest on euery side: & so they buylt and it prospered wyth them. And Asa had an armye of men that bare shyldes and speares, out of Juda, thre hundred thousand: and out of Ben Jamin that bare shyldes, & thre bowes, two hundred & foure skore thou sande, all these were valeaunte men.

And there came out agaynst them zarab the blacke moztian with an hoost of. x. hun dred thousande, & thre hundred charettes, & came as farr as Mareca. And Asa wente out before hym, and they foynded the battell in the valey of zephata beside Mareca. And Asa cryed vnto the Lorde hys God, & sayde Lord, it is no harde thyng wyth þ to helpe ether manye, or them þ haue nopowre, helpe vs therfore. O Lorde our God, for we trust to the, and in thy name we go agaynst thy multitude. Thou arte the Lorde oure God, and no man shal preuaple agaynst the.

So the Lorde smote þ blacke mozes be fore Asa and Juda, & the blacke mozes fled. And Asa & the people that was wyth hym, folowed after them vnto Gerar. And þ bla cke mozes hoost was ouer throwne, & there was none of them left, but were destroyed before the Lorde and before hys hooste. And they carped away a myghtie greate praye. And they smote all the ctyes rounde about Gerar. For the feare of the Lorde came vpo them. And they spoyled al the cities ad there was exceadynge moche spoyle in the. They smote also the tentes of catell, and carped a waye plentye of shepe and camels, and retur ned to Jerusalem.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Of Asa by the monyeion of the prophete Azaria sacrificeth to the Lorde. He deppeured his mother of her dominion.

Ad the sperte of God came on Azaria the sonne of Obed. And he went out to mete Asa, & sayd vnto him: heare me Asa, & al Ju da, & Ben Jamin. The Lorde is w you, whyle ye be wyth hym, and when ye seke hym, he wyl be founde of you: & agayne whē ye forsake hym, he also wyl forsake you. And truly for a long season in Israel no mā sought the true God, no inan regarded þ pre ce þ taught them, no mā cared for the lawe, And when any man in hys trouble dyd tur ne vnto the Lorde God of Israel, & soughte him he was founde of them. And in þ tyme there was no peace to hym, that dyd go out and in: but great sedycion was there among al the inhabyters of the earth. And nacyon was destroyed of nacyon, and ctye of ctye: for God dyd mone al aduersitie amonge the. Playe ye therfore þ men, & let not your hādes slacke, for youre woꝝke shalbe rewarded.

And when Asa hearde those wordes, & the prophece of Azaria the sonne of Obed þ prophet, he toke contrage, and put awaye the abhomyable ydoles out of all the lande of Juda & Ben Jamin, & out of the cities which he wanne in mounte Ephraim, & renued the aulter of the Lorde, & was before the porche of the Lorde. And he gathered al Juda and Ben Jamin, and the straungers wth them oute of Ephraim, Manasse, & Simoon. For there fell many to hym oute of Israel, when they sawe þ the Lorde his God was w him. So they assembled at Jerusalem the thyrde moneth, the fytteneth yere of the raygne of Asa. And they offred vnto the Lorde þ same tyme of the spoyls wher they had broughte. vii. C. oxen, and. vii. thousande shepe.

¶ And

And they made a couenaunte to seke the Lozde God of theyr fathers, wyth all theyr bert, & all theyr soule. And whosoever wold not seke the Lozde God of Israel, shulde dye for it: whether he were smal or great, mā or woman. And they sware vnto the Lozde wth a lowde voyce, shewtyng & blowyng with trompettes & shawmes. And all they in Iuda reioysed at the othe, for they had sworne vnto the Lozde wyth al theyr bert, & sought hym wyth al theyr luste, & he was founde of them. And the Lozde gaue them rest rounde aboute on euery syde.

And kyng Ala put Baacha his mother out of auctoryte, because she had made an abhomynable ydoll ^(or ydols) in a groue: ad Ala brake downe her ydoll, & stamped it, ad burnt it at the broke Cedron. But all the hil aulters were not taken awaye out of Israel though the bert of Ala was perfecte all hys dayes. And he brought into y^e house of God the thynges that hys father had dedycate, & y^e he hym selfe had dedycat: euen syluer, & golde, & Jewelles. And there was nomoze warre vnto y^e xxxv. yere of the raygne of Ala.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Ala, for feare of Baasa kyng of Israel, maketh a couenaunt with Benhadad kyng of Siria.

In the xxxvi. yere of the raygne of Ala, came Baasa kyng of Israel vpon agaynst Iuda, and buylt Rama, to the entent that he wolde let none passe out or in ^(of the land) to Ala kyng of Iuda. And Ala fet out golde & siluer, out of the treasures of y^e house of the Lozde, & of the kynges house, & sent to Benhadad kyng of Siria y^e dwelt at Darnesec & sayd: There is a cōfederacyon betwene me & the, betwene my father & thyne. Behold I haue sent the syluer & golde, that thou wylte come & breake thyne appoyntmente wth Baasa kyng of Israel, that he maye departe fro me. And Benhadad graunted vnto kyng Ala, & sente to the captaynes of hys armie to the cyties of Israel. And they smote Iion, Dan, & Abelmain, and the stronge cyties, of Reptali. And when Baasa heard thys, he lette buyldyng of Rama, & let hys worke cease. And then Ala the kyng toke al Iuda and carped awaye the stones and tymber of Rama, wherwyth Baasa was a buyldyng and he buylt therwyth Geba and Mizpa.

At that tyme, Hanani the sear came to Ala kyng of Iuda: ad sayde vnto hym: because thou hast trusted in the kyng of Siria, & not rather put thy truste in the Lozde thy God, therfore is the hoste of the kyng of Siria escaped out of thine hande. * Had not the blacke mores and Lubim an excedyng great hoste wyth many charieters and horsemen. And yet because thou trustedest in the Lozde, he deliuered them into thine hande. For the eyes of y^e Lozde beholde al the earth to strength them that are of perfecte bert towarde hym. * Herin thou hast done folly, and therfore from henceforth thou shalt haue warre. And Ala was wroth wyth the sear, & put him into a prison house, for he was displeased wyth hym because of thys thyng. And Ala destroyed certayne of the people y^e same reason.

And beholde these dedes of Ala, fyrst, & last, are wyrtten in the booke of the kynges of Iuda And Israel. And Ala in the xxxi. yere of hys raygne fell speke in hys syte, in that hys deale contynned very longe. And in hys spekenes he sought not the Lozde by philisicions. And Ala slepte with hys fathers & dyed in the xli. yere of hys raygne. And they buried him in his owne sepulchre, which he had made for him selfe in the cytie of Beuid, and layed hym in the bed wherhe he was fylled with dyuerse kindes of spices & sweet odours, made by the craft of the potecaries. And they burnt very moch spyce about him.

The. xvii. Chapter.

Jeholaphat causeth the feare of the Lozde to be renewed amonge the people.

Ad Jeholaphat hys sonne was ned in hys stead, & principall agaynst Israel. And he put officers in al y^e strong cities of Iuda, & set rulers in the land of Iuda & in the cities of Ephraim, which Ala his father had woone. And y^e Lozde was wth Jeholaphat, because he walked in y^e old wayes of his father Dauid, & sought not Baal. He soughte the Lozde God of hys fathers, & walked in his commaundementes: and not after the doynges of Israel. And the Lozde stablished the kyngdome in his hande, & al they were in Iuda, brought him prestes, so that he had aboundaunce of ryches and honours. And he lette vpon hys bert vnto the wayes of the Lozde & he put downe yet moze of the hil aulters & groues out of Iuda:

In the thyrde yere of hys rayne he went to hys lordes, euen to Benhapt, Obadiah, Acharia, Achaniel, & to Michaahu, that he shulde teach in the cyties of Iuda & with y^e he sent Leuytes: euen Semelaphu, Achabhu, zabadiaphu, Asael, Semiramoth, Jehonathan, Adomahu, Tobiahu, and Eudonia and wroth them Elisamah & Jehon prestes. And they taught in Iuda, & had the booke of the lawe of God with them, & went aboute thorowout al the cyties of Iuda, & taught the people.

And the feare of the Lozde fel vpon al y^e kyngdomes of the landes that were rounde about Iuda, & they fought not agaynst Jeholaphat. And some of y^e philistines brought Jeholaphat gyftes, and tribute syluer.

therto the Arabians brought him catel: ene

& grew up an hye. And he buylte in Juda, ca

And these are the offces of them in the

C. The. xviii. Chapter.

After that had achen counsel of the four hundred prophets, he put Michia in prison. He dyeth with f dote of an arrowe.

And Jehosaphat had a boundaunce of riches and honoure, and toynd affynye w. Ahab. And * after cer tayne yeares he went downe to A hab to Samaria. And Ahab slue many she pe & oxen for hym, ad for the people f he had with hym, & entreated hym to go vp with hym vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And Ahab kynge of Israel sayd vnto Jehosaphat king of Juda: wilt thou go with me to Ramoth in Gilead? And he answered him: I wyl be as thou, and my people shalbe as thyne, and we wyl go with the to the warre.

And Jehosaphat sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: alke counsel I pray f, at the word of the Lorde, thys same daye. Therfore the kynge of Israel gathered together of prophe tes. lxxx. C. men, & sayde vnto them: Shall we go to Ramoth in Gilead to fyght, or shulde Ieaser? And they sayde: go vp, & God shall deliuer it into the kynges hande. But Jeho saphat sayd: is there yet here neuer a prophe te more of the Lordes, f we myghte aske of hym? And the kynge of Israel sayde vnto Je hosaphat: there is yet one ma, by whom we maye aske the Lorde. But I hate him: for he neuer prophesyeth me good, but alwaye euil & the same is Michia the sone of Jimla. And Jehosaphat sayde: let not the kynge saye so.

And the kynge of Israel called one of his chamberlaynes, & sayde: fetch hether quych ly Michia the sonne of Jimla. And f kynge of Israel and Jehosaphat kynge of Juda late ether of them on hys seate in theyr apperell, in a chydhyng floure beside the gate of Sa maria, & al the prophetes prophesied before them. And one Jedeia the sone of Chanana had made hym hornes of yron, & sayde: thus sayeth the Lorde: with these shalt thou ouer thorow Siria, vntill they be brought to nau ghe. And al the prophetes prophecyed euen so, sayinge: Go vp to Ramoth in Gilead, & it shal prosper wth the: for the Lorde shal deliuer it into the hande of the kinge.

And the messenger f wente to call Mi chia, speake to him, sayinge: behold, the wo des of the prophetes speake good to f kynge with one assent, let thy wordes therfore be lyke one of theyrs, that thou speke that wh che is pleasant. And Michia sayde: as tru ly as the Lorde lyueth: euen what my God sayth, that wyl I speake. And wha he was come to the kynge, the kynge sayd vnto him Michia, shuld we go to Ramoth in Gilead to fyght, or leaue of? And he sayde: go vp, & all shalbe well: & they shalbe deliuered into your hande. And f king sayd to hym: So lo many tymes do I charge f that f saye no thing but f truth to me, in f name of f Lord

Then he sayde: I dyd se all them of Israel scattered in the mountaynes, as shepe f haue no shepberde. And the Lord sayd: these haue no master, let them retorne euery man ther fore to hys house in peace. And the kynge of Israel sayde vnto Jehosaphat: dyd I not tel f, f he wold not prophesy good vnto me: but euil? But he sayde againe: therfore heare ye f worde of the Lorde. * I sawe the Lord syt vpon hys seate, & all the company of heauen stode on his ryght hande & on hys left. And f Lorde sayde: who shal deceaue Ahab king of Israel, f he maye go vp & be ouerthryone at Ramoth in Gilead? And he sayd: one say eth thys, a nother that. And there came onte a sprete, & stode before the Lorde, & sayde: I wyl deceaue hym. And the Lorde sayde vn to hym: wherin? And he sayde: I wyl go out & be a lying sprete in the mouth of al his pro phetes. And the Lorde sayd: f shalt deceaue hym, & shalt preyntle go out, and do euen so.

And now the therfore beholde, * the Lorde hath put a lyinge spret in the mouthes of al these thy prophetes, & the Lorde hath spoken euil agaynst the. And Jedeia the sonne of Cha nana went to, & smote Michia vpon f cheke & sayde: by what way went the sprete of the Lorde from me, to speake with f? And Mi chia sayde: thou shalt se the daye when thou shalt go from chambze to chambze, for to hyde thy selfe. And the kynge of Israel sayd take ye Michia, & bynge hym to Amion the gouernour of the cytye, & to Joas the kynge sonne, & ye shal saye thus sayeth the kynge:
put thys felowe in f priels house, & fede hym w bread of affliction & water of trouble vn tyl I come agayne i peace. And Michia say de: yf f come agayne in peace, then hath not f

Lozde spoken to me. And he sayde: berken to ye people euery one of you. And so the kinge of Israel and Jehosaphat the kyng of Iuda went vp to Ramoth in Gilead. And þe kyng of Israel sayde vnto Jehosaphat: I must chaunge me, when I go to the battel: but se that þe haue thynne owne apperel vpon the. And the kyng of Israel chaunged hym selfe, and they came to battel. But the kyng of Siria had commaunded the captaynes of the charettes that were with hym, saying: se that ye fyght not agaynst small or great, saue agaynst the kyng of Israel onely.

And when the captaynes of the charettes sawe Jehosaphat, they sayde: it is the kyng of Israel, and therfore they compassed about hym to fyghte. But Jehosaphat cryed out, & the Lozde helped hym, and God chased them awaye from hym. For it came to passe that when the captaynes of the charettes perceaued that it was not the kyng of Israel, they turned backe agayne from hym. And a certayne man drewe a bowe wryth al his might & smote the kyng of Israel betwene þe ioyntes of his hande. And he sayd to his charetman: turne thynne hand, & thou mayest carry me out of the hooft: for I am wounded. And the battel ceased that daye. Howbeit þe kyng of Israel caused his charet to stond styll agaynst þe Syrians vntyl euen. And aboute the tyme of the sunne going downe, he dyed.

The. xix. Chapter.

After Jehosaphat was rebuked by the prophet Jeremias, he called agayne the people to the honouringe of the Lozde God.

And Jehosaphat the kyng of Iuda came home agayne in peace to Jerusalem. And Iehu þe sone of Hanani the sear went out to mete hym, & sayd to kyng Jehosaphat: Woldest þe helpe the vngodly, & loue them þe hate the Lozde? Therfore is wrath come downe vpon the, from before the Lozde. Neuertheles, there are some good actes foude in the, in þe thou haste heren downe þe greues out of the lande, & haste prepared thynne herte to seke God. And Jehosaphat dwelte at Jerusalem: & turned & went out to the people from Beerlaba to mount Ephraim, and brought them agayne vnto the Lozde God of theyr fathers. And he set iudges in the lande thorowout al the strong cities of Iuda, cite by cite: & sayde to þe iudges: take hede what ye do, for ye execute not þe iudgements of mā but of God, which is wryth you in the iudgement. Wherfore nowe, let the feare of the Lozde be vpon you, & take hede, & be doinge the thyng þe pleasest hym. For there is no vngodlynes wryth the Lozde our God: * þe wold haue any respecte of persones, or take rewardes.

Wherouer in Jerusalem byd Jehosaphat set of the Leuytes, and of the prestes & of the auncient fathers ouer Israel, in þe iudgement and cause of the Lozde. And they returned agayne to Jerusalem. And he charged them sayinge: Thus shall ye do in the feare of the Lozde, wryth the trouth & a pure herte: Whiche cause soeuer come to you of pouer brethren, & dwell in theyr cities, betwene bloud & blood betwene lawe & commaundement, betwene statutes & ordynances, ye shal warne them, & theyr trespass not agaynst the Lozde, lest wrath come vpon you and pouer brethren. Thus do, & ye shal not offende. And beholde Amaria the hye prest is amonge you in all matters of the Lozde, & Zebadia the sone of Ismael, a ruler of the house of Iuda he is: neuer much busynesse as concerne þe kyng: they be officers of the Leuytes also before you. Take courage to you therfore, & be doynge māfully: & þe Lozde shalbe wryth you as be good.

The. xx. Chapter.

The mercurious dectoy that the Lozde gaue Iehosaphat kyng of Iuda agaynst the Moabites, and the children of Amon and them of Seir.

After this also, it fortunod þe children of Moab and the chyldren of Ammon, & wryth them other of the Ammonytes cam agaynst Jehosaphat to battel. And there came some that tolde Jehosaphat saying: there cometh a greute multitude agaynst the from the other syde of the se, out of Siria. And beholde, they be in the syn Thamar, whych is Engadi. And Jehosaphat feared, & set hym selfe to seke the Lozde, & proclaymed fastynge thorowout Iuda. And they þe were in Iuda, gathered them selues together, to aske counsell of the Lozde. And they came out of all the cities of Iuda, to make intercession to the Lozde. And Jehosaphat stode betwene the congregacion of Iuda and Jerusalem in the house of the Lozde before the newe courte & sayde: O Lozde God of our fathers, art not thou God in heuyn, and raygneest not thou on all the high domes of the heathen? And in thynne hand is powre and myght, and there is no man that is able to wrythstande the. Art not thou God, whych didest cast out the inhabiters of this lande before thy people Israel and gauest it to the seede of Abraham thy loue? And they dwelt therein, and haue builded the a temple therein for thy name, sayinge: If euell come vpon vs, as the swerde of iudgement, pestilence or hongre: then, if we be before thynne house in thy presence, for the name is in thynne house, and crye vnto the in tribulacion, heare thou and helpe.

And nowe beholde, the chyldren of Ammon and Moab, & mounte Seir, by whom thou woldest not let the of Israel go, when they came out of þe lād of Egypt: but they despised thes them, & destroyed the not. And they reward vs, to come for to cast vs out of thy possession, which þe hast given vs to the. O our God, wilt þe not iudge thes?

haue no myght agaynste this great company that cometh agaynste vs. Neither wote we what to do: but our eyes be vnto the.

And all Juda stode before the Lord: and they yonge ones, they wyues & they chyldren: & ther was Jehasiel the sonne of zacharia the sonne of Banaiā & sonne of Jehiel the sonne of Mathania, a Leuite of the sonnes of Asaph, and vpon hym came the sperte of the Lord, euen in þe myddes of the congregaciō. And he sayde, herken all Juda, and ye inhabytters of Ierusalem, & thou kyng Jehosaphat: Thus sayeth þe Lord vnto you: be not afrayed nor saynte herted by reason of this great multitude: for the battel is not poures but Gods. To morow go ye downe agaynst them: for they come vp at 313, & ye shal fynde them at the ende of the broke before the wyldernes of Ieruel. Ye shal not nede to fyght in this battel: but steppe forth & stand, & behold þe helpe of the Lord which is with you: feare not, nor let poure hertes sayle you. O ye of Juda and of Ierusalem. To morowe go out agaynst them: for þe Lord wyll be wyth you.

And Jehosaphat bowed his face to the earth, and al Juda and the inhabytters of Ierusalem fell before the Lord worshippinge the Lord. And the Leuites of the chyldren of the Caphatites and of the chyldren of the Corabites stode vp, to prayse the Lord God of Israel wyth a loude voyce on hye. And whā they arose earlye in the mornyng, they gat them out vnto the wyldernes of Thekoa.

And as they went out, Jehosaphat stode ad sayde: heare me, O Juda, & ye inhabytters of Ierusalem. Put your trust in the Lord: poure God, that ye may be founde saythfull. Geue credence to þys prophete, & so shal ye prosper. And he gaue the people counceyl, and set some to synge vnto the Lord, & to prayse him in the bewte of holynes, & to go out before þe armye, as they went, and to saye: prayse the Lord for his mercie lasteth euer. And what time as they begane to laude and prayse, the Lord stered vp certayne of the chyldren of Ammon and Moab, whych layed wayte for them that were of mounte Seir, whych were come agaynste Juda. And they were ouerthrowen with strokes amonge them selues. For the chyldren of Ammon and Moab rose agaynste the inhabytters of mounte Seir. And they slewe and destroyed them.

And whan they had made an ende of the inhabytters of Seir, euery one helped to destroy another amonge them selues.

And whē Juda came to the edge of the wyldernes, they looked vnto the multitude. And beholde, they were dead carcasses fallen to þe erth, & none escaped. And whan Jehosaphat and þys people cam to take away the spole of the, they found among them aboundaunce of goodes, rayment and pleasaunt Jewels, whych they toke for them selues, moze then they coude cary awaye: so þe they were thre dayes in gatherynge of the spole, it was so moch. And the fourth day they assembled in the valley of blessinge: for there they blessed the Lord. And therfore they called the name of the same place, the valey of blessinge vnto this daye. And so all the men of Juda and Ierusalem returned wyth Jehosaphat they beade, for to go agayne to Ierusalem wyth gladnesse: for the Lord had made them to reioyce ouer theyr enemyes. And they came to Ierusalem wyth psalters and harpes, & shawmes, euen vnto the house of the Lord. And the feare of God sel on þe kyngdomes of al lādes, whā they had heard that þe Lord fought agaynste the enemyes of Israel. And so the realme of Jehosaphat was in tranquillite: and þys God gaue them rest on euery syde.

And Jehosaphat raygned vpon Juda, & was. xxxv. yere olde when he beganne to raygne, & raygned. xxv. yere in Ierusalem. And his mothers name was Aluba þe daughter of Silbi. And he walked in the waye of Ala þys father, & bowed not therfrom, doynge þe which was right in the syght of þe Lord: howbeit the hylaulters were not taken away, for þe people had not yet prepared their hertes vnto the God of theyr fathers. The reste of the actes of Jehosaphat fyrste & laste beholde, they are written amonge the saynges of Iehu the sonne of Hanani, whych noted them in the boke of the kynges of Israel.

After this dyd Jehosaphat kyng of Juda toyne hym selfe to Ahaziah kyng of Israel whose mynde was to do wychedly. He coupled hym selfe with hym, to make shippes to go to Charis. And they made þe shippes in Ezion, Gaber. And Eliezer þe sonne of Dodanah of Marisa prophced agaynst Jehosaphat, sayinge: because thou haste ioyned thy selfe wyth Ahaziah, the Lord hath broken thy woorkes. And the shippes were broken that they were not able to go to Charis.

¶ The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ Jehosaphat dyeth, and Jehoazam succedeth hym; which putteth to death þys dyethen, and is oppressed of the Moabites, and dyeth of the floure.

Jehosaphat also slepte to þys fathers, & was buryed with þys fathers in the cite of David, & Jehoazam his sone raygned in his stead: & he had bytherne which were þe sonnes of Jehosaphat, Azaria, Jehiel, zacharia, Alaria, Michael, & Sephatiah. All these were þe sonnes of Jehosaphat kyng of Juda. And their father gaue them many great cyties of golde, & syluer, & other special substaunce, & stronge cyties in Juda: but þe kyngdome gaue he to Jehoazam, for he was þe eldest. And Jehoazam rose vp agaynste þe kyngdome of his father, and preyed, and a line all þys byethen wyth the swarth, & byethie

And he walked in the way of the kynges of Israel, lyke as byd the house of Ahab, for he had the daughter of Ahab to wyfe, & he wrought euell in the eyes of the Lorde. Howbeit the Lorde wolde not destroye the house of Dauid because of the * couenaunte that he had made wth Dauid, as he promised to geue a light to hym and to hys sonnes for euer.

¶ In hys dayes the Edomites rebelled whā they were vnder the domynion of Iuda, ad made the selues a kinge. And Jehozā went forth wth hys lordes, & all his charettes were wth hym: & he rose vp by nyght, & smote ¶ Edomites, which cōpased him in, & the cāptaynes of the charettes. But Edom rebelled styl, so ¶ they wold not be vnder ¶ hande of Iuda vnto this day. That same tyme also byd Libna departe from being vnder his hande, because Jehozā had forsaken ¶ Lorde God of hys fathers. Moreover, he made bilanters in the cāptes of Iuda, and caused ¶ enhabytters of Jerusalem to comyt fornicacion, and prouoked Iuda to Idolatrye.

And there cam a wytyng to hym from Elia ¶ prophet, sayyng: Thus sayeth ¶ Lorde God of Dauid thy father: because ¶ thou hast not walked in the wayes of Jehosaphat thy father, & in the wayes of Asa kinge of Iuda but walkedst in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, & haste made Iuda & the dwellers of Jerusalem to go a whoyring, like to ¶ whoyrdome of the house of Ahab, & hast slayne thy brethren, euē thy fathers house, which were better then thou: beholde, with a great plague wyl ¶ Lorde smyte thy folke, thy chyldre thy wyues, and thy goodes. And thou shalt suffre great payne: euē a dyscase of thy bowelles, vntyl thy guttes fall out by reason of thy spyknes, dape by dape.

¶ And so the Lorde feared vp agaynst Jehozā the spret: of the Philistines, & the Arabians ¶ were besyde the blacke mozes. And they came vp into Iuda, and wasted it, and carped awaye al the substance ¶ was found in the kynges house, and his sonnes, and his wyues: so that there was neuer a sonne left him saue Jehohahas which was the yōgest amonge hys sonnes: And after al these thynges, the Lorde smote hym in hys bowels wth an incurable dyscase: And it cam to passe, ¶ in proffesse of tyme, euē after ¶ ende of two yeres hys guttes fel out in his spyknes: and so he dyed of very euell dyscases. And they made no buryng for hym lyke the burning of hys fathers. Whē he beganne to ragnē he was. xxii. yere olde, & ragned in Jerusalem. viii. yere, and lyued wretchedly: howbeit they buried hym in the cāpte of Dauid but not amonge the sepulchres of ¶ kynges.

The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ Ahaziah ragned in the thirde of Jehozam. he was kyng of Israel hyllech Ahaziah. Ahaziah went to death at the kynges lyngre, only he was ragned.

Ad the enhabytters of Jerusalem made Ahaziah hys ponge sonne kyng in his strede. For the men of warre that came with the host of the Arabians, had slayne all hys eldest sonnes. And so Ahaziah the sonne of Jehozam kyng of Iuda, was made kyng. Two xi. yere olde was he, whan he began to ragnē, and he ragned one yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Achaliahu the daughter of Amri. And he walked also in the wayes of the house of Ahab, for his mother (by hys counsel) entyled hym to do wyche. ly. Wherefore he did that which was euell in the syght of the Lorde, as did they ¶ wyl of the house of Ahab: for they were hys counselors after the death of his father, to his destruccyon. And he walked after theyr counsel, and went with Jehozam sonne of Ahab kyng of Israel, to fighte agaynst hys kyng of Siria at Ramoth in Gilead: and ¶ Siria's smote Jehozam. And he returned to be healed in Jezrel, of the woundes w^{ch} were geuen hym at Rama, when he fought wth Hazael kyng of Siria. And Ahaziah ¶ sonne of Jehozam kinge of Iuda, went downe to se Jehozam the sonne of Ahab at Jezrel, because he was dyscased. And it cam of God, that Ahaziah shoulde be dyscated for hys comyng to Jehozam: for whan he was come he went out with Jehozam agaynst Iehu ¶ sonne of Amisi. * whom ¶ Lorde had anointed to destroye ¶ house of Ahab. And so it came to passe ¶ whan Iehu was executyng iustice vpon the house of Ahab, & had found the lordes of Iuda & the sonnes of the brethren of Ahaziah that waited on Ahaziah, he slue the. * And he sought Ahaziah, and they caughte hym where he was byd in Samaria, and brought hym to Jezrel. And when they had slayne hym, they buried hym: because (sayde they) he is ¶ sonne of Jehosaphat, whych sought the Lorde wth all hys hert. And the house of Ahaziah had no powre to kepe styl the kyngdome.

¶ But when Achaliahu the mother of Ahaziah sawe that her sonne was dead, she arose and destroyed al the kynges seed in the kined of ¶ house of Iuda. And Jehosabeth the daughter of ¶ kyng toke Joas the sonne of Ahaziah, & scale him from amonge the kynges sonnes that were slayne, & put hym and hys nource in a prerie chambye. And Jehosabeth the daughter of kyng Iehozam the wyfe of Jehosaphat the preast, and the sister of Ahaziah byd hym from Achaliahu, that he was not slayne. And so he was wth them byd in the house of God six yere. And Achaliahu ragned ouer the lande.

The. xliii. Chapter.

¶ Now the sonne of Athaliah is made kynge.
Athaliah is put to death.

And in the seventh yere Jehoiada beyng holde, toke þe captaynes of hundredes. Azariahu the sonne of Jeroham, and Ji-mael þe sonne of Jehohanan, Azariahu þe sonne of Obed, Waasiah the sonne of Adaiahu, & Elisaphat þe sonne of zichri, and made a bond with them.
And they went aboute in Juda, and gathered the Leuites out of al the cyties of Juda & the auncient fathers of Israel: and they came to Jerusalem. And all the congregacion made a bonde with the kynge in the house of God.
And he sayd vnto them: beholde, the kynges sonne must raygne, * as the Lorde hath sayd of the chyldren of Dauid.

This is it therfore that ye shall do: The Sabbath parte of you shall (on the Sabbath) come to the preastes, Leuites, and keepers of the porches. And another thyrde parte shalbe by þe kynges house, and another thyrde parte shalbe at the gate of the foundacyon, and all all the people shalbe in the * courtes of the house of the Lorde. But there shal none come into the house of the Lorde, save the preastes & they that ministrate vnto the Leuites: They shall go in, for they are holy: but all the people shal kepe the watch of the Lorde. And the Leuites shall compass the kynge round about and euery man shall haue his weapon in his hade: and what other man soeuer both come into the house of the Lorde, he shalbe slayne:
and let them be with the kynge, whan he commeth in, and whan he goeth out.

And the Leuites and all Juda dyd accor-dyng to all thynges þe Jehoiada the preaste had comaunded, & toke euery man his men, & came in on the Sabbath, wch þe wrote out on the Sabbath daye: neither dyd Jehoiada þe preast let þe companies departe. And Jehoiada þe preast deliuered to the captaynes of his bordes, speares, shieldes, and boukelars, that had pertayned to kynge Dauid, and were in þe house of God. And he let al the people ene-ry mā hauping his wepō in his hade, fro the right syde of the temple, to the left syde of the temple, alonge by the aulter and the temple, rōunde aboute the kynge. And they brought out the kynges sonne, and put vpon him the croune, and * the testimonie, on (and they said) whan in his hade, the law that was to be kept) & made hym kynge. And Jehoiada & his sonnes an-nointed hym, & sayd: God saue the kynge.

¶ When Athaliah hearde the noyse of the people, runnyng & prayseinge the kynge, she came to þe people into the house of the Lorde.
And she looked, and beholde, the kynge stode in his place at the entryng in, & the Lordes and the trompettes were by the kynge, & all the people of the lande reioysed, blowyng w trompettes, & dyd playe wth instrumentes of musycke, & taught to synge & prayse. But Athaliah rent her clothes, and sayed: treason, treason. And Jehoiada the preaste went out to the captaynes of hundredes that were gouerners of the hoste, & sayd vnto the: haue her out wthout the doze of the temple: and whoso foloweth her, let hym be slayne with the swerde. For the preaste sayd þe they shuld not slepe her in the house of the Lorde. And they layd handes on her, tyl she was come to the entryng of the hostgate besyde the kynges house & there they slue her.

* And Jehoiada made a bonde betwene hym & all the people & the kynge, that they shulde be the Lordes people. And all the people wente to the house of Baal, & destroyed it, and brake his aulter and his ymages, & slue Mathan the preaste of Baal before the alters. And Jehoiada put the offces for the house of the Lorde vnder the hade of the prestes and Leuites, * as Dauid had bytributed them in the house of the Lorde, to offer burnt offerynges vnto the Lorde, * as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moyses, wth reioy-synge and synnyng, as it was ordeyned by Dauid. And he let porters by þe gates of the house of the Lorde, that none which was vncleane in any thyng shulde entre in.

And he toke the captaynes of hundredes & all the nobles, and the gouernours of the people, & al the folke of the lande, and caused the kynge to come downe out of the house of the Lorde, and they came thowre the hye gate into the kynges house, and let the king vpon the seate of the kyngdome. And al the people of þe lande reioysed, and the cytie was in traquilite, after þe they had slayne Atha-liah wth the swerde.

The. xliii. Chapter.

¶ Now during the lyfe of Jehoiada, kept the lawe, but after his deeth he regarded it not. He dyed the yere of the prophete. Now is a spylid of his olde seruall stand after hym saymeth Amasiah.

¶ Das was seue yere olde when he beganne to raygne, * he raygned fourty yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name also was zibia of Beerseba. And Joas dyd that which was right in the syght of the Lorde all the dayes of Jehoiada the preaste. And Jehoiada toke him two wyues, and he begat sonnes and dan-geters.

And it chaused after this that Joas was myned, to renewe the house of the Lorde, & he gathered together the preastes & the Leuites, & sayde to them: go oute vnto the cyties of Juda, & gather of all Israhell money, to repayre the house of youre God frome yere to yere, & le that ye haste the thyng: howbeit the Leuites were slack. And the kynge called Jehoiada that was the chiefe ad sayd vnto him

hym. Why requirdest thou not of the Levites to bypunge in, out of Juda & Jerusalem, * the collection of money accordynge to the commaundement of Moyses the scrivaunte of the Lorde and the congregacyon of Israel shuld offre it for the tabernacle of wytnesse. For wycked Athaliahu ad her chyldre brake vp the house of God, and all the thynges that were dedicat for the house of the Lorde dyd they bestowe for Bealim.

And at the kynges comaundemēt, * they made a chest, & set it without at the gate of the house of the Lorde: ad made a proclamaciō thowme Juda and Jerusalem, to bypunge into the Lorde * the taracion of money, & Moyses the scrivaunte of God set vpon Israell in the wylthernesse. And the lordes and all the people resoyced, and brought in, and caste into the chest, vntyl it was ful. And it fortunēd, that at the same tyme they brought in the chest (vnto them whych were in the kynges busynesse) by the hande of the Levites. And when they sawe that there was moche money, the kynges scrype (and one appoynted by the hys preast) came, and emptyed the chest, and toke it, and carped it to hys place agayne: thus they dyd daye by daye, and gathered moche money.

And the kyng & Jehoiada gaue it to loch as dyd the labour and worke in the house of the Lorde, and byrd masons and carpenters to repayre the house of the Lorde, and so dyd they artificers in yron and brasse, to make the house of the Lorde. And so the workmen wrought, and the worke mended thowme they hades: ad they made the house of God as it oughte to be, and strengthened it. And when they had fynished it, they brought the rest of the money before the kyng & Jehoiada, & therewith were made vessels for the house of the Lorde: euen vessels to mynstre wyth all, and to serue for burntofferings: chargers and spones, vessels of golde and syluer. And they offered burntofferings in the house of the Lorde continuallye all the dayes of Jehoiada. But Jehoiada wared olde, and dyed full of dayes. For an hundred & thyrtye yere olde was he when he dyed. And they buryed hym in the cytie of Dauid amonge the kynges, because he dealt wel wyth Israell, and wyth God ad with his house. And after the deeth of Jehoiada, came the Lorde of Juda, and made oberyssaunce to the kyng. And the kyng hearkenēd vnto them. And so they left the house of the Lorde God of they fathers, & serued groues and ydoles. And then came the wrath of God vpon Juda and Jerusalem, for theys their trespasses sake. And he sent prophetes to the, to bring the agayne vnto the Lord. And they testifed vnto the: But they wolde not heare.

And the sperte of God came vpon zacharia the sonne of Jehoiada the preast, whiche stode by the people, & sayd vnto them: Thus sayth God: why transgresse ye the commaundementes of the Lorde, & ye can not prosper: for because ye haue forsaken the Lorde, he also hath forsaken you. * And they conspyred agaynst hym, & stoned hym wyth stones at the commaundement of the kyng: euen in the court of the house of the Lorde. And so Joas the kyng remembred not the kindness whiche Jehoiada hys father had done to him, but slue his sonne. And whē he dyed, he sayd: the Lorde loke vpon it, and requyre it.

And when the yere was out, it fortunēd, that the host of Syria came vp agaynst him: & they came agaynst Juda & Jerusalem, & destroyed all the Lorde of the people fro among the people, & sent all the spoyle of the kyng to Damascus, for the Syrians caue a small company of men, & the Lord deliuered a very great hoste into their hande, because they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers. And maner they serued Joas accordyng to his deed.

And when they were departed from him, they left him in great diseases: & hys owne scrivautes conspyred agaynst him for the blood of the chyldren of Jehoiada the preast, and slue hym on hys bed, and he dyed, & they buryed him in the cytie of Dauid: but not in the sepulchres of the kynges. And these stethes that conspyred agaynst hym: zebad the sonne of Shimeath an Ammonite, and Iholabad the sonne of Shimeath a Moabite. And hys sonnes, and the summe of the tare that was rapled in hys tyme, and the repaynyng of the house of God, behold, they are written in the booke of the booke of the kynges. And Amaziah hys sonne raygned in hys steade.

The .xxv. Chapter.

Amaziah ouercometh the Syrians. And Joas kyng of Israel ouercometh Amaziah.

Amaziah was .xxv. yere old, when he began to raygne, & he raygned .xxv. yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Jehobadan of Jerusalem. And he dyd that which is righte in the syght of the Lorde: but not wth a perfect bent. And as sone as he was setled in the kyngdome, he slue hys scrivautes, that had kylled his father. But he slue not theyr chyldre, because it is wyrtte thus in the lawe & booke of Moyses, where the Lorde comaunded, sayng: * the fathers shall not dye for the chyldren, neither shall the chyldren dye for the fathers: but euery man shal dye for hys owne synne. And Amaziah gathered Juda together, & made them captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, accordyng to the house of they fathers, thowme oute all Juda and Benjamin. And he nombred them from the ty yere olde and aboue, and founde among them, thre hundred thousande chosen men, able to go to battell, and that coude handle speare.

spare and spilde. He byrde also an hundred thousande strong fyghtynge men out of Israel, for an hundred talentes of syluer.

And there came a man of God to him, and sayde: O kynge, let not the armye of Israel come wyth the: for the Lorde is not wyth Israel, nether wyth all the house of Ephraim. But yf thou wilt nedes be saythlesse, come on, and take the batell in hãde, and God shal make þe sal befoze the enemye. For God hath power to helpe, & to cast downe. And Amaziah sayde to the mā of God: what shal we do then, for the hundred talentes, which I haue giuen for the booke of Israel? The man of God answered: the Lorde is able to geue the moche more then they be.

And Amaziah leuered them to the armie that was come to him out of Ephraim to go home agayne. Wherefoze they were excedynge wroth wyth Juda, and returned home in greete angre.

And Amaziah toke hert and carped oute his people, and went to the salt valley, and smote of the chyldzen of Seir ten thousande. And other ten thousande dyd the chyldzen of Juda take alpye, and carped them vnto the toppe of a rocke, and cast them downe from the toppe of the rocke, & they all to burste: but the souldyers of the armye whiche Amaziah sent awaye, that they shulde not go wyth his people to battel, fel vpo the cyties of Juda, from Samaria vnto Bethzon, & smote the thousande of them, & toke moche spoule.

And it chaunced, after þe Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, he brought the Gods of the chyldzen of Seir, & set them vp to be his Gods, and bowed him selfe befoze the: and burned enckle vnto the. Wherefoze the Lorde was wroth wyth Amaziah and sente vnto hym a prophete, which sayd vnto hym: why hast þe sought the Gods of the people, which were not able to deliuer theyr owne people out of thynne hande? And it chauced, that as the prophete talked wyth hym the kynge sayde vnto hym: haue men made the of the kynges counsell cease, why wilt thou be beaten? And þe prophete ceased and sayde: I am sure that God is mynded to destroye the, because thou hast done thys, and agerdest not vnto my counsell.

Then Amaziah kynge of Juda toke aduise, and sent to Joas the sonne of Jehoahaz the sonne of Jehu kynge of Israel, & sayd come, that we may se ether other. And Joas kynge of Israel sent to Amaziah kynge of Juda, sayinge: a thyffell that is in Libanon, sent to a Cedar tree of Liban, saying: geue thy daughter to my sonne to wyfe. And there came a wyde beast of Liban, & troad downe the thyffell. Thou sayest þe thou hast beaten þe Edomites, and thynne herte maketh the proud, to glorify thy selfe. Now therfoze byde at home: why doste thou prouoke vnto euell, that thou mayest perishe, both thou and Juda wyth the?

But Amaziah wolde not berken to him: for it came of God, euen to deliuer them into þe hãde of their enemyes because they sought counsell at the Gods of Edom. And so Joas the kynge of Israel came vp: and they sawe ether other, both he and Amaziah kynge of Juda at Bethsames which is in Juda. And Juda was put to þe worse befoze Israel, and they fled euery mā to his tent. And Joas the kynge of Israel toke Amaziah kynge of Juda the sonne of Joahas the sonne of Jehoahaz at Bethsames: and brought hym to Jerusalem, & tare the walle of Ierusalem (from the gate of Ephraim vnto þe gate that was ouer agaynst it) foure hundred cubites. And he toke awaye also all the golde and syluer, and all the Jewelles that were founde in the house of God wyth Dbed Edom, & the treasures of the kynges house, & the yonge warde, and returned to Samaria.

And Amaziah the sonne of Joas kynge of Juda lyued after the deeth of Joas sonne of Jehoahaz king of Israel fiftene yere. The rest of the actes of Amaziah first and laste, are they not wyrtten in the booke of the kynges of Juda and Israel. And after the tyme that Amaziah dyd turne awaye from the Lorde: they conspyred treason agaynst hym in Jerusalem: and whan he was fled to Lachis, they sent to Lachis after hym, and slue hym there: and brought hym vp wyth holes, and buried hym wyth his fathers in þe cytie of Juda.

The. xxi. Chapter.

After the deeth of Amaziah raygned Aziah (otherwyse called Azia) whiche is written in the lepie, and Joatham raygned in his rowme.

Then all the people of Juda toke Azia (whiche was synne pere olde) and made hym kynge in the rowme of his father Amaziah.

And he buylt Cloth, and brought it agayne to Juda, after that the kynge was layd to slepe wyth his fathers. Wyrtten pere olde was Azia, when he began to raygne, and he raygned. lli. yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name also was Jecholia of Jerusalem. And he did that whiche was ryght in þe syght of the Lorde, accordynge to all, as dyd his father Amaziah. And it came to passe, that he sought God: in the dayes of zachariah (whiche maintained the feare of God) & as long as he sought the Lorde, God made hym to prospere.

And he went to battel agaynst the Philistines, & brake downe the wall of Geth, and the wall of Jabne, & the wall of Adod, and buylt cyties about Adod & amonge the Philistines. And God holpe him agaynst þe Philistines, & agaynst the Arabians & dwelt in Gethaal.

Gurbaal and Hammehuntin. And the Ammonites gaue tribute to Uzia, and his name spreadde abroad eue to þ entering in of Egypte: for he played the man exceedingly. Who reouer Uzia buylt towres in Ierusalem by the corner gate, & by the valeye gate, and at the turnynge of the wall, & made the ströge. And he buylt towres in the wyldernesse, and dygged many welles: for he had moche castell in the valeys and playnes, plowmen and vnyedressers in the mountaynes and in Charnel, for he loued husbandrye.

And Uzia had an host of fyghtynge men that went out to warre in the armye according to the nombre of their office vnder the hande of Iziel the scribe & Maasiabu the ruler, & vnder the hande of Hananiabu whych was one of the kynges Lordes. And þ hoale nombre of the auncient fathers, & of the men of myght were two thousande and syxe hundred: & vnder the hande of them was the armye of the men of warre, euen thre hundred and seuen thousande, & fyue hundred & made warre with the power of an armye, helppynge the kyng against þ enemies. And Uzia provided them thowse out all the host, shildes, speares, helmettes, habergynnes, bowes and synghes for to cast stones. And he made softe engynnes in Ierusalem, whiche he inuented & layed on þ towres & corners, to shote arrowes & greate stones wythall. And his name spread farre abroad, because he was helped so excellently, so that he became very myghtye.

But in hys strength, his hert arose to his destruction: for he transgressed agaynst the Lorde hys God, & went into the temple of þ Lorde, to burne ense vpon the alter of incense. And Azariabu the preaste wöte in after him and wyth hym foure schoe preastes of the Lord that were valeant me. And they stode by Uzia the kyng, and sayde vnto hym: * it pertayneth not to the Uzia to burne incense vnto the Lorde, but to the preastes the chyldren of Aaron, that are coöecrate for to offre incense. Come therfore out of the sanctuary for thou hast trespassed, and it is no worshipp to the before the Lorde God.

And Uzia was wroth, & had incense in his hande to burne it: & so whyle he had indygnacion agaynst the preastes, & the leprosie sprang in his fozeheede before þ preastes in the house of the Lorde, euen besyde the incense aulter. And Azariabu the chefe preaste wyth all the other preastes looked vpon hym: and beholde he was become a leper in hys fozeheede, and they vered him thence. And he was fayne to go out, because the Lorde had smytten hym. And Uzia the kyng continued a leper vnto the daye of hys death, and dwelt seuerall in an house beinge a leper and shutt out of the house of the Lorde. And Iotham hys sonne had the gouernance of the kynges house, and iudged the people of the lande.

The rest of the actes of Uzia spelt & lade byd Ilaye the prophete the sonne of Amos, wyte. And so Uzia slept with his fathers, & they buryed him with his fathers in the hill so the buryall which was besyde the sepulchres of the kynges. For they sayd: he is a leper. And Iotham hys sonne raygned in his stede.

The xxviii. Chapter.

Iotham raygneth, and ouercometh the Ammonites. And his sonne raygneth after hym.

Iotham was fyue and twenty yere olde, when he beganne to raygne, and raygned sytene yere in Ierusalem. His mothers name also was Jerusa the daughter of Zadoc. And he wöte that which was right in the syght of þ Lord in all poyntes as byd his father Uzia, but he came not into the temple of the Lorde, and the people byd pet wyckedly. He buylt þ gate of the temple of the Lorde, and on the walle (where the house of ordinaunce was) he buylt moche. Moreover, he buylt cyties in the mountaynes of Iuda, and in the woode countreye he buylt castels and towres.

He fought with the kyng of the chyldren of Ammon, and preuayled agaynst the. And the chyldren of Ammon gaue hym the same yere an hundred talentes of syluer, and ten thousande quarters of wheate, and ten thousande of barley. So moch byd the chyldren of Ammon gyue hym the seconde yere and the thyrde also. So Iotham became myghtye, bycause he directed his way before the Lord his God.

The rest of the actes of Iotham & all his warres and his conuerfacion, lo, they are witten in the booke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda. He was xxv. yere olde when he began to raygne, and raygned. xvi. yere in Ierusalem. And Iotham slept with his fathers, and they buryed hym in the cytie of Dauid: and Iotham hys sonne raygned in his stede.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The wyckednesse of Ahas kyng of Iuda. After hym raygneth Bechiasa.

Ahas was & twenty yere olde when he beganne to raygne, and raygned sytene yere in Ierusalem, and he byd wöte that which is ryght in the syght of the Lord as byd his father Dauid: for he walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, and made molten ymagis for Baalim. He offred incense in the valley of the sonne of Hinnö, & buryed his chyldren in fyre after the abhominacion of the heathen, whom the Lorde cast out before the chyldren of Israel. He offred also and burnt incense in hilalters and on mountaynes and vnder every grene tree.

Wherefore the Lorde his God deliuered him into the hãde of the kyng of the Syryes.

which bet him, & carped awaye a great multitude of hys captiue, and brought them to Damasco. And he was deliuered into the hãde of the kyng of Israel, which smote him with a greate slaughter. For Pekah þ sonne of Kemaliahu slue in Iuda an hundred and twentye thousande in one day, whych were all fyghtinge men: ad that because they had forsake the Lorde God of their fathers. And zichi a myghtie mā of Ephraim slue Maasiah the kynges sonne, & Africa the gouernour of the house, and Elcana þ was next to the kyng. And the childre of Israel toke prisoners of theyr brethren, two hundred thousande women, sonnes, & daughters, & carped awaye moch spoule of them, & broughte the spoule to Samaria.

But there was a prophete of the Lordes (whose name was Obed) and he wente out before þ host that came to Samaria, & sayd vnto them, Beholde, because the Lord God of youre fathers is wroth w Iuda, he hath deliuered them into your hãde. And ye haue slaine them with cruelnesse, þ reacheth vp to heauen. And now ye purpose to kepe vnder the chyldren of Iuda and Jerusalem, and to make them bondmen and bondwomen. And do ye not lade youre selues with synne in the syght of þ Lord your God? Nowe heare me therfore, and deliuer the captiues agayne whych ye haue taken of youre brethren: for eis shal the great wroth of God be vpo you.

Wherfore, certayne of the heades of the chyldren of Ephraim, as Asaria the sonne of Jehohanã, Berechiahu the sonne of Mesilemoth, and Jehezkiahu the sonne of Shallum, and Amasa the sonne of Hadlai, stode vp agaynst them that came from the warre, and layde vnto them: bypunge not in the captiues byther. For where as we haue offended towarde God already, ye entde to adde moze to our synnes & trespase. For our trespase is great already, and there is a fearce wroth agaynst Israel. And vpon that, the men of armes lefte the captiues & the spoule before the Lordes and all the congregacyon.

And the mē that were nowe rehearsed by name, rose vp, and toke the prisoners, & with the spoule clothed all þ were naked amonge them, and araped them, & shod them, & gaue them to eate & to dypnche, & anoynted them, & carped all that were feble of them vpon asses, & broughte them to Jericho (the cytie of Palmietrees) to theyr brethren: & then they returned to Samaria agayne.

At that same tyme dyd kyng Abaz send vnto þ kynges of Assur, to haue helpe of the. And the Edomites came againe, & slue some of Iuda, and carped awaye captiues. And the Philistines invaded the cyties in the low countrey, and towarde the southe of Iuda: & toke Bethsames, & Alalon, & Gederoth, and Socho wyth the townes longynge therto, & Chimna wyth the townes of the same: Simso, & the townes therof, & dwelte there. For the Lorde brought Iuda lowe, because of Abaz kyng of Iuda, whych made Iuda naked, & transgressed soze agaynst the Lorde. And Thilgath pilneser kyng of the Assyrians came vpon hym, & troubled hym rather then strengthed hym. For Abaz toke awaye a porciõ out of the house of the Lord, & out of the kynges house, & out of þ Lordes houses, & gaue vnto the kyng of the Assyrians: & yet it helped hym not. And in the very tyme of hys tribulacyon dyd kyng Abaz trespase yet moare agaynst the Lord. For he offered vnto the Gods of them of Damasco, which bette him, & he sayd: because the Gods of the kynges of Syria helpe them, therfore wyll I offer to the, that they maye helpe me also. But they were hys destruction, & the destruction of all Israel. And Abaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and brake them, and put vp the dozes of the house of the Lord, and made him: alters in euery corner of Jerusalem. And in all the cyties of Iuda he made hyllalters, to burne incense vnto other gods, ad angred the Lorde God of hys fathers. The reste of hys actes & hys wothes fyrst and last: beholde, they are witten in the boke of the kynges of Iuda & Israel. And Abaz slepte wyth his fathers, & they buried hym in the cytie of Jerusalem: but brought hym not vnto the sepulchres of the kynges of Israel. And hezekia his sonne raygned in hys steade.

Hezekia (otherwise called Ezechias, or Jehezkiabu) rethorseth vnto the temple of the Lorde all the thynges that had not bene regarded of hys predecessors.

Hezekia begane to raygne, whē he was fyue & twenty yere old, & raygned nyne & twenty yere in Jerusalem. And hys mothers name was Abia þ daughter of zachariahu. And he dyd þ whych was right in the syght of the Lorde, in all poyntes as dyd Dauid hys father. He opened the dozes of the house of the Lorde (in the fyrst yere ad fyrst moneth of hys raygne) and repayed them. into the inner partes of the houſe of the Lord to clenſe it, and brought out all the vncle-into the court of the houſe of the Lorde. And the Leuites toke it, to carpe it oute into the

The. xxi. Chapter.

Chazkia remeth the feast of pascouer.

AD Hezekia sent to al Israel & Juda, and wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasse, & they shuld come to the house of y^e Lorde at Ierusalem, & offer Pasceouer vnto y^e Lorde God of Israel. And y^e kynge helde a counsell with his lordes & al the congregacyon of Ierusalem * to kepe the feast of Pasceouer in the seconde moneth. For they coude not kepe it at y^e tyme: because the prestes were not sanctified sufficiently, neither was the people gathered together to Ierusalem. And the thyng pleaded the kynge & all the congregacyon. And they decreed y^e it shuld be proclaimed thowout al Israel fro Bersabe to Dan, & they shuld come, & hold y^e feast of Pasceouer vnto y^e Lorde God of Israel at Ierusalem: for they had not done it of a greute season as they shuld haue done by the lawe.

So the postes wente wpyth letters of the hande of the kynge, & of his Lordes thowout al Israel and Juda: & at the commaundement of the kynge they sayd: Ye childer of Israel, turne agayne vnto the Lorde God of Abraham, Isahac & Israel, & let euery one returne to the remaunt that are escaped you out of the hnde of the kynges of Assur. And be not ye lyke your fathers, & your brethren which trespassed agaynst the Lorde God of theyr fathers, which gaue them vp to be destroyed, as ye se. And now be not ye stiffnecked, lyke as were your fathers, but pelye your selues vnto the Lorde, & entre into hys holy place, which he hath sanctified for euer and letue the Lorde your God, & the fearcelles of his wyath shal turne awaye fro you. For yf ye turne agayne vnto the Lorde, then shall your brethren and your chyldren fynde compassion in the presence of them that toke them captiue, & they shal come agayne vnto thys lnde: * for y^e Lorde your God is gracious & mercifull, and wyl not turne awaye his face from you, yf ye conuerthe vnto hym.

And so the postes wente from cytie to cytie in the lande of Ephraim & Manasse, euen vnto zabuln. But they laughed the to skorne & mocked the. Acuerthelesse, yet dyuerse of Asser, Manasse and of zabuln submytted the selues, and came to Ierusalem. And the hnde of God was in Juda, so that he gaue the oneberte, to the commaundemente of the kynge and of the rulers, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde. And there assembled to Ierusalem moche people, and there was present a myghty great congregacion, to holde the feast of swete bread in the seconde moneth.

And they arose, & remoued the * altiers that were in Ierusalem. And all the vessels of incense dyd they awaye, and cast them in.

to y^e broke Cedron. And they slue Pasceouer the fourtenth dape of y^e second moneth. And the prestes and Leuites, whiche were ashammed, sanctified them selues, and broughte in the burnt offerings into the house of y^e Lorde. And they stode in theyr offyce after their manner, and accordyng to the lawe of Moses the man of God. And the prestes sprinkled the bloude, whiche they receaued of the hnde of the Leuites. For there were many in the congregacion, that were not sanctified, and the Leuites dyd slep Pasceouer for all y^e were not cleane, & that myght not execute y^e holye worke of the Lorde. For many of the people and very many: out of Ephraim, Manasse, Issackar and zabulon were not censed, & yet dyd eate Pasceouer agaynst y^e lawe appoynted. Wherefore Hezekia prayed for the, and sayd: the good Lorde be mercifull vnto the: For he set hys whole hert, to seke the Lorde God, euen the God of his fathers: but al the other dyd not so, accordyng to vnsayned holynesse. And the Lorde hearde Hezekia, and healed the people. And the chyldren of Israel that were presente at Ierusalem, helde the feast of swete bread seuen dayes with great gladnesse, and the Leuites and the prestes prayed, & magnified the power of y^e Lorde dape by dape, vpon instrumentes.

And Hezekia spake hertely vnto all the Leuites that had vnderstandyng and were of a good mynde toward y^e Lorde. And they dyd eate thowout that feast, seuen dayes longe, & offered peace offerings, & thanked the Lorde God of their fathers. And y^e whole assemble toke counsell, to do so other seuen dayes, and they helde those seuen dayes wpyth gladnesse. For Hezekia kynge of Juda toke out (from amonge his catell) for the congregacyon. M. yonge oxen, and. vii. M. shepe. And the Lordes gaue out to the congregacion a. M. yonge oxen, and. x. thousande shepe. And a greute nombze of the prestes were sanctified.

And all the congregacyon of Juda wpyth the prestes & Leuites, & al the congregacyon that came out of Israel, and the straungers that came out of the lande of Israel, ad thad dwelt in Juda, reioysed: & there was great gladnesse in Ierusalem. For sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel there was no suche ioye in Ierusalem. And the prestes and the Leuites arose, and blessed the people, & theyr voyce was hearde of the Lorde, and theyr prayer came vp vnto heauen, hys holy dwellynge place.

The. xxi. Chapter.

After that Hezekia had callid agayne the people vnto the worke of the Lorde, he ordeyned the prestes to whom he commaunded to praye for the.

out and brake the ymages, and * cut downe the Idoles groues, & al to brake the hie places, and * alters, thowout all Iuda and Ben Jamin, in Ephraim also and Manasse, vntill they had vterly destroyed them al. And all the chyldre of Israel returned euery mā to his possessions & to their owne cyties.

And hezekia appoynted sondre companies of the preastes & Leuites after the dyuersyte of theyr mynistracions, euery mā accordyng to his office both preastes and Leuites, for the burnt offeringe & peace offeringes, to minystr, & to geue thankes & prayse in the gates of the host of the Lord. And the kynges porcion of his substaunce he gaue, were dayly burnt offeringes in y^e mornynge and euenynge, & burnt offeringes for the Sabboth dayes, newmones, & solempne feastes, accordyng to as it is wyrtten in the lawe of the Lord. And he bade y^e people that dwelte in Ierusalem, geue the parte to the preastes & Leuites, that they might substauncially applye the selues to the lawe of the Lord. And as lone as the kynges comaundement came abroad, the chyldre of Israel brought aboundance of first frutes, of cozne, wyne, oyle, honye, & of all maner of frutes of the felde, & the tythes of all maner of thynges broughte they in plentifully. And y^e chyldre of Israel and Iuda that dwelt in the cyties of Iuda, they also broughte in the tythes of oren and sytze, and other holy tythes whych were consecrate vnto the Lord theyr God, they dyd offre, and brought the all by heapes. In the thyrty moneth they beganne to laye the heapes (in maner of a foundacion) and fynyshed them in the seuenth moneth.

And when hezekia and the Lordes came and sawe the heapes, they blessed y^e Lord & his people Israel. And hezekia questyoned wyth the preastes and y^e Leuites concerning the heapes. And Azaria the chiefe preaste of the house of iadock, answered hym, & sayde: sente the people beganne to bryng the beaue offeringes into the house of the Lord, we al so haue had ynough to eate, there remayned so moch: for y^e Lord hath blessed his people, and thys heape is left. And hezekia had prepare the chambres in the house of the Lord. And they dyd prepare them, & carped in the first frutes, the tythes, and the dedicat thynges, saythfully.

Ouer whiche Chonaniabu the Leuite had the rule. Ad Semei his brother next to hym. And Iehiel, Azaziabu, Sabath, Alael, Jerimoth, Josabad, Eliel, Ielmachiabu, Zababath & Banatihu were ouersears cydepyed by Chonaniabu, & Semei his brother was an offyter of hezekia the kyng, and Azaria was the ruler of the house of God (vnto whiche all these thynges belongeth) And Chozie the sonne of Iunna the Leuite and porter of y^e East doze, had the ouersyght of the thynges that were offred of a freewyl vnto God (and were geue in maner seuerally vnto the Lord) ad ouer the thynges most holy. And vnder hys hand were Eden, Miniamin, Iesua, Semeiabu, Amariabu, and Sechaniahu in the cyties of the preastes appoynted of their tythes to geue to theyr brethzen their porcions, as well to the small as to the greate.

Except that to the males that were redemed from thre yere & aboue (amonge al that went into the house of the Lord) they gaue geue daye by daye, for their ministracion, & for their geuyng attēdaunce, & for their dyuerse waytinges by course. And to the preastes & Leuites thowout the dontholde of their fathers, from twentye yere & aboue, wayte when their courses came. And to the families of all their babes, wyues, sonnes & daughters thowout all the congregaciō. For vpon the fydelyte of them were the holy thynges bestowed. And to the chyldren of Iaron, the preastes, whych were in the citie and suburbs of their cyties, cytie by cytie the mē (whose names were expelied afore) shulde geue porcions, euen to all the males amonge the preastes, and to all the Leuites accordyng to theyr nombre.

And of thys maner dyd hezekia thowout all Iuda, & wrought it that is good, & ryghte and true, befoze the Lord hys God. And in all the workes y^e he beganne for the seruice of the house of God, for the lawe, and for the comaundementes, he sought his God, & that dyd he wyth al hys hert, & prospered.

The xxxii. Chapter.

¶ Sennacherib (or Sancherib) beleageryng Ierusalem is stryken of the Angell. Hezekia dyeth, after whiche succedeth Manasse.

After that these deades were fully done * Sennacherib kyng of Assur came, and entred into Iuda, & compaled the strong cyties, and thought to wyne them for hym self. And so when hezekia sawe that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fyght agaynst Ierusalem, he toke counsell wyth his Lordes, and men of myght to lay the water of the fountaynes without the citie: & they dyd helpe him. For they gaue many of the people together, & they digged welles, and the broke that ranne thoro the myddes of the lande, sayinge: why shall the kynge of Assur come, and fynde moche water? And hezekia went to lustely, and buyle vp all the wall where it was broken, & made ordinance vpon the towres, and to the other wall withoute, and repayred Sillo in the citty of Dauid, and made many bartes and spydes.

And he set captaynes of warre ouer the people, and gathered them together to hym in the large strete of the gate of the citty and spake gently to them, sayinge: Blucke vp your hertes & be strong: We not afrayed nor discouraged for the kynge of Assur, & for all the multitude that he hath with hym: * For there be mo with vs then with hym. With hym is an arme of flesh: But with vs is the Lorde our God, for to helpe vs, and to fight our battayles. And þ people toke a courage

* After this dyd Sennacherib kynge of Assur sende of his seruantes to Jerusalem, (but he hym selfe remayned besyde Lachys: hauyng all his power with hym) vnto Hezekia kynge of Juda, and vnto all Juda that were at Jerusalem, sayinge: Thus sayth Se-

Ope that dwell in Jerusalem wiche is besieged: Doth not hezekia entyce you to gyue our poure selues vnto deathe, hunge, and thurs, sayinge: the Lorde our God shall ryd vs out of the hande of the kynge of Assur.

hath not the same hezekia put downe his high places and his alters, and commanded Juda and Jerusalem, sayinge: Ye shal wor-shyppe before one aulter, and burne incence vpon the same.

knowe ye not what I ad my fathers haue done vnto the people of al landes? Were the goddess of the people of other lādes hable oʒ myght to saue they lādes out of my hand? which of all the goddess of those nacions that my fathers destroyed coulde deluyer his people out of myne hand? And shall your god be able to deluyer you out of my hand? Wherfore nowe let not hezekia decyue you, nor persuade you of this fallō, nor yet beleue hi.

For as no god amonge all nacions and kingdomes, was able to ryd his people out of my hande & out of the hand of my fathers how moch lesse shal your goddess be able to hepe you out of my hand? And yet mo thyn-ges dyd his seruantes speake agaynst þ lord God, and agaynst his seruāt hezekia. And (Sennacherib) also wrote a letter, to rāple on þ Lord God of Israel, and spake agaynst hym, sayinge: as the goddess of the nacions of other landes haue not bene hable to deluyer they people out of my hande. Euen so shall not the God of hezekia deluyer his people out of myne hand. And they cryed w a loude voyce in the Jewes speache vnto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall to feare them and to make them saynte derted, and þ they might to take the citie. And they spake agaynst the God of Jerusalem, as agaynst the gods of the nacions of the earth, which were the worches of the handes of men.

But hezekia the kynge, and the prophet Isai the sonne of Amoz prayed agaynst that blasphemy, and cried vp to beauen. And the Lorde sent an angel, whych destroyed al the men of warre and the lordes and captaynes of the host of the kynge of Assur, & he turned hys face agayne wth shame towarde hys owne lande. * And when he was come into þ house of his god, they þ came of hys owne bodye slue hym there with the sword. And so the Lorde saued hezekia and the inhabiters of Jerusalem out of the hand of Sennacherib kynge of Assur, and from the hand of al other, & mayntayned them on euery syde.
And many brought offerynges vnto þ Lorde to Jerusalem, and presentes to hezekia kynge of Juda: so that he was magnified in the syght of all nacions from thence forth.

* In those dayes hezekia was syche vnto the deathe, & prayed vnto the Lord, which answered hym: and shewed hym a wonder-full myracle. But hezekia dyd not agayne vnto God accordyng to it þ he had shewed hym, for hys hert arose: & there came wrath vpon hym & vpon Juda ad Jerusalem. Not withstanding hezekia submitted him selfe (after that hys herte was rylen vp) he & the inhabiters of Jerusalem: & the wrath of the Lord cā not vnto the in þ daies of hezekia.

And hezekia had excedyng much ryches and honour. And he gat hym treasures of siluer and golde, precious stones, and spices, spydes, and of al maner pleasant Iuel-les: and made floze houses for the fruytes of corne, for wyne and oyle: and stalles for all maner of beastes, and foldes for shepe. And he made hym ctyes, & had of shepe and oren great aboundaunce. For God had geuen him substaunce excedyng much. This same hezekia stopped the vpper water sprynges of Sihō, and brought them downe to the west syde of the citte of Dauid. And hezekia prospered in all hys woorkes. And when the prynces of Babylon sente vnto hym Ambasadors, to enquerre of the wodre that cha-unced in the lande, God left hym * to tēpe hym and that all þ was in hys herte, myght be knowne.

The rest of the dedes of hezekia, and hys goodnes, beholde: they are wyrtē in the vision of Isai the prophet the sonne of Amoz in the booke of the kynge of Juda & Israel.
And hezekia slepte with his fathers, & they sepulchres of the sonnes of Dauid: and all

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Manasse is taken prisoner, and after that he cometh out, he destroyeth the Idolles. He dyeth, and after hym succeedeth Amon, whiche is killed of his owne people and Josias hys sonne raygneth in hys steade.

Manasse was. xii. yeaere olde, when he beganne to raygne, and he raygned. lvi. yeaere in Jerusalem: but dyd euell in the syght of the Lorde lyke vnto the abhominacions of the heathen whome the Lorde cast out before the chyldren of Israel. For he went to, and buylte the hill alters, whych Iheremia his father had broken downe. And he reared vp alters for Baalim, and made groues, and worshypped al the hoste of heauen, and serued them.

And he buylt alters in the house of the Lorde where as the Lorde yet had sayde: in Jerusalem that my name be for euer. And he buylde alters for all the hoste of heauen in the two courtes of the house of the Lorde. And he burnt hys chyldren in fyre, in the valley of the sonne of Hinnon. He was a sorcerer: he regarded the cpinge of byrdes, used inchaunmentes, & mayntayned workers with spyttes, and sears of fortun es: ad wroughte moche euell in the syghte of the Lorde to angre hym withall.

B And he put the kerued ymage ad an ydol whych he had made in the house of God. Of whych house, God had sayde to Dauid & to Salomon hys sonne: in this house and in Jerusalem, whych I haue chosen afoze all the trybes of Israel, I will put my name for euer, and wyl nomoze bypnyng the seate of Israel from of the lande whych I haue ordeyned for poure fathers. So be that they will be dyligent and do al that I haue commaunded them in all the lawe, and statutes. ad ordeynances by the bande of Moses. And so Manasse made Juda and the inhabytters of Jerusalem to erre, and to do worse then the heathen, whom the Lorde destroyed before the chyldren of Israel. And the Lorde spake to Manasse & to hys people, but they wolde not regarde.

Wherfore, the Lorde brought vpon them the captaynes of the hoste of the king of the Assyrians whych toke Manasse in holdre, ad bounde hym with cheynes, and carped hym to Babylon. And when he was in tribulation, he besought the Lorde hys God, & humbled hym selfe exceedingly before the God of hys fathers, and made intercessyons to hym, and God was intreated of hym, and hearde hys prayer, and brought hym agayne to Jerusalem into hys kynngdome. And then Manasse knewe, that the Lorde was God.

After thys he buylte a wall without the cite of Dauid on the west syde of Gion in the valleye as they came to the fyste gate, and rounde aboute Ophel, and brought it vp of a verpe greate height, and put captaynes of warre in al the stronge cyties of Juda. And he toke awape straunge gods and Images out of the house of God, and al the alters that he had buylt in the mount of the house of God, and Jerusalem and cast them out of the ctyte. And he prepared the altar of the Lorde & sacrificed thereon peaceofferynges and thankeofferynges and charged Juda to serue the Lorde God of Israel. Herethen the people dyd offre styl in the hylaulters, howbeit vnto the Lorde they God only.

The rest of the actes of Manasse, and hys prayer vnto his God, & the wordes of the sears & of them that spake to hym in the name of the Lorde God of Israel, behold, they are wyrtten in the saynges of the kynnes of Israel. And his prayer, and howe that he was hearde, and al his synnes, and hys trespass, and the places where he made hylaulters, & set vp groues, & ymages (before he was mekened) behold, they are wyrtten among the saynges of the sears. And Manasse slept with hys fathers, and they buried hym in hys owne house: & Amon hys sonne raygned in hys rowme. Amon was two & twenty yeaere olde, when he beganne to raygne, ad raygned two yeaere in Jerusalem. But he dyd euell in the syghte of the Lorde, lyke ad dyd Manasse hys father: for Amon sacrificed to all the kerued ymages whych Manasse hys father had made, and serued them, & submytted not hym selfe before the Lorde: ad Manasses his father had mekened hym selfe. But Amon trespassed greatly. And his owne seruantes conspyred agaynst hym & slew hym in hys owne house. But the people of the lande slue all the that had conspyred agaynst king Amon. And the same people of the lide made Josia hys sonne kinge in hys rowme.

In the. viii. yeaere of hys raygne (when he was yet a chyld) he beganne to seke after the God of Dauid his father. ters of Baalim euen in hys presence: & other Images that were in greater honour then they, he caused to be destroyed. And the groves, kerued ymages, and Images of metall he brake and made duste of them, and strowed it vpon the graues of them that had offered vnto them. And he burnt the bones of the Priestes vpon the altiers of them, & censed Juda & Ierusalem. And euen so dyd he in the cyties of Manasse, Ephraim, Symeon, vnto Repebthali. And in the wyldernes of them rounde aboute, he plucked a sondre the altiers and the groves, and dyd beat them and stamp them to powdre, and beate downe all the Images thowout all the lande of Israel: and returned to Ierusalem agayne.

In the. xlviii. yere of hys raygne whē he had pouged the lande and the temple * he sente Saphan the sonne of Amaziahu, & Maasiah the gouernoure of the citie & Ioah the sonne of Ioahaz the recorder, to repayre the house of the Lord hys God. And when they came to Helkiah the hie Prieste, they deliuered the money that was brought into the house of God, whych the Leuytes kepte the entrys, had gathered of the hand of Manasse, and Ephraim, & of all that yet remained in Israel, and of all Juda & Benjamin, and of the inhabytters of Ierusalem. And they put it in the handes of the worke men, that had the ouersyghte of the house of the Lord: and they gaue it to the labourers that wroughte in the house of the Lord, to repayre & mende the house. Euen to masons & carpenters gaue they it, to get stone & tymber for couples ad for beames of the houses, whyche the kynge of Juda had destroyed: And the men dyd the worke faythfully.

And the ouerseers of them to courage the forwarde, were Iahath and Obadiahu Leuites of the chyldre of Merari: & Secharia, & Uelliam, of the chyldren of the Cahathites & other of the Leuytes: whyche all could skil of instrumentes of musycke. And ouer the bearers of burthenes and ouer all that wroughte in what soeuer workemanshpy it were, were there Scribes, officers, and porters of the Leuites.

And when they brought out the monye that was brought into the house of the Lord: Helkiah the Prieste founde the boke of the lawe of the Lord geuen by Moses. And Helkiah answered and sayde to Saphan the scribe: I haue founde the boke of the lawe in the house of the Lord. & Helkiah gaue the booke to Saphan. And Saphan caried the booke to the kynge, & broughte the kynge worde agayne sayinge: all that was commytted to thy seruantes, p do they. And they haue gathered to gethere the money that was found in the house of the Lord, & haue deliuered it into the handes of the ouerseers of the worke & to the handes of the workemen. And then Saphan the scribe shewed the kynge sayinge: Helkiah the Priest hath ginen me a boke and Saphan red in it befoze the kynge.

And it fortuneth, that when the kynge had hearde the wordes of the lawe, he tare hys clothes: & the kynge commaunded Helkiah & Ahikam the sonne of Saphan, and Abidon the sonne of Micah, and Saphan the scribe and Alia a seruaut of the kynge, sayinge go and enquyre of the Lord for me and for them that are left in Israel and Juda, concerninge the wordes of the booke that is founde. For great is the wrathe of the Lord that is fallen vpon vs, because oure fathers haue not kepte the word of the Lord, to do after all that is wyrtten in thys booke.

And Helkiah and they that the kynge had appoynted, wente to Hulda a prophetyse wyfe of Shallum: the sonne of Tokhath, the sone of Hasra keeper of the wardrope (for she dwelt in Ierusalem within the second wal) and so they comuned wyth her. She answered them: thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel, tell ye the man that sente you to me. Euen thus sayeth the Lord, beholde. I wil bypnyng euell vpon thys place, and vpon the inhabytters therof (euen all the curles that are wyrtten in the boke which they haue red befoze the king of Juda) because they haue forsake me, & haue offered vnto other goddes, to angre me wyth all maner workes of they handes, therfore is my wrathe set on fyre agaynst thys place: and shall not be quenched. And as for the kynge of Juda whyche sente you to enquyre of the Lord, so shall ye saue vnto hym, thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel, concerninge the wordes whyche thou hast hearde.

Because thine hert dyd melt, and thou biddest meke thy selfe befoze God when thou hearest his wordes agaynst thys place: & agaynst the inhabytters therof: & humbledst thy selfe befoze me, and tarest thy clothes, & wepedest befoze me, that haue I heard also sayeth the Lord. Behold. I wil take the to thy father & thou shalt be put in thy grane in peace, & thine eyes shall not se al the myschefe that I will bypnyng vpon thys place, and vpon the inhabytters of the same. And they broughte the kynge worde agayne. * Then the kinge sente and gathered together at the elders of Juda and Ierusalem. And the kynge wente vp into the house of the Lord, and at the me of Juda, & the inhabytters of Ierusalem, & the priestes and Leuites & al the people great & smal, & the kynge did reade in they eares al the wordes of the booke of the couenant that was founde in the house of the Lord. And the king stode at hys standing, and made a conuauent befoze the Lord, to folowe the Lord,

And he set in theyr Rome all them that were founde in Jerusalem: and Ben Jamin and the inhabyters of Jerusalem byd accorde to the couenaunt of the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And Josia put awaye all manner of abhominacions out of al landes & perpayned to the chyldren of Israel, & brought in al that were founde in Israel, to worship and to serue the Lorde theyr God. And they turned not asyde from after the Lorde God of theyr fathers, as longe as he luyed.

¶ The xxxv. Chapter.

¶ Josia holdeth passeouer. He spaketh agaynst the kynges of Egypt, and dyeth. The people bewaile hym.

And Josia helde the feast of passeouer vnto the Lorde in Jerusalem, & they slue passeouer in & fourtene daye of the fyrste moneth. And he set the preastes in theyr offces, and apoynted them in the seruyce of the house of the Lorde. And sayde vnto the Leuites (that taught all Israel, & were sanctified vnto the Lorde) put the holy arcke in the house whych Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel, byd buyld, there shal no other burden be layed vpon youre shoulders: But nowe serue the Lorde youre God & his people Israel. And prepare youre selues by youre auncient householdes & companies accordyng to the wytyng of Dauid, kyng of Israel, and the wytyng of Salomon his sonne. And stand in the holy place accordyng to the deuytyon of the auncient householdes of youre brethren the chyldren of the people and after the deuytyon of the auncient householdes of the Leuites, kyll passeouer, and sanctifye, and prepare youre brethren that they maye do accordyng to the worde of the Lorde by the hande of Moyses.

And Josia gaue to the people flockes of shepe and kyddes, al for passeouer and for al that were presente, xxx. thousande by sale, and iii. thousande oren, and these were euen of the kynges substance. And hys Lordes gaue wyllyngly bothe vnto the people and to the preastes, and vnto the Leuites. Helkias also, zacharia and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gaue vnto the preastes for passeouerofferynges two thousande and fyue hundred shepe, and thre hundred oren. Conania and Semiah and Athanell hys brethren, and Hasiah, and Jagel, ad Jafabab rulers of the Leuites, gaue vnto the Leuites passeouerofferynges, euen fyue thousand shepe and fyue hundred oren.

And so the seruice was prepared, and the preastes stode in theyr places, and the Leuites in theyr distincte companies at the kynges commaundement. And they slue passeouer, and the preastes spynckled the bloud with theyr hande, and the Leuites pulled of the skynnes of the beastes. And they set awaye the burnt offerynges, to geue them vnto the people that were deuyded by auncient lawes, and that they shulde offre vnto the Lorde, lyke as it is witten in the booke of Exodus. And so did they with the oren also. And they dressed the passeouer with fyre as the manner was. And the other dedicate beastes sodde they in the pottes, caldrens, and panes, and deuyded them amonge all the people. And afterward they made ready for the selues and for the preastes: for the chyldren of Aaron were busyd in offeryng of burnt offerynges, and the fat vntyl nyght: therefore the Leuites prepared for them selues & for the preastes the sonnes of Aaron.

And the syngers, the chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr standyng: accordyng to the commaundemente of Dauid, & Asaph the man ad Jeduthum the kynges sear: and the porters waityd at euery gate, and myghte not depart from theyr seruyce: for theyr brotherne the Leuites prepared for them. And so all the seruyce of the Lorde was prepared the same day, to offre passeouer, and to offre burnt offerynges vpon the autere of the Lorde accordyng to the commaundement of kyng Josia.

And so the chyldren of Israel that were present offred passeouer the same tyme, and kept the feaste of swete breade seuen dayes, and there was no passeouer lyke to this in Israel from the daye of Samuel the prophet: nether byd all the kynges of Israel holde suche a passeouer feaste as byd Josia and the preastes and Leuites and all Juda, and Israel that were presente, and the inhabyters of Jerusalem. This passeouer was holden in the cytyene peare of the raygne of Josia.

¶ After all this, when Josia had prepared the temple, Necho kyng of Egypt came by to fyght agaynst the Arcamis beyde the phyzates, and Josia went out agaynst hym whych sent messengers to him, & sayd: what haue I to do wyth the thou kyng of Juda? Be not thou agaynst thy selfe this daye: for my warre is agaynst another house, & God badde me make hast. Leave of therefore, and le not wyth God whych is w me, leahe destroye the. Neuerthelesse, Josia wold not turne hys face from hym, but rather toke hym to the wyndes of Necho out of the mouth of God, & came to fyghte in the valley of Megiddo, & the hostes that darter at kyng Josia. And the kyng sayde to his seruantes: rye me awaye, for I am soze wounded. And all Juda, & Jerusalem mourned for Jofia.

in theyr lamentacions to this daye, & made the same lamentacions an odyunaunce in Is-

Nabuchodonosor also caried of the vessels syghte of the Lord his God, and humbled not hym selfe before Jeremia the prophet at the mouth of the Lord. And he rebelled agaynst Nabuchodonosor, whiche had receyued an othe of him by God. But he was stricken God of Israel. Whereouer all the rulers, the preastes and the people trespassed more, synnyng after al maner of abhomyneacions of the heathen, and poluted the house of þe Lord

* And the Lord God of theyr fathers sente to them, by his messengers, rysyng vp by tymes & sendynge, for he had compassion on hys people, & on his dwellyng place. But they mocked the messengers of God, and despysed his wordes, & misse vled hys prophegaynst hys people, and tyll there was no reand spared nether ponge man, mayden, olde them all into hys hande.

And all the vessels of the house of God (both great and small) and the treasures of the house of the Lord: & the treasures of the knyng, and of his Lordes: al these carped he to Babilon. And they burnt the house of God & brake downe the wall of Jerusalem, & burnt al the places therof with fyre, & destroyed all the goodly Jewels therof. And the reste that had escaped the swearde, carp-ed he to Babilon, where they were bounde to hym & hys chyldren, vntill the tyme that Persia had the Emppre, to fulfyll the worde of the Lord: by the mouth of Jeremia, vn-of Persia, that he made a proclamacyon tho-

The .liii. Chapter.

Of the bypynge of the temple is byndred, and let.

At the aduersaries of Juda & Ben Jamin, hearde that the chyldren of the captiuite buylded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Israel. And they came to zorobabel and to the pynceppall fathers, & sayde vnto them: We wil buylde wpyth you: for we seke the Lorde poure God lyke as ye do. And we haue done sacrifice vnto hym. sence the tyme of Asor hadon the kyng of Assur: which byought vs vp byther. And zorobabel: & Jesua, and the other aunceynte fathers of Israel: sayde vnto them, It can not be, that you & we together shulde buylde the house vnto our God for we our selues wyl buylde alone vnto the Lorde our God of Israel, as Cyrus the kyng of Persia hath commaunded vs.

And it came to passe, that the folke of the lande byndred the people of Juda, and tem-bled them as they were buyldynge, & bynd councelers agaynst them, to byndre theyr uyce, as long as Cyrus the kyng of Persia lyued, vntill the raygne of Darius kyng of Persia. And in the raygne of Ahasuerus (in the begynnyng of his raygne) wrote they vnto hym a complaynte agaynst the enu-byters of Juda & Jerusalem.

And in the dayes of Artaxerxes, wrote Bithribath Tabeel & the other of his counsell vnto Artaxerxes the kyng of Persia wpyth saye wordes. And the scriptures of the letter was wrytten in the Syrians speche, & in terpretated in the language of the Syrians.
Rehum the recorder, ad Samai the scrbye wrote a letter from Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the kyng, as it foloweth.

Then Rehum the recorder, & Samai the scrbye, & other of theyr compaynes of Sy-na, of Arphath, of Charpia, of Persia, of Arache: of Babylon, of Susan, of Bada, of Elan, & other of the people: whom the great & noble Ahasuerus broughte ouer: & set in the citties of Samaria: & other, that are nigh on this syde the water. Thys is the copie of the letter y^e they sent vnto kyng Artaxerxes.

Thy seruantes, and the men that are nowe on thys syde the water. Be it knowen vnto the kyng, that the Jewes which came vp from the to vs, are come vnto Jerusalem (a cite sedycious & frowarde) & buylde the same & set vp the walles therof, & lay the foundacions. Be it knowen nowe also vnto the kyng that if thys cite be builded, & the wal-les therof made vp agayne, then shal not they geue, tolle, tribute, & custome, & the kyngs profyte shal incurre damage. And nowe in the meane season we haue destroyed the temple, & wolde no longer se the kynges dilay-ure: Therefore sent we out also, ad certifyed the kyng, that it maye be soughte in the booke of the Chronycles of thy progenytours, & so shalt thou fynde in the booke of the Chronycles, & perceaue that thys cite is sedycious and nopsome vnto the kynges, and dangerous, and that they cause other also among them to rebell of olde, and for the same cause was thys cite destroyed. Therefore do we certifye the kyng that if thys cite be buyl-ded agayne, and the walles therof made vp, thou shalt hereafter haue no poxpon on this syde the water.

Then sent y^e kyng an answer vnto Re-hum the recorder, & Samai the scrbye, ad to the other of theyr compaynes that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto y^e other y^e were beyonde the water, in Sela and Chereth. The letter which ye sent vnto vs, hath bene openyd before me, & I haue commaunded to make arch: & it is founde, y^e thys cite of y^e olde made insurreccion agaynst kinges, and that rebellioun and sedition hath bene committed therein. There haue bene myghty kynges also at Jerusalem, which haue raigned ouer al countreys beyonde the water: and tolle, tribute: & custome was gyuen vnto the: & yue per nowe therfore commaundement, that the same men be forbydden, and that the cytie be not buylded agayne, tyll I haue gyuen another commaundement. Take hede now that ye be not negligent to do this: for why should I kyng haue harme theretowre?

Now when the coppe of kyng Artaxerxes letter was red before Rehum and Shimshai the scribe, and theyr companions, they wente vp in all the haste to Jerusalem, vnto the Jewes, and forbad them wyth yvolce and power. Then ceased the woꝝke of the house of God at Jerusalem, and contynued so vnto the seconde yere of Darius kyng of Persia.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ At the exhortation of Aggeus and zacharye the temple buylded agayne.

The prophetes, Aggeus, and zacharye the sone of Idbo, prophesied vnto the Jewes that were in Iuda and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel.

* The gat vp zoꝛobabel the sone of Sala- thiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and beganne to buyld the house of God at Jerusalem: and wyth them were the prophetes of God whych helped them. At the same tyme came to them Eathani which was capitaine on this side the water, and Stharbazani, ad theyr companys, and sayde thus vnto the: Who hath commaunded you to buyld this house, & to make vp these walles? The tolde we them the names of the me that made this buyldynge. But the eye of theyr God was vpo the elders of the Jewes, that they could not cause them to cease, tyl the matter was brought to Darius, and then they answered by letters there vnto.

¶ This is y copie of the letter, that Chanai (which was capitaine on this syde y water) and Stharbazani, ad the counsaillers of Apharsah (which were on this side the water) let vnto kyng Darius, And the matter that they sent vnto him, was wyrtten thus with in the letter: Vnto Darius the king, al peace Be it knowne vnto the kyng, that we wete into the lande of Jewye, to the house of the great God, whych is buylded with myghtie greute stones, and beames are layed in the walles, and the woꝝke goeth fast forth, and prospereth in theyr handes. Then asked we the elders, & sayd vnto them as it foloweth: Who commaunded yon to buyld this house: & to make vp the walles thereof? We asked their names also, that we myght certifie the & wyꝛte the names of y men that were their rulers.

But they answered vs wyth these woꝛdes, and sayd: We are the seruauntes of him that is God of heauen ad earth, and buyld the house that was builded many yeres ago, & whych the great kyng of Israel buylded, & set vp. But after our fathers had prouoked the God of heaue vnto wraoth, & he gaue the ouer into the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilo & of the Chaldees, whych he brake downe this house, and caried the people awaꝝe captiue vnto Babilon.

* But in the first yere of Cyꝛus the kyng of Babilon, the same kyng Cyꝛus gaue commaundement concerning this house of God, that it shuld be buylded agayne. And the vessels of golde and syluer of the house of God, which Nabuchodonozor toke out of the temple that was at Jerusalem, & brought them into the temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyꝛus the kyng take out of the temple at Babilon, & and they were deliuered vnto one Sabazar by name, who he made capitaine, and sayde vnto him: Take these vessels, and go thy waye, and set them in the temple that is at Jerusalem, and let the house of God be buylded in this place. Then came the same Sabazar, and layed the foundacyon of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. Spns y tyme also vntyl now he hath it ben in buyldynge, and yet is it not fynished. If it please the kyng nowe therfore, let there be seache made in the kynges libarye whiche is there at Babilon, whether it haue ben kyng Cyꝛus commaundement, that this temple of God at Jerusalem should be buylded, and let him sende vs the kynges mynde concernynge the same matter.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ At the commaundement of Darius kyng of Persia, after the temple was buylded & dedicate, the chydren of Israel kept the feast of vniuersed byed.

Then commaunded kyng Darius, & they made seache in the libary, and in the place where they layed vp y treasure at Babilo. And there was founde in a cofre (in the place that is in the lande of the Medes) a volume: and therein was it thus wyrtte, & such a memorial: In the fyrst yere of kyng Cyꝛus, gaue the same kyng Cyꝛus commaundement concernynge the house of God at Jerusalem, that the same house shulde be buylded in the place where they offre y sacrifices, & to toyne the walles together of this score cubytes beygh, & this score cubytes byedth. Thre rowes of rough stones, & one rowe of tymbre, and the expences shalbe gyuen of the kynges house. And let y golde and syluer vessel of the house of God, which Nabuchodonozor toke out of the temple ple at Jerusalem, and brought vnto Babylon be restored, and broughte agayne vnto the temple at Jerusalem to theyr place in the house of God.

B Get you farre from them therfore, thou Thabnai captayne beyonde the water, and Starbuzanai, & your counsailers & Aphe sechei, whych are beyonde the water, get ye awaye from them. Let the worke of þ house of thys God alone, that the captayne of the Jewes and theyr Elders may buyld þ house of God in his place. I haue comaunded what shalbe done to the Elders of Iuda for þ buil dyng of the house of God, that there shalbe diligent heede taken of the kynge's goodes, euen of the rentes beyond the water, and gyuen vnto the men, that they be not hyndred. And if they haue nede of calues, rammes & lambs for the burnt offryng of the God of heauen, wheate, salte, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the preastes at Jerusalem, let the same be geuen them daily without any delaye: that they maye offre swete sauours vnto the God of heauen, & praye for the kyn ges lyfe and for thys chylde. And suche a com mandement haue I geuen: that what man soeuer he be that altereth thys worde, there shall a beame be taken from thys house, and set vp, and he shalbe hanged thereon, and his house shalbe made a donge hyll, for the same chynge.

C And the God that set thys name there, de stroye all kynge's & people that put to theyr haide to altre, & to breake downe the house of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius haue commaunded: that this be done wth speede.

Then Thabnai the captayne of the coun try beyonde the water, and Starbozanai with their counsailers (to whom kynge Da rius had sent) dyd theyr diligence: And þ Elders of the Jewes buylded, and they prospered thowowe the prophesying of Aggeus the prophete, & zachary the sonne of Iddo: and they buylded and layd vp the foundacyon, accordyng to the commaundement of þ God of Israel, and after the commaundemente of Cyrus & Darius, and Artaxerxes kinges of Persia. And the house was fynlyshed the thyrde dape of the moneth Adar, euen in the syxt pere of the raygne of kynge Darius.

D * And the chylidren of Israel, the prestes, the Leuites: and the other chylidre of the cap tiuptye helde the dedicacyon of thys house of God wth ioye, and offred at the dedication of this house of God: an hundred oxen: two hundred rammes: foure hundred goates: and for the reconcylynge of all Israel twelue he goates: accordyng to the nombze of the tri bes of Israel: & set the prestes in their sondry courses, and the Leuites in theyr dyuers of fices to mynstre vnto God at Jerusalem: as it is wyrtten in the booke of Moyses.

And the chylidren of the captiuytie helde Pascoer vpon the fourtenth dape of fyrst moneth: for the preastes and Leuites were purpyed, so that they were all cleane to gether, and kyld Pascoer for all the chylidren of the captiuytie, & for theyr bretheren the prestes and for them selues. And the chylidren of Israel which were come agayne out of cap tiuptye, and all suche as had separated them selues vnto them, from the synnynesse of the heathen of the lande: to seke the Lorde God of Israel, dyd eat, and helde the feast of unleuened breed seuen dayes with ioye: for the Lorde had made them glad, and turned the hert of þ kynge of Assur vnto the, to freght their handes in the worke of þ house of God, euen the God of Israel.

By the commaundement of Artaxerxes, whiche took his companyons the chylidren of Israel, returneth to Jerusalem.

After these actes, there was in þ raygne of Artaxerxes king of Persia, one Eldras sonne of Baraiab, & sonne of Alcia, the sonne of Belkia, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Iahar, the sonne of Abitob, the sonne of Amaria, & sonne of Alaria, the sonne of Weraioth, the sonne of Jeraia, the sonne of All, the sonne of Bucki, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Jhe nehesh, the sonne of Eleasar, the sonne of Adron the chiefe prest. This Eldras also went vp from Babylon, and was a perfect schuler in the lawe of Moyses, which the Lord God of Israel dyd geue. And the kynge gaue him all that he requyred because the hande of the Lorde thys God was vpon hym. And thus went vp certayne of the chylidren of Israel: of the preastes, Leuites, spynners, porters, & of the Etheiyns vnto Jerusalem, in the nyeth pere of kynge Artaxerxes. And he came to Jerusalem in the fyrst moneth, euen in the seuenth pere of the kynge. For vpon the first dape of the fyrste moneth, beganne he to go vp from Babylon: and on the fyrst dape of fyrst moneth came he to Jerusalem, becaus the good hande of God was vpon hym. For Eldras prepared thys herte to seke the lawe of the Lorde, and to do it, & to teache the precept and iudgement in Israel.

And this is the coppe of the letter, þ kynge Artaxerxes gaue vnto Eldras the prest: scribe, whych was a wyrtter of the wordes and commaundementes of the Lorde, and of his statutes ouer Israel. Artaxerxes a king of kynge's. Vnto Eldras the prest & scribe of the lawe of the God of heauen, peace and salutation. I haue comaunded, that all they of the people of Israel, and of the prestes, and Leuites in my realme (whych are myn ded of theyr owne good wyll to go vnto Je rusalem

Take thou the same, and bye dyspgentlye with the same money, oxen, rammes and lambes, wyth their meat offerynges and dymke-offerynges, and thou shalt offere them vpon the alter of the house of poure God, whiche is at Jerusalem. And loke what it lyketh the, and thy brethren to do with the remnant of the money, that do after the wyll of poure God. And the vessels that are gyven the for the mynistracion in the house of thy God, those deliuer thou befoze God at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thyng moze shalbe nedeful for the house of thy God, wherch is necessarye for to spende, thou shalt receaue the charges out of the kynges treasure house: I kyng Artaxerxes haue commaunded al the treasures beyode the water, that loke whatsoeuer Eldras thy preste & scribe, in the lawe of the God of heauen, requyret of you that ye fulfill the same speedelye, vntyll an hundred talents of syluer, & tyll an hundred quarters of wheate, and tyll an hundred Batthes of wine, and tyll an hundred Batthes of oyle: a salte wythout measure. Whatsoeuer also belongeth to the lawe of God of heauen, let the same be done wythout anye delaye for the house of the God of heauē, & he be not wroth agaynst the realme, and agaynst the kyng: and hys chyldren.

And we certifie you: that ye haue no authoritye to requyre taxynge and custome, ad perly rentes vpon any of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Retheynings and minystrars in the house of his God. And thou Eldras (after the wysdome of thy God, that is in thy hand) let iudges and arbiters (by my auctorite) to iudge all the people that is beyode the water, euen all such as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not: those let the preste teache. And whosoer wyll not fulfill the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, let hym gaue hys iudgemente wythout delaye, wheter it be vnto death, or to be rooted oute, or to be condemned in goodes: or to be put in pryson.

* Blessed be the Lorde God of oure fathers wherch so had inspired the kynges herte, to garnyshe the house of the Lord, that is at Jerusalem: and hath enclyned his mercy vnto to me in the presence of the kyng, & hys counsailers: & befoze all the kynges hys estates. And I was comforted (euen as the bande of the Lorde my God was vpon me) and so gathered I the heedes of Israel together, that they myght go vpon wyth me.

The viii. Chapter.

The nombre of them that returned to Jerusalem wyth Eldras.

These are the princypall fathers of the & thys is theyr regystrer & went vpon wyth me fro Babylon what tyme as kyng Artaxerxes raygned. Of the chyldren of Phinehes, Gersom: of the chyldren of Ithamar, Daniel: of the chyldren of Dauid, Hatus: of the chyldren of zechania, amonge the chyldren of Pharos, zachary: & wyth hym were nombred an hundred and fyftee men. Of the chyldren of the captayne of Moab, Elionai, the sonne of zerabia, and wyth hym two hundred men. Of the chyldren of zechania the sonne of Iahasiel: & wyth hym thre hundred men. Of the chyldren of Adin, Abed the sonne of Ianathan, & wyth hym fyftee men. Of the chyldren of Elam, Ijai the sonne of Athalia, and wyth hym seuentye men. Of the chyldren of Saphatia, zebadia the sonne of Michael, and wyth hym foure scoze men.

Of the chyldren of Joab, Obadia the sonne of Jehiel, and wyth hym two hundred and epyghtene men. Of the chyldren of Selomith the sonne of Iosephia, and wyth hym an hundred and thre scoze men.

Of the chyldren of Bebai, zachari the sonne of Bebai, and wyth hym epyghte and twentye men. Of the chyldren of Algab, Johanan the sonne of hakatan, & wyth hym an hundred and ten men. Of the chyldren of Adoncam, that were the laste, whose names are these: Eliphelet, Jehiel and Samaiab, and wyth them thre scoze men. Of the chyldren of Biquai, Elthai, and zabud: & wyth them seuentye men. And I gathered them together by the water that runneth toward Ahava, and there aboode we thre dayes. And I looked amonge the people and the prestes, and found there none of the chyldren of Leui. The sent I to Eliezer, to Azel, Semeia, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, zacharye: and to Hefullam the rulers, & to Iotari and Elnathan which were men of vnderstandyng, and to those gaue I commaundement: vnto Iddo the cheffest at Casphla, that they shuld fetch vnto ministers for the house of oure God, and I tolde them what they shoulde saye vnto Iddo: and to hys brethren the Retheynings at Casphla.

And (thowowe the good bande of our God vpon vs) they brought vs a wyse man from amonge the chyldren of Moboli the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel: and Sarabia wyth

his sonnes and his brethren, euen cyghtene. And Hasabia, and wyth hym Isai of the chyldren of Merari, with his brethren, and their sonnes twenty. And of the Rechinims, who Dauid and the princes gaue to mynistrer vnto the Levites, two hundred and twenty of Rechinims, wherch all were named by name.

D And euen there at the water, besyde Aba-ua, I proclaimed a fast, that we myght humble our selues before oure God; and scke of hym a ryght way for vs, and for our chyldren and for all our substance. For I was ashamed to requyre of the kynge, souldyers and horsemen, to helpe vs agaynst the enemye in this way: but we said vnto the kynge: The had of oure God is vpon all them that scke hym, in goodnesse, and ^(his dominion) hys vyolence and wrath is agaynst all them that forsake hym. So we fasted, and besought oure God for this: and he hearde vs.

And I toke out twelue of the chiefe preestres: Sarabia and Hasabia, and ten of their brethren with them, and weyed them the syluer and golde, & vessels that were appointed for the house of our God, which the kynge ad his counsaylers and his Lordes, and al Israel were there at hand, had gyuen togyther.

And I weyed vnto their hãde syxe hundred and fiftie talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessel an hundred talentes, & in golde an hundred talentes: twentye basens of golde, of a thousand peeces, and two costly ornaments of good brasse, as cleare as golde: and I sayd vnto them: Ye are consecrate vnto the Lord, lyke as the vessels are holy also, and the gold and syluer are gyuen of a good wyl vnto the Lord God of your fathers. Wathe ye, and kepe it: for ye shal wepe it downe before the chiefe preestres and Levites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Ierusalem in the treasures of the house of the Lord. Then toke the preestres and Levites the weyed syluer and gold, and vessel, to bringe it to Ierusalem, vnto the house of oure God. And we brake vp, from the water of Abaia on the twelue daye of the fyrst moneth, to go vnto Ierusalem: and the hãde of oure God was vpon vs, and deliuered vs from the hande of the enemyes, & of such as layd wayte for vs by the waye.

F And we came to Ierusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer & golde and vessel weyed in the house of oure God, by the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Uzia the preaste, & wyth hym was Eleazar the sonne of Phinehes, & wyth them was Josabad the sonne of Jesua, and Roabdia the sonne of Benoi the Leuytes. Accor- dyng to the nombre and weyghte of euery one, was the weyghte all wyrtten vp at the same tyme.

And the chyldren of the captiuitie, which were come out of pylson, offred burnt offrin ges vnto the God of Israel, twelue bullockes for all Israel, syxe & nyntye rammes, ten and seuentye lambes, twelue he gores for a synneofferyng, all to the burnt offeryng of the Lord. And they deliuered the kynge commysion vnto the kynges officers, and to the captaynes that were on thys syde the water. And they promoted the people, and the house of God.

The ix. Chapter.

Esdras comforted on the people that had turned their selues from God, and marryd with the Gentyls.

Whē these thinges were done, the rulers cam to me, & said: The people of Israel, and the preestres and Leuytes are not separated from the people of the landes (as com- chynge theyr abhominacions) namely, of the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, Iubites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians, & Amozites. For they haue taken the daughters of the same to them selues, and to their sonnes, and the holpe seed is myxed with the nacpions in the lande, and the hande of the prynces and rulers hath bene principall in the trespassse.

* And whē I hearde this sayinge, I rent my clothes and my garment, and plucked the heer of my heed, and of my beerde, and fast mournynge. And there resoited vnto me all such as feared the wordes of the Lord God of Israel, because of the transgressyon of the people of the captiuitie. And I fast mornynge vntyll the euenynge sacrifice. And aboute the euenynge sacrifice, I arose vp from my heuynesse, & rente my clothes and my raynt and fell vpon my knees, and spede oute my handes vnto the Lord my God, and sayde.

My God, I am ashamed, and darraue I lyft vp myne eyes vnto the my God: for our wyckednesses are growe ouer our head: and oure trespassse is waxed greate vnto the heuyn. Syng the tyme of our fathers, haue we bene in greate trespassse vnto thys daye, and because of oure wyckednesses haue we and our kynges bene deliuered into the hande of the kynges of the nacpions, into the shand, into shame, and into consulyon of face: as it is to se thys daye.

And now is there a lytle & sodayne gpyousnesse come from the Lord our God, in causynge some of vs to escape, and that we maye gyue vs a name in his holy place, and that oure God maye lyghte oure eyes, and gyue vs a lytle lyfte to take breath in our bondage. For we are bondme, & oure God hath not forsaken vs in oure bondage, and hath enclyned mercye vnto vs in the syghte of the kynges of Persia, to gyue vs lyfte, to let vs the house of oure God, and to redresse the desolation therof, and to gyue vs a wall in Iuda and Ierusalem.

And nowe, O oure God, what shall we saye after this: for we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, wherby thou hast commaunded by thy seruantes the prophetes, saying. The lande vnto wherch ye go to possesse, it is an vncleane lande, because of the fylthinesse of the people of the landes, which with their abhominacions haue made it full of vncleanness on euery syde. * Therefore shall ye not geue your daughters vnto their sonnes, and their daughters shall ye not take vnto your sonnes, nor like their peace & welth for euer, that ye maye be stronge & enioye the good in the lande, & that ye and your chyldren maye haue the enherytaunce of it for euermore.

And after that all these thynges are come vpon vs: because of oure euell dedes, & great trespasses: thou our God hast thrust downe our wychednesses, and hast giuen vs a deliuerance, as (as it is come to passe this daye)

And yf we turne backe agayne, to let go thy commaundementes, and make contract with the people of these abhominacions, wilt thou not then be wroth at vs? (as not without cause) tyll we be utterly consumed, so that no thyng remayne, and tyll there be no deliuerance. O Lord God of Israel, thou art righteous, for we remaine yet escaped as it is to se this daye. Behold also, in thy presence are we in our trespasses, and because of it maye we not stande before thee.

The x. Chapter.

The people repent and turne, and put awaye theyr strange wyues.

Ad whē Eldras prayed after this maner, and knowledged, wepte, & lay before the house of God, there reioyced vnto hym out of Israel a very great congregacion of men and women & chyldren: & the people wept very soze. And Sechania sone of Jehiel one of the chyldre of Elam, answered: & sayde vnto Eldras: We haue trespassed agaynst oure God, and haue taken strange wyues of the people of the lande. Nowe there is hope yet in Israel concerning this thyng: for now we wyll make a cōuenante with oure God, and put awaye all the wyues (and suche as are borne of them) according to the counsaile of the Lorde: ad we wyll be in the feare of the commaundementes of oure God, that we maye do according to the lawe. Set the vp, for this matter belongeth vnto thee: we also wyll be with thee: be of good comforte therfore, and do it.

* Then rose Eldras: and toke an oath of the chiefe prestes and Leuites, and of all Israel, that they shoulde do accordinge to this wyde: ad they sware. And Eldras stode vp from before the house of God, and went into the chambze of Iohanan the sonne of Eliafib. And when he came thither, he dyd eate no bread, nor dronke water, for he mourned, because of the transgressyon of the people y had bene in captiuitye.

And they caused a proclamacion to go thorowout Iuda and Ierusalem, vnto all the chyldren which had bene in captiuitye, that they shoulde gather the selues togyther vnto Ierusalem. And that whosoer came not within thre dayes, according to the denier of the rulers and elders, al his substance shoulde be forfet, and he shoulde be put out from the congregacion of the captiue.

Then all the men of Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered them selues togyther vnto Ierusalem within thre dayes, euen the twenty daye of the nyynth moneth: and all the people sate in the strete before the house of God, ad trembled bycause of this matter, and for the rapne. And Eldras the prest stode vp, and sayde vnto them: * Ye haue trasgressed, and haue taken strange wyues, to make the trespassse of Israel yet more: cōfesse now therfore vnto the Lorde God of your fathers, and do his pleasure, and separate your selues from the people of the lande, and from the strange wyues. And all the cōgregacion answered, and sayde wyth a loude voyce: It shalbe so: and we wyll do as thou hast sayde. But the people are manye, and it is a rapne whether, and the people are to saynt to tarpe without in the strete, neither is this a worke of one daye or two: for we haue offended verpe soze in this thing. Let our rulers stande therfore in all the congregacion, and let al the which haue taken strange wyues in oure cyties, come at the tyme appoynted, and let the Elders of euery cytie and their Iudges be with them, tyll they haue tourned the wrath of our God awaye from vs, concernyng this matter.

Then were appoynted Jonathan sone of Alahel, and Iahasia the sonne of Echina ouer this matter: And Heshullam ad Sababhai the Leuites helped them. And the chyldren of the captiuitie dyd euen so. And Eldras the prest, ad the aunpente heedes thorowe the house of theyr fathers, all men of greute fame, separated them selues, and sate them downe in the first daye of the tenth moneth, to examen the matter. And vntyll the first daye of the first moneth they were finishing the businesse, with al the men that had taken strange wyues.

And amonge the chyldren of the prestes there were men founde that had taken strange wyues, namely, amonge the chyldren of Iesua, the sonne of Iosedec, and of his brethren, Hasiah, and Eliezer, Iarib, and Gedalia, and they gaue theyr handes there

The fyrst chapter.

Nehemia buttler to kynge Artaxerxes prayeth to God for the people.

The wordes of Nehemia the sonne of Hachalia. It was in the moneth Chislev, in the twente yere, that I was in the castell at Jerusalem. And Hanani, one of my brethren came with certayne men of Juda, & I asked them howe the Jewes dyd that were delivred and escaped of the captivite, and howe it wente at Jerusalem. And they sayd unto me: The remnant of the captivite are there in plande in great mylfortune and rebuke. The wall of Jerusalem also is broken downe: and the gates thereof are brent with fyre.

It fortuneth, that when I heard these wordes, I sat me downe and wepte, & fasted certayne dayes, and fasted and prayd before the God of heauen, and sayde: O Lord God of heauen, thou create a terrible God, & thou that kepest covenant and mercy in them that loueth the, and obserue thy commandementes: let thyne eares hearken, I beseeche the, and let thyne eyes be open, that thou mayest heare the prayer of thy seruantes, which I praye nowe before the day & nyght, for the chyldren of Israel thy seruantes, & knowledg the synnes of thy chyldren of Juda, whych we haue synned agaynst the.

I and my fathers house haue synned: we haue bene vtterlye dyspersed from the land, and haue not kepte thy commandementes, statutes and lawes, whych thou commaundedest thy seruant Moyses. I beseeche the, to remembraunce the worde that thou commaundedest thy seruant Moyses, and saydest: We will trasgresse, and I will scatter you abrode among the nacions. But thou saydest vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes, do them: thoughe ye were cast out into the

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

After Asdrubab had obtained letters of Artaxerxes, he cometh to Jerusalem and buildeth the walles.

In fortunē, that in the moneth * Nisan in the twentieth yere of kyng Artaxerxes, þy wyne stode before him, & I toke vp the wyne, & gaue it vnto the kyng. And I was heuy in his presence. And the kyng said vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly, whē thou art not sicke? is it nothing els, but that þy art heuy herted. And I was soze afrayed, & sayd vnto the kyng: God saue the kynges lyfe for ever. Howe shulde I not loke sadly, whē the ctye ad place of my fathers burial lyeth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed w fyre? And the kyng sayd vnto me: what is then thy request? I made my prayer also to the God of heauen, and sayde vnto the king:
yf it please the kyng, and yf thy seruante haue founde sauour in thy syghte, sende me vnto Iuda vnto the ctye of my fathers bu-ryall, that I may buylde it.

¶ And the kyng sayde vnto me (the quene his wyfe sitting by him) howe longe shal thy journey continue, and when wylt thou come agayne? And it pleased þy kyng to sende me, and I let him a tyme, and sayd vnto þy king: yf it please the kyng, let him geue me letters to the captaynes which are beyonde the water, that they maye conuaye me ouer, tyll I come into Iuda: and letters vnto Asaph the loper of the kynges wood, that he may geue me tymber to make beames for the gates of the palace (which is harde by the house) & for the walles of the ctye, and for the house that I shall entre into. And the kyng gaue me accordyng to þy bande of my God, which was good vnto me. And when I came to the captaynes beyonde the water, I gaue them the kynges letters. And the kyng had sente captaynes and horsemen with me.

¶ Sanabalat also the Hozonite ad Tobia a seruant (the Ammonite) hearde of it, and it grieved them soze, that there was come a man which sought the wealth of the chylde of Israel. And I came to Jerusalem, and was there thre dayes, & I gat me vp in the nyghte season, and a fewe me with me, neither tolde I any man, what God had gyven me in my herte to do at Jerusalem: and there was not one beaste with me, save it that I rode vpon.

And I departed in the nyghte by the valley porte, before the dragon well, ad to the dong porte, and conspyded the walles of Jerusalem howe they were broken downe, and the portes therof consumed with the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the well porte, and to the kynges condyte, and there was no rowme for the beast that was vnder me to passe. The went I on in þy night by the brooke side, and conspyded the wal, and turned backe, & came home agayne by the valley porte.

And þy rulers knewe not whyther I went or what I dyd: neyther dyd I as yet tel it vnto the Jewes, so the prestes, to the noble mē to the rulers, and to the other that laboured in the worke. Then sayde I vnto them: ye se the myserie that we are in, howe Jerusalem lyeth waste, and howe the gates thereof are brent wth fyre: come therefore, that we may buyld vp the wal of Jerusalem, and that we be no moze a rebuke. And I tolde them of the bande of my God, (þy it was gracious ouer me) and the kynges wordes that he had spoken vnto me. And they sayd: Let vs get vp, and buylde: and they strenghted theyr bande to good.

But when Sanabalat the Hozonite, and Tobia the seruant (an Ammonite), and Ge-sem the Arabian herde it: they laughed vs to scorne, and mocked vs, and sayde: what is this that ye do? Wyl ye fall awaye from the kyng? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen, he it is that hath graun-ted vs prosperitie and we be his seruantes.
Let vs get vp and build. As for you, ye haue no porcion nor ryghte, nor remembraunce in Jerusalem.

After him buylded Nehemiah the sonne of Azbok: the ruler of the halfe parte of Bethzur, vntyll the other side ouer agaynst the sepulchres of Dauid, ad to the poole that was repayred, and vnto the house of the myghtye.

The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ The buyldynge of Ierusalem is broken and is, but the Jewes buylded it, because they desired, lest they enemies should invade them.

But when Sanabalat hearde that we buylded the wal, he was wroth in hymself, & toke great indignacion, and mocked the Jewes, and sayde befoze hys brethren and the synners of Samaria: what do these impossible Jewes wyl the heathen suffer them? What they shall they perfourme it in one day? Shall they make the stones whole agayne, that we brought to dust and brent? And Tobiah Ammonyte was besyde hym, and sayde: Though they buyld, yet yf a fox go by, he shall breake downe their stony wal. (O thou our God) for we are despised, and they shall come vpon they owne head, and we shall bring them ouer into the dellyssynge in the land of they captiuytie. Couer not they synnes, and let not their synne be put out of theyre synnes: for they haue prouoked the Lord. And so buylded we the wall, and it was finished together, vnto the half beynd the of. And the people were mynded to laboure.

And it is fortun'd, that when Sanabalat, and T. i. biab & the Arabians, Ammonites: and the doctes heard, & the walles of Jerusalem were made up, & that & gappes began to be stipped, they were very wroth, & conspyred: ill together to come & fyght agaynst Jerusalem, & to make the people an hynderaunce ther. Nevert heles, we made our prayer vnto our God, & set watchmen by them, whych lmylded daye & nyghte ouer agaynst them. And Juda sayde: the strenght of the beaers is so feble: & there is yet moch moze mortar, and we are not able to buyld on the wal. And oure aduersaries sayde: they shall not knowe, nether se: tyll we come in the middes amonge them, & slaye them: and hynder the worke. But it fortun'd & when the Jewes whych dwelt besyde them came, they tolde vs as good as ten times: & in al places wher we go vnto, they are appoynted to fall vpon vs. Therfore set I the people after theyr kindes with their sweardes, speares: & bowes beneath in the lowe places behynde the wall, and I looked, and gat me up: & sayde vnto the chiefe men: to the rulers: & to the other people be not ye a frayde of them: * but thyncke rather vpon the great Loide, whych ought to be feared, & fyght for your brethren, your sones your daughters: your wyues, and your houses. Nevert heles: it chaunced & when our enemies heard, & we had gotten worde of it God brought theyr counsel to nought: & we turned all agayne to the wal: euery one vnto his labour. And from that tyme forth we came to passe that the halfe part of the poe men dyd the labour, and the other halfe part of them helde the speares: shylde, bowes: & brestplates: and the rulers stode behynd all the house of Juda which builded on the wall & bare burthens from those that laded them. With one hande dyd euery one worke: and with the other helde he his weapon. And euery one that buylded: had his sweard, & dyd by his sygh, and so buylded they. And the trumpet blew besyde me.

And I sayde vnto the pryncypall men, to the rulers, & to the other people: the worke is great & large, & we are seperated vpon the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place therfore ye heare the noyse of the trumpet: restore ye thither vnto vs, & our God shall fyght for vs: and we wyl be labouringe in the worke. And the halfe part of them held the speares from the moynynge sprynge: tyll the starres came forth. And at & same tyme sayde I vnto the people: euery one abyde in his seruauant at Jerusalem, that in the night season we maye watch, & labour on the day tyme. As for me & my brethren my seruantes, & the men of the watch (whych were behynde me) we put neuer of oure clothes, nor more then the other dyd theyr harnesse, saue only because of the water.

Ehe. v. Chapter.

The people are vexed with hongre. He requyret not the language of a captayne,

And there arose a great complaynte of the people, and their wyues agaynst theyr brethren the Jewes. For there were some that sayde: oure sonnes and daughters ad we are to many, therfore wyl we take corne for them, that we maye eate and lyue. Some also there were that sayd: let vs let our lades: vineyardes & houses to pledge & take vp corne in the darth. But some there were that sayde: let vs borrowe money for the kynges trespate, and that vpon oure landes and vineyardes. Beholde oure bodies as & bodies of oure brethren, and oure chyldren as theyr chyldren: elles shulde we subdue our sonnes and daughters vnto bondage, & some of our daughters are subdued vnto bondage all ready, & no strength is there in our handes & other men haue oure landes & vineyardes. And when I hearde their complaynte and such wordes, it dyspleased me soze, & I aduersed so in my mynde, that I rebuked the counclers, & the rulers, & sayd vnto them: Euery one of you is to chargeable vnto his brother. And I brought a great congregacion agaynst them, and sayd vnto them: we (after our abylyte) haue bought ouer brethren the Jewes, which were sold vnto the heathen. And wil you sel your brethren agayne vnto the heathen, after that they haue bene sold vnto vs? Then helde they theyr peace, and could fynd nothyng to answer.

And Nehemias sayde: It is not good that ye do. Dought ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the heathen, & are our enemies: I and my brethren, & my seruantes do lend them money & corne: but as for vsury, let vs leue it. Therfore, this same daye I praye you se & ye restore them theyr landes agayne, theyr vineyardes, oyle gardens, and theyr houses, and remytte the hundred parte of the money of the corne, wine, & oyle that ye haue wonne of them. The sayde they we wyl restore them agayne, & wyl requyre nothyng of them: & wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, and toke an oth of them that they shulde do so. And I spake my lappe, & sayde: God shake out euery man after & same maner from his house & labour, that mayntayneth not thys worde: euen thus be he shaken out, & voyde. And all the congregacion sayde: Amen, and prayesed the Loide. And the people dyd so.

And from the tyme forth & (the kyng) comytted vnto me to be a captayne of the that were in the lande of Juda, euen from & .xx. ye are vnto the .xxxii. yeare of kyng Arthaxers (that is .xii. yeare) I & my brethren lined not of such sustenance as was geue to a captayne. For the olde captaynes & were before me

And me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, ad had taken of them bzeade and wyne, and xl. sicles of siluer: pee, and their seruauntes had oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. But I labored also in the worke vpon the wall, and bought no lande. And all my seruauntes came thither together vnto the worke. Moreover, there were at my table an. c. ad. l. of the Jewes & rulers, which came vnto me from a moong the heathen, & are aboute vs. And ther was prepared for me daylye an oxe and syxe chosen shepe, & birdes, & euer once in. x. dayes a great summe of wyne. Yet requyred not I the lpyunge of a captayne, for the bondage was greuous vnto the people. * Thinke vpon me my God vnto the beste, accordyng to all that I haue done for this people.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ The buydyng is yet agayne brydyed and let.

And when Sanabalat, Tobiah, & Selem the Arabian and the other of our enemyes hearde that I had buydyed & wal: and that there were no mo gappes ther in (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hangged the doozes vpon the gates) Sanabalat and Selem sent vnto me, sayinge: come that we may mete & take counsell together in the byllages that are in the playne of the cpyte Dno. Nevertheless, they thoughte to do me euell. And I sent messeangers vnto them, sayinge: I haue a great busynes to do, ad I can not come downe. The worke shulde stande styll, yf I were negligēt, & cam downe to you. Howbeit, they sent vnto me as good as. iiii. times after the same maner. And I gaue the same aunswer. Then sent Sanabalat his seruaunte agayne vnto me the fyfth tyme, with an open letter in his hand, wherein was written: it is tolde the heathen, and Selem hath sayde it, that thou & the Jewes thinke to rebel: for the which cause thou buydest & wall that thou mayest be theyr kyng in these matters, and haste ordeined the prophetes to preach of the at Jerusalem, & to saye: he is kyng of Juda.

And now shall this come to the kynges eares: come nowe therfore, & let vs take our counsell together. And I sent vnto hym, sayinge: there is no such thyng done as thou sayest: for thou saynest them out of thyne owne herte. For they were all mynded to make vs afrayed, sayinge: they shal wythdrawe their handes from the worke, that it shal not be synished. Howbeit, I strenghted my hand & more. And I came vnto the house of Semelias the sonne of Delaia the sonne of Shebata-beel, & he had shut hym selfe within: & sayde: let vs come together in the house of God euē vnto the myddes of the temple: and shut the doozes of & temple, for they wil come to slay the pee, euen in the nyght wyl they come to put the to death. And I sayd: Shuld any such man as I lye: What is that being as I am, that wyl go into the temple, to saue his lyfe? I wyl not go in.

And I perceaued that God had not sent hym. Yet spake he prophete vnto me, neuer thelesse, Tobiah and Sanabalat, had byed hym for money. Therfore toke he the money that thorough feare I shuld so do, and syned that they myght haue an euell reporte of me, to blasphem me. Wy God, thynke & vpon Tobiah & Sanabalat accordyng vnto the theyr worckes, and of the prophet Seebia, and of the other prophetes, that wolde haue put me in feare.

And the wall was synished on the. xii. daye of the moneth Elul, in. lii. dayes. And when all oure enemyes hearde therof, all the heathen that were aboute vs, were afrayed and their courage fayled them. And they perceaued, that thes worcke came of oure God. And at the same tyme were there many of the cheefe of Juda, whose letters went vnto Tobiah, and agayne from Tobiah vnto them (for there were many in Juda, & were sworne vnto him, for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechania, the sonne of Arah and bys sonne Jehonathan had the daughters of Sebulai, the sonne of Barachia, and they spake good of him befoze me: and tolde him my wordes) & Tobiah sent letters, to put me in feare.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ After the wall once buydyed, in the watch appointed, they that returned from captiuyte set watch.

Nowe when the wall was buydyed & hangged on the dozes also, and the porters: syngers: & Leuites were appointed. And I commaunded my brother Hanani, and Hanania the ruler of the castell at Jerusalem: for he was a faythful man, and feared God more then dyd many other. And I spake vnto them: let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened vntyl & sonne be whote. And wyle they were stadyng in the watch, they shut the dozes and barred them. And we appointed certayne cytelens of Jerusalem, to be watchmen, euerye one to kepe his watch, and euery one to be ouer agaynst his house. And for the cpyte, it was large of rowme, & great but the people were fewe therein, and the segs were not buydyed.

And God gaue me in my herte, that I gathered together the princypall men, and the officers, and the people, to nombze them: I founde a regyfter of & nombze of the people: cam by befoze out of the captiuyte: & I wrote therein: these are the sonnes of the people & wente by from the captiuyte of the rpyng away (whome Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon had broughte away) and cam agayne to Jerusalem, & Juda: euery one

Ad. I. all * the people gathered them selues together as one man in the strete, & was before the watergate: & they sayde vnto Eldras & scribe that we shulde fetch * the booke of the lawe of Moles, whych the Lorde commaunded to Israel. And Eldras the preaste broughte the lawe before the congregacion both of men & women, & all that coude not vnderstand dyd herken vnto it, vpon the fyrst dave of the leuenth moneth & he red therein in the strete that was before the watergate (from the moynynge vntyl the noone day) before men & women that dyd herken to it: & the eares of all the people were inclyned vnto & booke of the lawe. And Eldras the scribe stode vpon an hye pulpet of wood whych they had made for the preaching, & besyde hym stode Athathia, Sema, Anania, Uriah, Helkia, & Waaseia, on hys ryghte hande: & on hys lefte hande stode Bedaia, Misael, Walchia, Hasum, Halsebana, zachari: and Melulam.

And Eldras opened the booke before all the people, for he stode aboue all the people. And when he opened yt, all the people stode vp. And Eldras prayesd the Lord the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with theyr handes vp, & bowed them selues, & worshipped the Lorde fallynge downe vpon theyr faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Baam, Serabiah, Jamin, Acub, Sebatthai, Hobai, Waasia, Celita, Azaria, Jozabad, Hanan, Delaia: & the Leuytes caused the people to geue heade vnto the lawe, & the people stode in theyr place. And they red in & booke of the lawe of God dysynctly and playnly, so that men vnderstode the thyng that was red. And Seremiah (whych is Hathirathia) and Eldras the preast and scribe, and the Leuytes that caused the people to take heed, sayde vnto all the people: thys dave is holy vnto the Lorde your God: be not ye so ry and wepe not. For all the people wryte, when they hearde the wordes of the lawe.

And he sayde vnto them, & go your waye and eate the fat, & dryncke the swete, & sende part vnto them also that haue not prepared them selues: for thys dave is holy vnto our Lorde, be not ye so ry therfore: for the love of the Lorde is your strength. And the Leuytes stilled all the people, & sayde: holde your peace, for the dave is holy, were not ye your selues. And all the people wente theyr waye to eate & dryncke, & to sende parte vnto other and to make great myrthe, because they had vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte dave were gathered together the chiefe fathers amonge all the people and the preastes & Leuytes, vnto Eldras the scribe, that they myght vnderstande the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe: (whych the Lorde had commaunded by Moles) that the chyldren of Israel shulde dwell in bothes in the feast of the vii. moneth: & that they shulde cause it to be declared & proclapmed in all theyr cyties, & thozowout Jerusalem, sayinge: go forth vnto the mounte, and fetche Olive bzaunches, Pyne bzaunches, Myr bzaunches, Palme bzaunches, and bzaunches of thysche trees, to make bothes, as it is wrytten.

And so the people went forth & fet them & made them bothes, euery one vpon the rofe of hys house, & in theyr courtes, & in the cotes of the house of God, & in the strete by the watergate, and in the strete by porte Ephraim. And al the congregacion of them & were come agayne out of the captiuyte, made bothes, & lat vnder the bothes: for sence & tyme of Iosua the sonne of Nun, vnto thys dave, had not the chyldren of Israel done so, & that was very greate gladnesse. And euery dave from the first dave vnto the last, red Eldras in the booke of & lawe of God. And seuen dayes held they & feast, & on the eyght dave, they gathered together, according vnto & maner.

The. ix. Chapter.

The people repent, and forsake theyr iniquities. Eldras receiveth the benediction of God, and the synnes of the people.

In the. xxiii. dave of thys moneth the chyldren of Israel together with fastynge and sackecloth, & earthe vpon them, & they that were of the seede of Israel: were seperated from all the straunge chyldren, and stode and knowen theyr synnes and wyckednesses of theyr fathers, and stode by in theyr place and red in the booke of the lawe of the Lorde their God, foure tymes on the dave, & they knowen leged, and worshipped the Lorde their God foure tymes on the dave. And truly thou art iust in al that thou hast broughte vpon vs: for thou hast done ryght. As for vs, we haue bene vngodlye & our kynges, & our prynces, our preastes, ad oure fathers haue not done after thy lawe, nor regarde thy commandementes, ad thy earnest exhortacions, wherwith thou hast exhorted them, and they haue not serued the in the kyngdome, & in thy greates goodes þe thou gauest them, & in the large & plenteous land whych thou gauest befoze them, & haue not conuerted from theyr wycked wyckes. * And they came to sweare, and to brynche them selues with an othe to walke in Gods lawe, whiche was gyuen by Moyses the seruante of God, and that they wolde observe and do accordynge vnto all the commandementes, iudgements and statutes of the Lord oure God: & that we wolde not gyue our daughters vnto the people in þe lande, neither to take theyr daughters for our sonnes. And þe people of the lande broughte warre on the Sabbath, & al maner of vitayles to sell that we wolde not take it of them on the Sabbath & on the holy dayes, & and we wolde let the leuenthye be free, concernynge all maner of charge.

And we decreed a statute vpon our selues to gyue verely the thyrde parte of a sicke to minystracion in the house of our God, to the shewbreade, to the the dayly meat offering to the dayly burnt offeringe of the Sabbathes: of the newe mones, & feast dayes, and to the thynges that were sanctified, and to the offeringes of attonement, to reconcile Israel wythal, and to all the busyness in the house of oure God.

And we cast the lot amonge the preastes, Leuytes and the people, for the offeringe of the woode to be broughte vnto the house of oure God from yere to yere, after the houses of oure fathers that it myghte be dynt at times appointed, vpon the aulter of the Lord God, as it is writen in the lawe: & to bringe the fyrstfruytes of oure lande, & the fyrstfruytes of oure frutes of al trees: yere by yere vnto the house of the Lord: & the firstfruytes of oure sonnes, & of oure catell, as it is writen in the lawe: and the fyrstfruytes of oure vine, and of oure shepe, whiche we shulde bringe to the house of oure God, vnto the preastes to mynystre in the house of oure God: and that we shulde bringe þe fyrstfruytes of our house and oure beaues offeringe, and the frutes of all maner of trees, of wyne also and of oyle, vnto þe preastes, to þe chestes of the house of oure God. And the cythes of oure lande vnto the Leuites, that the Leuites myghte haue the cythes in all the cythes of oure mynystacion. And the preast the sonne of Aaron wyth the Leuytes haue also of the tythes of the Leuytes, so þ the Leuytes shal bypnyng vp the tythes of theyr tythes vnto the house of our God, to the store houses & to the treasure houses. For the chyldren of Israel & the chyldren of Leui, shall bypnyng vp the beaue offeringes of the corne, wyne, and oyle, vnto þ store houses, there as are the vessels of þ sanc tuary & the prestes that mynyster, & the porters and syngers, þ we forsake not the house of our God.

ii. ESDRAS.

The .xii. Chapter.

¶ The preastes & the Levites which came with JOZABABEL to Jerusalem are nombred, & the wall is dedicate.

These are þ preastes & Levites, þ wente up wyth JOZABABEL the sone of Salathiel, and wyth Jesua, Saracia, Jeremi, & ESDRAS Amaria, Maluch, Hatus, Berhania, Rehum, Werimoth, Iddo, Genthoi, Abia, Weamin, Maaria, Belga, Semasa Joarib, Jadaia, Salu, Amok, Helkia, & Jadaia. These were þ heades amōge the preastes & they: brethren in the dayes of Jesua. The Levites were these: Jesua, Benui, Cadmiel, Sarabia, Juda, & Mathania which was ouer the office of thankesgeyng: he & his brethren: Sachukia, and Hinni, and they: brethren, were aboute them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim also begat Eliasib, & Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jadaia. In the dayes of Joakim were these the chefe fathers amonge the preastes: vnder Saracia, Mariata, vnder Jeremi, Hanania, vnder ESDRAS, Mesullam, vnder Amaria, Ichonnan vnder Milco, Jonathan: vnder Sebania, Joseph, vnder Harim, Adna, vnder Sarathiel, Helkia, vnder Iddo, zacharye: vnder Genthon, Mesullam, vnder Abia, zichri, vnder Hiniami, & Moabia, Biltai, vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semia, Ichonathan, vnder Joarib, Methenai, vnder Jadaia, Eli, vnder Seilai, Kelai, vnder Amok, Eber, vnder Helchia, Hasabia, vnder Jadaia, Nathanael.

And in the tyme of Eliasib: Joiada, Jonathan & Jadaia, were the chefe fathers amonge the Levites & the preastes, wyrtten vnder þ raygne of Darius the persian. The chyldren of Lemy, the pynce pall fathers were wyrtten in the Chronicles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathan the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chefe amonge the Levites, Hasabia, Sebia, and Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and they: brethren in they: prestee, to geue prayse & thankes, accordyng as Dauid the ma of God had ordeyned it, one watch ouer agaynst another Mathania, Balbukia Obadiah Mesullam, Talmon, and Akub, were porters in the watche at the thresholds of the gates. These were in the dayes of Joakym, the sonne of Jesua, the sonne of Joseder, and in the dayes of Nehemia, the captayne, and of the preaste ESDRAS the scribe.

And in the dedicacyon of the wall at Jerusalem, they soughte the Levites out of all they: places, that they myghte be broughte to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedycacyon & gladnesse, wyth thankesgeynges, and synging wyth Tymbales, Psalteryes, and Harpes.

And the chyldren of þ syngers gathered them selues together from enery syde out of the playne countree aboute Jerusalem, and from the vyllages of Bethphathi, from the house of Gilgal, and out of the countrees of Geba, & Asinuerth, for the syngers had builded them vyllages round aboute Jerusalem. And the preastes and Levites were pursh and censed the people and the gates, and the wall.

And I broughte the pynces of Juda vpon the walle, and appoynted two queres of men to geue thankes, wher was on the ryghte hande of the wal toward the Dongegate, and after them wente Holai, and halfe of the pynces of Juda, Ad Maria ESDRAS: and Mesullam, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semia, & Jeremi, and certayne of the pynces chyldren wyth trompetes, namely zacharye the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semia, the sonne of Mathania, the sonne of Dauid, the sonne of zachur, & sonne of Akub, & his brethren, Semia, Asrael, Malai, Gilalai, Maai, Nathanael, & Juda, & Hinni, wyth the musikal instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

And ESDRAS the scribe wente before them ad besyde the welgate, they wente by ouer agaynst them vpon the steepe of the cpyte of Dauid at the goinge by of the wall beyond the house of Dauid, vnto the waingate eastwarde.

The other quere of them that gaue shrikes wente ouer agaynst them, and I led them, and the halfe parte of the people vpon the wall, beyonde the fornegate, vnto the broad wall, and beyonde the porte of Ephraim, and beyonde the oldegate, beyonde the sythegate, and the tower of Hananell, and the tower of Mea, vntyll the shepegate. And they stode styll in the pynlongate, and stode the two queres (of them that gaue shrikes) in the house of God: and I, & the halfe of the rulers wyth me, & the preastes, namely Eliakim, Maasia, Hiniamin, Michai, Elioenai, zacharye and Hanania, wyth trompettes, and Maasia, Semiah, Eliazer, Eli: Ichonnan, Melchiah, Elam, and Ser. And the syngers sange loude, haung Jesiah for they: ouerleat.

And the same daye: they offered great sacryfices & reioysed: for God had geuen them great gladnesse, so that both the wynges and chyldren were ioyfull, and the myght of Jerusalem was heard farre of.

At the same tyme were the men appointed ouer the treasure houses (wher was the beaue offeringes: the sythynge, & the tythes) that they shoulde gather them out of the feeldes aboute the cpyes: to dedycate them vnto the preastes and Levites accordyng to the lawe: for Juda was glad of the pynce.

priesters and Leuites, that they stode & way-ted vpon the office of theyr God, whiche is a pure office. And the syngers & porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid. and of Salomon his sonne: * for in the tyme of Da-uid and Asaph were the cheefe syngers founded, and the songes of praise and thankesgy-uynge vnto God. In the tyme of Asaph, and Hebemia, did al they of Israel gyue porcions vnto the syngers & porters, euery daye his porcyon, and they gaue tythes vnto the Leuites: & the Leuites gaue tythes agayne vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

The lawe is vrb. and when they haue hearde it, they separate from them all straungers. &c.

IN that daye dyd they reade in þ boke of Moses, & the people bekened thereto, and there was founde wyrtten, * þ the Amontes and Moabites shoulde neuer come into the congregacyon of God, because they met not the chyldre of Israel with bread and water, * but hyed Balaa agaynst the,
that he shoulde curse them, and our God turned the curse into a blessinge. Nowe when they herde the lawe it fortuned, that they separated from Israel euery one that had mixt hym selfe therein. And before this had þ prest Eliafib the ouersyghte of the treasure of þ house of our God, and he was kynsmen vnto Cobia: and had made hym a great chamber, and there had they afore tyme layed the offynges, frankensce, vessel, and the tithe of come, wyne, and oyle (accorpyng to the commaundementes gyuen to the Leuites, singers and porters) and the beaucostynges of the prestes.

But in all thys tyme was not J at Jerusalem: for in þ two & thyrtye yere of Aithares kyng of Babylō, came J vnto þ kyng, and after certayne dayes obtayned J licence of the kyng to come to Ierusalem. And J gat knowledge of þ ruyll that Eliafib dyd vnto Cobia, in þ he had made hym a chambre in þ courte of the house of God, and it greued me so, & I cast forth all the vessels of the house of Cobia out of the chambre, and commaunded them to cleanse the chābres. And thyrther brought J agayne the vessels of the house of God, with the meat offring, and the encense.

And J perceyued that the porcyons of the Leuites were not gyuen them, and that eue-ry one fled to his lade, euen the Leuites & syn-gers þ executed the worke. The reprovred J þ rulers, & said: why is the house of God forsake? And J gathered the together, & set the in their place. The brought al Iuda þ tithe of come & wyne, and oyle, vnto the treasure.
And J made treasurers ouer the treasure: & Shelemiah the prest, & zador the scribe, and of the Leuites, Ithadab, & vnder their hāde was Hanan the sonne of zacur, the sonne of Athania: for they were counted faythfull, and their office was to distribute the porcyons vnto their brythre. * Thynke vpon me, O my God here in, and wypp not out my mercy that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers therof.

And the same tyme sawe I some treading wyne presses on þ Sabbath, & bypnyng in heues, & asses laden w wine, grapes, figges and bypnyng all maner of burthen vnto Jerusale, vpo the Sabbath daye. And I rebuked the earnestlye þ same daye that they sold the bytapes. There dwelt me of Tye also therin, whych brought hys and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabbath vnto þ chyldre of Iuda in Ierusalem. Then reprovred J þ rulers in Iuda, & said vnto the: what ruyll thinge is this þ ye do, & breake the Sabbath daye? Dyd not your fathers euen thus, & our God brought all this plage vpon vs, & vpo this cytie? And ye make the wrath more yet vpo Israel, in that ye breake the Sabbath.

And it fortuned that whē the porters of Jerusale began to be darke in the euenynge before the Sabbath, J commaunded to shut the gates, and charged, that they shoulde not be opened tyll after the Sabbath: & some of my seruauntes set J at the gates, & there shoulde no burthen be brought in on þ Sabbath daye.
Then remayned þ chapmen and marchautes ones or twyle ouer nyght without Ierusalem with all maner of wares. Then reprovred J them so, and sayd vnto them: why tarpe ye all nyght about the wall? If ye do it ones a-gayne, I wyll laye handes vpon you. From þ tyme forth the came they homore on the Sab-both. And J said vnto the Leuites that they shoulde clyse them selues, & that they shoulde come and kepe the gates, to halow the Sab-both daye. Thynke vpon me (O my God) concernynge this also, & spare me, accorpyng to thy great mercy.

And the same tyme sawe I Jewes, that marryed wyues of Asdod, of Ammon, and of Moab, & their chyldre spake half in þ speech of Asdod, and could not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tonge might a mā perceyue euery people. Then I reprovred them, and cursed them, & smote certayne men of the,
and made the bare, & toke an oth of the by God: Ye shal not gyue your daughters vnto their sones, neither shal ye take their daughters vnto youre sones, or for youre selues.
Dyd not Salomon the kyng of Israel synne for such? and yet amonge many heathē was there no kyng lyke hym, whych was deare vnto his God: and God made hym king ouer all Israel, and yet neuerthelesse, outladye the women caused hym to synne: Shall we then obeye vnto you, to do all thys great ruyll, and to transgresse agaynst our God, and marre strangys wyues?

¶ And Esther.

And one of the chyldren of Jeholada þ some of Eliab the hye preste had made a cōtracte with Hanabalat the Mozonite: but I chased hym fro me. (O my God) thynke thou vpon them that defile the presthode, ad the couenaunt of the presthode of the Leui tes. Thus clesed I them fro all such as were outlandish, and appointed the courses of the preastes and Leuites, every one in his office, and to offere the wood at tymes appoynted, and the fyrst frutes. Thynke thou vpon me (O my God) for the best. (Amen)

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

¶ The kyng Ahasuerus maketh a royal feaste, wherby the quene Vasthi wyl not come, for whiche cause she is deuoyced

L Fortuned, in þ dapes of Ahasuerus whiche rayg ned fro India vnto Ethio pia, (ouer an hundred & se uen & twenty lades) euen in those dapes when the kyng Ahasuerus late on his seate royall, whiche was in Susan the cheste ctye, in the thyrde yere of his raigne, he made a feaste vnto all his princes and ser uantes. And the myghtie men of Persia ad Media, the capytaynes also and rulers of his countreys were before him, and he shewed þ rychesse and glozpe of his kyngdome, and þ glozuous worthyp of his greatnesse manye dapes long: euen an hundred and foure scoze dapes.

¶ And when these dapes were expyred, the king made a feaste vnto all the people þ were in Susan the cheste ctye, both vnto grete & smal, seven dapes longe in þ court of the gar den by the kynges palace: where there haged whete, grene ad pelowe clothes, fastened w cordes of fyne sylke, and purple in syluer rin ges, vpon pylers of marble stones.

¶ The benches also were of gold and syluer made vpo a pauemēt of grene, white, pelow

& blacke marble. And they dranke in vessels of golde, and chaunged vessel after vessel.
 And the kynges wyne was moche accordyng to the power of the kyng. And the bynche was so appoynted þ none shulde compe any man, for so the kyng had comaunded by the officers of his house, þ every one shuld do as it lyked hym. And the quene Vasthi made a feaste also for the women in the palace of Su aerus. And on the seventh dape when the kyng was mery after the wyne, he comaun ded Bechman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagthan, Zethar, and Charchay, the leui chambrelayens (that dyd seruyce in the pre sence of kinge Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasthi with the crowne regall into the kynges presence, that he might shewe the people and princes her sayrenelle, for she was be tyfull. But þ quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kynges worde by his chambelayens.
 Then was the kyng very wroth, and his in dignacon kyndled in hym.

And the kyng spake to the wyse men that had vnderstanding in the ordinaunces of the land, for the kynges matters must be pldid before al such as haue knowledge of the law and iudgemēt: and the (these and) next vnto him were, Carsena, Sethar, Admata, Del lis, Wares, Warsena, and Damucan, the seuen princes of Persia, and Media, whiche sawe the kynges face, and late about in the kyngdome: What lawe (sayd the kyng) shuld be executed vpon the quene Vasthi, be cause she dyd not accordyng to the worde of the kyng Ahasuerus, whiche he comaun ded by his chambelayens? And Damucan answered before the kyng and the princes:
 the quene Vasthi hath not onely done agaynst the kyng, but also agaynst all the princes, & agaynst all the people that are in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus: for the dede of the quene shal come abroade vnto al women, so that they shal despyse theyr hus bandes before theyr eyes, and shal saye: the kyng Ahasuerus comaunded Vasthi the quene to be broughte in before hym, but she wolde not come. And so shal the princes of Persia and Media saye lykewyle vnto al kynges princes: whē they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shal there aryse to moche despittefulnesse & wrath. If it please the kyng therfore, let there go a comaundement from him, & let it be wrytten accordyng to þ lawe of the Persians and Medians: (and not to be transgressed) þ Vasthi come nomore before kyng Ahasuerus, & let þ kyng gyue her dome vnto an other, that is better then she.

¶ And when thes comaundement of the kyng (whiche shalbe made) is published to rowout all his empyre (whiche is grete in women shal hold theyr husbandes in hono r both amonge grete and small.

This pleaseth the kyng & the princes, and the kyng dyd according to the worde of Amaran. For he sente letters forth into all the kynges landes, into euery lade, according to the wytyng therof, & to euery people after theyr language, & euery man shoulde be lord in hys owne house. And this caused he to be spoken after the language of his people

The. ii. Chapter

After the quene is put away, certayne goodly ponge damelles are seached out. A dista, otherwyle called Esther, pleased the kyng, and is made quene. Wardochus openeth vnto the kyng those that wolde betraye hym.

After these actes, whē s dyspleasure of kyng Ahasuerus was now layed, he thought vpon Alishi, and what she had done and what was concluded aganst her.

He sayd the kynges seruantes that minystrid vnto him: Let there be saye ponge virgins sought for the kyng, & the kyng appointed certayne men in all the landes of his empyre, whome he charged that they shulde byng togther all the saye ponge virgins vnto Susan & heed cytie, to the womens buildyng, vnder the hand of Hagei, the kynges chamberlayne, & kept the women, to geue the their apparel, & other thynges necessary to be had.

And that s dāsel which pleased s king shuld be quene in Alishi stede. And this pleased the kyng and he dyd so.

In the cytie of Susan there was a Jewe, whose name was Wardochus, the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semel, the sonne of Cis a man of Jemini, which was carped away fro Jerusalem, & when Jekonia the kyng of Iuda was led awaye, (whome Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon carped thence) & he nozished Hadassa (s is Esther) hys vnckles daughter: for she had neyther father nor mother, and she was a saye & bewtyfull dāsel: whō Wardochus (whē her father & mother was deed) receyued for hys owne daughter.

So it fortunēd, that when the kinges commaundement and comission was published, & many damelles were broughte togther in the cytie of Susan vnder the bande of Hagei. Esther was broughte also vnto the kynges house vnder the bande of Hagei s keeper of the women, & the damsell pleased hym, ad she founde fauour in hys syght. And he caused ornamentes to be gyven her, & such thynges as belonged to her, & appoynted her seuē comely damelles out of the kinges house, and fauoured both her and her gentlewome singulary in s house of the womē. But Esther shewed not her people and her kynred: for Wardochus had charged her, that she shuld not tell it. And Wardochus walked euery daye before the courte of the womens house, that he might knowe howe Esther dyd, and what shoulde become of her.

And when the appoynted tyme of euery damself came, that she shoulde go into s king Ahasuerus, after s she had bene twelue monethes in the deckyng of the womē (for theyr deckyng must haue so moche tyme namely, syre monethes with Balme and Myrr, and syre monethes with good spices, so were the women bewtyfyed) then went there one dā sell vnto the kyng, and whatsoeuer she requyred (so s it were comely) that must be gyven her to go wpth her out of the womens buildyng vnto the kynges palace. In the euynynge she went, and on the morow agayne, into the seconde house of the womē abyding vnder the hand of Saasgas the kynges chamberlayne, which kept the concubynes. And she came in vnto the kyng nomore, except it pleased the kyng to haue her, and that he called her by name.

Nowe when the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abitha s vnckle of Wardochus (whych had receiued her as his owne daughter) that she shoulde come into the kinge, she despyed nothyng, but what Hagei the kinges chamberlayne, the keeper of the women layde.

And Esther founde fauour in the sight of all the that looked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto kyng Ahasuerus into his house royal, in s tenth moneth, whych is s moneth * Tebeth, in the seuenthy yere of hys raygne. * Decembry

And the king loued Esther aboue all s women, & she founde grace and fauoure in hys syght before all the virgins: so that he set s crowne of the kyngdome vpon her heed, and made her quene in stede of Alishi. And the kyng made a great feast vnto all his princes and seruantes (which feast was because of Esther) & caused s lades to be in quyetnesse, & gaue giftes, as becam s royaltie of a king.

And when the virgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Wardochus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred and her people, according as Wardochus had bydden her: for Esther dyd after the word of Wardochus, lyke as yf she had bene yet vnder his gouernaunce. At the same tyme, while Wardochus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaynes, Bigthan & Theres which kept the doze, were wroth, & sought to laye their handes on s kyng Ahasuerus. wherof also Wardochus gat knowledge, & tolde it vnto quene Esther, & Esther certifyed the kyng therof in Wardochus name. And when inquisition was made, it was founde so. And they were bothe hanged on tree: and it was wrytten in the Chronycles before the kyngs

The. iii. Chapter.

Hamian the Morochonian: after he was exalted ob- tained of the kyng that all the Jewes shuld be put to death: because Wardochus had not done hym wyllyng as other had.

After these actes dyd kyng Ahasuerus promote Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, and set him on hye, and set by a seat aboute al the prynces that he had with him. And all the kynges seruantes that were in the kynges gate bowed theyr knees and woꝝshipped Haman: for the king had so commaunded, concerninge hym. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, & woꝝshipped hym not. Then the kynges seruantes whych were in the kynges gate sayde vnto Mardocheus: why transgressest thou þe kynges commaundement? And whē they spake this daylye vnto hym, he folowed them not, and they tolde Haman: that they myghte se howe Mardocheus matters wold endure: for he had tolde them, that he was a Jewe.

And when Haman sawe that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto hym, nor woꝝshipped hym, he was full of indignacion, and thought it to lytle to laye handes onelye on Mardocheus: for they had shewed hym the nation of Mardocheus, wherfore he sought to destrope all the Jewes, that were thorow out the hole empyre of Ahasuerus, and that were of the nation of Mardocheus.

In the fyrste moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the tweluth yere of kyng Ahasuerus, they cast þur (that is a lot) befoze Haman from dawe to dawe, and fro moneth to moneth, to the tweluth moneth, that is the moneth Adar. And Haman said vnto kyng Ahasuerus: There is here a people scattered abroade, and dyspersed amonge al people in al the lādes of thyne empyre, and they haue theyr lawes contrarye fro all people, and do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kynges pꝛofyte to suffre them after thys manner. If it please the kyng, let it be wyrtten, that they maye be destroyed, and so wyll I weye downe ten thousand talētes of syluer, by the handes of þe workemen, to be brought into the kynges treasure. And the kyng toke his rpyng from his hand, & gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite þe Jewes enemye. And the king sayd vnto Haman: Let the syluer be gyven the, and do wth that people as it pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scribes called on þe thirtenth day of the first moneth * (Nisan) and there was wyrtten (accorbyng as Haman commaunded) vnto all the kynges officers, and to the captaynes that were in all the lādes, and to the rulers of euerye people in the countreys on euery syde, accorbyng to the wyrtting of euery nacion, and after their lāguage: in the name of kyng Ahasuerus was it wyrtten, and sealed wth the kynges rpyng. And the wyrttinges were sent by postes into all the kynges landes, to roote out, to kyll & to destrope all Jewes, both younge and old, chyldezen and women in one dawe (namelye, upon the thirtenth dawe of the tweluth moneth. whiche is the moneth * Adar) and to spoyle theyr goodes.

Thys was the summe of the wyrttinge: there shulde be a comaundement gyven in al landes, and publyshed vnto all people, that they shulde be readye agaynst the same day. And the postes went in all the haste, accorbyng to the kynges comaundement. And in Susan the chere cytie was the comaundement deuyled. And the kyng and Haman sat and dranke: when in the meane tyme the cytie of Susan was dysquetered.

The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ Mardocheus sheweth the quene knowlege of the cruell decre of the kyng & agaynst the Jewes.

When Mardocheus perceiued that all þe was done he rente his clothes ad put on sackcloth, with asches, and went out into the myddes of the citie, and cryed loude and lamentably, & came befoze the kynges gate: but he myght not entre within the kynges gate, by cause he had sackcloth on. And in al landes, countries and places, as farre as the kynges worde and commaundement extended, there was great lamentacion amonge the Jewes, fastyng, wepyng & mournyng, and many laye in sackclothes & in asches. So Esther damoselles and her chamberlaynes came and told it her. The was the quene exceedingly astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shoulde put on, and lay the sackcloth from him. But Mardocheus wold not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whiche stode before her) and gaue hym a comaundement vnto Mardocheus, that he might knowe what it were, wherfore he dyd so. So Hathath went forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cytie, whych was befoze the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde hym of all þe had happened vnto hym, and of the summe of the ner þe Haman had promysed to weye downe into þe kynges treasury because of þe Jewes, yf he wolde destrope them: & he gaue hym the coppe of the kynges comaundement, that was deuyled at Susan, to destrope the Jewes: he might shewe it vnto Esther, and to shew to her, and charge her, that she shuld go vnto the king, and make her prayer and supplication vnto hym for her people.

And whē Hathath came in, he tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus. And agayne Esther spake vnto Hathath, & commaunded hym to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruantes, & the people in the landes of the kyng, knowe that whosoener cometh within the courte vnto the kyng, whether it be man or womā, whiche is not called, the comaundement is, þe the same shal dye, excepte the kyng holde out the golden sceptre vnto hym (in token of gracypounesse) for then he shal lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come into the kyng now this thyrtie dayes.

And they certyfied Waradocheus of Esthers wordes, & Waradocheus had saye againe vnto Esther: thinke not to saue thine owne lyfe whyle thou art in the kynges house, before all Jewes, for yf thou holdest thy peace at this tyme, the wall the Jewes haue helpe & deliuerance out of an other place, & thou & thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngdome, for this causes sake: Esther had the giue Waradocheus this answer: So thou thy waye, ad gather together all the Jewes that are founde at Susa, & faste ye for me, that ye eate not ad drinke not in thre dayes, neyther daye nor nyght. I and my damosels wyll fast lyke wyse, & so wyll I go into the kyng, which thing yet is contrary to the commaundement: and yf I perishe, I perishe. So Waradocheus went bys waye, & dyd all that Esther had commaunded hym.

The v. Chapter.

Esther entred into the kynges, and byddeth ham & Haman to a feast. Haman prayeth a galous for Waradocheus.

AD on the thirde daye it fortuneth that Esther put on her royal apparell, & stode in the court of the kynges place within, ouer against the kynges house. And the kyng sat vpon his royal seate in the kynges palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kyng sawe Esther the quene standing in the court, he founde grace in bys sighte. And the kyng helde out the golden sceptre that was in bys hande towards Esther. So Esther kipte forth, and touched the top of the sceptre.

Then sayde the kyng vnto her: What wille thou quene Esther? & what requestest thou: alke euen the halfe of the empyre, and it shal be giue. And Esther answered: If it please the kyng, let the kyng & Haman come this daye vnto the banquet, that I haue prepared for him. And the kyng sayd: cause Haman to make haste & he maye do as Esther hath said.

So the kyng & Haman came to the banquet. Esther had prepared, & the kyng sayd vnto Esther at the banquet of wyne: what is thy petition: that it maye be giuen the. And what requestest thou: yf it be eue the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then answered Esther, and sayd: my petition and desire is, yf I haue founde grace in the syght of the kyng, and yf it please the kyng to giue me my petition, & to fulfill my request, then let the kyng & Haman come to the banquet & I shall prepare for them, and so wyll I do to morowe, as the kyng hath said.

Then went Haman forth the same daye ioyfull & merie in bys mynde. And when the same Haman sawe Waradocheus in the kynges gate & he stode not vp & kneeled before hym, he was full of indygnacion at Waradocheus. Neuerthelesse, Haman refrayned him selfe: & when he came home he sent, and called for his frendes, & zares bys wyfe, ad Haman tolde them of the gloire of bys rycheesse, & the multitude of his chyldre, & al together howe the kyng had promoted hym so greatly, & howe that he had set hym aboue the prynces & seruantes of the kyng. Haman sayd morouer: Yea, & Esther the quene dyd let no man come in with the kyng vnto the banquet, & he had prepared, except me. And to morowe am I bydded vnto her also wyth the kyng. But in all this am I not satisfyed, as longe as I see Waradocheus the Jewe sittinge at the kynges gate. Then sayde zares bys wyfe & all bys frendes vnto hym: Let them make a galous of fyfte cubytes hye, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kyng, that Waradocheus maye be hanged thereon, & go thou in merely wyth the kyng vnto the banquet. And Haman was well content wythal, and caused the galous to be made.

The vi. Chapter.

The kyng turneth ouer the Chronyces and synneth the libertie of Waradocheus, & then to the confusion of Haman, commaundeth Waradocheus to be had in honour.

The same night could not the kyng slepe, & he commaunded to byrning the Chronyces & storys: whiche when they were red before the kyng, they happened on a place where it was written, howe Waradocheus had tolde that Bigthana & Teres the kynges two chaberlaynes (which kept the thresholds) sought, to laye handes on kyng Ahasuerus. And the kyng sayd: what worchip and good haue we done to Waradocheus therfore? Then sayde the kynges seruantes that ministred vnto him: There is nothyng at all done for hym. And the kyng sayde: Who is in the court? (for Haman was gone into the court wythout, before the kynges house, that he might speake vnto the kyng to hange Waradocheus on the tree (that he had prepared for hym.)) And the kynges seruantes sayde vnto hym: behold, Haman standeth without in the court. And the kyng sayde: let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kyng sayde vnto hym: what shalbe done vnto the man, whom the kyng wolde sayne byrning vnto worchyppe? Haman thought in bys herte: Whome desyret the kyng to byrning vnto worchyppe? more the me. And Haman answered the kyng: Let the man whome the kyng please to byrning vnto worchyppe, be brought hyther: that he maye be arayed with the royall garmentes, which the kyng vseth to wate: & the hoyle of the kyng rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royall royal maye be set vpo his herd. And let this rayment and hoise be deliuered vnder the bande of one of the kinges princes, that they maye araye the man withal (whō the kynge is disposed to bringe to honour) & carpe hym vpo the hoise thowowe the strete of the ctye, & proclame before hym: thus shall it be done to the man, whō the kynge pleaseyth to bring to honoure.

D And the kynge sayd: make haste, and take as thou hast sayd: the rayment and the hoise: and do euen so vnto Mardocheus the Jewe, & let hym stande before the kinges gate, & let not big sayle of all that thou hast spoken. The roke Haman the rayment and the hoise, & arayed Mardocheus, and brought him on horsebak thowowe the strete of the ctye, & proclaimed before hym: Euen thys shall it be done vnto the mā whō the kyng is dysposed to honour. And Mardocheus came agayne to the kynes gate, but Haman gat him home in al the haste mourninge bare headed, ad told zares hys wyfe & all hys frendes, euerye thynge, & had happened hym. Then sayd his wise mē and zares his wyfe vnto hym: Yf it be Mardocheus, of p seed of the Jewes, before whō thou hast begonne to fall, thou shalt not preuaile agaynst hym, but shalt surely fall before hym. And whyle they were yet talkyng with hym, came the kynes chamberlaines, & caused Haman to make hast, to come vnto the banket that Esther had prepared.

The. vii. Chapter.

C The quene byddeth the kynge & Haman agayne, & prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman and he is hanged on the gallows, whiche he had prepared for Mardocheus.

A And the kynge and Haman came into the banket that quene Esther had prepared, and the kyng said vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the banket of wyne: what is thy peticion (quene Esther) that it may be geue the? And what requyrest thou? Pea, aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shall be done. And Esther the quene answered, and sayde: Yf I haue found grace in thy syghte (O kynge), and yf it please the kyng, then graunt me my life at my desyre and my people, for my peticions sake: for we are sold, I and my people, to be destroyed to be slayne and to perishe. And wold God that we were solde to be bondmen and bondwomen, then wolde I holde my tonge: for the enemye pondereth not the kynes harme. The kyng Abasuerus answered, & sayde vnto quene Esther: who is he? And where is he, that darre presume in hys mynde, to do after that manner? And Esther sayde: the enemye & aduersarpe is thys wyched Haman.

C Haman was exceedingly afrayed before the king and the quene. And the kynge arose from the banket, and from the wyne, in hys displeasure, and went into the palace garde,

And Haman stode vp, and besought quene Esther for his life: for he sawe that there was a myschefe prepared for him of the kynge all readye.

And when the kynge came agayne out of the palace garden, into the place where they dranke wyne, Hamā had layed hym vpo the bed, & Esther sat vpon. Then sayd the kyng: wyl he force the quene also before me in the house? As soone as that worde went out of the kynes mouthe, they couered Hamans face. And Harbona one of the chamberlaines that stode before the kynge, sayde: Schew there stande a galous in Hamans house, whiche cubites hye, which he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for the kyng. The kynge sayde: hange him thereon. So they hanged Haman on the galous, that he had made for Mardocheus. The was p kinges wyll pacified.

The. viii. Chapter.

C After the death of Haman is Mardocheus rewarded, and then are there comfortable letters sente vnto the Jewes.

M The same daye dyd kynge Abasuerus geue the house of Haman the Jewes enemy, vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kynge: for Esther tolde howe that he belonged vnto her. And the king put of hys signet ryng, whiche he had taken from Haman, & gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther led Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And Esther spake yet moze before the kyng: & fell downe at his feet weppynge, & besought hym that he wolde put awaye the wychednes of Haman the Agagite, and hys deuce that he had ymagyned agaynst the Jewes. And the kynge (according to the maner) helde out his golden sceptre toward Esther, & she stood vp, & stode before the kyng, & sayd yf it please the kyng, and yf I haue founde grace in thy syght, and yf it be acceptable before thee, then let it be wyrtten, that the letters of the deuce of Haman the sonne of Haman the Agagite, maye be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote to destroye p Jewes, whiche are in all the kinges landes. For howe can I suffice and se the cupll, that shall happen vnto my people? O: howe can I loke vpo the destruction of my kynred?

And p kynge Abasuerus sayd vnto Esther, & to Mardocheus p Jewe: I haue geuen Esther p house of Haman, & they haue haged vpo a tree, because he had hand vpon the Jewes. Whiche ye also do to the Jewes, as it liketh you in the kynes name, and seale it wth the kynes ryng, & wyrttinges that were wyrtten in the name, and sealed wth the kynes ryng, & burst noman dysual. Then were p scripbes called at p same tyme, & they moneth, that is the moneth * Sivan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was wyrtten (accordyng to all as Wardocheus commaunded) vnto the Jewes to the pynnes, to the debtyes and captaynes in the landes whych are from India vnto Ethiopia, namelye, an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, vnto euerye one accordyng to the wyrtynge therof, and vnto euerye people after their spech, & to the Jewes accordyng to theyr wyrtynge and language.

And he wrote in the kynges Ahasuerus name, & sealed it with the kynges ryng. And by postes that rode vpon horses, and swifte ponge mules, sent he the wyrtynge, wherein the kyng graunted the Jewes (in what cyties soeuer they were) to gather them selues together, and to stande for theyr lyfe, and for to roote out, to slaye & to destroye al the power of the people and land that wold trouble the with chyldre and women, & to spoyle theyr good vpon one daye in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, namely vpon the thyrtyenth day of the tweluth moneth, whych is the moneth * Abar.

The summe of the wyrtynge was howe there shulde be a comaundement geuen in al landes, & publyshed amonge all people, and that the Jewes shulde be ready against that daye, and to auenge them selues on their enemies. And so the postes & rode vpon the swift horses and mules, made haste with al speede, to execute the kynges worde, & the comaundement was deuyled in Susan & chefe cytie.

And Wardocheus wet out (as the place) from the kyng in rofall apparell, of pelowe and whit, and with a great crowne of gold, beynge arayed with a garmente of sylke and purple, and the cytie of Susan reioysed and was glad: & vnto the Jewes there was come (as the place) lyght and gladnesse, loye and wyrtynge. In all landes and cyties into what places soeuer the kynges worde and comaundement reached, there was loye and myrth, prosperitie & good dayes amoge the Jewes: in so moch, that many of the people in fland became of the Jewes belefe, and the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

The ix. Chapter.

At the comaundement of the kyng, the Jewes put theyr aduersaries to death. The sonnes of Haman are hangyd. The Jewes kepe a feast vpon the thyrtyenth daye of theyr deliuerance.

In the tweluth moneth, that is the moneth Abar, vpon the thyrtyenth daye of the same, when the kynges worde and comaundement shoulde be done, euen vpon the same daye that the enemies shoulde haue destroyed the Jewes to haue oppressed them, it turned contraye wyse, euen that the Jewes shoulde subdue their enemies. For then gathered thered the Jewes together in their cities with in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, to lay hande on such as wolde do them euil, and no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, ad pynces and debtyes and officers of the kyng, promoted the Jewes for the feare of Wardocheus came vpon the. For Wardocheus was great in the kynges house, and the repute of hym was noyed in all landes, howe he encreased and grew.

Thus the Jewes smote all theyr enemies with a soze slaughter, and slue and destroyed & did after their wyll vnto such as were their aduersaries. And at Susan the chefe cytie slue the Jewes, and destroyed syue hundred men and slue Pharsadatha, Dalpho, Asphatha, Phozatha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisat, Aridai, and Clazatha, the ten sonnes of Haman, the sonnes of Hamadata the enemye of the Jewes: but on his goodes they layed no hādes. At the same tyme was the kyng certified of the nobz of those that were slayne in the cytie of Susan. And the kynges sayd vnto quene Esther. The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed syue hundred men in the cytie of Susan, and the ten sonnes of Haman. What haue they done thinkest thou in other landes of the kyng? And what is thy peticion, that it maye be geuen the: or what requirest thou moze to be done? Esther answered: If it please the kyng, let hym suffer the Jewes to morowe also to do accordyng vnto this dayes comaundement, that they maye hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon a tree. And the kyng charged to do so, and the comaundement was deuyled at Susan, & they hanged Hamans ten sonnes. For the Jewes that were in Susan gathered them selues together, vpon the fourtenth daye of the moneth of Abar, and slue the hundred men at Susan, but on theyr goodes they layed no hādes. As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges landes, they came thither, and stode for theyr liues, that they might haue rest fro their enemies: & slue of their enemies syue and seuentie thousande, howbeit, they layed no handes on their goodes. This they did on the thyrtyenth daye of the moneth Abar, and on the fourtenth daye of the same moneth rested they, which day they held with feasting and gladnesse. But the Jewes that were at Susan, came together both on the thirteenth daye, and on the fourtenth, & on the fyfteenth daye of the same they rested, and helde that day with feasting and gladnesse. And therefore the Jewes that dwelt in the byllages, & vnwalled townes, helde the fourtenth daye of the moneth Abar, with gladnesse and feasting, and kept holy daye, as euery one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Wardocheus wrote these actes, and sent the sent the wytynges vnto all the Jewes that were in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, both nye ad farre, & they shuld make a lawe amonge them selues, & holde the fortyeth and fyfteenth day of the moneth Adar, as & dayes wherein the Jewes came to rest fro theyr enemyes, and as a moneth wherein their payne was turned to ioye & their sorowe into a holpe daye, and that in those dayes they shuld make feastes & gladnesse, & one to send giftes vnto another, & to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes were content with it that they had begon to do, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: howe that Haman the sone of Hamadatha al the Jewes enemy, had deuysed agaynst the Jewes, howe he myght destrope them, and caused to cast Phur (that is a lot) for to put them in feare, & to bynge them to nought, and howe hester went, and spake to the kynge, that thowowe letters his wyched denyce (which he ymagined agaynst the Jewes) myght be turned vpon his owne heed, and howe he & his sonnes were hanged on the tree. For the whyrch cause they called this day Phurim, because of the name of the lot, and because of al the wordes of this wytynge: and what they them selues had sene, and what had happened vnto them.

And the Jewes let it vp, and toke it vpon them and their seed, and vpon all such as loyned them selues vnto them, that they wolde not mysse but obserue these two dayes petylpe, accordyng as they were writen and appoynted, howe that these dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kept of chyldres chyldre amonge al kynredes in al landes and cyties. They are the days of Phurim which are not to be ouerslypte amonge the Jewes, and the memorial of them ought not to perishe from theyr seed.

And quene Ester the daughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Jewe wrote wryth all auctoritie (to confirme this second wytyng of Phurim) and sent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the hundred and seuen and twenty landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus, w frendlye and faythfull wordes, to confyrme these dayes of Phurim, in their tyme appoynted, accordyng as Mardocheus & Jewe & Ester the quene had appointed the. And they bound theyr soule and theyr seed to fastyng, & prayer. And Ester stablished & wordes of these lottes, as it is wyrtten in the booke.

And the kynge Ahasuerus layed tribute vpon the lande, and vpon the fles of the see. And all that he dyd by hys power and auctoritie, and the great worship of Mardocheus which the kynge gaue hym, be they not writen in the Chronycles of the kynges of Media and Persia: For Mardocheus the Jew was the second next vnto king Ahasuerus, and greate amonge the Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of hys brether, as one that seeketh the wealth of his people, & seeketh the best for all bys seed.

The ende of the boke of Ester.

The booke of Job,

The fyrst Chapter.

God is plagued of God by the losse of hys goodes and chyldren.

In the land of * Hus there was a man whose name was Job: & the same was a perfect & iust mā, such a one as feared God & dyd euyl. And he had seuen sonnes, & thye daughter: & his substance also was seven. W. Shepe, & thye. W. camels. v. Cows of oxen, & v. E. She asses, & a very great hold, so & he was one of the moost ryche men amonge all the of the East countrey. And his sonnes went & made bakettes: one day in one house, an other day in an other, & thus for theyr thye sisters to eate & dync in the. And it fortuneth, that when they had passed ouer the tyme of theyr bankettyng round about, Job sent for them, & sanctified the, & gat vp early & offered for euerye one a burnt-offerynge. For Job sayd: lest peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, and haue bene vnthakful to God in theyr hertes.

Thus dyd Job euery day: And vpon a day & when the chyldren of God came and stode before the Lorde, it fortuneth, that Sathan came also amonge them. And the Lord sayd vnto Sathan. From whence comest thou? Sathan answered the Lord, and sayde: I haue gone about the lande, and walked thowowe it.

And the Lord said vnto Sathan: hast thou not confided my seruant Job, how & how is none like him in the lade: a perfect & iust man: such a one as feareth God, & dyd euyl: Sathan answered, and sayd vnto the Lord: Doth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not preserved hym & his house, and all that he hath on euery syde: Thou hast blessed the workes of hys handes, and his possession is increased in the lande. But laye thyne hand nowre vpon hym: and touche all that he hath, and he shal curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo, al þe hath he in thy power, only vpon hym selfe, se that thou laye not thyne hande. And Satan wolt forþ from the ptesence of the Lorde.

And vpon a certayne daye it fortuneth, that hys sonnes and daughters were eating and drynckynge wine in their eldest brothers house: and there came a messenger vnto Job, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were a plowynge & the asses goynge in the pasture beside them the Sabees came vpolently, and toke them awaye pee, they haue slayne thy seruantes wth the edge of the swerde, and I only ran my waye, to tell the.

Whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayde: The fyre of God is falle from heauen, and hath brente vp al thy shepe and seruantes: and consumed them: and I onely ranne my waye: to tell the. And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armyes, and fell in vpon the camels: and haue carped them awaye pee, and slayne thy seruantes wth the swerde: and I onely am gotten a waye to tell the. And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other and sayde: Thy sonnes and thy daughters were eatynge and drynckynge wyne in theyr eldest brothers house, and behold there came a myghty grea te wynde out of the south, and smote the. iiii. corners of the house, wherby fell vpon thy children, and they are deed: and I am gotten awaye alone to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, and rent his clothes & shaued hys heade: fell downe vpon the grounde, wooshypped: and sayde, * Naked came I oute of my mothers wombe, & naked shall I turne thither agayne. The Lorde gaue & the Lorde hath taken awaye, * (euen as it hath pleased the Lorde, so it is come to passe) blessed be þe name of the Lorde. * In all these thynges byd Job not offende, nor murmured foolþshelye agaynst God.

¶ The. x. Chapter.

¶ Job is plagued wth sore boles, and afterward is visited of hys wyfe. Hys frendes bysyt hym and haue compassion of hym.

¶ And the chyldren of God came & stode before the Lorde, & Satan came also amonge them, & stode before the Lorde. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: From wher comest thou? Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lande, and walked thowme it.

¶ And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: halste thou considered my seruante Job? for there is none lyke vnto hym in all the lande. For he is a perfecte, & a iust man: such a one as feareth God: and excheueth euyl, & continueth styll in hys godlynesse. And thou mouest me agaynst hym, that I shulde punyssh him for naught. And Satan answered the Lorde & sayde: Shynne for shynne: pee, a man wyl geue all þe euer he hath for hys lyfe. But laye thyne hande nowre vpon hym, ad touch once hys bone & fleshe, and he shal curse the to thy face. And þe Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo, ther hast þe hym in thy power, but spare hys lyfe.

So went Satan forth from the ptesence of the Lorde: and smote Job wth mycelous sore byles, from the sole of hys fore vnto hys crowne, so that he sat vpon the grounde in þe ashes: and scraped of the fylthe of hys sores wth a potsherde.

¶ Then sayde hys wyfe vnto him: * Dost thou contynue yet in thy perfectenesse? curse God and die. But Job sayd vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a folye woman. Shal we receaue prosperyte at the hande of God, & not receaue aduersyte? * In al these thynges did not Job synne wth hys lippes.

¶ Nowe when Jobs frendes hearde of all the trouble þe happened vnto hym, there came thre of them, euery one from hys owne place namely Eliphaz the Themanite, Bildad, þe Shuhyte, and zophad the Naamathite.

¶ And they were agreed to gether to come to shewe theyr compassion vpon hym, and to conforste hym. So whē they lyfte vp theyr eyes a farre of theyr hewe hym not.

¶ Then they cryed: & wepte, & euery one of them rent hys clothes: & spyncled dust vpon theyr heades in the ayre. Thy sat them downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes: & seuen nyghtes. Neither was there anye of the þe spake one worde vnto hym for they sawe, that hys payne was very grea te.

The same daye he turned to darchnesse, and not regarded of God from aboue, nether let hym shyne vpo it w lyght, but let it be stained wth darchnesse & the shadowe of death. The Lion perissheth for lacke of praye, & the Lions whelpes are scattered abroade.

And vnto me came the worde secretly, & myne eare hath receyued a litle thereof. In thoughtes & visions of the night (when they cometh on men) feare came vpon me, and died which made al my bones to shake. The. v. Chapter.

The ende of a fole. The rightousnes of Job. The sores chaunceth vpon, and deliqueth them againe.

Chye (I pray the) if haply there be any that wylt sweare the, & loke thou vnto any of the holy men. As for the foolyshe mā, displeant killeth him, and anger layeth y ignorant. * I haue sene my selfe, when I foolyshe was deperoted & suddenly I cursed my blytacion. Hys chyldren were wout prosperite, & they were slayne i the gate, & there was no mā to deliuer them. * His harnett was in ten vp of y hungry, & the weapened mā spoiled it, & the thurstie dronke vp their laboure. It is not the earth y bringeth forth iniquite, nether cometh sozowe out of the ground, but man is borne vnto laboure, lyke as the wykes fyre vp out of the hote coles.

But I wyl aske counsell at the Lord, & wyl talke with God: whych both thynges that are vnsearcheable, and meruils wout nombze. * He geueth raigne vpon y, and poureth water vpon the streets, & by them that be of lowe degre, ad whiche are in heynesse: maye come to prosperite. He destroyed the deuyces of the subtil, so that their handes are not able to perforce any steadfast thyng. * He compasseth þe wise in theyr owne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth the counsell of the wycked. In so muche that they runne into darcknes by saye daye, and grope about them at the none day, lyke as in the nyghte.

He shall deliuer the poore from the swerd and from the threatenynge of the vngodly and from the violence of the myghtye. He is the hope of the poore, and the mouth of the wycked shall be stopped.

Beholde, * happye is the man, whom God hath chosen: therefore refuse not thou the chastenynge of the almyghtye. For: though he make a wounde, he geueth a plaster, though he smyte, his hande maketh whole agayne.

He shall deliuer the in syre troubles, and in the seuenth, there shall no euil come to the. In longer, he shall saue the from death: and when it is warre from þe power of þe swerd.

Thou shalt be kepte from the euell tonge, and when trouble cometh, thou shalt not neede to feare. In destruction and derth thou shalt be mery, * * * * * shalt not be a frayed of þe breakes of the earth. For the stonies of the lande shall be confederate wth the, and the beastes of the felde shall geue the peace.

And thou shalt knowe that thy dwelling place shall be in rest: and thou shalt go and be holde thy habytacyon, and shalt not synne.

Thou shalt see also, that thy seede shall encrease and that thy posterite shall be as þe grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come also to thy graue in a saye age, lyke as when they take vp a coyne these in due season. Lo, this we our selues haue proued by experyence, & euen thus it is. Herken thou to it also, that thou mayest take heede to thy selfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

Job answered: that his payne was more greuous than his faulte, yet not wylful and thus he deuyth therein.

Job answered also, & sayde, O that the displeasure which I haue: were truly weyed, & my punishment layde in the balauces together: for nowe is it heuyer then the lande of the see. And this is the cause, that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For the arrowes of the almyghty are round aboute me, whose indignacio hath dröcke vp my sprete, and the terrible feares of God are set agaynste me. * Doe the wilde Asses roare when they haue grass? Or crieth the ore when they haue fodder ynough? That which is vnswarte, shall it be eaten without salt, or is there any taste in the whyte of an egge?

The thynges that some tyme I myghte not awaye wythall, are nowe my meat for very sorowe. O that I myght haue my desyre: ad that God wolde graunte me the thyng that I longe for. O that God wolde begynne ad smyte me: that he wolde let his hande go ad take me cleane awaye. Then shulde I haue some comforte: yee, I wolde desyre hym in my paine, þe he wold not spare, for I wyl not be agaynste the wordes of the holy one.

For what powre haue I to endure? And what is myne ende, that my soule myghte be pacient? Is my strength the strength of stonies? Or is my flesch made of brasse? Is it not so þe there is in me no helpe: and that my substaunce is taken from me. He þe is in tribulacion ought to be comforted of his neygbbour but the feare of the Lorde, is cleane awaye. Myne owne brethren passe ouer by me as þe water broke, & as the ryuer of water, do hastily go a way. But they that feare the Lorde froste the snowe shall fall vpon them.

When they tyme cometh, they shall be destroyed and perishe: when they be set on fyre, they shall be remoued out of theyr place for the pathes that they goo in, are croked: they halte after vayne thynges, and shall perishe. They turne them to the pathes of the man, & to the wayes of Saba, wherein they haue put theyr truste. Confounded are they that put any confydence in them. For when they come to obtayne the thynges that they loke for, they are brought to confusyon.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye see my misery, ye are afrayed. Did I desire you to bring vnto me, or to geue me any of your substaunce? To deliuer me from the enemyes hand, or to saue me from the hande of tyrantes? Teache me and I wyl hold my tonge: & when I do erre, shewe me wher in. Howe steadfaste are the wordes of truthe? And whiche of you can rebuke and reprove them? Doe ye take deliberacion to cheeke mys saynges? and iudge a poore word spoken in vaine? Ye sal vpo the fatherlesse, & go about to ouerthrowe your owne frende. And therfore becontente, and loke nowe vpon me, ad I wyl not lye before your face. Turne (I pray you) be indifferent iudges, turne agayne, and ye shall see myne vngiltynesse whether there be any vnrighteousnes in my songe: or vayne wordes in my mouth.

The. viii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserued by a papur. A description of popyrie,

Then answered Bildad the Subyte, and sayde: Howe longe wylte thou talke of suche thynges: Howe long shall thy mouth speke so poude wordes: Doth God peruerthe the thyng that is lawful: O: doth the almyghty destrope the thyng that is ryght: For seinge that thy sonnes synned against hym, dyd not he punyche them for they: wyckednesse. If thou woldest nowe reso:te vnto God by mes, and make thyne humble prayer to the almyghty, yf thou woldest lyue a pure and godlye lyfe, shulde he not awake vp vnto the immediatly: and geue the, the bewtie of ryghteousnesse agayne: In so muche, that wherin so euer thou haddest lytle asore, thou shuldest haue nowe greate aboundance.

Enquere (I pray the) of them that haue bene before the, & search diligently among they: fathers. For we are but of yester daye, and cōsider not, that oure dayes vps earth are but a very shadowe. Shall not they be-we the, and tell the, pee, and gladly confesse the same.

Haue a rythe, be grene wythout moylenesse: O: maye the grasse growe wythout water: No but (o: euer it be shot forth, and o: euer it be gathered) it whetheryth, before any other herbe. Eue so goeth it wth al the that forget God, and euen thus also shall the popyrtes hope come to naughte. His confidence shall be destroyed, and hys trust shall be a spyders web. He shall leane vpon hys bowle: but it shall not stande, he shall holde hym fast by yt, yet shall yt not endure. It is euen as a grene tre before the sonne, and shoteh forth the braunches in hys garden. It taketh many rotes by a well syde, in so muche that it is lyke an house of stones.

But yf it be taken out of his place, euery man denyeth it, sayinge: I knowe the not.

Lo, thus is it wth hym, that reioyseth in hys owne doinges: ad as for other, they go we out of the earth.

Beholde, God wyl not caste away a betuons man, nether wyl he helpe the vngod-lye. Thy mouthe shall be fyl wth laughynge, and thy lippes wth gladnesse. Thy also that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwellynge of the vngodlye shall come to naughte.

The. ix. Chapter.

Job declareth the demerites of God, and that mannes ryghteousnes is nothyng.

Job answered, and sayde: I knowe ye yt is so of a truthe. For howe may a man (compared vnto God)
* be iustified: Yf he wyl argue w hym, there is not one among a thousand y can aunswere him. Concerning such as be wyle of hert, o: mightie in strenght who euer prospered that toke parte agaynst him: he translateth the mountaynes, o: euer they be aware. It is he that overthroweth them in hys wyatbe. He remoueth the earthe oute of her place, that y pyllers thereof shall wythall. He commaundeth the sonne, and it repleth not: he closeth vp y starres as it were under

flares, as it were vnder a sygnet. He him selfe alone spreadeth oute the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the see. He maketh the waynes of heauen the Oxen: & the leuen flares, and the secreete places of the south. He doth greates thynges, such as are vnsearchable, yee, and wonders without nombze.

So, when he goeth ouer by me, I shall not se hym. And when he departeth, by me, I shall not looke vpon hym. I shall not perceaue hym. If he be hastie to take eny thyng away who will make hym restore it agayne? Or who will saye vnto hym: what doest thou? he is God, whose wrath noman may with stande, but the proude: & of all muste stoupe vnder hym. How shoulde I then answer hi? Or what wordes shuld I fynde out against hym? Psea, though he were ryghteous, yet myght I not gyue hym one worde agayne, but mekelpe submyt my selfe to hym as my iudge. If I had called vpon him, and he had answered me: yet wolde I not belue, that he herd my voyce: he troubleth me so with his tempest, and woundeth me out of measure, without a cause. He will not let my spyrite be in rest, but fylleth me with bytternesse.

If men will speake of strength, lo, he is strong: if men will speake of ryghtousnes, who dare be my recorde. If I will iustify my selfe, myne owne mouth shall condemne me. If I will put forth my selfe for a perfect man, he shall proue me a wycked doer. For though I be an innocent and my conscience cleare, yet am I wery of my lyfe.

One thyng it is, and therfore I sayde: He destroyeth both the righteous and vngodly: And though he slaye sodainly with the scourge, yet will he laughe at the punishment of the innocent. As for the worlde it is giuen ouer into the hande of the wycked, and he shall couer the faces of the Iudges therof: Is it not so? where is there anye, but he is such one?

* Eye dayes are more swyft then a runner: they are gone & haue sene no good thyng they are passed away as the shypes that be good vnder sayle, & as the Egge that flyeth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynt, to vlear of fro my wrath, and to comforte my selfe, then am I afrayed of all my sorowes, for I knowe, that thou wilt not iudge me innocent: If I be then a wycked doer, why labour I in vayne? If I wash my selfe with snowe water, & make myne handes neuer so cleane at the well, yet shalt thou dyppe me in the myze: and myne owne clothes shall desple me. For he that I must gyue answer vnto, and with whom I go to the lawe, is not a man as I am.

Neither is there any dayelman to laye his hande betwene vs. Let hym take his rodde awaye fro me, yee, let him make me nomore afrayed of hym, & then shall I answer him withoute anye feare. For as longe as it is thus, I can make no answer.

The .x. Chapter.

Job is wery of his lyfe, and setteth oute his tragedye before God, & desyres that he wold repente, & deliuer him from death.

If thou greueth my soule to line, I will make my complaynt, & will speake out of the very deuynesse of my soule. I will saye vnto God: O do not condemne me but shewe me the cause, wherefore thou contendest so wyth me? Chynkest thou it well done, to oppresse me to caste me of (beyng the workes of thy handes) and to mayntayne the council of the vngodly? Hast thou fleshy eyes: or doest thou loke as a man loketh? Or are thy dayes as the daies of man, and thy yeares as mannes yeares: that thou makest suche inquisycyon for my wyckednes, & searchest out my synne? Where as (not wythstandynge) thou knowest that I am no wycked person, and that there is no man able to deliuer me out of thyne hande.

* Thy handes haue made me, & fasthonyed me all together rounde aboute. Wylt thou then destroye me sodainly? Or remember (I beseeke the) howe that thou madest me of the mould of the earth, and shalt byngne me in to dust agayne.

Hast thou not turned me, as it were my lche, and turned me to cruddes lyke chese? Thou hast couered me wyth skynne and fleshe, and ioyned me together wyth bones and synnowes. Thou hast graunted me lyfe, and done me good: and the dilygente hede that thou takest vpon me hath preferred my spete.

Thou hast byd these thynges in thyne herte. I am sure, that thou rememberest this thyng. If I dyd synne, thou haddest an eye vnto me, and shalt not declare me innocent because of myne offence. If I haue done wyckedly, woe is me therfore. If I haue done ryghteously, yet darre I not lyfte vp my head: so full am I of confusyon, and se myne owne mysery.

Thou huntest me out (beinge in deuynesse) as it were a lyon, & troublest me out of measure. Thou byngest fleshe wytnesse agaynst me, and thy wrath increaseth thou vpon me very many are the plagges I am in. * Wherfore hast thou brought me oute of my mothers wombe? Or that I had perished, and that no eye had sene me. If they had carped me to my graue as sone as I was borne, then shulde I be nowe, as though I had neuer bene. Are not my dayes fewe? Let hym then leaue of fro me, and let me alone, that I maye ease my selfe a lytle afore I go thyther, from whence I shall not turne agayne: euen to the dust land.

with God is wysdome and strength, it is he that hath counsell & forknowledge. Behold If he breake downe a thyng, who can let it vp agayne: If he shut a thyng, who will open it: Behold, yf he withholde the waters they drye vp. If he let them go, they bestrope the earth. Wylth hym is strength and wylde he knoweth bothe the dysceauer & hym that is deceaued.

He carpyeth awaye the wylle me, as it were a spoule, and byngeth y iudges out of they wyttes. He taketh awaye the sabiection of the people from they: kynges: and gyde the their loynes with a bond. He leadech awaye the greute men into captiuyte, and turneth the myghty vpsyde downe. He taketh the verytie from out of thy mouth, and dysapoineth the aged of they: reason. He poureth the confusio vpon princes, and comforteth them that haue bene oppressed. Loke: what lyeth byd in darchenes, he declareth it openly: and the very shadowe of death byngeth he to lyght. He bothe increaseth the people, & destroynth them. He maketh them to multi-plye, & dyspurcheth them awaye. He chaunged the bertes of them that rule the people of the earthe, and dysapoynteth them: so that they go wandrynge oute of the waye, and grope in the darche wprhoute lyght: he maketh the also to sacker to y fro lyke dyonchen men.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Job reasoneth howe frendes wyth they: what he singes, and condemneth pprocty.

In all thyngs haue I sene with myne eye, hearde with mine eare, and vnderstand it. I ke what ye knowe, & same do I knowe also, net her am I inferyore vnto you. Neuertheles I talke wth the almyghtye and my desire is to comen with God. As for you, ye are workmasters of lyes, and vnproftable: phisicians al togpyther. Wold God ye kept your tonge, for then myght ye be taken for wyle men. Nowe heare my chyldeyng, and ponde the sentence of my lypyes.

Do ye speake iniquitie agaynst God, and talke agaynst hym with dyscreete: Wyl ye not accepte the person of hym? Or wyl ye cōtende with God? Shall that helpe you when he calleth you to rekenyng? For as one mā mocketh an nother, so do ye mocke hym. He shall punyssh you, and reprove you, yf ye do secretly accepte anye persone. Shall he not make you afraied, whē he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not hys terribyle feare fall vpon you? poure remembraunce is lyke vnto a spearke and youre bodys lyke the claye.

Hold youre tonges, for my sake, that I also may speake & my sorowe shalbe the lesse. Wherfore do I beare my fleshe in my teth, & put my soule in myne hādes? Lo, though he shalpe me yet wyl I put my truste in hym. But: I wyl reprove mine owne waies in his syghte: he shal make me whole: & there maye no pporcyt come befoze hym. Heare my wordes, and ponder my sayenges wpyth your eares. Beholde, nowe haue I prepared my iudgemente, and knowe that I shalbe founde ryghteous. What is he that wyl go to lawe wpyth me? (Let hym come) that I maye nowe holde my tonge, and dpe. Neuerthelesse, graunte me two thynges, and then wyl I not hyde my selfe from the.

Whydrowe thyne hande from me, & let not the fearfull drede of the make me afrayd. And then call me, and I wyl answers: or els let me speake, and geue me than an answer. Howe many are my mysdedes & synnes: Let me knowe my transgressions and offences. Wherfore hydest thou thy face, & holdest me for thyne enemye? Wylte thou be so cruell & extreme vnto a syping lease, & solowe vpon dysre skoule: for thou layest sharply to my charge, and punysshest me: for the synnes of my mouth. Thou putttest my fete also in the stocks: & lokest narrowly vnto al my patches and markest the stappes of my fete where as I (not withstanding) must consume like as a coule carion, & as a cloth that is motheaten.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ Job dyscrepeth the lyfe of man, and prophesyeth of the resurrecyon. Hope susteyneth the godly till they obtayne the thyngs that they loke for.

In that is boyme of woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, & is full of mylery. He commeth vp and is cut downe lyke a floure. He sypeth as it wer a shadowe, and neuer cōtynueth in one state. Doest thou open thyne eyes vpon sarch one, & bypnyngest me in thy iudgemente? Who cā make it cleane & commeth of an vncleane thyng: No bodye. The dayes of man surlly are determyned, the nombze of his dayes are knowne only vnto the. Thou hast appoynted hym his bondes, which he can not go beyonde. So from hym that he maye rest (a lytle) vntyll hys daye come: whych he lokeh for, lyke as an hyrelpyng doth.

If a tree be cut downe, there is some hope yet, that it wyl sprout, & shote forth the bzanches agayne. For though the roote of it be waken olde, & the stocke therof be deade in the grounde, yet when it getteth the sente of water, it wyl budde, and bypnyng forth bowes, lyke as a tree & is planted. But as for man, when he is deade, pershed & consumed awaye, what becommeth of hym?

The floudes when they be dyled vp: and the ryuers when they be emptye, are fylled & gayne thozowe & flowing waters of the see: but when man slepeth he ryleth not agayne (of hys owne strength) vntyll the heauen prythe: he shal not wake vp, nor ryle out of his slepe. O that thou woldest kepe me, and hyde me in the hell, vntyll thy wraethe were fylled, and to appoynte me a tyme, wherein thou myghtest remember me. Wape a deade man lyue agayne: All the dayes of my lyfe wyl I wayte styll, tyll my chaungyng shal come. Thou shalte call me: and I shal answer the, & despyse not & the woꝝke of thine owne handes.

For nowe thou nombrest al my goynges yet be not thou to extreme vpon my synnes. My inquite is sealed vp, as it were in a bag but be mercyfull vnto my wickednesse. The mountaynes fall awaye at the laste, the rockes are remoned oute of they place, the waters pearce thozowe the very stones by lytle and lytle, the floudes washe awaye the grauell and earth. And destroyest thou the hope of man? Thou preuaylest styll agaynst hym so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his estate, & putttest hym fro the. And whethere hys chyliden come to woꝝshyp or no, he cannot tel. And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth hys fleshe muste haue trauaple, and whyle the soule is in hym, he muste be in sorowe.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

¶ Eliphaz reprocheth Job because he ascribeth the weathes and quernes to hym selfe, he despyeth the curse that fallith on the wycked, & rekenyng Job to be one of that nombre.

¶ IIII Then

3 Then answered Eliphaz the Themanite, & sayde: Shal a wyle mans answer be the science of the wynde, and fill any mans belly, as it were with the winde of the easter? Shal he reprove w a worde? Is nothing worth: & speak the thynges, wherbye can do no good: As for thame, thou hast set it aspyde, elles woldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a crafty tong. Thine owne mouth condemnyeth the, & not I: yee, thyne owne lippes shalpe an answer agaynst the.

Arte thou the fyrst man, that euer was borne? Or wast thou made before the byls? halte thou heard the secret counsell of God that all wylsedom is to lytle for the? What knowest thou that we know not? And what vnderstandest thou, but we can the same? Alpey vs are dothe olde and aged men, yee, such as haue lpyued longer then thy father.

Thynkest thou it a small thyng of the consolacyons of God? Alpey the is a lpyng word. Why doth thyne hert so be wptch the? And wherfoze wptchest thou with thyne eyes, that thy mide is so puffed vp agaynst God? Ad lettest such wordes go out of thy mouth? What is man, that he shuld be cleane? what hath he? whych is borne of a woman? where by he might be righteous? Behold, he doth not trust his saynctes, yee, the very heaueus are not cleane in his sight. Howe much moze then an abhomyable and vyle man, whych doynketh wyckednesse lyke water: I wyl tel the, heare me: and I wyl shewe the that I haue sene: whych wyle men haue tolde, ad hath not bene hpyd from theyr fathers vnto whome onely the earthe was geuen and no straunger wente amonge them.

Ther vngodly sozoweth all the dayes of hys lyfe as it were a woman w a chyld: & the nombze of a tyrauntes yeares is vnknewen. A fearfull sounde is euer in hys eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruccyon. He beleueth neuer to be delpyuered oute of darcknesse, for the swearde is alwaie before hys eyes. When he goeth forth to get hys lpyng, he seeth playnly, that the daye of darcknesse is at hand. Sozowe and carefulnesse wyl make hym afrayed, and compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kinge with hys hoost ready to the battayle. For he hath stretched oute hys hande agaynst God, and armed hym selfe agaynst the almyghtie. He runneth proude vpon hym, and w a styffe necke spyteth he agaynst hym where as he couereth his face w fatnesse, and maketh his bodpe well lpyng. Therfoze shal his dwel lpyng be in desolate cyties, & in houses which no man inhabyteth, but are become heapes of stones. He shal not be ryche, nyether shal hys substance contynue, nor encrease vpon the earth. He shal neuer come out of darcknesse, the flame shal drye vp hys braynches w the blast of the mouth of God, shal he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in synne, and yet he is out of the way, and vayne shal be hys recompence.

He shal perpe, afoze hys tyme be wome out, and hys braynche shal not be grene. He shal be plucked of as an vntymely grape of the vyne, and shal let hys flour fall, as the olpue doth. For the congregacion of yppocrytes shal be desolate and vnfuyfull, and the fyze shal consume the houses of such as are greedy to receaue gyftes. He conceaungh traunple, and beareth vayne, and theyr do by bynggeth forth disceate.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Job regettyng hys myserye, sayeth that he hath serech moze then his wyckednesse hath deserued.

Ib answered, and sayde: I haue oftymes heard such thynges, wpylerable gyuers of conforzte are ye, all the soure of you. Shal not vaine wordes come yet to an ende?

Or, haste thou yet any moze to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also, But wolde God that your soule were in my soules stede: the shulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and make my heade at you.

I shulde conforzte you with my mouth, and release youre payne with the talkyng of my lippes. (But what shall I do.) For all my wordes, my sozowe wyl not cease: & though I holde my tonge, yet wyl it not depart fro me. But nowe that God hath sent me aduersyte, thou haste troubled all my congregacyon.

And that thou hast fylled me with wylkles, my fleshe is recozde, and my leame ryleth vp agaynst me, and beareth witness agaynst me. He is angrye at me, he hateth me: and gnatheth vpon me with hys teeth. Wyne enemye shoulde vpon me with hys eyes.

They haue opened theyr mouthes wpyde vpon me, & smytten me vpon the cheeke deipptefully, they gather them selues together agaynst me. God hath put me in prynces w the vngodly, & delpyuered me into the hand of the wycked. I was in welthe, but he hath brought me to naught. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and set me as a marche for hym selfe. Hys archers compasse me rounde aboute: he wounded my loppes, & doth not spare. My howelles hath he poured vpō the ground. He hath geue me one wōde vpon an other, and is fallen vpon me, lyke a graunt. I haue sowed a sacke cloth vpo my lappynne, and lye wyth my heare in the duste.

My face is swollen wyth weappynge, and myne eyes is the shadowe of death. howbeit there is no wychednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not thou my bloud, & let my cryeng synde no rowme.

For lo, my wytnesse is in heauen: and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heyghe:
My frendes geue me many wordes to scozne:
and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God.
O that a body myght plete wyth God, as one mā doeth with an other: yet the nombze of my yerres is come, & the waye that I must go is at hand, from whence I shal not turne agayne.

The xvii. Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth away, and yet doth patiently abyde it.

My breath synketh, my dayes are shortened. I am harde at deatnes doze. I rowarde men are with me, and myne eye must continue in the disternesse of them. O deliuer me, and loke out one to be my suretye in thy syghte, what is he that knoweth who wyll promesse for me: For thou haste wytholden their hertes from vnderstandynge: therfore shalt thou not let (them) vpon hys. He promiseth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne chyldre spende it. He hath made me as it were a bywoide of the people, wher as a-I was their ioye. Myne eye is dymme for very heynesse, & all my strength is become like a shadowe. Vertuous mē therfore shal well consyde this, and the innocēt shal take paragaynst the pprocyte.

The ryghteous also wyll kepe hys way, and he that hath cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and strōger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence (I praye you) sayng I can not synde one wyse man amonge you: My dayes are past, and my consayples ad thoughtes of my herte are vanisshed awaye, chauncynge the nyghte into daye, and the lyghte into darkenesse. Though I tarpe neuer so moche, yet the graue is my house, ad I haue made my bed in the darke. I call corrupcion my father, and the wormes cal I my mother & my syster. What helpeth then my longe sapyng? O who hath consyded the thynges, that I loke for? Al þ I haue shal go downe into the pyt, and lye wyth me in the dust.

The xviii. Chapter.

Eliphaz rebuketh the paynes of the dyscasyfull and wyched.

Eliphaz answered & said: whē wyll ye make an ende of your wordes: Wait well, and then we wyll speake.
Wherfore are we colided as bestes, and reputed so vyle in your sight: He de-stroyeth him selfe wyth his anger. Shal the earth be forsaken, or any stone remoued out of his place because of the Pea, the lyght of the vngodly shalbe put out, and the sparke of his fyre shal not burne. The lyght shalbe darke in hys dwellyng, and his candle shal-be put out wyth hym. His presumptuous go-inges are kept in, and his owne consaypl shal cast him downe. For his fete are taken, as it were in the net, and he is at his wittes ende.
His fote shalbe holdē in the snare, ad it shal catche them that be the type of bloude: The snare is layed for him in the grounde, and a pytfall in the waye.

Fearfulnesse shal make hym afrayed on euery syde, that he shal not knowe, where to get out. Hungre shalbe hys strength: mys-fortune shal hange vpon hym. He shal eate the strength of his owne skynne, euē the first bozhe of death shal eate hys strengthe. Hys hope shalbe rooted out of hys dwellyng, very fearfulnesse shal byngne him to the kyng.
Other men shal dwell in hys house (but shal be none of his) and by my stone shalbe scattered vpon hys habitacion. His rootes shalbe dried vp beneth, and aboue shal his brāsch be cut downe. His remembraunce shal perishe from the earth, and he shal haue no name in the strete: they shal bypue him from the lichte into darkenesse, and caste hym cleane out of the worlde. He shal neyther haue chyldren, nor kynskolles amonge hys people, no, nor any posteritye in his dwellinges. They that come after hym, shalbe astreyed at his day, and they that go before, shalbe afrayed.
Suche are now the dwellynge of the wy-ked, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

The xix. Chapter.

Job receyeth his mystryes and greeuous paynes.
He prophesyeth of the generall resurrection.

Job answered, and said: how longe wyll ye bere my soule, and trouble me wyth wordes: Lo, ten tymes haue ye rejoyced me: and are not ashamed for to laughe me so to scozne: yf I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe.

But yf ye wyll enhaunce youre selues a-gaynst me, and accuse me to be a wyched personne, bycause of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God, which hath handled me so violentlye, & hath compassed me about with his net. Yf I playne of the violence that is done vnto me, I cannot be heard. And yf I crye, there is no sentence

Job.

Sentence given with me. he hath bedged vp my voyce, that I can not passe, and he hath set darknesse in my pathes. * he hath spoiled me of myne honour, and taken the crowne away from myne head. he hath destroyed me on euery syde, and I am vndone: My hope hath been taken away from me as it were a tree pluckt vp by the rote. his wrath is kindle d against me: he taketh me, as though he I were his enemye.

His men of warre came together, whiche made they waue ouer me, and besieged my dwellinge rounde about, * he hath put my brethren farre awaye from me, and suche as were of myne acquaintance, are become strangers vnto me. * Myne owne kynfolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruantes and maydens of myne owne house, toke me for a stranger: * I am become as an aleaunt in theyr syght.

I called my seruant, and he gaue me no answer: no though I prayed hym with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe myght not abyde my bryeth: I was fayne to speake fayne for the children of myne owne body. Yea & chyldren despised me. And when I was gone fro them, they spake euill vpon me. All suche as were my moost famylers, abhorred me: and they whom I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my flesh is away, onely there is left me the skyn aboute my teeth. haue pytie vpon me, haue pytie vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the had of God hath touched me. Why doo ye persecute me as God dooth, and are not satisfied of my selfe?

O that my wordes were nowe wyrtten: O that they were put in a booke: wolde God they were graue with an yron penne in leade, or in stone to continue. For I am sure, that my redemer lyueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne with thys skynne, & se God in my flesh. Yea, I my selfe shall behold hym, not with other, but with these same eyes. My repnes are consumed within me, did not ye saye: why doth he sustre persecucion? Is there found an occasyon in me? But beware of the swerde, for the swerde wyll be auenged of wyckednesse: and be sure, that there is a iudgement.

The xx. Chapter.

Sophar sayeth: that the vngodly shall, the conuuls, and the wycked shall haue a horrible ende.

When answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes chpell me to answer. And why? my mynde is ready within me. I haue suspictefully herde thy chekinges and reproues, therefore am I purposed to make answer after myne vnderstandynge. knowest thou not this, namely, that fro the begynnyng (euer syns the creation of man vpo earth) & gladnesse of the godly hath bene thorte, and that the lope of pprocytes continued but the twynkylng of an eye: Though he be magnified vp to the heauen, so that hys heed reacheth vnto cloudes, yet at a turne he perpereth vnto the heauen. In so much that they whiche haue sene hym, shall say: Where is he? he shall vanysh as a dreame: so that he can nomore be found, and shall passe awaye as a vyfion in the nyght. So that the eye whiche sawe hym before, shall haue no more syght of hym, & hys place shall knowe hym nomore. his chyldren shall be fayne to agree with the pooze, and hys handes shall restore theyr goodes.

Fro hys pouth hys bones are full of pleasures, but now shall it lye downe within him in y earth. When wyckednesse was sweete in his mouth, he byd it vnder his tonge. That he sauoured, & wold be not forsake, but kept it close in hys throte. The breede that he byd eate, is turned to the popson of the serpentes, within his body. The ryche that he deuoured, shall he perbake agayne, for God shall drawe them out of hys hely. he shall luche & gall of serpentes, and the aders tonge shall slape hym: so that he shall no more se the ryuers and brokes of honye and butter. The thinge that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shall not eate it vp.

Great trauayle shall he make for ryche, but he shall not enioye the. And why? he hath oppressed the pooze, and not helped the: houses hath he spoiled, and not buylded them. hys hely could neuer be fylled, therefore shall he perper in hys couetousnesse. There shall none of hys meate be left behynde, therefore shall no man loke for his prosperitie. When he had plenteousnesse of euerye thyng, yet was he pooze, though he was helped on euery syde.

For though the wycked haue neuer so much to fyl hys hely, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon hym, and cause his indignacy to raygne ouer him: so that yf he flye the y weapons, he shall be shot with the stele bowe. The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of the quyer, and a glystering swerde thoweth the gall of him, feare shall come vpon hym. There shall no darknesse be habile to hys hely. An vngodly fyre shall consume hym, and loke what remaineth in hys house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare hys wyckednesse, and the earth shall take part agaynst him. The substance that he hath in his house, shall be taken awaye and perper, in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * Thus is the porcyon that the wycked man shall haue of God, and the herpage that he maye luke for of God: because of hys wordes.

The xxi. Chapter.

Job retheth the prosperitie of the wicked, and after discrepeth they: sodaynly tyme and destruction.

JOb answered, and sayd: O heare my wordes, and that shalbe my comforte of you. Suffre me a lytle, that I may speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorne. ^{as it is the rou.} Is it for mannes sake that I make this disputation. Which yf it were so, shulde not my spyrte then be in soze trouble: Marke me well, and be abashed, & laye your hande vpon your mouth. For whē I consyde my selfe I am afrayed, and my flesh is smytten with feare. * Wherefore doo wicked men lyue in health and prosperitie, come to theyr olde age, and encrease in rychesse: Theyr chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacyon before theyr eyes.

Theyr heufes are safe from all feare, and þ rodde of God doth not smyte them. Theyr bullocke gendzeth, and that not out of tyme theyr cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.

They sende forth theyr chyldren by floc-kes, and their sonnes lede the daunce. * They beare with them tabzettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musike at theyr pleasure. They spende theyr dayes in welthynes but sodaynly they go downe to hell. They saye also vnto God: goo from vs: we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghty, that we shoulde serue hym:
And what profyt shuld we haue to submyt our selues vnto hym: Lo, there is vterly no goodnesse in them, therefore wyll I not haue to do with the counsaile of the vngodly.

How oft shal the candle of the wicked be put out: how oft cometh their destruction vpon thē: What sorow shal God gyue them for their parte in his wrath: Pea, they shal be cut as haye before the wynde, and as * chaffe that the storme carpeeth awaye.

And though God saue their chyldren from such sorowe, yet wyll he so rewarde the seluers, þ they shal knowe it. Theyr owne destruction and mysery shal they se with their eyes, and dzyinke of the fearfull wrath of the almighty. For what careth he what becom of his household after his death, when the nombze of his monethes is cut thort: In as much then as God hath the best power of al, who can teach him any knowledge: One dyeth now when he is myghty and at hys best, ryche, and in prosperitie: euen when his bawels are at the lastest, and his bones full of marp. In other dyeth in sorowe and heuy nesse, and neuer had good dayes. They shal sleepe bothe alyke in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them. Behold, I knowe what ye saynke: pea, & the subteltye that ye ymagin agaynst me. For ye saye: where is the pynyshment: and where is the dwellynge of þ vngodly: haue ye not asked them that go by the waye: Doubtlesse, ye cannot desyre their tokens, that * the wyched is kepte vnto the daye of destruction, and that the vngodlye shalbe bzought forth to the daye of wrath.

Who dare repzoue hym for his waye to his face: Who wyll rewarde hym for the vngracpousnesse that he doeth: Yet shall he be bzought to his graue: and dwell among the heape of the deed. Then shall he be sayne to be burped amonge the stones of the playne.
All men also must folowe him, and there are innumerable gone before hym. How bayne then is the comforte that ye gyue me: Doeth not falshe remayne in all your answeres:

The xxii. Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job of vnnecessary talenness.

Eliphaz the Themanite gaue answere, and sayde: Hape a man be profytable vnto God, as he þ is wyle, maye be profytable vnto hym selfe: Is it any aduantage to the Al-myghty that thou art ryghtous: Or shall it profyt hym that thou makest thy wayes per-fecte: Is he afrayed to repzoue the, & to kep forth with the into indgement: Is not thy wychednesse great, and thy vngracpous de-des innumerable: For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for nought, & robbed the naked of their cloythynge: To luche as were weete, haste thou gyuen no water to dzyinke, and hast withdrawen bzyed frome the hungrye. Shulde luche one then as veth vyolence, wryonge, and oppzession (doynge al thyng of parcialitie, and haupng respect of personnes) dwell in the lande: Thou haste sent wyddowes awaye emptye ad oppzessed the pooze fatherlesse.

Therefore art thou compassed about wyth snares on euery syde, & sodenlye vexed wyth feare: Shuldest thou then se no darkenesse: Shulde not the water floude runne ouer þ: Now * because that God is hyer then the he-uens, and because thou seyst that the starres are so hye, wylte thou therefore saye: Tush, how shulde God knowe: Doth hys dominid reache beyonde the cloudes: Tush, the cloudes couer hym that he may not se, & he dwelleth aboue heauen. Doest not thou kepe the olde waye, þ bayne men haue gone: Whych were cut downe out of tyme, & whose foun-dacyon was as a runnyng water, whyche sayed vnto God: go from vs, and what dyd the Almyghty wyth them: He fylled they houses wyth good thynges. But the coliffell of the vngodly is farre frome me. The ryghte-ous sawe it and were glad, and þ innocent laughed the to scorne. Is oure increase be w fyre hath consumed it.

Therefore reconyle the vnto God, and be-comft, so shal all thynges prospere wyth the ryght well. Receaue the lawe at his mouth, and lape vp hys wordes in thyne herte. For *ps. lxxv. b *pf thou wilt turne to the almyghtye, thou shalt stande faste, & put all vnyghteousnes from thy dwelling. Thou shalt make golde as plentyfull as the duste, and the golde of Ophir as the syntes of the ryuers. Pee, Al-myghtye God hys owne selfe shall be thy defence, and thou shalt haue plenty of syluer.

 Thee shalt thou haue thy delyte in. Almyghtie, & lyste vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promyses.
 Then loke what thou takest in had, he shall make it to prospeere with the, and the lyghte shall shyne in the wayes. For * who so hum-bleth him selfe, hym shall he set vp, & whoso loketh mekely, shall be healed. If thou be innocent, thou shalt deliuer. & countre because of the vngyltinesse of thyne handes.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Job affirmeth that he both knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge, & saith that he hath walked in hys ryghteousnesse.

Job answered, & sayd: My saying is yet this daye in bytternes, and my hande heuy because of my gronyng. O that I myght se hym, & fynde hym: O that I myght come befoze his seate to pleate my cause befoze him, & to fyl my mouth wpth argumetes. That I might knowe, what answere he wolde geue me: ad that I myght vnderstande, what he wolde saie vnto me. Wyl he pleate agaynst me with his great power and strenght? No, but he wyl make me the stronger. He that is iust, shall entre byputacyon wpth hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for euer. Beholde, though I go befoze, I fynd hym: If I come byhynde, I can get no knowledge of him: If I go on the left side where he doth his worke, I can not attayne vnto hym. Agayne, pf I go on the ryghte syde, he hydeth hym selfe, that I can not se hym. But as for my waye, he knoweth it: and * tryeth me as the golde
 in the fyre.

E My fote doeth kepe hys path, hys hye waye haue I holden, and wyl not go out of it. I wyl not forsake the commaundemente of his lippes, but loke what he charged me w his mouth, that haue I put vp in my herte.
 He is still at one poynte, & who wyl turne hym backe? He doeth as hym lysteth, and bypnygeth to passe what he wyl. He perfourmeth the thyng that is appointed for me, & many soch thynges doth he. Thys is the cause that I chyncke at his presence, so that whē I consyde hym, I am afrayed of hym. For in so much as he is God, he maketh my herte softe: and seynge that he is Almyghtye, he putteth me in feare. Thys can not I gett oute of darckenesse, neyther path he couered the cloude from my face.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Job describeth the wickednes of men, & sheweth what curse belongeth to the wicked.

D Onlyderynge the that there is no tyme hid from the Almyghty, howe happeneth it, & they whiche knowe hym, do not re-garde hys dayes. For some mi-there be, that * remoue other mens landemarkes: that robbe them of their catell, and kepe the same for theyr owne: that * byp-awake the asse of the fatherlesse: that take the wyddowes ore for a pledge: that thrust the pooze out of the waye, and oppresse the sumple of the worlde together. Beholde, as as the wyld asses in the deserte go they comto theyr worke, & ryle by tymes to spoyle.
 Pee & veryr wyldernesse minystrerth foode to their chyldzen. They reape & cozne selde that is not their owne: and let the bynepardes of the vngodly alone. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauing no clothes to couer them and to kepe the fro colde: So that whē the shewers in the mo-taines haue raynged vpon them & they be al wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the suckyng fatherlesse chyld & take the pledge fro the pooze. In so much & they let him go naked without cloyngs, and haue taken awaye the sheafe of the hargry. The pooze are fayne to labour in their oyle milles, pee, and to treade in theyr wyne presses, and yet to suffre theyr. The men of the cytie cryeth vnto the Lord with sithyng.
 * the soules of the slayne also make theyr complaynte: but God destroyeth them not for all thys, where as they (not wylfullyng) are conuersaunt amoge them that ad-hoze the lyght: they knowe not hys waye, nor continue in hys pathes. * Tyme is the moynynge do they arple, to murdre the sumple and pooze, and in the nyght they go a stealyng.

The eye of the aduouterer watcheth for the darckenesse, and sayeth thus in hym selfe.
 Tush, there shall no eye se me, and so he by-gyleth his face. In the nyght ceaseth they search the houses, and hyde them selues in the dar-tyme, but wyl not knowe the lyght. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of death cometh vpon them, & they go in darrible darckenesse. The vngodlye is swifter then the water: their porcis shall be cased in the earth, and he shall not beholde the waye of the bynepardes. O that they (for the wykednesse which they haue done) were drowto the hell, soner then snowe melteth at the drowth and heate. O that all compassion vpon the were forgott: that their daynties were wormes, that they were cleane put out of remembrance.

membrance, and vngodlynesse utterly hewen downe lyke as a tree. He hath oppressed the barren, that he can not beare, & vnto the wyddowe hath he done no good. He dyne the myghtie after him wth hys power, & when he was gottē vp, no mā was without feare, as lōge as he lyued. And though they might be safe, yet they wyl not receyue it, for their eyes loke v^{po} thez owne wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme poverte, and taken out of f^r way: yea, & utterly pluckt of, as the eares of coyne. Is it not so? Who wyl then reprove me as a lyar, and say that my wordes are no thyng worth?

The xxv. Chapter.

Eliphaz proueth that no man is cleane and without synne before God.

Eliphaz answered B^rhad the Su-bite, and sayde: Is there power ad feare wth hym aboue, that maketh peace, & l^yttynge in hys byghnesse, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose light aryleth ouer al? But howe maye a man cōpared vnto God? he is iustified: O: howe cā he be cleane, that is bozne of a woman? Behold, f^r moone shyneth nothing in comparison to hym, and the starres are vncleane in hys syght. Howe moch moze then, man: that is but corrupciō:
the soune of man, whych is but a woyme!

The xxvi. Chapter.

Job sheweth that mē can not helpe God, and proueth it by hys myracles.

Job answered, and sayde: Whome hast thou helped? Him that is wth out strength: what cōforte gyueth f^r vnto hym that hath no strength?
Where is the counsaile that thou wouldeste gyue hym, which hath no wylsome? Hast thou shewed the waye of ryghte lyuynge? To whom hast thou spoken these wordes? Who made the breath to come out of thy mouthe?
Are not deeth thynges shapen vnder the waters: and thynges by the waters syde? Hell is naked before hym, and the very destrucciō it selfe, can not be hyd oute of hys syght. He stretcheth out the north ouer the emptye, & adhangerth the earth vpon nothinge. He blyn-deth the water in his cloudes, & the cloude is not broken vnder thym. He holdeth backe his floode, that it can not be sene: ad spredeth his cloude before it.

* He hath compassed the waters with eetayne boundes, vntyll the day & night come to an ende. The very pyllers of heauē t^rble and quake at hys reprofe. * He spylleth the see wth his power, & thozowe his wylsome fyneth he the strength therof. Hys spiryte hath garnished the heauens, and his hande hath made the rebellious serper. A. o. thys is nowe a short summe of his waies. But who is habile sufficiently to rehearse his workes?

Who can perceyue and vnderstande the rōde of hys power?
